1.1.1 Why my hobbies are blurays and CDs in 2024 (2024-01-22 23:28)

I watch Blu-Rays (4K HDR if available and if you got the setup) because they have MUCH MUCH better quality than streaming service; a 1080p Blu-Ray has better quality than streaming service 4K HDR and helps with the immersion and bringing the theater home (though nothing replaces theatrical experience, but you can get closer).

To put it into comparison, The Batman 4K HDR streaming version is 30GB, while the 1080p Blu-Ray of it is 40GB and the 4K HDR Blu-Ray is 90GB. The Batman was an example, there are instances where the differences would be even more drastic.

The same reason I collect books: It makes me feel good, I like the appeal of a library in my home, and it serves a dual function, unlike other hobbies like collecting art or toys (unless you play with them).

That's not to mention that many DVDs/Blu-rays that I own are not available on streaming services and the higher picture quality for blu-rays.

The only physical media I gave up collecting was music/CDs. It was just too inconvenient when I relied mostly on music for on the go, not necessarily just to listen at home. Plus, I was able to get a good amount of money for the CDs I owned, so selling them was an easy decision. I will probably never sell my entire collection of movies and books. Nothing beats holding a novel in your hands and feeling the pages. Just like nothing beats holding a physical copy of the movie and enjoying the artwork and liner notes.

Also, I get a good feeling when I line movies up in plans for a marathon. Reminds me of the old days when I would rent a stack of VHS tapes.

It's also important to me to watch the films as close to the way intended as possible and also impacts your comprehension of things when trying to deep dive into the film (you don't want your symbolic background to look all pixely and crushed) and Blu-Rays are the way to go. Streaming Services, in order to be stream-able, use very low bitrates and they're highly compressed with lots of distracting detail loss and no sharpness, so I heavily do advise watching Blu-Rays.

1.1.2 The Most Dangerous Conservative (2024-01-24 10:51)

The New York Times put Charles Murray on the cover of its Sunday Magazine, calling him "The Most Dangerous Conservative."

That was after he co-wrote the book, "The Bell Curve," which argued that different ethnic groups have, on average, different IQs. As Murray puts it in [1]my video this week, "Blacks on average have a lower IQ than whites. However, whites are not at the top. East Asians, on average, have a higher IQ than whites. Ashkenazi Jews have higher IQs."

Other researchers agree.

An article in ScienceDirect journal puts it this way, "East Asians and their descendants average an IQ of about 106, Europeans and their descendants about 100, and Africans and their descendants about 85."

But many people don't believe it. Many don't even want such topics discussed.

Last time Murray tried speaking to college students, a mob shouted him down.

"They're angry at you because you're perpetuating racism," I tell Murray.

"These kids," he replies, "never read a word of anything I'd ever written."

That's probably true. It's more likely that they just read slander against him from smear sites like the Southern Poverty Law Center.

They call Murray a "white nationalist" and claim he says, "White men ... are intellectually, psychologically and morally superior."

"I've never said anything remotely like that!" says Murray.

"Do you believe that Blacks are intellectually inferior?" I ask.

"If you give mental tests to a representative sample of whites and a representative sample of blacks," he says, "there will be about a one standard deviation difference. To then translate that into people being inferior and superior is idiotic."

He goes on to say that there are other differences between racial groups.

"I don't think there's been a white winner of the 100-yard dash in the Olympics for a zillion years."

Actually, 20 years. A white woman won 20 years ago; a white man hasn't won for 40 years.

It's probably because some Black people have more fast-twitch muscles fibers, says Murray.

I don't see why saying that is controversial. It's just obvious that there are differences between groups.

But Murray has been canceled.

It's too bad.

Everything should be talked about. People who don't agree with Charles Murray should debate him, not shun him.

He is good at revealing unpopular truths.

He once had a job working for the government, evaluating social programs. He discovered that the "War on Poverty" was not lifting people out of poverty. In fact, programs like welfare perpetuated poverty.

He wrote a book about that titled "Losing Ground."

It soon became a bestseller, and influenced presidents from both parties. Welfare "reformers" Ronald Reagan and Bill Clinton cited Murray's work. Clinton said, "Murray has done the country a service."

Then Murray wrote "In Pursuit of Happiness and Good Government" – a book that changed my thinking.

He describes his time as a Peace Corps volunteer in Thailand. He watched Thai government "experts" create what they said would be a "model community." They gave the village a fishpond, a rice cooperative, a health clinic. But this aid diminished community activities.

"They weren't as happy as they used to be," says Murray. "I saw what government looks like from Bangkok and how it looks to the villager. It's the same in the United States."

1.1.3 The No. 1 Question That Now Remains, Part One (2024-01-24 10:53)

Given recent political events, the Republican nomination for president belongs to Donald Trump. Congratulations, Mr. Trump. Of course, only God knows the future, and some interference with Trump's nomination could occur. He could die of a heart attack, or some TDS kook could assassinate him, or some such happenstance. But barring the unforeseen and unpredictable, Trump will be the Republican nominee when all is finalized in the summer convention. This article is being written on that assumption. I'll make relevant amendments later, if the unforeseen and unpredictable make that necessary.

If the race is indeed over, then, as soon as possible, all Republicans need to get behind the candidate—wisely or unwisely—selected by the Republican Party members. The infighting must stop; the people (will) have spoken, and the choice of Trump (will be) made. It's democracy. No spilled milk arguments or recriminations can be justified—until after the election. If you are a Republican, you support Trump. If you have TDS and simply can't do that, don't vote. But Trump will be the nominee and that's what we live or die with. We look forward, not backwards.

Thus, the significant question that now remains is not, "can Trump win?" Who he selects for VP is weighty, but not THE most important consideration. The major question is "HOW can Trump win?", and it isn't too early to start asking it. If a path to the White House for Trump isn't determined, then nothing else really matters—who his VP is, what he would do when he gets there, etc. etc. "Can he win?" is irrelevant. "HOW can he win" is what is important now.

And I will be forthright and totally honest here—right now, I don't know. I'm not saying he can't win; I just presently don't perceive his route to victory, and will be listening closely to anybody who might elucidate a method. Ronna McDaniel hasn't given one. I did read one commentator who suggested his best chance was to select Nikki Haley as his Vice-president, but that (apparently) isn't going to happen. But it IS an argument, and the only one I've read so far.

Most conservatives who supported Ron DeSantis or Vivek Ramaswamy also like Mr. Trump. The issue is not, and never has been, among most of us who backed DeSantis—would Mr. Trump be a good president again? I thought he was an excellent president (with some reservations, no president is perfect), and I think he would do a good job again. I wrote a series of columns last year on Trump's accomplishments as president ([1]here, [2]here, and [3]here). I've never said he was a bad president or that he would be a bad president if elected this year. I think a huge number of DeSantis/Ramaswamy supporters would agree with me on that.

So, again, the issue is not and has never been Mr. Trump's past accomplishments or future goals. The critical issue now becomes...how can he win the presidency again? And, except for the utterly repulsive "Haley-for-VP" proposal, I have seen no answer to that question. I read people who say, "well, Trump did a great job before!" Granted. And utterly irrelevant. "He's a fighter! He never gives up!" Granted. And utterly irrelevant. "He is being treated unjustly!" Granted. But...utterly irrelevant. None of these are plans for conquest in November.

I have brought up, many times in columns (and I am far from the only commentator who has done so) Mr. Trump's penchant for offending countless people via his arrogance, bombast, rudeness, and general dislikeability. And I always, ALWAYS, get responses, "I don't care about how 'likeable' he is if he governs well." Yes, many Republicans DON'T care what kind of person Trump is. But many do, and Trump-conservatives are not in the majority in America. Now, you can walk the streets and call me a fool if you want to, but his character IS an issue, a major one, to countless Americans. If Trump's personality turns off more people than it turns on, then he is going to lose, and it is...utterly irrelevant...if some conservatives aren't offended by his antics.

But his bombast isn't preventing him from securing the Republican nomination. Trump is what he is, he isn't going to change, and he will win or lose with it. You like him and don't care what his character is. So be it.

Now. Tell us how he can win in November.

Tell us how he can overcome the millions of Americans who won't vote for him because he HAS offended them, and to whom it DOES matter what kind of person he is. Saying, "it doesn't matter to me" is no answer. It obviously won't matter to anybody who votes for him.

But the question now—the ONLY question is—how do we overcome his negatives and get people to vote for him?

We must come up with positive solutions; it's not enough to produce only a "Biden is incompetent" campaign. I've never seen a path for Trump back to Washington, and that is one reason I supported DeSantis. I hoped there might be enough Democrats disgusted with Biden to vote for a new, fresh, non-repulsive face—"DeSantis Democrats" a la the "Reagan Democrats" of the 1980s. Or these disgusted Democrats might just stay home. But they probably will vote now—not for Biden, but against Trump. And every one of them will get their dead mother, their dog, and their pet fish to vote for Biden, too. Simply because they hate Trump so much.

Advertisement

Further, how does Mr. Trump plan to overcome possible cheating? And the help the Chinese will surely give Biden? How? We need good, solid solutions to these conundrums.

I'll ponder it, long and hard, and publish any answers I concoct. But currently, I'm almost blank. And have heard no viable solutions yet.

Good luck, Mr. Trump. We support you.

1.1.4 There's a Much Better Alternative to 'School Choice' Legislation (2024-01-24 10:59)

"School Choice Week" presents an opportunity to discuss the consequences of "school choice" policies, which are popular with most Republican legislators and national "conservative" think tanks.

However, I believe it's a grave mistake to use government funding to enroll children in private and Christian schools and to support homeschooling. Let me explain why.

On its face, "school choice" appears to be a viable solution for making alternative education affordable for parents who do not want their children indoctrinated through government schools. The problem is, once government money is infused into these alternative modes of education, they too will become controlled by the government and subject to the woke agenda that has ravaged government schools.

In a 1980 court case affirmed by the U.S. Supreme Court, the federal government prevailed over Hillsdale College asserting that when an educational institution accepts students who receive government funds, it's subject to government regulation.

The safest way to make alternatives to government schools affordable is through tax credits at the state and federal levels. The federal child tax credit should be increased for parents who do not enroll their children in government schools and states with income taxes should follow suit.

An increase in federal child tax credits will allow parents to keep some of their money to pay for education that best suits their child by paying fewer taxes. For families who don't pay any income taxes, an earned income credit model could be applied.

[1]South Carolina has a tax credit bill being considered in the State Senate and a companion bill will soon be introduced in the State House. Even if not initially, all other "school choice" options implemented with government funding have the potential to become regulated and could harm private, home and Christian schools.

Due to COVID-19 school shut-downs, parents became aware of the indoctrination happening in their children's schools. As a result, many disgruntled parents all over the country lobbied elected officials to pass "school choice" [2] legislation, and problems predicted by the organization I lead are beginning to manifest.

After universal school choice legislation passed in Arizona last year, private schools increased their tuition eliminating the rationale for government money to make private schools more affordable to parents. Private schools took advantage of the increase in "school choice" funding to line their pockets, continuing to keep this option out of reach for many parents. [3] According to an article in a Tucson newspaper, "... the cost of enrollment for seventh and eighth graders at Arrowhead Montessori, in Peoria, soared to $15,000, an increase of $4,200. In Mesa, tuition at Redeemer Christian School rose by nearly a quarter across most grades; families of high schoolers now pay $12,979, approximately $2,500 higher than the year prior. Similarly, at Desert Garden Montessori, in Phoenix, middle and high school tuition is now $16,000, nearly 24 % higher than last year's tuition rate of $12,950. And Saint Theresa Catholic School, also in Phoenix, reserved its biggest price hike — of about $1,800, or nearly 15 % — for non-Catholic students in the elementary grades. Tuition for those students is now more than $14,000."

Moreover, the governor of Arizona recently threatened to champion [4] new regulations for private and home school parents who accept government funding under the massive expansion of school choice passed in Arizona in 2022. Arizona House Speaker Ben Toma, who sponsored the universal expansion, said Governor Hobbs seeks to strangle Education Savings Accounts and private education with bureaucracy and regulation. This is exactly why putting government money in private schools is a mistake.

Most Republican legislators follow a particular national think tank for education policy and this foundation pushed hard in nearly every state to pass the latest "school choice" policy they call "Education Savings Accounts."

It is time for legislators to listen to another voice. [5] United States Parents Involved in Education (USPIE) has unique, bold and insightful education policy positions that differ from the leading foundation most conservative legislators follow. USPIE's policies will fundamentally protect children and our country's freedom.

USPIE's primary mission is to close the U.S. Department of Education, eliminate all federal education mandates and return local, community, and parental control of education. Thereby, USPIE is opposed to Title I portability, vouchers, education savings accounts and all federally regulated choice options. USPIE supports the parental choice option of increasing the federal Child Tax Credit for parents who do not choose to enroll their children in government schools and supports similar tax credits on the state level.

USPIE endeavors to help parents find ways to take advantage of independent, private, and home school alternatives to government schools, and is open-minded. However, USPIE opposes school choice options based on “money follows the child” legislation.

1.1.5 The Hysterical Style in American Politics (2024-01-24 11:04)

The post-Joe McCarthy era and the candidacy of Barry Goldwater once prompted [1]liberal political scientist Richard Hofstadter to chronicle a supposedly long-standing right-wing “paranoid style” of conspiracy-fed extremism.

But far more common, especially in the 21st century, has been a [2]left-wing, hysterical style of inventing scandals and manipulating perceived tensions for political advantage.

Or, in the immortal words of former President [3]Barack Obama’s chief of staff, Rahm Emanuel, “Never let a serious crisis go to waste.”

The [4]2008 economic emergency crested on Sept. 7, with the near collapse of the home mortgage industry.

Obama took office on Jan. 20, 2009, more than four months after the meltdown. In that interim, the officials had finally restored financial confidence and plotted a course of economic recovery.

No matter. The Obama administration never stopped hyping the financial meltdown as if it had just occurred. That way, it rammed through Obamacare, massive deficit spending, and the vast expansion of the federal government. All that stymied economic growth and recovery for years.

In 2016, then-President [5]Donald Trump was declared Hitler-like and an existential threat to democracy.

Amid this derangement syndrome, any means necessary to stop him were justified: the Russian collusion hoax, impeachment over a phone call, or the Hunter Biden laptop “disinformation” farce.

Eventually, the Left sought to normalize the once-unthinkable: Removing the leading presidential candidate from state ballots and indicting him in state and local courts.

Nothing was off-limits—not forging a federal court document, calling for a military coup, rioting on Inauguration Day, or radically changing the way Americans voted in presidential elections.

In October 2017, allegations surfaced about serial sexual predation by liberal cinema icon Harvey Weinstein.

The #MeToo furor immediately followed.

At first, accusers properly outed dozens of mostly liberal celebrities, actors, authors, and CEOs for their prior and mostly covered-up sexual harassment and often assault.

But soon, the once-legitimate movement had morphed into general hysteria. Thousands of men (and women) were persecuted for alleged offenses, often sexual banter or rude repartee, committed decades prior.

#MeToo jumped the shark with the left-wing effort to take down conservative Supreme Court nominee Brett Kavanaugh. Would-be accusers surfaced from his high school days, 35 years earlier, but without any supporting evidence or witnesses for their wild, lurid charges.

#MeToo hysteria ended when too many liberal grandees were endangered. Most dramatically, former Joe Biden senatorial aide Tara Reade came forward during the 2020 campaign cycle with charges that front-runner Biden had once sexually assaulted her—and was trashed by the liberal media.

The outbreak of COVID-19 in the United States during the winter of 2020 prompted an even greater hysteria.

Without scientific evidence, federal health czars Anthony Fauci and Francis Collins were able to persuade the Trump administration to shut down the economy in the country's first national quarantine.

Suddenly, it became a thought crime to question the wisdom of 6-foot social distancing, of mandatory mask-wearing, of the Wuhan virology lab's origin of the COVID-19 virus, or of off-label use of prescription drugs.

Left-wing politicians and celebrities, from Hillary Rodham Clinton and Gavin Newsom to Jane Fonda, all blurted out the political advantages that the lockdowns offered—from recalibrating capitalism and health care to ensuring the 2020 defeat of Trump.

The COVID-19 hysteria magically ended when Biden won the 2020 election. Suddenly, the explanations about the bat or pangolin origins of the virus faded. The damage from the quarantines could no longer be repressed. And herd immunity gradually mitigated the epidemic.

The lockdown caused untold economic chaos, suicides, and health crises.

One result was the 120 days of looting, arson, death, destruction, and violence spawned by Antifa and Black Lives Matter in the aftermath of the tragic death of George Floyd while in police custody in May 2020.

Suddenly, a hysterical lie took hold: American police were waging war against black males.

The details around Floyd's sudden death—he was in the act of committing a felony, resisting arrest, suffering from coronary artery disease and the after-effects of COVID-19, and being high on dangerous drugs—were off limits.

The riot toll reached $2 billion in property damage, more than 35 deaths, and 1,500 injured law enforcement officers. A federal courthouse, a police precinct, and a historic church were torched.

Police forces were defunded. Emboldened left-wing prosecutors nullified existing laws.

Diversity, equity, and inclusion commissars spread throughout American higher education as meritocracy came under assault.

Racial essentialism triumphed. Racially segregated dorms, campus spaces, and graduations were normalized.

Everything from destroying the southern border to dropping SAT requirements for college admission followed.

Sometimes real, sometimes hyped crises led to these contrived left-wing hysterias—like the Jan. 6 violent “armed insurrection” or the “fascist,” “ultra-MAGA” threat.

Otherwise, the progressive movement cannot enact its unpopular agendas. So, it must scare the people silly and gin up chaos to destroy its perceived enemies—any crisis it can.

1.1.6 Eighth generation of videogame history (2024-01-24 11:38)

The eighth generation of video game consoles began in 2012, and consists of four [1]home video game consoles: the [2]Wii U released in 2012, the [3]PlayStation 4 family in 2013, the [4]Xbox One family in 2013, and the [5]Nintendo Switch family in 2017.

The generation offered few signature hardware innovations. [6]Sony and [7]Microsoft continued to produce new systems with similar designs and capabilities as their predecessors, but with improved performance (processing speed, higher-resolution graphics, and increased storage capacity) that further moved consoles into confluence with personal computers, and furthering support for [8]digital distribution and [9]games as a service. [10]Motion-controlled games of the [11]seventh generation had waned in popularity, but consoles were preparing for advancement of [12]virtual reality (VR), with Sony introducing the [13]PlayStation VR in 2016.[14][1][15][2] Sony focused heavily on its first-party developers and console exclusives as key selling points, while Microsoft expanded its gaming services, creating the [16]Xbox Game Pass subscription service for Xbox and Windows computers, and its [17]xCloud game streaming service. Microsoft and Sony consoles saw mid-generation refreshes, with high-end revisions [18]PlayStation 4 Pro and the [19]Xbox One X, and lower-cost [20]PlayStation 4 Slim and [21]Xbox One S models that lacked some features. As of 2021, the PlayStation 4 and Xbox One families had sold an estimated 106 and 58 million units, respectively.

Nintendo remained on a separate path from Sony or Microsoft in its [22]blue ocean strategy. The Wii U was designed to be a more robust [23]Wii to appeal to dedicated gamers, but its means and purpose were lost in how it was marketed. The Wii U substantially undersold Nintendo's projections, selling only 13.5 million units by its discontinuation in 2017, which drove Nintendo to release the Nintendo Switch by 2017, its design and marketing accounting for several of the faults of the Wii U while meeting a broad range of global demographics and possible gaming situations. Later, Nintendo released the [24]Nintendo Switch Lite, a version that lacked the Switch's docking capabilities but had other component optimization and was otherwise compatible with all games. By March 2023, all Switch models have shipped over 125 million units, outselling the Wii.

Handheld consoles fought against increasing pressure of [25]mobile gaming. The [26]Nintendo 3DS and 2DS succeeded the [27]Nintendo DS line, while the [28]PlayStation Vita was the successor to the [29]PlayStation Portable. Combined shipped units of the Nintendo 3DS/2DS family had reached 75 million by September 2019, but the Vita was estimated to have only sold about 10 million by the end of 2015. Sony discontinued the unit in 2019 and stated it had no present plans for handheld systems. Nintendo discontinued the Nintendo 3DS in 2020, ending the Nintendo DS families of systems. The Switch Lite acts as its de facto handheld successor.

The eighth-generation console market was also influenced by the lifting of [30]China's ban on video consoles in 2015, as well as the growth of the mobile gaming sector. A number of retro [31]microconsoles were also released during this period.

In November 2020, Sony and Microsoft released the [32]PlayStation 5 and [33]Xbox Series X and Series S respectively. Considered to be their highly anticipated [34]next-generation systems, they continue the trend from the eighth generation with overall general improved computational performance, graphical output, and strong [35]backward compatibility support to minimize the disruption of upgrading to the new platform.

Background

This generation was predicted to face competition from [36]smartphones, [37]tablets, and [38]smart TVs.^{[39][3][40][4][41][5][42][6][43][7][44][8]} In 2013, gaming revenue on [45]Android overtook portable game console revenue, while remaining a distant second to [46]iOS gaming revenue.^{[47][9]} In [48]fiscal year (FY) 2013 (ending early 2013), Nintendo sold 23.7 million consoles,^{[49][10]} while Apple sold 58.2 million [50]iPads in FY 2012 (ending late 2012).^{[51][11]} One particular threat to the traditional console game sales model has been the [52]free-to-play model, wherein most users play free, and either a small number of dedicated players spend enough to cover the rest, or the game is supported by advertising.^{[53][12]}

The PlayStation 4, Xbox One, and Wii U all use [54]AMD [55]GPUs, and two of them (PS4 and XBO) also use AMD [56]CPUs on an [57]x86-64 architecture, similar to common [58]personal computers (as opposed to the IBM [59]PowerPC Architecture used in the previous generation). Microsoft, Nintendo, and Sony were not aware that they were all using AMD hardware until their consoles were announced.^{[60][13]} This shift was considered to be beneficial for [61]multi-platform development, due to the increased similarities between PC hardware and console hardware. It also provided a boost in [62]market share for AMD (which had faced increased competition from [63]Intel in the PC market).^{[64][14]}

Various [65]microconsoles (which are smaller and mostly [66]Android-based) have been released since 2012, although they are seldom referred to as being part of the eighth (or any) generation of video game consoles. These microconsoles have included the [67]Ouya, [68]Nvidia Shield Console, [69]Amazon Fire TV, [70]PlayStation TV, [71]MOJO, [72]Razer Switchblade, [73]GamePop, [74]GameStick, and PC-based [75]Steam Machine consoles.^{[76][15][77][16][78][17]} A number of microconsoles that were modeled as scaled-down versions of consoles from previous generations, running a selection of games from that console, were also released. These included the [79]NES Classic Edition, the [80]SNES Classic Edition, the [81]PlayStation Classic, and the [82]Sega Genesis Mini.

[83]Cloud gaming options for the consoles also were developed in the eighth generation. [84]PlayStation Now enables cloud gaming of PlayStation 2, 3, and 4 games to current PlayStation consoles and personal computers. Microsoft began developing a comparable service [85]xCloud for Xbox and Windows games. [86]Google released [87]Stadia, a dedicated cloud gaming platform designed around reduced latency and advanced features not typical of these other cloud gaming options.

Transition

While earlier console generations generally lasted five to six years, the shift from seventh to eighth generation lasted about eight.^{[88][18]} Unusually, the prior generation's best-selling unit, the Wii, was the first to be replaced in the eighth generation.^{[89][18]} In 2011, Microsoft and Sony officials said they considered themselves only halfway through a ten-year lifecycle for their seventh-generation offerings.^{[90][19][91][20][92][21] [93][22]} The companies also said the addition of cameras and ^[94]motion-based controllers like Xbox's ^[95]Kinect and ^[96]PlayStation Move extended these systems' lifetimes.^{[97][23]} Nintendo president ^[98]Satoru Iwata said that his company would release the Wii U due to declining sales of seventh-generation home consoles and that "the market is now waiting for a new proposal for home consoles".^{[99][24]} Sony considered making its next console a digital download-only machine, but decided against it due to concerns about the inconsistency of internet speeds available globally, especially in ^[100]developing countries.^{[101][25]}

The introduction of the high-end PlayStation 4 Pro and Xbox One X in 2016 and 2017, respectively, led to some journalists to call these machines part of a "half generation" step within the 8th generation, new consoles that would continue to drive sales without introducing a significantly different line of hardware that would segment their consumer base.^{[102][26][103][27]}

In 2020, Microsoft and Sony released their 9th-generation consoles: ^[104]Xbox Series X and ^[105]PlayStation 5. Both said they wanted a soft transition, meaning that the new hardware plays most or all of the platform's previous games.^{[106][28][107][29][108][30] ssup[109][31]} Microsoft said Xbox Series X can play all Xbox One games, including games from the Xbox 360 and original Xbox console that are playable on the Xbox One, and introduced its Smart Delivery program to update some Xbox One games to enable play on the Xbox Series X. Sony has said the "overwhelming majority" of PlayStation 4 games play on the PlayStation 5, and that many run at higher frame rates and resolutions.^{[110][32]}

Chinese market

Main article: ^[111]Video gaming in China § History

The eighth generation of consoles also saw manufacturers re-enter the Chinese market. Since 2000, the Chinese government had banned the sale and distribution of video game consoles, citing concerns on their effect on youth. The ban led console gaming to a niche sector, including a [112]black market for the purchase of these consoles, while also causing personal computing gaming to take off within China, including the spread of [113]Internet cafes and [114]PC bangs.^{[115][33]} This ban lasted through January 2014, where the Chinese government first opened up to allow the sale of consoles in the [116]Shanghai Free-Trade Zone (FTZ).^{[117][34]} By July 2015, the ban on video game consoles was wholly lifted.^{[118][35]} Access to the Chinese video game market is lucrative, having an estimated 500 million potential players^{[119][36]} and representing over US $24 billion in revenues as of 2016.^{[120][37]}

Microsoft and Sony quickly took advantage of the lifting of the ban, announcing sales of the Xbox One and PlayStation 4 platforms within the FTZ shortly after the 2014 announcement. Microsoft established a partnership with BestTV New Media Co, a subsidiary of the [121]Shanghai Media Group, to sell Xbox One units in China,^{[122][38]} with units first shipping by September 2014.^{[123][39]} Sony worked with [124]Shanghai Oriental Pearl Media in May 2014 to establish manufacturing in the FTZ,^{[125][36]} with the PlayStation 4 and PlayStation Vita shipping into China by March 2015.^{[126][40]} CEO of Sony Computer Entertainment [127]Andrew House explained in September 2013 that the company intended to use the PlayStation Vita TV as a low-cost alternative for consumers in an attempt to penetrate the Chinese gaming market.^{[128][41]}

Nintendo did not initially seek to bring the Wii U into China; Nintendo of America president [129]Reggie Fils-Aimé stated that China was of interest to the company after the ban was lifted, but considered that there were similar difficulties with establishing sales there as they had recently had with Brazil.^{[130][42]} Later, Nintendo had teamed up with [131]Tencent by April 2019 to help sell and distribute the Nintendo Switch as well as aid its games through the Chinese government approval process led by [132]National Radio and Television Administration.^{[133][43][134][44]}

Wii U

Main article: [135]Wii U

In November 2010, Nintendo of America CEO [136]Reggie Fils-Aimé stated that the release of the next generation of Nintendo would be determined by the continued success of the [137]Wii.[138][45] [139]Nintendo announced its successor to the Wii, the Wii U, at the [140]Electronic Entertainment Expo 2011 on June 7, 2011.[141][46] After the announcement, several journalists classified the system as the first eighth generation home console.[142][18][143][47][144][48] However, prominent sources have disputed this because of its comparative lack of power and older disc media type with respect to the announced specifications for PlayStation 4 and the Xbox One.[145][49][146][50]

The Wii U's main controller, the [147]Wii U GamePad, features an embedded touchscreen that can work as an auxiliary interactive screen in a fashion similar to the Nintendo DS/3DS, or if compatible with "[148]Off TV Play", can even act as the main screen itself, enabling games to be played without the need of a television. The Wii U is compatible with its predecessor's peripherals, such as the [149]Wii Remote Plus, the [150]Nunchuk, and the [151]Wii Balance Board.[152][51]

The Wii U was released in North America on November 18, 2012, in Europe on November 30, 2012, and in Japan on December 8, 2012. It came in two versions, the Basic Model and the Deluxe/Premium Model, at the price of $300 and $349 US Dollars, respectively. On August 28, 2013, Nintendo announced the production of the Basic model has ended and expected supplies to be exhausted by September 20, 2013. On October 4, 2013, the Deluxe/Premium model was price cut from US $349 to US $300.[153][52]

The Wii U was initially expected to have lifetime sales of about over 100 million, comparable to the Wii.[154][53] However, it had lifetime sales of about only 13 million, in sharp contrast with the Wii. This financially hurt Nintendo, with several financial quarters running at a loss through 2014. Nintendo had anticipated the Wii U would sell similarly to the Wii, but it ended up selling worse than the [155]GameCube and became Nintendo's least successful home console to date.[156][54] Nintendo officially discontinued the Wii U on January 31, 2017, due to its commercial failure, to make way for its second competitor, the Nintendo Switch, released one month later.[157][55]

Main article: [158]PlayStation 4

On February 20, 2013, Sony announced the PlayStation 4 during a press conference in [159]New York City. The console places an emphasis on features surrounding social interaction. Gameplay videos can be shared via the [160]PlayStation Network and other services. Users can stream games being played by themselves or others (either through the console, or directly to [161]Twitch). The [162]DualShock 4 is similar to the previous [163]DualShock 3 controller with the addition of a [164]touchpad and a "Share" button along with a [165]Light-emitting diode bar on the front to allow motion tracking. The [166]PlayStation Camera camera accessory is offered for the system, with [167]stereo camera lenses up to 1280×800px resolution with support for depth sensing similar to Microsoft's [168]Kinect. It also remains compatible with the [169]PlayStation Move peripherals. [170]Second screen capabilities are available through [171]mobile apps and the [172]PlayStation Vita, as well as [173]cloud gaming streaming through the [174]Gaikai service.[175][56][176][57]

The PlayStation 4 was released on November 15, 2013, in North America and November 29, 2013, in Australia and Europe at US $399.99, A $549 and €399 respectively.

Xbox One

Main article: [177]Xbox One

On May 21, 2013, Microsoft announced the Xbox One at an event in [178]Redmond, Washington. The console focuses on entertainment, including the ability to pass television programming from a [179]set-top box over HDMI and use a built-in [180]electronic program guide, and the ability for [181]computer multitasking by snapping applications (such as [182]Skype and [183]Internet Explorer) to the side of the screen, similarly to [184]Windows 8. The controller has "Impulse Triggers" that provide [185]Haptic technology feedback, and the ability to automatically record and save highlights from gameplay. An updated version of [186]Kinect was developed with a [187]1080p camera and expanded voice controls. Originally bundled with the console it has since been excluded.[188][58][189][59]

The Xbox One was released in North America, Europe, and Australia on November 22, 2013, at a launch price of US $499.99, €499 and A $599 respectively with Japan, and was later released in 26 other markets in 2014. It had two mid-generation upgrades, one cheaper option released in 2016 called the Xbox One S, and the other called the Xbox One X which added 4K gaming. Microsoft claimed that the Xbox One X was the "World's most powerful console" and 40 % more powerful than any other console at the time of its release.

Production of the Xbox One family of consoles were discontinued shortly after the launch of their successor, the [190]Xbox Series X and S, at the end of 2020.[191][60]

Nintendo Switch

Main article: [192]Nintendo Switch

Due to the commercial failure of the Wii U, along with competition from [193]mobile gaming, then-president [194]Satoru Iwata sought to revitalize the company by creating a new strategy for Nintendo that included [195]embracing mobile gaming, and developing new hardware that would be attractive to a wider range of audiences.^{[196][61]} The hardware product was announced under the codename NX in a press conference held with [197]DeNA on March 17, 2015,^{[198][62]} and fully revealed as the [199]Nintendo Switch on October 20, 2016. It was released worldwide on March 3, 2017, competing with the Xbox One and PlayStation 4.

The Switch is considered by Nintendo a home console that has multiple ways to play. The main unit, the Console, is a tablet-sized device with a touch-sensitive screen. It can be inserted into a Docking Station which allows games to be played on a connected television. Alternatively, two [200]Joy-Con, motion-sensitive controllers comparable to the Wii Remotes, can be slotted onto the sides of the Console so the unit can be played as a handheld. Further, the Console can be set on a kickstand, allowing multiple players to see the screen and play games with separate Joy-Con. Additionally, Nintendo built the Switch on standard industry components, allowing for ease of porting games onto the system using standard software libraries and [201]game engines rather than Nintendo's usual proprietary approaches. This enabled them to bring several third-party and independent game developers on board prior to launch to assure some third-party games in their software library.

Despite the Switch being significantly weaker in terms of processing power than its competitors, it was met with critical praise and commercial success. Nintendo had anticipated selling about 10 million Switches in the first year of release but ended up exceeding this projection with total first-year sales of over 17 million units, exceeding the Wii U's lifetime sales. In late 2017, the Nintendo Switch was the fastest selling console in US history, and in November 2018 it was the fastest selling of all the 8th generation consoles in the US.^{[202][63]}

A hardware revision, the Switch Lite, was announced on July 10, 2019, and was released on September 20, 2019. The unit integrates the Joy-Con onto the main console with a smaller form-factor, making the unit strictly handheld rather than a hybrid system. Further details are described below under Handhelds. An enhanced model was announced on July 7, 2021, and was released on October 8, 2021, featuring a 4K-ready dock, a 7-inch OLED screen, a wider and adjustable stand, enhanced audio, a wired LAN port built into the dock, and 64 GB of internal storage.^{[203][64]}

Handheld systems

A trend starting from the eighth generation of handheld systems is the general shift from dedicated handheld gaming consoles to mobile gaming on smart devices, such as ^[204]smart-phones and ^[205]tablets. As such, smart devices have eroded sales of dedicated handheld gaming consoles, with analysts predicting that smart devices will replace handheld gaming consoles in the near future.^{[206][174]}

The Nintendo 3DS was released in Japan on February 26, 2011; in Europe on March 25, 2011; in North America on March 27, 2011;^{[228][180][229][181]} and in Australia on March 31, 2011. On July 28, 2011, Nintendo announced a major price drop starting August 12. In addition, as of September 2011 consumers who bought the system at its original price have access to ten ^[230]Nintendo Entertainment System games before they are available to the general public, after which the games may be updated to the versions publicly released on the ^[231]Nintendo eShop. In December 2011, ten ^[232]Game Boy Advance games were made available to consumers who bought the system at its original price at no charge, with Nintendo stating it has no plans to release to the general public.^{[233][182]}

On June 21, 2012, Nintendo announced a bigger model of the 3DS called the [234]Nintendo 3DS XL. Both screens are 90 % larger than the original 3DS, but the resolution is the same. It also has a slightly longer battery life. It was released on July 28, 2012, in Europe and August 19, 2012, in North America as well as Australasia on August 23, 2012, and Brazil on September 1, 2012.[235][183]

On August 28, 2013, Nintendo announced a low cost, 2D version of the 3DS called the [236]Nintendo 2DS. This redesign plays all Nintendo DS and Nintendo 3DS games, albeit without a stereoscopic 3D option. Unlike previous machines of the DS family, the Nintendo 2DS uses a [237]slate-like design instead of a [238]clamshell one. The console launched on October 12 in both Europe and North America[239][184] as well as Australasia.[240][185]

On August 29, 2014, Nintendo announced an enhanced revision of the 3DS called the [241]New Nintendo 3DS and [242]New Nintendo 3DS XL. The newer system uses microSD cards rather than full-sized and has a second analog "nub" input, the C-stick, Super-Stable 3D™ (face-tracking technology that allows the glasses-free stereoscopic 3D display to constantly adapt to the user's exact eye position as the player shifts his or her arms and body) and an upgraded processor that allows for more advanced NN3DS-exclusive games (e.g., a 3D port of acclaimed Wii game [243]Xenoblade Chronicles) which cannot be played on the original Nintendo 3DS/2DS, although New Nintendo 3DS can still be played with all 3DS and most [244]DS[245]i games. It was released in Japan on October 11, 2014; in Australasia on November 21, 2014; in Europe on February 13, 2015; in North America on February 13, 2015, for the XL version. The smaller version for North America was released on September 25, 2015, bundled with the game [246]Animal Crossing: Happy Home Designer.^{[247][186]} In April 2017, Nintendo announced the [248]New Nintendo 2DS XL, released in Japan on July 13, 2017, and in North America on July 28, 2017. It is a streamlined version of the New Nintendo 3DS XL, with identical screen sizes, but with a thinner build and without stereoscopic 3D.^{[249][187]}

The 3DS family was formally discontinued in September 2020.

PlayStation Vita

Main article: [250]PlayStation Vita

The PlayStation Vita is the second (and final) [251]handheld game console developed by [252]Sony Computer Entertainment.^{[253][188]} It is the successor to the [254]PlayStation Portable as part of the [255]PlayStation brand of gaming devices. It was released in Japan on December 17, 2011^{[256][189]} and was released in Europe and North America on February 22, 2012.^{[257][190][258][191]}

The handheld includes two analog sticks, a 5-inch (130 mm) ^[259]OLED/^[260]LCD multi-touch capacitive ^[261]touchscreen, and supports ^[262]Bluetooth, ^[263]Wi-Fi and optional ^[264]3G. Internally, the PS Vita features a 4-core ^[265]ARM Cortex-A9 MPCore processor and a 4-core ^[266]SGX543MP4+ graphics processing unit (GPU), as well as ^[267]LiveArea software as its main user interface, which succeeds the ^[268]XrossMediaBar.^{[269][192][270][193]}

The device is backward-compatible with a subset of the PSP and ^[271]PS One games digitally released on the ^[272]PlayStation Network via the ^[273]PlayStation Store.^{[274][194]} The graphics for PSP releases are upscaled, with a smoothing filter to reduce pixelation.^{[275][195]}

Lifetime sales of the Vita have not been released by Sony but have been estimated between 15 and 16 million.^{[276][196][277][197]} Sony discontinued the PlayStation Vita on March 1, 2019,^{[278][198]} and has no plans for a successor.^{[279][199][280][200]}

Nintendo Switch Lite

Main article: ^[281]Nintendo Switch Lite

Nintendo released the Nintendo Switch Lite, a hardware revision of the Switch, worldwide on September 20, 2019. Designed as a less expensive version of the Switch, the Switch Lite integrates the Joy-Con onto the hardware unit itself, eliminating some of the Joy-Con's features, which prevents a small number of games in the Switch's library that exclusively require television or tabletop modes from being used on the Switch. Additionally, the Switch Lite cannot be docked. The unit is smaller and lighter than the main Switch console, and uses updated lower-powered hardware that improves its battery performance. It otherwise supports all other features of the Switch, including its communication capabilities

1.1.7 Playstation 5 history (2024-01-24 11:40)

The PlayStation 5 (PS5) is a [1]home video game console developed by [2]Sony Interactive Entertainment. It was announced as the successor to the [3]PlayStation 4 in April 2019, was launched on November 12, 2020, in Australia, Japan, New Zealand, North America, and South Korea, and was released worldwide one week later. The PS5 is part of the [4]ninth generation of video game consoles, along with [5]Microsoft's [6]Xbox Series X/S consoles, which were released in the same month.

The base model includes an [7]optical disc drive compatible with [8]Ultra HD Blu-ray discs. The Digital Edition lacks this drive, as a lower-cost model for buying games only through [9]download. The two variants were launched simultaneously. Slimmer hardware revisions of both models replaced the original models on sale in November 2023.^{[10][4]}

The PlayStation 5's main hardware features include a [11]solid-state drive customized for high-speed data streaming to enable significant improvements in storage performance, an [12]AMD [13]GPU capable of [14]4K resolution display at up to 120 [15]frames per second, hardware-accelerated [16]ray tracing for realistic lighting and reflections, and the Tempest Engine for hardware-accelerated [17]3D audio effects. Other features include the [18]DualSense controller with [19]haptic feedback, [20]backward compatibility with the majority of PlayStation 4 and [21]PlayStation VR games, and the [22]PlayStation VR2 headset.

History

Development

[23] [24]Mark Cerny, the PlayStation 5's chief architect

The lead architect of the [25]PlayStation console line, [26]Mark Cerny, implemented a two-year feedback cycle after the launch of the PlayStation 4. This entailed regularly visiting Sony's first-party developers at two-year intervals to find out what concerns they had with shortcomings in Sony's current hardware and how such hardware could be improved in console refreshes or for the next generation. This feedback directly influenced the priorities of the console development team. During the development of the PlayStation 5, a central challenge revolved around addressing the length of loading times for games.^{[27][5]} Cerny said several developers, including [28]Epic Games' [29]Tim Sweeney, told him that standard I/O speed of [30]hard disk drives was now a limiting factor in pushing game development.^{[31][6]} Slow data rates placed limits on the size of data being loaded into the game, the physical location of data on the storage medium, and the duplication of data across the medium in order to reduce load times. An important goal was to find ways to reduce loading time, particularly in games that stream or dynamically load new game areas as the player moves through the game world.^{[32][5]}

Jim Ryan, the CEO of Sony Interactive Entertainment, stated that Sony had researched the feasibility of a "low priced, reduced spec" version of the PlayStation 5, like what Microsoft had done with its lower-power counterpart to the Xbox Series X, the [33]Xbox Series S, and concluded that they believed such consoles do not fare well, becoming obsolete too fast.^{[34][7]}

Marketing and release

Cerny first publicly described the new console in an interview with [35]Wired magazine in April 2019.^{[36][8]} In early 2019, Sony's financial report for the quarter ending March 31, 2019, affirmed that new next-generation hardware was in development but would ship no earlier than April 2020.^{[37][9]} In a second Wired magazine interview in October 2019, Sony said it intended to ship its next-generation console worldwide by the end of 2020.^{[38][10]} The current hardware specifications were revealed in October 2019.^{[39][11][40][12]} At CES 2020, Sony unveiled the official logo for the platform, which follows the similar minimalist styling of the previous PlayStation consoles and brand.^{[41][13]} Full specifications were given in an online presentation by Cerny and published by Sony and [42]Digital Foundry on March 18, 2020.^{[43][14][44][15][45][16]} Digital Foundry spoke with Cerny in detail and published a "deep dive" on April 2.^{[46][17]}

A major game library showcase had been planned for June 4, 2020, but was postponed until June 11 due to the [47]George Floyd protests. This presentation was also the premiere of the console's external hardware design.^{[48][18][49][19][50][20]}⚭up[51][21]

[52] Event lighting being set up at SIE headquarters on the evening of November 8, 2020; four days before the launch

Sony planned to launch the PlayStation 5 by the 2020 end-of-year holiday period.^{[53][22]} The date and pricing was confirmed as part of a game showcase presentation on September 16, 2020; the release date in Australia, Japan, New Zealand, North America, and South Korea was confirmed for November 12, 2020, and for most of the rest of the world on November 19, 2020.^{[54][23]}

PlayStation 5's release in India was delayed, leading to speculation that a trademark dispute was the reason; the name "PS5" was briefly trademarked by a different person; eventually the dispute was resolved and the system released there on February 2, 2021.^{[55][24][56][25][57][26][58][27]} The console launched in Indonesia on January 22, 2021.^{[59][28]} The system launched in China on May 15, 2021.^{[60][29]}

The console launched with two models: a base version with an [61]Ultra HD Blu-ray compatible [62]optical disc drive for retail game support alongside [63]online distribution via the [64]PlayStation Store, and a lower-cost variant lacking the disc drive and retaining digital download support.^{[65][30]}

Following the September 16, 2020, presentation, Sony stated that pre-orders for the console were to open at various retailers on the following day. However, several retailers in the United States and the United Kingdom launched pre-orders that evening, causing a rush on pre-orders, including [66]scalping as many stores' inventories were quickly sold out, and creating confusion. Sony apologized for the incident on September 19, 2020, and promised to increase more pre-order deliveries over the coming days and stock through the end of the year.^{[67][31][68][32]}

Worldwide supply of the console has remained low due to a [69]global chip shortage since 2020.^{[70][33]} Sony expected a short retail stock until 2023.^{[71][34]} In August 2022, Sony announced a price increase by up to 20 % in most of its markets except the US, citing global economic, inflationary, and supply chain pressures.^{[72][35][73][36]}

Hardware

The PlayStation 5 is powered by a custom [74]system on a chip (SoC) designed in tandem by [75]AMD and Sony,^{[76][37]} integrating a custom [77]7 nm AMD [78]Zen 2 [79]CPU with eight cores running at a variable frequency capped at 3.5 GHz.^{[80][38]} Zen 2 is a 64-bit [81]x86-64 instruction set CPU [82]microarchitecture. The integrated [83]GPU is also a custom unit based on AMD's [84]RDNA 2 graphics architecture.^{[85][39]} The GPU has 36 compute units running at a variable frequency capped at 2.23 GHz, making it capable of a peak theoretical performance of 10 [86]teraFLOPS.^{[87][15][88][40]} The GPU supports [89]hardware-accelerated real-time [90]ray tracing, a rendering technique that allows for realistic lighting and reflections.^{[91][11]} The console has 16 GB of [92]GDDR6 SDRAM with a peak bandwidth of 448 GB/s,^{[93][38]} and integrates [94]Bluetooth 5.1, and [95]802.11ax (Wi-Fi 6).^{[96][41]}

Both the CPU and GPU are monitored by a special boost system incorporating AMD's SmartShift technology that adjusts the frequency of these units based on the current activities of both to target ideal constant power drawn and a model SoC performance profile.^[97]clarification needed For example, if the CPU is running at lower activity, the boost system may reduce its frequency and increase the frequency of the GPU for higher performance without otherwise affecting power use or cooling.^{[98][38]}

The cooling system includes a double-sided cooling fan for air intake that is 120 mm in diameter and 45 mm thick, and a large [99]heat sink with a standard [100]heat pipe design that Sony says has a "shape and airflow [which] make it possible to achieve the same performance as a [101]vapor chamber". SoC cooling includes a [102]liquid metal thermal conductor which sits between the SoC and the heat sink.^{[103][42][104][43][105][44]}^{sup}[106][45] The system contains a 350-watt power supply.^{[107][42][108][43][109][44]} Sony developed the PlayStation 5 to consume less energy than the PlayStation 4 for suspended gameplay states.^{[110][46]}

The console has a new audio technology called Tempest Engine, allowing hundreds of simultaneous sound sources compared to 50 for the PlayStation 4.^{[111][38]}

Storage architecture

The internal storage of the PlayStation 5 is a custom-built 825 GB [112]solid-state drive (667 GB available)^{[113][47]} with a 12-channel interface, achieving a raw throughput of 5.5 GB/s.

This atypical drive size was found to be optimal for the 12-channel pathway rather than a more common 512 GB or 1 TB unit. With a dedicated decompression unit supporting [114]zlib and the new Oodle Kraken data compression protocol from [115]RAD Game Tools, the unit has a typical throughput of 8–9 GB/s.^{[116][38]} Mark Cerny stated that a fast SSD was the top request from game developers so the goal not only was to have a theoretical raw read speed 100 times faster than PS4, but to eliminate [117]input/output (I/O) [118]bottleneck points so the performance target could be made effective. To this end, Sony designed a custom chip with multiple [119]coprocessors to work in unison with the [120]flash memory controller to reduce [121]latency and channel data more efficiently around the system. At peak, the custom unit is capable of processing up to 22 GB/s of compressible data.^{[122][48]}

Storage for games is expandable up to an additional 8TB through a single internal [123]NVM Express (NVMe) [124]M.2 [125]solid-state drive, and up to an additional 8TB through an external [126]USB [127]hard drive or SSD.^{[128][38][129][49]} Initially at launch, NVMe drives were not supported and the console would not boot if one was installed.^{[130][50]} Beta system software support for the M.2 port was released in July 2021,^{[131][51]} while full support was added in a September 2021 system update.^{[132][52]} The internal SSD is not user-serviceable, since its flash memory chips and controller are built into the PlayStation 5's motherboard.^{[133][53]} Though game installation is mandatory, the user has some control of what to install such as only installing the multiplayer component of a game.^{[134][54]} While PlayStation 4 games can be moved between the internal SSD and an external USB or M.2 drive to free up space on the SSD, PlayStation 5 games must be stored on the internal SSD or external M.2 drive to be played, and at launch could not be moved to an external storage device.^{[135][55]} An April 2021 system patch enabled users to move PlayStation 5 games to and from an external USB storage device, though the games must still reside on the internal SSD to be played.^{[136][56]}

The base version of the PlayStation 5 includes an [137]Ultra HD Blu-ray optical drive^{[138][38]} compatible with Ultra HD Blu-ray discs, standard Blu-ray discs and DVDs. The PlayStation 5 does not support [139]CDs and will not play [140]3D Blu-ray content.^{[141][57][142][58]} The choice of Ultra-HD Blu-ray as the disc medium means PlayStation 5 game discs can hold up to 100 GB of data, in contrast to PlayStation 4 games which usually came on dual-layer standard Blu-ray discs capable of holding up to 50 GB.^{[143][59]} An example of this is the title [144]Gran Turismo Sport. The PS4 version comes on 2 discs whereas the PS5 version comes on one.^{[145][60]}

The console's [146]form factor was revealed during the June 11, 2020 presentation.^{[147][30]} Sony President Jim Ryan stated that the aesthetics are intended to be "transformational in how they look, sound, and feel".^{[148][61]} The launch unit is a two-tone design matching the design of the DualSense controller, with a black internal block flanked by two white wings along its sides, each lit by blue [149]LEDs. Ryan stated that more colors than white and black may be available after launch.^{[150][61]} The unit can operate vertically or horizontally. Two long air intake vents run along the front, and heat exhaust vents dominate the rear.^{[151][42][152][43][153][44]} The wings are removable to access certain internal components such as the [154]PCIe 4.0 NVMe SSD storage expansion slot, the power supply, and the optional Blu-ray disc drive.^{[155][42][156][43][157][44]} Beneath the side panels are two "dust catchers" – holes allowing the user to vacuum out dust collected by the cooling system.^{[158][42][159][43][160][44]} Senior Art Director Yujin Morisawa led the console's case design, inspired by the term "five dimensions" and crafting the skeleton of its design around circles and squares that would make players comfortable when looking at it. Morisawa also had to manage the case shape to provide enough internal volume within the unit for all the technical hardware while reducing its size without restricting airflow.^{[161][62]}

The Blu-ray version has dimensions of 390 by 260 by 104 millimeters (15.4 in × 10.2 in × 4.1 in) and 4.5 kilograms (9.9 lb), and the download-only version is slightly slimmer, at 390 by 260 by 92 millimeters (15.4 in × 10.2 in × 3.6 in) and 3.9 kilograms (8.6 lb).^{[162][63]} The console has been recognized for its large size in comparison to previous gaming consoles, and its size has been attributed to ensuring effective [163]cooling management and minimizing noise during operation.^{[164][64][165][65][166][66]}

The front includes a [167]USB-C port with [168]USB 3.1 Gen 2 and a USB-A port with [169]USB 2.0. The back has two USB-A ports with USB 3.1 Gen 2, an [170]HDMI 2.1 port, [171]Gigabit Ethernet, and power.^{[172][30][173][67][174][68]}

The DualSense controller

[177]

The DualSense Edge controller

The DualSense wireless controller for the PlayStation 5 was revealed on April 7, 2020.^{[178][69]} It is based on the prior ^[179]DualShock controller but with modifications influenced by discussions with game designers and players.^{[180][69]} The DualSense controller has adaptive triggers with ^[181]force feedback through ^[182]voice coil actuators that can change the resistance to the player as necessary, supporting experiences such as virtually drawing an arrow from a bow.^{[183][54]} The DualSense maintains the same buttons as the ^[184]DualShock 4, though the "Share" button was renamed to "Create" with additional means for players to create and share content. A new built-in microphone array was added so players can speak to others using only the controller,^{[185][69]} and the included controller speaker has been improved.^{[186][54]} It has two-tone coloring, primarily white with black facing, with the black piece being easily detachable.^{[187][70]} The light bar has been moved to the sides of the touchpad.^{[188][69]} It has ^[189]USB-C connectivity, a higher-rated battery, and an audio jack.^{[190][54][191][71]} As an ^[192]Easter egg, the texture of the controller unit is covered in miniature versions of the four PlayStation button symbols (cross, circle, square, and triangle).^{[193][62]}

Sony revealed the DualSense Edge (CFI-ZCP1), a new controller for the PlayStation 5 featuring additional capabilities, in August 2022.^{[194][72]} The controller features a more modular design than the DualSense with replaceable stick modules, multiple control profiles and an option of relocating map inputs.^{[195][72]} The controller was initially released on January 26, 2023 on PlayStation Direct, but was made available through other retailers on February 23, 2023.^{[196][73]}

Hardware revisions

Sony began shipping a minor hardware revision of the PlayStation 5 in August 2021. The new design (the 1100 series), reduced the size and weight of the heat sink, reducing the net system weight by 300 grams (0.66 lb), without having a noticeable effect on cooling performance, according to [197]Digital Foundry and Gamers Nexus.^{[198][74]} This design requires no screwdriver for the console stand.^{[199][75]}

In August 2022, Sony began shipping another hardware revision (the 1200 series), for both the base and digital versions of the PS5, which used a die shrink of the original SoC. This lowered the power draw of the SoC and Sony redesigned the heatsink again, contributing to a weight decrease.^{[200][76]} The Digital Edition now weighs 3.4 kg (compared to 3.9 kg for the launch version) and the base version weighs 3.9 kg (compared to 4.5 kg for the launch version).^{[201][77]}

A new version of the PS5, unofficially referred to as the PlayStation 5 Slim,^{[202][78][203][79][204][80]} (the 2000 series), was announced by Sony in October 2023 for release in November 2023 as a replacement for both original versions of the system. The two new models are smaller than the original PS5, include additional USB ports, and have 1 TB of internal storage. The drive-less Digital Edition's cost was increased by $50 USD. A disc drive kit can be purchased for $79 USD and installed onto the Digital Edition, making it functionally and visually the same as the base model.^{[205][81][206][82]}

Additional accessories

Accessories include a charging station for the DualSense, a new HD camera, and a media remote control. The Pulse 3D wireless headset is integrated with the PS5's Tempest Engine 3D audio technology.^{[207][30]}

The PS5 is backwards compatible with most existing PS4 controllers and accessories for PS4 games only – some with limited functionality. ^[208]Rock Band peripherals are supported since ^[209]Rock Band 2.^{[210][83]} PS5 games can use the existing ^[211]PlayStation Move, ^[212]PlayStation Camera, ^[213]PlayStation VR Aim Controller, officially licensed headsets, and specialty controllers with official licenses like flight sticks and racing wheels.^{[214][84]}

PlayStation VR2

Main article: [215]PlayStation VR2

Sony announced the PlayStation VR2 for the PlayStation 5 in January 2022.^{[216][85][217][86][218][87]}sup[219][88] A successor to the [220]PlayStation VR, the device consists of a headset featuring dual OLED panels capable of 4K resolution, HDR and 90/120 Hz refresh rates. It also includes two Sense controllers which have 14 embedded [221]IR LEDs for tracking, and haptic feedback and adaptive triggers, similar to the DualSense controller included with the PlayStation 5. The headset features [222]eye-tracking for [223]foveated rendering and in-game features in select games. Additionally, the controllers includes finger touch detection, used to render the position of the thumb, index and middle fingers to show on in-game models. Unlike its predecessor, it does not require external cameras for its positioning; instead, it uses four cameras inside the headset to track the headset and controller's position, using only the headset's USB-C cable to connect to the console.^{[224][89]}

The headset launched on February 22, 2023, for $549.99 in the United States, €599.99 in the EU, and £529.99 in the United Kingdom. [225]Games available for the PS VR2 at launch included [226]Horizon Call of the Mountain, [227]Gran Turismo Sport, and [228]Resident Evil Village. The PS VR2 headset is not compatible with [229]games released for the previous generation PS VR by default, requiring developers to update their games. The PS VR2 was released to positive reviews.^{[230][90]}

System software

[231] The PlayStation 5 home screen

The PlayStation 5's [232]user interface is characterized by Sony as "accessible and informative", providing updates of friends' activities, available multiplayer activities, and single-player missions and rewards. Cerny stated "we don't want the player to have to boot the game, see what's up, boot the game, see what's up", so all of these options are "visible in the UI".^{[233][8]} Matt MacLaurin, the current vice president of UX design at PlayStation, described the redesigned user interface as a "very interesting evolution of the OS", and a "100 percent overhaul of the PS4 UI and some very different new concepts".^{[234][91]} MacLaurin stated that the UI is extremely fast with a new and robust ^[235]visual language.^{[236][92]}

^[237]Eurogamer said the user interface was conceived for responsiveness, improved accessibility, clarity, and simplicity.^{[238][93]} It is rendered in ^[239]4K resolution and ^[240]high dynamic range. Users are greeted with a stylistic boot-up animation and a new login screen. The central design concepts and motifs introduced on the PS4 were redesigned into a new home screen user interface. The top of the screen has a row of applications, and two upper tabs to switch between showing games or media apps. Selecting a game reveals individual activities such as a specific level or multiplayer mode. PlayStation Store is no longer a standalone application and is now fully integrated into the home screen user interface.^{[241][94]}

The most significant departure from the PS4 interface is the introduction of the Control Center, accessed from the bottom of the screen by pressing the PS button. The Control Center is divided into two sections. The upper portion is a row of cards suggesting actions based on the current game or recent actions such as a group chat. Game-related cards may present players with gameplay information such as a progress report toward completing specific missions, or listing game challenges with an option to jump directly to them. ^[242]PlayStation Plus subscribers see game activity cards with hints, tips, screenshots, or videos detailing how to complete the activity. System-level items may present the player with options such as PlayStation Store sale information, or recent screenshots taken by the user to be shared. These features are available for PS5 games or for updated PS4 games. The lower portion of the Control Center contains a customizable horizontal row of icons, including notifications, status updates, friends list, and system settings.^{[243][95]} According to internal materials reviewed by ^[244]Vice, the strategy behind this "activities"-focused UI was to help players in committing time towards games particularly ^[245]single-player video games which Sony felt were thriving on the PlayStation console environment. Sony recognized that at present, many players did not have as much time to commit to playing games, so the notion of activity cards was used to help give players an idea of what activities they could do in a game and how long it would take so that they could work that activity into their schedule.^{[246][96]}

The PlayStation 5 supports multiple streaming services such as ^[247]Netflix and ^[248]YouTube, with support for others hinted at in the future.^{[249][97][250][98][251][99]} ^[252]Sony Pictures Core service was released on the system in 2023. The system included support for ^[253]PlayStation Now, Sony's subscription-based ^[254]cloud gaming service, while it was available.^{[255][100]} Sony's ^[256]Remote Play application, available on the PlayStation 4, ^[257]Windows, ^[258]iOS, and ^[259]Android devices, was updated just prior to the PlayStation 5's launch to allow a user to remotely play their PlayStation 5 games on these other devices over a local network.^{[260][101]}

Software updates

In April 2021, Sony released a new software update through which users can transfer their downloaded PS5 game to an external USB hard drive.^{[261][102]} Sony announced a PlayStation 5 system software beta program in June 2021, similar to the [262]Xbox Insider program, where signed-up users can receive early releases of planned updates to the console's software for testing prior to their release.^{[263][103]} One of the first major features offered in this program was support for expanding internal storage via the M.2 port, added in the beta software path in July 2021.^{[264][51]}

In September 2021, Sony released a new software update offering support for a new trophy tracker, Control Center customization, 3D audio support for built-in TV speakers, internal SSD expansion and several UX enhancements.^{[265][104]} Sony introduced Game Trials in October 2021, starting with a limited release for UK users for Death Stranding: Director's Cut and Sackboy: A Big Adventure. Users have access to download and play the full version of the game for a fixed amount of time through these Game Trials, after which they would be required to buy the game to continue playing.^{[266][105]}

In March 2022, Sony released software update 5.00 which adds several improvements for accessibility such as an improved screen reader with support for features like mono audio, reading notifications aloud, additional language support, and the ability to show a check mark on enabled settings. Support for voice commands was also introduced in this update for users in the [267]United States and [268]United Kingdom, which allows users to control their PlayStation 5 by saying "Hey, PlayStation" and then a chosen command. Support for the [269]Ukrainian language was also added, and Game Base was enhanced with the abilities to view all friends in a new "Friends" tab, more easily decline friend requests, and other enhancements and updates. There were also various enhancements made to trophies, child accounts, the home screen, and other features.^{[270][106]}

On 8 March 2023, Sony released software update 7.00, which included [271]VRR support for 1440p resolution, the ability to transfer data between PS5 consoles, support for voice chat on [272]Discord, and support for using voice to save video clips of gameplay (at release, this is only available in English for the US and UK).^{[273][107]}

On 13 September 2023, Sony released software update 8.00, which included support for [274]Dolby Atmos, the possibility to use an [275]M.2 [276]SSD with a maximum capacity of 8 TB (up from the previous 4 TB limit), and the ability to mute the start-up beep sound.^{[277][108]}

Games

Main article: [278]List of PlayStation 5 games

Each PlayStation 5 console comes preinstalled with [279]Astro's Playroom, a game designed to serve as a demonstration of the DualSense controller.^{[280][109]} Games are not [281]region locked, so games purchased in one region can be played on consoles in all regions.^{[282][100]}

Sony announced its concurrent responsibilities of supporting the PlayStation 4 community, and embracing the PlayStation 5 as a major technological advancement. In an interview with [283]GamesIndustry.biz, Ryan stated "We have always said that we believe in generations. We believe that when you go to all the trouble of creating a next-gen console, that it should include features and benefits that the previous generation does not include. And that, in our view, people should make games that can make the most of those features."^{[284][110]} Discussing the capabilities of the DualSense controller with [285]Geoff Keighley, General manager Eric Lempel affirmed that Sony "want[s] to evolve every part of the experience", but for that to happen "we can't take everybody with us from previous consoles into [a next-generation experience]. You need new hardware, you need new devices to experience what these developers want you to experience."^{[286][111][287][112]} [288]Ratchet & Clank: Rift Apart was highlighted as a next-generation game that is not technically possible on older hardware. Lempel assured Keighley that interest in PlayStation 4 will not end abruptly, with more to come.^{[289][111]}

Sony's definition of consoles as distinct generations had been widely interpreted as an era-defining shift to PS5-exclusive games that exploit the console's capabilities instead of releasing cross-generation games that play across both PlayStation consoles. Ryan said that there should be no disappointment as the PS5 versions take advantage of the console's advanced feature set and initially planned that PS4 versions can be freely upgraded. Few major games such as [290]Horizon Forbidden West are developed as concurrent releases for PS4 and PS5,^{[291][113]} and Sony supports any publisher that wants to offer enhanced versions of PS4 games at no additional cost.^{[292][114][293][115][294][116][295][117][296][118]} However, in May 2021, Sony announced a major shift in this approach, with previously PS5-exclusive games Gran Turismo Sport and [297]God of War Ragnarök now planned as both PS4 and PS5 games. Game journalists believed this was a factor related to the effect of the global semiconductor shortage from the COVID-19 pandemic on PlayStation 5 availability.^{[298][119]} Sony initially had planned to charge PS4 users to upgrade to the PS5 version of Horizon Forbidden West when preorders were announced, but after negative feedback from consumers (who pointed out that Sony had previously mentioned that Horizon Forbidden West would have a free upgrade), stated that this upgrade will be free, but all future PS4 to PS5 upgrades from their first-party games will be at cost, reversing course from their earlier plans.^{[299][120]}

[300]Eurogamer reported that Sony's certification program as of May 2020 required PS4 games, submitted for certification after July 13, 2020, to be natively compatible with the

Backward compatibility

According to Hideaki Nishino, Sony's senior vice president of Platform Planning and Management, the PS5 is designed to be ^[305]backward compatible with more than "99 percent" of PS4's 4,000+ game library, playable from launch day.^{[306][122]} The console is compatible with ^[307]PlayStation VR.^{[308][8]} Because of PS5's high-speed SSD and increased processing power, many PS4 games gain from improved loading times or gameplay speeds "so that they can benefit from higher or more stable frame rates and potentially higher resolutions".^{[309][15][310][123]} Players can synchronize their ^[311]saved game files through cloud storage or transfer them using a USB storage device so no progress is lost.^{[312][122]} Backward compatibility is enabled in part by the similarity of hardware architecture, such as "extra logic" in the RDNA 2 GPU that ensures compatibility with PS4's ^[313]GCN-based GPU.^{[314][8][315][17]} Mark Cerny explained during a March 2020 presentation and later in an interview with Digital Foundry how CPU ^[316]clock timing required particular attention; though the Zen 2 CPU has an ^[317]instruction set to handle the PS4's ^[318]Jaguar CPU, their timings can be very different, so Sony worked closely with AMD when developing the Zen 2 CPU to more closely match the Jaguar's timings.^{[319][14]} PS5 backward compatibility may exhibit errors with some PS4 games,^{[320][124]} and does not include previous generations. However, some older PlayStation console games are available through the ^[321]PlayStation Plus game streaming service which is available for the PlayStation 5.^{[322][125][323][126]} The PlayStation 4's Share menu cannot be displayed but the PS5's Create menu can be used to capture screenshots or video.^{[324][124]}

All compatible downloaded versions of PS4 games are visible in the library on the PS5 and available for download. The games can also be copied via USB ^[325]hard drive or ^[326]Wi-Fi. Save data can be copied in the same way or via the ^[327]cloud storage.^{[328][127]} On October 9, 2020, Sony released a list of ten PS4 games identified as being incompatible with PS5; the list has shortened since as some developers released compatibility updates for previously incompatible games.^{[329][128]} As of December 16, 2021, the official PlayStation website shows six PS4 games that remain incompatible with PS5; ^[330]Afro Samurai 2: Revenge of Kuma Volume One, ^[331]Hitman Go: Definitive Edition, Just Deal With It!, ^[332]Robinson: The Journey, ^[333]Shadwen, and ^[334]We Sing.^{[335][129]}

Reception

The PlayStation 5 was generally well received at launch, with much praise of its DualSense controller's improved haptic feedback and adaptive triggers.^{[336][130]} ^[337]Astro's Playroom, which comes preinstalled on every PS5 and is designed to demonstrate the controller's features, was praised with Laptop Mag calling it "deceptively cute".^{[338][131]} The exclusive line-up, including ^[339]Spider-Man: Miles Morales and ^[340]Demon's Souls, was heavily praised, although some reviewers, such as ^[341]TechRadar, said there should have been more launch games.^{[342][132]} The console's user interface was generally praised for being fast and easy to navigate.^{[343][133]}

Many reviewers found the console's design polarizing. ^[344]CNET described the black and white scheme as "clearly meant to be a sculptural conversation piece". The large size was criticized by ^[345]Tom's Guide as "inelegant",^{[346][134]} and by others as frustrating its integration into a home entertainment center.^{[347][135]} Many also acknowledged the size for improving the cooling and quieting of its operation.^{[348][133][349][136]} The comparatively small 667 GB of usable SSD space was criticized.^{[350][135]}

More technical reviews, such as those by ^[351]Digital Foundry, noted that features such as ^[352]variable refresh rate and the advertised ^[353]8K video output mode were not present at launch. They lauded the ray-tracing, SSD speed, and 120 Hz output capabilities.^{[354][136]}

Sales

The PlayStation 5, as with the Xbox Series X/S, was in limited supply immediately upon launch,^{[355][137][356]unreliable source]} and through 2021 due to ^[357]a global semiconductor shortage,^{[358][138][359][139]} combined with increased demand for video game consoles due to the ^[360]COVID-19 pandemic.^{[361][140]} Sony expected supply to continue to be limited until at least 2022.^{[362][141]} ^[363]Scalpers took advantage of the shortage, attempting to sell the console for thousands of dollars.^{[364][142]} Sony expanded its PlayStation Direct program to sell consoles directly to consumers within Europe in November 2021 to bypass scalpers.^{[365][143][366][144]}

Two weeks after launch, Sony declared the largest launch in ^[367]PlayStation history, surpassing PS4's 2.1 million units in its first two weeks in 2013.^{[368][145]} During the system's first week of release in Japan, 103,901 standard consoles were sold, and 14,181 Digital Editions were sold, for a combined total of 118,082, making it the best-selling console in the country for that week.^{[369][146]} By September 2021, Sony reported over one million PS5 sales in Japan. In comparison, its predecessor did not reach one million consoles sold until a full year after release.^{[370][147]} In the UK, the PlayStation 5 was the best-selling video game console sold in the month of November.^{[371][148]} In Spain, the PS5 sold over 43,000 units in the first week of release.^{[372][149]}

Sony reported total shipments of the PS5 through its fiscal quarter ending December 31, 2020 of 4.5 million units, which were similar numbers to the PS4's launch shipments.^{[373][150][374][151]} Total shipments of PlayStation 5 reached 7.8 million by March 31, 2021, surpassing the 7.6 million units that the PlayStation 4 had shipped in its first two-quarters of release.^{[375][152]} Sony reported that as of July 18, 2021, 10 million PS5 units had been sold through, making the PlayStation 5 their fastest-selling console unit to date.^{[376][153][377][154]} The company later confirmed that by June 30, 2021, it had shipped 10.1 million consoles, indicating that nearly every shipped console had been sold as soon as it reached the market.^{[378][155]} Console shipments surpassed 13.4 million as of September 30, 2021.^{[379][156]} The company anticipated in August it has enough stock hardware to ship more than 22 million PS5 units by the end of its 2021 [380]fiscal year in March 2022,^{[381][157]} but this was revised to 15 million units in November. Despite this, sales during the fiscal year 2022 were forecast to increase to 22.6 million units.^{[382][158]} Bloomberg News reported in January 2022 that Sony was continuing to produce the PlayStation 4 rather than discontinue it at the end of 2021 to help alleviate the shortage of the PlayStation 5 while the chip shortage continued.^{[383][159]} Sales of the PlayStation 5 reached 20 million units by May 31, 2022.^{[384][160]} In July 2023, it was reported that the PlayStation 5 console had sold over 40 million units worldwide.^{[385][161]} In December 2023, it was reported that the PlayStation 5 console had sold over 50 million units worldwide.^{[386][16]}

1.1.8 Ninth generation of videogame history (2024-01-24 11:41)

The ninth generation of video game consoles began in November 2020 with the releases of [1]Microsoft's [2]Xbox Series X and Series S console family and [3]Sony's [4]PlayStation 5.[5][1][6][2][7][3]

Compared to the [8]eighth-gen [9]Xbox One and [10]PlayStation 4, the new consoles add faster computation and graphics processors, support for real-time [11]ray tracing graphics,[12][4] output for [13]4K resolution, and in some cases, [14]8K resolution, with rendering speeds targeting 60 [15]frames per second (FPS) or higher.[16][5] Internally, both console families introduced new internal [17]solid-state drive (SSD) systems to be used as high-throughput memory and storage systems for games to reduce or eliminate loading times and support [18]in-game streaming.[19][6] The Xbox Series S and the PlayStation 5 Digital Edition lack an optical drive while retaining support for online distribution and storing games on external [20]USB devices.

Despite much weaker processing power and already previously competing with eighth-generation consoles, the [21]Nintendo Switch has also been noted as a competitor to ninth-generation consoles, particularly with the introduction of the "OLED Model" revision in 2021.[22][7][23][8] Alongside the Switch, new handheld personal computer devices, such as the [24]Steam Deck, introduced means to play [25]Windows games on-the-go, further expanding hardware competition in the generation.

Background

The duration from the [26]eighth generation until the start of the ninth was one of the longest in history, having started in 2012 with the release of Nintendo's [27]Wii U. Past generations typically had five-year windows as a result of [28]Moore's law,^{[29][9]} but Microsoft and Sony instead launched mid-console redesigns, the [30]Xbox One X and [31]PlayStation 4 Pro.^{[32][10]} Microsoft also launched a monthly console lease program, with the option to buy or upgrade.^{[33][11]} Some analysts believed these factors signaled the first major shift away from the idea of console generations because the potential technical gains of new hardware had become nominal.^{[34][12]}

Microsoft and Sony had announced their new consoles in 2019 for release by the end of 2020, prior to the [35]COVID-19 pandemic.^{[36][13][37][14]} When the pandemic struck in March 2020, it impacted both marketing and production of the consoles. The cancelled [38]E3 2020 had been planned as a major venue to premiere the consoles, and instead both Microsoft and Sony turned to online showcases to highlight the systems and launch games. Both companies acknowledged that the pandemic had strained their production supplies due to hardware manufacturing slowdowns starting in March 2020, but would not impact their console release windows, and they set consumer expectations that console supplies would likely be limited in the launch window and would slowly become more relaxed as the pandemic waned.^{[39][15][40][16]} This created a wave of [41]scalping through online stores, which was countered by manufacturers and vendors.^{[42][17]} The ongoing [43]global chip shortage continued to affect console shipments through the end of 2021, with Sony warning of lower production numbers during the final calendar quarter of the year and into 2022; this also affected Nintendo's [44]Switch console production rates and [45]Valve's plans to release the portable [46]Steam Deck handheld gaming computer in 2021.^{[47][18]}

Main article: [48]PlayStation 5

The PlayStation 5 was developed by Sony as the successor to the [49]PlayStation 4 and was first released on November 12, 2020.[50][19] The primary goal of the PlayStation 5's development was to reduce loading times in games, particularly those that use [51]in-game streaming such as when the player moves across an [52]open world. Sony developed a custom [53]solid-state drive (SSD) architecture based on a 12-channel, 825 GB SSD along with a fast software decompression method that enables an input/output speed of up to 8 to 9 GB/s. In most early development tests, this virtually eliminated loading screens and masking loading times for open world games.[54][20] The main system is backed by an [55]AMD [56]Zen 2 [57]system on a chip running at a variable frequency capped at 3.5 GHz, and a [58]RDNA 2 GPU also running at a variable frequency capped at 2.23 GHz. The GPU has a total potential processing power of 10.28 teraflops. The system comes with 16 GB of memory.[59][21]

The PlayStation 5 was launched with two models. The base model includes an optical disc reader for most disc formats including [60]Blu-ray, [61]UHD Blu-ray, and retail PlayStation 5 games. A cheaper Digital model lacks the disc reader, but otherwise is equivalent to the base model. Both models support expanded memory options to store games and other data onto external drives, thus allowing players to obtain and store games through online distribution via the PlayStation Store. The PlayStation 5 has mostly complete backward compatibility with PlayStation 4 games, with only a limited number of games not currently supported on the console,[62][22] while the [63]PlayStation Now cloud service is available for users to play games from the older PlayStation consoles.[64][23]

Mid-generation revision of both PlayStation 5 models were announced in late 2023, both unofficially considered the PlayStation 5 Slim. The units are to replace the two original PlayStation 5 models; both will have a slimmer design as well as 1 TB of internal storage and additional USB ports. The more expensive model includes an optical disc drive, while the second model, the Digital Edition, will not ship with a drive, though an drive expansion kit will be available to users.[65][24][66][25]

Xbox Series X and Series S

Main article: [67]Xbox Series X and Series S

The Xbox Series X/S is the successor to the [68]Xbox One and was released on November 10, 2020, in select regions.^{[69][26][70][27]} Microsoft followed the Xbox One's dual console models: a high-end line (the Series X comparable to the Xbox One X), and a cheaper model (the Series S comparable to the Xbox One S).^{[71][28]} The performance goal for the Xbox Series X was about four times that of the Xbox One X,^{[72][29]} but without sacrificing game development for the lower-end Xbox Series S.^{[73][28]}

Both the Xbox Series X and Series S use an [74]AMD [75]Zen 2 CPU and an [76]RDNA 2 GPU but with different frequencies and compute units. The Series S has lower frequencies with reduced performance, and the Series X has graphics performance estimated at 12.14 teraflops compared to the Series S's 4.006 teraflops.^{[77][30][78][31]} Microsoft developed a Velocity Architecture, which includes an internal SSD system (1 TB on the Series X, 500 GB on the Series S) used for storing games and new [79]DirectX interfaces with improved input/output and in-game texture streaming and rendering. The Series X includes an optical disc reader supporting Blu-ray and UHD media, which is absent in the Series S.^{[80][32]} Both consoles support external game storage media and online distribution via [81]Xbox Live. Full backward compatibility was announced for all Xbox One games, including previously supported [82]Xbox and [83]Xbox 360 games but excluding [84]Kinect games.^{[85][33][86][34]} Microsoft encouraged third-party developers and publishers to use its Smart Delivery approach to give Xbox One games free performance upgrade patches for Xbox Series X/S.^{[87][35]}

Main articles: [88]Eighth generation of video game consoles § Nintendo Switch, and [89]Nintendo Switch

Despite being a holdover from the eighth-generation, the Nintendo Switch has been positioned by sources as a primary competitor to other ninth-generation consoles, due to its continued hardware and software support as of 2023.^{[90][7][91][8]} The financial failure of Nintendo's first eighth-gen console, the ^[92]Wii U, resulted in the Switch's relatively late release in the eighth-generation, being released in March 2017.^{[93][51][94][52]} An "OLED Model" revision was released on October 8, 2021, introducing an updated design and improved display, though it did not introduce any performance improvements.^{[95][53]} Additionally, commercial performance of Switch-exclusive titles have remained high during the ninth-generation, with ^[96]Pokémon Scarlet and Violet (2022) and ^[97]The Legend of Zelda: Tears of the Kingdom (2023) both achieving 10 million units sold in its first three days after release.^{[98][54][99][55]}

Main article: ^[100]Steam Deck

On February 25, 2022, ^[101]Valve released the ^[102]Steam Deck, a handheld gaming PC that runs ^[103]SteamOS 3.0, a Linux distribution developed by Valve. The Deck includes Valve's own ^[104]Proton ^[105]compatibility layer, allowing nearly all Windows-based games to run on the Deck without modification. The handheld also allows users to install Windows or other software on the device. The Steam Deck was the first handheld to use an RDNA 2 GPU, which is also used on both the home consoles of the ninth generation.^{[106][56]} The handheld was well received by many outlets, with an overall praising of its extensive game compatibility and portability.^{[107][57][108][58]}

The success of the Steam Deck led to the growth of the handheld gaming PC market and to the creation of direct competitors, such as the ^[109]Asus ROG Ally.

Cloud gaming platforms

Cloud gaming has become part of the gaming landscape with ^[110]Stadia and ^[111]Amazon Luna being introduced in November 2019 and October 2020, respectively. As well as [112]GeForce Now coming out of its four years of beta in February 2020. None of these systems have had any financial breakthrough as [113]home video game consoles, but they are viable for multi platform ninth generation games.^{[114][59]} [115]Google, having failed to find a large player base, shut down Stadia on January 19, 2023.^{[116][60]}

Cloud gaming has also been used by Microsoft as part of its gaming subscription service, [117]Xbox Game Pass. This gave Microsoft a head start in what analysts expected to be a major complementary service, supplementing the unprofitable console business and appealing to more entry-level players with better accessibility at a lower price.^{[118][61]} Microsoft's [119]Phil Spencer said that they believed that they could not compete on the console hardware space as much as Sony or Nintendo, and shifted their strategy towards Xbox Game Pass and cloud gaming.^{[120][62]} Sony in turn revamped its [121]PlayStation Plus subscription in mid-2022 by merging in [122]PlayStation Now, its cloud-based service for games of past PlayStation generations, as a feature in a higher subscription tier.^{[123][63]}

The continued growth of cloud gaming services has inspired the development of handhelds like the [124]Logitech G CLOUD Gaming Handheld^{[125][64]} and [126]Razer Edge,^{[127][65]} which advertise cloud streaming as a key selling point.

Virtual reality headsets

The ninth generation continued the trend of [128]virtual reality. The previous generation mainly consisted of VR accessories made for [129]mobile games (such as Google's [130]Cardboard/[131]Daydream and [132]Samsung's [133]Gear VR) or computers ([134]HTC Vive and the [135]Oculus Rift).^{[136][66][137][67]} This generation has started to offer standalone consoles dedicated to [138]virtual reality games. The [139]Meta Quest Pro was released in 2022.^{[140][68]} Additions in 2023 included the [141]PlayStation VR2 (a PS5 accessory serving as a sequel to 2016's [142]PlayStation VR) and the [143]Meta Quest 3.^{[144][69]} 2024 is set to have [145]Apple's entry into the market with the release of the [146]Apple Vision Pro.^{[147][70][148][71]}

1.1.9 Abraham Lincoln biography (2024-01-25 10:42)

Abraham Lincoln (born February 12, 1809, near [1]Hodgenville, Kentucky, U.S.—died April 15, 1865, Washington, D.C.) 16th [2]president of the [3]United States (1861–65), who preserved the Union during the [4]American Civil War and brought about the emancipation of [5]enslaved people in the United States.

Among American heroes, Lincoln continues to have a unique appeal for his fellow countrymen and also for people of other lands. This charm derives from his remarkable life story—the rise from humble origins, the dramatic death—and from his distinctively human and humane personality as well as from his historical role as saviour of the Union and emancipator of enslaved people. His relevance endures and grows especially because of his eloquence as a spokesman for [10]democracy. In his view, the Union was worth saving not only for its own sake but because it embodied an ideal, the ideal of self-[11]government. In recent years, the political side to Lincoln's character, and his racial views in particular, have come under close scrutiny, as scholars continue to find him a rich subject for research. The [12]Lincoln Memorial in [13]Washington, D.C., was dedicated to him on May 30, 1922.

Log cabin, Abraham Lincoln's boyhood home, Knob Creek, Kentucky, originally built early 19th century.

Lincoln was born in a backwoods cabin 3 miles (5 km) south of Hodgenville, Kentucky, and was taken to a farm in the neighbouring valley of Knob Creek when he was two years old. His earliest memories were of this home and, in particular, of a flash flood that once washed away the corn and pumpkin seeds he had helped his father plant. His father, Thomas Lincoln, was the descendant of a weaver's apprentice who had migrated from England to Massachusetts in 1637. Though much less prosperous than some of his Lincoln forebears, Thomas was a sturdy pioneer. On June 12, 1806, he married Nancy Hanks. The Hanks genealogy is difficult to trace, but Nancy appears to have been of [18]illegitimate birth. She has been described as "stoop-shouldered, thin-breasted, sad," and fervently religious. Thomas and Nancy Lincoln had three children: Sarah, Abraham, and Thomas, who died in infancy.

Childhood and youth

In [21]December 1816, faced with a lawsuit challenging the title to his [22]Kentucky farm, Thomas Lincoln moved with his family to southwestern [23]Indiana. There, as a squatter on public land, he hastily put up a "half-faced camp"—a crude structure of logs and boughs with one side open to the weather—in which the family took shelter behind a blazing fire. Soon he built a permanent cabin, and later he bought the land on which it stood. Abraham helped to clear the fields and to take care of the crops but early [24]acquired a dislike for hunting and fishing. In afteryears he recalled the "panther's scream," the bears that "preyed on the swine," and the poverty of Indiana frontier life, which was "pretty pinching at times." The unhappiest period of his boyhood followed the death of his mother in the autumn of 1818. As a ragged nine-year-old, he saw her buried in the forest, then faced a winter without the warmth of a mother's love. Fortunately, before the onset of a second winter, Thomas Lincoln brought home from Kentucky a new wife for himself, a new mother for the children. Sarah Bush Johnston Lincoln, a widow with two girls and a boy of her own, had energy and affection to spare. She ran the household with an even hand, treating both sets of children as if she had borne them all; but she became especially fond of Abraham, and he of her. He afterward referred to her as his "angel mother."

His stepmother doubtless encouraged Lincoln's taste for reading, [29]yet the original source of his desire to learn remains something of a mystery. Both his parents were almost completely illiterate, and he himself received little formal education. He once said that, as a boy, he had gone to school "by littles"—a little now and a little then—and his entire schooling amounted to no more than one year's attendance. His neighbours later recalled how he used to trudge for miles to borrow a book. According to his own statement, however, his early surroundings provided "absolutely nothing to excite ambition for education. Of course, when I came of age I did not know much. Still, somehow, I could read, write, and cipher to the rule of three; but that was all." Apparently the young Lincoln did not read a large number of books but thoroughly absorbed the few that he did read. These included [30]Parson Weems's Life and Memorable Actions of George Washington (with its story of the little hatchet and the cherry tree), [31]Daniel Defoe's Robinson Crusoe, [32]John Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress, and [33]Aesop's Fables. From his earliest days he must have had some familiarity with the [34]Bible, for it doubtless was the only book his family owned.

In [35]March 1830 the Lincoln family undertook a second migration, this time to [36]Illinois, with Lincoln himself driving the team of oxen. Having just reached the age of 21, he was about to begin life on his own. Six feet four inches tall, he was rawboned and lanky but muscular and physically powerful. He was especially noted for the skill and strength with which he could [37]wield an ax. He spoke with a backwoods twang and walked in the long-striding, flat-footed, cautious manner of a plowman. Good-natured though somewhat moody, talented as a mimic and storyteller, he readily attracted friends. But he was yet to demonstrate whatever other abilities he possessed.

[39]Lincoln Home National Historic Site, Springfield, Illinois

The next year he moved to [40]Springfield, [41]Illinois, the new state capital, which offered many more opportunities for a lawyer than New Salem did. At first Lincoln was a partner of John T. Stuart, then of Stephen T. Logan, and finally, from 1844, of [42]William H. Herndon. Nearly 10 years younger than Lincoln, Herndon was more widely read, more emotional at the bar, and generally more extreme in his views. [43]Yet this partnership seems to have been as nearly perfect as such human arrangements ever are. Lincoln and Herndon kept few records of their [44]law business, and they split the cash between them whenever either of them was paid. It seems they had no money quarrels.

Within a few years of his relocation to Springfield, Lincoln was earning $1,200 to $1,500 annually, at a time when the governor of the state received a salary of $1,200 and circuit judges only $750. He had to work hard. To keep himself busy, he found it necessary not only to practice in the capital but also to follow the court as it made the rounds of its circuit. Each spring and fall he would set out by horseback or buggy to travel hundreds of miles over the thinly settled prairie, from one little county seat to another. Most of the cases were [45]petty and the fees small.

The coming of the railroads, especially after 1850, made travel easier and practice more remunerative. Lincoln served as a lobbyist for the [46]Illinois Central Railroad, assisting it in getting a charter from the state, and thereafter he was retained as a regular attorney for that railroad. After successfully defending the company against the efforts of McLean county to tax its property, he received the largest single fee of his legal career— $5,000. (He had to sue the Illinois Central in order to collect the fee.) He also handled cases for other railroads and for banks, insurance companies, and mercantile and manufacturing firms. In one of his finest performances before the bar, he saved the Rock Island Bridge, the first to span the [47]Mississippi River, from the threat of the river [48]transportation interests that demanded the bridge's removal. His business included a number of patent suits and criminal trials. One of his most effective and famous pleas had to do with a [49]murder case. A witness claimed that, by the light of the moon, he had seen Duff Armstrong, an acquaintance of Lincoln's, take part in a killing. Referring to an almanac for proof, Lincoln argued that the night had been too dark for the witness to have seen anything clearly, and with a sincere and moving appeal he won an acquittal.

By the time he began to be prominent in national politics, about 20 years after launching his legal career, Lincoln had made himself one of the most distinguished and successful lawyers in Illinois. He was noted not only for his shrewdness and practical common sense, which enabled him always to see to the heart of any legal case, but also for his invariable fairness and [50]utter honesty.

While residing in New Salem, Lincoln became acquainted with [51]Ann Rutledge. Apparently he was fond of her, and certainly he grieved with the entire [52]community at her untimely death, in 1835, at the age of 22. Afterward, stories were told of a grand romance between Lincoln and Rutledge, but these stories are not supported by sound historical evidence. A year after the death of Rutledge, Lincoln carried on a halfhearted courtship with Mary Owens, who eventually concluded that Lincoln was "deficient in those little links which make up the chain of woman's happiness." She turned down his proposal.

So far as can be known, the first and only real love of Lincoln's life was [53]Mary Todd. High-spirited, quick-witted, and well-educated, Todd came from a rather distinguished [54]Kentucky family, and her [55]Springfield relatives belonged to the social [56]aristocracy of the town. Some of them frowned upon her association with Lincoln, and from time to time he, too, doubted whether he could ever make her happy. Nevertheless, they became engaged. Then, on a day in 1841 that Lincoln recalled as the "fatal first of January," the engagement was broken, apparently on his [57]initiative. For some time afterward, Lincoln was overwhelmed by terrible [58]depression and despondency. Finally the two were [59]reconciled, and on November 4, 1842, they married.

[61]Lincoln and his son

Abraham Lincoln with his son Tad.

Four children, all boys, were born to the Lincolns. Edward Baker was nearly 4 years old when he died, and William Wallace ("Willie") was 11. Robert Todd, the eldest, was the only one of the children to survive to adulthood, though Lincoln's favourite, Thomas ("Tad"), who had a [62]cleft palate and a lisp, outlived his father. Lincoln left the upbringing of his children largely to their mother, who was alternately strict and [63]lenient in her treatment of them.

The Lincolns had a mutual affectionate interest in the doings and welfare of their boys, were fond of one another's company, and missed each other when apart, as existing letters show. Like most married couples, the Lincolns also had their domestic quarrels, which sometimes were hectic but which undoubtedly were exaggerated by contemporary gossips. She suffered from recurring headaches, fits of temper, and a sense of insecurity and loneliness that was intensified by her husband's long absences on the lawyer's circuit. After his election to the presidency, she was afflicted by the death of her son Willie, by the [64]ironies of a war that made enemies of Kentucky relatives and friends, and by the unfair public [65]criticisms of her as mistress of the [66]White House. She developed an obsessive need to spend money, and she ran up embarrassing bills. She also staged some painful scenes of wifely jealousy. At last, in 1875, she was officially declared insane, though by that time she had undergone the further shock of seeing her husband murdered at her side. During their earlier married life, she unquestionably encouraged her husband and served as a prod to his own ambition. During their later years together, she probably strengthened and tested his innate qualities of tolerance and patience.

Abraham Lincoln

With his wife, Lincoln [67]attended Presbyterian services in Springfield and in Washington but never joined any church. He once explained:

When any church will inscribe over its altar, as its sole qualification for membership, the Saviour's condensed statement of the substance of both Law and Gospel, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and thy neighbor, as thyself," that church will I join with all my heart and all my soul.

Early in life Lincoln had been something of a skeptic and freethinker. His reputation had been such that, as he once complained, the “church influence” was used against him in politics. When running for [70]Congress in 1846, he issued a handbill to deny that he ever had “spoken with intentional disrespect of religion.” He went on to explain that he had believed in the [71]doctrine of necessity—“that is, that the human mind is impelled to action, or held in rest by some power over which the mind itself has no control.” Throughout his life he also believed in dreams and other [72]enigmatic signs and portents. As he grew older, and especially after he became [73]president and faced the soul-troubling responsibilities of the Civil War, he developed a profound religious sense, and he increasingly personified necessity as God. He came to look upon himself quite humbly as an “instrument of Providence” and to view all history as God’s enterprise. “In the present civil war,” he wrote in 1862, “it is quite possible that God’s purpose is something different from the purpose of either party—and yet the human instrumentalities, working just as they do, are of the best [74]adaptation to effect His purpose.”

Lincoln was fond of the Bible and knew it well. He also was fond of [75]Shakespeare. In private conversation he used many Shakespearean [76]allusions, discussed problems of dramatic interpretation with considerable insight, and recited long passages from memory with rare feeling and understanding. He liked the works of [77]John Stuart Mill, particularly On Liberty, but disliked heavy or [78]metaphysical works.

Though he enjoyed the poems of [79]Lord Byron and [80]Robert Burns, his favourite piece of verse was the work of an obscure Scottish poet, William Knox. Lincoln often quoted Knox’s lines beginning: “Oh! why should the spirit of mortal be proud?” He liked to relax with the comic writings of [81]Petroleum V. Nasby, Orpheus C. Kerr, and [82]Artemus Ward, or with a visit to the popular theatre.

When Lincoln first entered politics, [85]Andrew Jackson was [86]president. Lincoln shared the sympathies that the Jacksonians professed for the common man, but he disagreed with the Jacksonian view that the government should be divorced from economic enterprise. "The [87]legitimate object of government," he was later to say, "is to do for a [88]community of people whatever they need to have done, but cannot do at all, or cannot do so well, for themselves, in their separate and individual capacities." Among the prominent politicians of his time, he most admired [89]Henry Clay and [90]Daniel Webster. Clay and Webster advocated using the powers of the federal government to encourage business and develop the [91]country's resources by means of a national bank, a protective tariff, and a program of internal improvements for [92]facilitating transportation. In Lincoln's view, [93]Illinois and the West as a whole desperately needed such aid for economic development. From the outset, he associated himself with the party of Clay and Webster, the [94]Whigs.

As a Whig member of the Illinois State Legislature, to which he was elected four times from 1834 to 1840, Lincoln devoted himself to a grandiose project for constructing with state funds a network of railroads, highways, and canals. Whigs and Democrats joined in passing an omnibus bill for these undertakings, but the panic of 1837 and the ensuing business depression brought about the abandonment of most of them. While in the [95]legislature he demonstrated that, though opposed to [96]slavery, he was no abolitionist. In 1837, in response to the [97]mob [98]murder of Elijah Lovejoy, an antislavery newspaperman of [99]Alton, the legislature introduced resolutions condemning abolitionist societies and defending slavery in the Southern states as “sacred” by virtue of the federal Constitution. Lincoln refused to vote for the resolutions. Together with a fellow member, he drew up a protest that declared, on the one hand, that slavery was “founded on both injustice and bad policy” and, on the other, that “the promulgation of abolition doctrines tends rather to increase than to abate its evils.”

During his single term in Congress (1847–49), Lincoln, as the lone Whig from Illinois, gave little attention to legislative matters. He proposed a bill for the gradual and [100]compensated emancipation of enslaved people in the [101]District of Columbia, but, because it was to take effect only with the approval of the “free white citizens” of the district, it displeased abolitionists as well as slaveholders and never was seriously considered.

Lincoln devoted much of his time to presidential politics—to unmaking one president, a Democrat, and making another, a Whig. He found an issue and a candidate in the [102]Mexican War. With his “spot resolutions,” he challenged the statement of President [103]James K. Polk that Mexico had started the war by shedding American blood upon American soil. Along with other members of his party, Lincoln voted to condemn Polk and the war while also voting for supplies to carry it on. At the same time, he laboured for the nomination and election of the war hero [104]Zachary Taylor. After Taylor’s success at the polls, Lincoln expected to be named commissioner of the general land office as a reward for his campaign services, and he was bitterly disappointed when he failed to get the job. His [105]criticisms of the war, meanwhile, had not been popular among the voters in his own congressional district. At the age of 40, frustrated in politics, he seemed to be at the end of his public career.[106] More From BritannicaHave Any U.S. Presidents Decided Not to Run For a Second Term?

For about five years Lincoln took little part in politics, and then a new sectional crisis gave him a chance to reemerge and rise to statesmanship. In 1854 his political rival [109]Stephen A. Douglas maneuvered through Congress a bill for reopening the entire [110]Louisiana Purchase to [111]slavery and allowing the settlers of Kansas and Nebraska (with "popular sovereignty") to decide for themselves whether to permit slaveholding in those territories. The [112]Kansas-Nebraska Act [113]provoked violent opposition in [114]Illinois and the other states of the old Northwest. It gave rise to the [115]Republican Party while speeding the [116]Whig Party on its way to disintegration. Along with many thousands of other homeless Whigs, Lincoln soon became a Republican (1856). Before long, some prominent Republicans in the East talked of attracting Douglas to the Republican fold, and with him his Democratic following in the West. Lincoln would have none of it. He was determined that he, not Douglas, should be the Republican leader of his state and section.

[120]Stephen A. Douglas

Lincoln challenged the incumbent Douglas for the Senate seat in 1858, and the [121]series of debates they engaged in throughout Illinois was political oratory of the highest order. Both men were shrewd debaters and accomplished stump speakers, though they could hardly have been more different in style and appearance—the short and pudgy Douglas, whose stentorian voice and graceful gestures swayed audiences, and the tall, homely, almost emaciated-looking Lincoln, who moved awkwardly and whose voice was piercing and shrill. Lincoln's prose and speeches, however, were [122]eloquent, pithy, powerful, and free of the verbosity so common in communication of his day. The debates were published in 1860, together with a biography of Lincoln, in a best-selling book that Lincoln himself compiled and marketed as part of his campaign.

In their basic views, Lincoln and Douglas were not as far apart as they seemed in the heat of political argument. Neither was abolitionist or proslavery. But Lincoln, unlike Douglas, insisted that Congress must exclude slavery from the territories. He disagreed with Douglas's belief that the territories were by nature unsuited to the slavery-based economy and that no congressional legislation was needed to prevent the spread of slavery into them. In one of his most famous speeches, he said: "A house divided against itself cannot stand. I believe the government cannot endure permanently half slave and half free." He predicted that the [125]country eventually would become "all one thing, or all the other." Again and again he insisted that the [126]civil liberties of every U.S. citizen, white as well as Black, were at stake. The territories must be kept free, he further said, because "new free states" were "places for poor people to go and better their condition." He agreed with [127]Thomas Jefferson and other founding fathers, however, that slavery should be merely contained, not directly attacked. In fact, when it was politically expedient to do so, he reassured his audiences that he did not [128]endorse citizenship for Blacks or believe in the equality of the races. "I am not, nor ever have been, in favour of bringing about in any way the social and political equality of the white and Black races," he told a crowd in [129]Charleston, Illinois. "I am not nor ever have been in favour of making voters or jurors of Negroes, nor of qualifying them to hold office, nor to intermarry with white people." There is, he added, "a physical difference between the white and Black races which I believe will forever forbid the two races living together on terms of social and political equality." Lincoln drove home the inconsistency between Douglas's "popular sovereignty" principle and the [130]Dred Scott decision (1857), in which the U.S. Supreme Court held that [131]Congress could not constitutionally exclude slavery from the territories.

In the end, Lincoln lost the election to Douglas. Although the outcome did not surprise him, it depressed him deeply. Lincoln had, nevertheless, gained national recognition and soon began to be mentioned as a [132]presidential prospect for 1860.

On May 18, 1860, after Lincoln and his friends had made skillful preparations, he was nominated on the third ballot at the [137]Republican National Convention in [138]Chicago. He then put aside his [139]law practice and, though making no stump speeches, gave full time to the direction of his campaign. His “main object,” he had written, was to “hedge against divisions in the Republican ranks,” and he [140]counseled party workers to “say nothing on points where it is probable we shall disagree.” With the Republicans united, the Democrats divided, and a total of four candidates in the field, he carried the election on November 6. Although he received no votes from the Deep South and no more than 40 out of 100 in the country as a whole, the popular votes were so distributed that he won a clear and decisive majority in the electoral college.

After Lincoln's election and before his inauguration, the state of [143]South Carolina proclaimed its withdrawal from the Union. To forestall similar action by other Southern states, various compromises were proposed in Congress. The most important, the [144]Crittenden Compromise, included [145]constitutional [146]amendments guaranteeing [147]slavery forever in the states where it already existed and dividing the territories between slavery and [148]freedom. Although Lincoln had no objection to the first of these amendments, he was unalterably opposed to the second and indeed to any scheme infringing in the slightest upon the free-soil plank of his party's platform. "I am inflexible," he privately wrote. He feared that a territorial division, by sanctioning the principle of slavery extension, would only encourage planter imperialists to seek new territory for slavery south of the American border and thus would "put us again on the highroad to a slave empire." From his home in [149]Springfield he advised Republicans in [150]Congress to vote against a division of the territories, and the proposal was killed in committee. Six additional states then seceded and, with South Carolina, combined to form the [151]Confederate States of America.

The inauguration of Abraham Lincoln as U.S. president, Washington, D.C., March 4, 1861.

Thus, before Lincoln had even moved into the [154]White House, a disunion crisis was upon the [155]country. Attention, North and South, focused in particular upon [156]Fort Sumter, in Charleston Harbor, South Carolina. This fort, still under construction, was garrisoned by U.S. troops under Major Robert Anderson. The Confederacy claimed it and, from other harbour fortifications, threatened it. Foreseeing trouble, Lincoln, while still in Springfield, confidentially requested [157]Winfield Scott, general in chief of the U.S. Army, to be prepared “to either hold, or retake, the forts, as the case may require, at, and after the inauguration.” In his [158]inaugural address (March 4, 1861), besides upholding the Union’s indestructibility and appealing for sectional harmony, Lincoln restated his Sumter policy as follows:

The power confided to me, will be used to hold, occupy, and possess the property, and places belonging to the government, and to collect the duties and imposts; but beyond what may be necessary for these objects, there will be no invasion—no using of force against, or among the people anywhere.

Then, near the end, addressing the absent Southerners: “You can have no conflict, without being yourselves the aggressors.”

[159]Outbreak of the U.S. Civil War

No sooner was he in office than Lincoln received word that the Sumter garrison, unless supplied or [160]withdrawn, would shortly be starved out. Still, for about a month, Lincoln delayed acting. He was beset by contradictory advice. On the one hand, General Scott, Secretary of State [161]William H. Seward, and others urged him to abandon the fort; and Seward, through a go-between, gave a group of Confederate commissioners to understand that the fort would in fact be abandoned. On the other hand, many Republicans insisted that any show of weakness would bring disaster to their party and to the Union. Finally Lincoln ordered the preparation of two relief expeditions, one for [162]Fort Sumter and the other for Fort Pickens, in [163]Florida. (He afterward said he would have been willing to [164]withdraw from Sumter if he could have been sure of holding Pickens.) Before the Sumter expedition, he sent a messenger to tell the [165]South Carolina governor:

I am directed by the President of the [166]United States to notify you to expect an attempt will be made to supply Fort-Sumpter [sic] with provisions only; and that, if such attempt be not resisted, no effort to throw in men, arms, or [167]ammunition, will be made, without further notice, or in case of an attack upon the Fort.

Without waiting for the arrival of Lincoln's expedition, the Confederate authorities presented to Major Anderson a demand for Sumter's prompt evacuation, which he refused. On April 12, 1861, at dawn, the Confederate [168]batteries in the harbour opened fire.

"Then, and thereby," Lincoln informed Congress when it met on July 4, "the assailants of the Government, began the conflict of arms." The Confederates, however, accused him of being the real aggressor. They said he had cleverly maneuvered them into firing the first shot so as to put upon them the onus of war guilt. Although some historians have repeated this charge, it appears to be a gross distortion of the facts. Lincoln was determined to preserve the Union, and to do so he thought he must take a stand against the [169]Confederacy. He concluded he might as well take this stand at Sumter.

Lincoln's primary aim was neither to [170]provoke war nor to maintain peace. In preserving the Union, he would have been glad to preserve the peace also, but he was ready to risk a war that he thought would be short.

After the [171]firing on Fort Sumter, Lincoln called upon the state governors for troops (Virginia and three other states of the upper South responded by joining the Confederacy). He then proclaimed a blockade of the Southern ports. These steps—the Sumter expedition, the call for volunteers, and the blockade—were the first important decisions of Lincoln as commander in chief of the army and navy. But he still needed a strategic plan and a command system for carrying it out.

General Scott advised him to [172]avoid battle with the Confederate forces in [173]Virginia, to get control of the [174]Mississippi River, and by tightening the blockade to hold the South in a gigantic squeeze. Lincoln had little confidence in Scott's comparatively passive and bloodless "Anaconda" plan. He believed the war must be actively fought if it ever was to be won. Overruling Scott, he ordered a direct advance on the Virginia front, which resulted in defeat and rout for the federal forces at [175]Bull Run (July 21, 1861). After a succession of more or less sleepless nights, Lincoln produced a set of memorandums on military policy. His basic thought was that the armies should advance concurrently on several fronts and should move so as to hold and use the support of Unionists in Missouri, [176]Kentucky, western Virginia, and eastern [177]Tennessee. As he later explained:

I state my general idea of this war to be that we have the greater numbers, and the enemy has the greater facility of concentrating forces upon points of collision; that we must fail, unless we can find some way of making our advantage an over-match for his; and that this can only be done by menacing him with superior forces at different points, at the same time.

This, with the [178]naval blockade, [179]comprised the essence of Lincoln's strategy.

As a war leader, Lincoln employed the style that had served him as a politician—a description of himself, incidentally, that he was not ashamed to accept. He preferred to react to problems and to the circumstances that others had created rather than to originate policies and lay out long-range designs. In candour he would write: “I claim not to have controlled events, but confess plainly that events have controlled me.” His guiding rule was: “My policy is to have no policy.” It was not that he was unprincipled; rather, he was a practical man, mentally [182]nimble and flexible, and, if one action or decision proved unsatisfactory in practice, he was willing to experiment with another.

[184]Lincoln's Midnight Think

C.W. Reed's cartoon Lincoln's Midnight Think depicting President Abraham Lincoln agonizing over the conduct of the Civil War.

From 1861 to 1864, while hesitating to impose his ideas upon his generals, Lincoln experimented with command personnel and organization. Accepting the resignation of Scott (November 1861), he put [185]George B. McClellan in charge of the armies as a whole. After a few months, disgusted by the slowness of McClellan ("He has the slows," as Lincoln put it), he demoted him to the command of the Army of the Potomac alone. He questioned the soundness of McClellan's plans for the [186]Peninsular Campaign, repeatedly compelled McClellan to alter them, and, after the [187]Seven Days' Battles to capture [188]Richmond, [189]Virginia (June 25–July 1, 1862), failed, ordered him to give them up. Then he tried a succession of commanders for the army in Virginia—John Pope, McClellan again, [190]Ambrose E. Burnside, [191]Joseph Hooker, and [192]George Gordon Meade—but was disappointed with each of them in turn. Meanwhile, he had in [193]Henry W. Halleck a general in chief who gave advice and served as a [194]liaison with field officers but who shrank from making important decisions. For nearly two years the Federal armies lacked effective unity of command. President Lincoln, General Halleck, and War Secretary [195]Edwin M. Stanton acted as an informal council of war. Lincoln, besides transmitting official orders through Halleck, also communicated directly with the generals, sending personal suggestions in his own name. To generals opposing [196]Robert E. Lee, he suggested that the object was to destroy Lee's army, not to capture Richmond or to drive the invader from Northern soil.

Finally Lincoln looked to the West for a top general. He admired the [197]Vicksburg Campaign of [198]Ulysses S. Grant in [199]Mississippi. Nine days after the [200]Vicksburg [201]surrender (which occurred on July 4, 1863), he sent Grant a "grateful acknowledgment for the almost inestimable service" he had done the [202]country. Lincoln sent also an admission of his own error. He said he had expected Grant to bypass Vicksburg and go on down the Mississippi, instead of crossing the river and turning back to approach Vicksburg from the rear. "I feared it was a mistake," he wrote in his letter of congratulations. "I now wish to make the personal acknowledgment that you were right, and I was wrong."

In March 1864 Lincoln promoted Grant to lieutenant general and gave him command of all the federal armies. At last Lincoln had found a man who, with such able [205]subordinates as [206]William T. Sherman, [207]Philip Sheridan, and [208]George H. Thomas, could put into effect those parts of Lincoln's concept of a large-scale, coordinated offensive that still remained to be carried out. Grant was only a member, though an important one, of a top-command arrangement that Lincoln eventually had devised. Overseeing everything was Lincoln himself, the commander in chief. Taking the responsibility for men and supplies was Secretary of War Stanton. Serving as a presidential adviser and as a liaison with military men was Halleck, the chief of staff. And directing all the armies, while accompanying Meade's Army of the Potomac, was Grant, the general in chief. Thus Lincoln pioneered in the creation of a high command, an organization for amassing all the energies and resources of a people in the [209]grand strategy of [210]total war. He combined statecraft and the overall direction of armies with an effectiveness that increased year by year. His achievement is all the more remarkable in view of his lack of training and experience in the art of warfare. This lack may have been an advantage as well as a handicap. Unhampered by outworn military [211]dogma, Lincoln could all the better apply his practical insight and common sense—some would say his military genius—to the winning of the Civil War.

There can be no doubt of Lincoln's deep and sincere devotion to the cause of personal [212]freedom. Before his election to the presidency he had spoken often and eloquently on the subject. In 1854, for example, he said he hated the Douglas attitude of indifference toward the possible spread of [213]slavery to new areas. "I hate it because of the monstrous injustice of slavery itself," he declared. "I hate it because it deprives our republican example of its just influence in the world; enables the enemies of free institutions with plausibility to [214]taunt us as hypocrites...." In 1855, writing to his friend Joshua Speed, he recalled a steamboat trip the two had taken on the [215]Ohio River 14 years earlier. "You may remember, as I well do," he said, "that from [216]Louisville [Kentucky] to the mouth of the Ohio there were, on board, ten or a dozen slaves, shackled together with irons. That sight was a continual torment to me; and I see something like it every time I touch the Ohio, or any other slave-border."

Yet, as [217]president, Lincoln was at first reluctant to adopt an abolitionist policy. There were several reasons for his hesitancy. He had been elected on a platform pledging no interference with slavery within the states, and in any case he doubted the constitutionality of federal action under the circumstances. He was concerned about the possible difficulties of incorporating nearly four million [218]African Americans, once they had been freed, into the nation's social and political life. Above all, he felt that he must keep the border slaveholding states in the Union, and he feared that an abolitionist program might impel them, in particular his native [219]Kentucky, toward the [220]Confederacy. So he held back while others went ahead. When General [221]John C. Frémont and General [222]David Hunter, within their respective military departments, proclaimed freedom for the enslaved people of disloyal masters, Lincoln [223]revoked the proclamations. When Congress passed confiscation acts in 1861 and 1862, he refrained from a full enforcement of the provisions authorizing him to seize enslaved property. And when [224]Horace Greeley in the New York Tribune appealed to him to enforce these laws, Lincoln patiently replied (August 22, 1862):

My paramount object in this struggle is to save the Union, and is not either to save or to destroy slavery. If I could save the Union without freeing any slave I would do it; and if I could save it by freeing all the slaves I would do it; and if I could save it by freeing some and leaving others alone, I would also do that.

Meanwhile, in response to the rising antislavery [225]sentiment, Lincoln came forth with an emancipation plan of his own. According to his proposal, the enslaved were to be freed by state action, the slaveholders were to be compensated, the federal government was to share the financial burden, the emancipation process was to be gradual, and the freedmen were to be colonized abroad. Congress indicated its willingness to vote the necessary funds for the Lincoln plan, but none of the border slaveholding states were willing to launch it, and in any case few Black American leaders desired to see their people sent abroad.

Lithograph copy of the Emancipation Proclamation.

While still hoping for the eventual success of his gradual plan, Lincoln took quite a different step by issuing his preliminary (September 22, 1862) and his final (January 1, 1863) [228]Emancipation Proclamation. This famous [229]decree, which he justified as an exercise of the president's war powers, applied only to those parts of the country actually under Confederate control, not to the loyal enslaving states nor to the federally occupied areas of the Confederacy. Directly or indirectly the proclamation brought freedom during the war to fewer than 200,000 enslaved persons. Yet it had great significance as a symbol. It indicated that the Lincoln government had added freedom to reunion as a war aim, and it attracted liberal opinion in England and Europe to increased support of the Union cause. When news of the [230]Emancipation Proclamation finally reached the distant state of [231]Texas on June 19, 1865—more than two years after Lincoln had issued the proclamation—the newly freed slaves immediately began to celebrate with prayer, feasting, song, and dance, spurring the national holiday known as [232]Juneteenth or Emancipation Day.

Lincoln himself doubted the constitutionality of his step, except as a temporary war measure. After the war, the [234]enslaved people freed by the proclamation would have risked re-enslavement had nothing else been done to confirm their liberty. But something else was done: the [235]Thirteenth Amendment was added to the [236]Constitution, and Lincoln played a large part in bringing about this change in the fundamental [237]law. Through the chairman of the [238]Republican National Committee he urged the party to include a plank for such an [239]amendment in its platform of 1864. The plank, as adopted, stated that slavery was the cause of the rebellion, that the president's proclamation had aimed "a death blow at this gigantic evil," and that a [240]constitutional amendment was necessary to "terminate and forever prohibit" it. When Lincoln was reelected on this platform and the Republican majority in Congress was increased, he was justified in feeling, as he apparently did, that he had a [241]mandate from the people for the Thirteenth Amendment. The newly chosen Congress, with its overwhelming Republican majority, was not to meet until after the lame duck session of the old Congress during the winter of 1864-65. Lincoln did not wait. Using his resources of patronage and persuasion upon certain of the Democrats, he managed to get the necessary two-thirds vote before the session's end. He rejoiced as the [242]amendment went out to the states for ratification, and he rejoiced again and again as his own [243]Illinois led off and other states followed one by one in acting favourably upon it. (He did not live to rejoice in its ultimate adoption.)

Lincoln deserves his reputation as the Great Emancipator. His claim to that honour, if it rests uncertainly upon his famous proclamation, has a sound basis in the support he gave to the antislavery amendment. It is well founded also in his greatness as the war leader who carried the nation safely through the four-year struggle that brought freedom in its train. And, finally, it is strengthened by the practical demonstrations he gave of respect for human worth and dignity, regardless of colour. During the last two years of his life he welcomed African Americans as visitors and friends in a way no president had done before. One of his friends was the distinguished formerly slaved [244]Frederick Douglass, who once wrote: "In all my interviews with Mr. Lincoln I was impressed with his entire freedom from [245]prejudice against the colored race."

Wartime politics of Abraham Lincoln

To win the war, President Lincoln had to have popular support. The reunion of [246]North and [247]South required, first of all, a certain degree of unity in the North. But the North contained various groups with special interests of their own. Lincoln faced the task of attracting to his administration the support of as many divergent groups and individuals as possible. Accordingly, he gave much of his time and attention to politics, which in one of its aspects is the art of attracting such support. Fortunately for the Union cause, he was a [248]president with rare political skill. He had the knack of appealing to fellow politicians and talking to them in their own language. He had a talent for smoothing over personal differences and holding the loyalty of men antagonistic to one another. Inheriting the [249]spoils system, he made good use of it, disposing of government jobs in such a way as to strengthen his administration and further its official aims.

The opposition party remained alive and strong. Its membership included war [252]Democrats and peace Democrats, often called [253]“Copperheads,” a few of whom [254]collaborated with the enemy. Lincoln did what he could to [255]cultivate the assistance of the war Democrats, as in securing from Congress the timely approval of the [256]Thirteenth Amendment. So far as [257]feasible, he conciliated the peace Democrats. He heeded the complaints of one of them, Governor [258]Horatio Seymour of [259]New York, in regard to the [260]draft quota for that state. He commuted the [261]prison sentence of another, Congressman [262]Clement L. Vallandigham of [263]Ohio, to banishment within the Confederate lines. In dealing with persons suspected of treasonable intent, Lincoln at times authorized his generals to make arbitrary arrests. He justified this action on the ground that he had to allow some temporary sacrifice of parts of the [264]Constitution in order to maintain the Union and thus preserve the Constitution as a whole. He let his generals suspend several newspapers, but only for short periods, and he promptly revoked a military order suppressing the hostile Chicago Times. In a letter to one of his generals he expressed his policy thus:

You will only arrest individuals and suppress assemblies or newspapers when they may be working [265]palpable injury to the military in your charge, and in no other case will you interfere with the expression of opinion in any form or allow it to be interfered with violently by others. In this you have a discretion to exercise with great caution, calmness, and forbearance.

Considering the dangers and provocations of the time, Lincoln was quite liberal in his treatment of political opponents and the opposition press. He was by no means the dictator critics often accused him of being. Nevertheless, his [266]abrogating of [267]civil liberties, especially his suspension of the privilege of the writ of [268]habeas corpus, disturbed Democrats, Republicans, and even members of his own cabinet. In the opinion of a soldier from [269]Massachusetts, the president, “without the people having any legal means to prevent it, is only prevented from exercising a Russian despotism by the fear he may have of shocking too much the sense of decency of the whole world.” Even Lincoln’s friend Orville Hickman Browning believed the arrests ordered by the president were “illegal and arbitrary, and did more harm than good, weakening instead of strengthening the government.” Yet Lincoln defended his actions, arguing that the Constitution provided for the suspension of such liberties “in cases of Rebellion or Invasion, [when] the public Safety may require it.” Moreover, posed Lincoln with [270]rhetorical flare, “Must I shoot a simpleminded soldier boy who deserts” and “not touch a hair of a wilely agitator who induces him to desert?”

Within his own party, Lincoln confronted factional divisions and personal rivalries that caused him as much trouble as did the activities of the Democrats. True, he and most of his fellow partisans agreed fairly well upon their principal economic aims. With his approval, the Republicans enacted into [271]law the essentials of the program he had advocated from his early Whig days—a protective tariff; a national banking system; and federal aid for internal improvements, in particular for the construction of a railroad to the Pacific Coast. The [272]Republicans disagreed among themselves, however, on many matters regarding the conduct and purposes of the war. Two main factions arose: the “Radicals” and the “[273]Conservatives.” Lincoln himself inclined in spirit toward the Conservatives, but he had friends among the Radicals as well, and he strove to maintain his leadership over both. In appointing his cabinet, he chose his several rivals for the 1860 nomination and, all together, gave representation to every important party group. Wisely he included the outstanding [274]Conservative, [275]Seward, and the outstanding Radical, [276]Salmon P. Chase. Cleverly he overcame cabinet crises and kept these two opposites among his official advisers until Chase’s resignation in 1864.

Lincoln had to deal with even more serious factional uprisings in Congress. The big issue was the [277]“reconstruction” of the South. The seceded states of Louisiana, [278]Arkansas, and [279]Tennessee having been largely recovered by the federal armies, Lincoln late in 1863 proposed his “ten percent plan,” according to which new state governments might be formed when 10 percent of the qualified voters had taken an oath of future loyalty to the [280]United States. The Radicals rejected Lincoln’s proposal as too [281]lenient, and they carried through Congress the [282]Wade-Davis Bill, which would have permitted the remaking and readmission of states only after a majority had taken the loyalty oath. When Lincoln pocket-vetoed that bill, its authors published a “manifesto” denouncing him.

Lincoln was already the candidate of the “Union” (that is, the Republican) party for reelection to the presidency, and the Wade-Davis [283]manifesto signaled a movement within the party to displace him as the party’s nominee. He waited quietly and patiently for the movement to collapse, but even after it had done so, the party remained badly divided. A rival Republican candidate, [284]John C. Frémont, nominated much earlier by a splinter group, was still in the field. Leading Radicals promised to procure Frémont’s withdrawal if Lincoln would obtain the resignation of his conservative postmaster general, [285]Montgomery Blair. Eventually Frémont withdrew and Blair resigned. The party was reunited in time for the [286]election of 1864.

In 1864, as in 1860, Lincoln was the chief strategist of his own electoral campaign. He took a hand in the management of the Republican Speakers’ Bureau, advised state committees on campaign tactics, hired and fired government employees to strengthen party support, and did his best to enable as many soldiers and sailors as possible to vote. Most of the citizens in uniform voted Republican. He was reelected with a large popular majority (55 percent) over his Democratic opponent, General [287]George B. McClellan.

In 1864 the Democratic platform called for an armistice and a peace conference, and prominent Republicans as well as Democrats demanded that Lincoln heed Confederate peace offers, irregular and illusory though they were. In a public letter, he stated his own conditions:

Any proposition which embraces the restoration of peace, the [288]integrity of the whole Union, and the abandonment of [289]slavery, and which comes by and with an authority that can control the armies now at war against the United States will be received and considered by the Executive government of the United States, and will be met by liberal terms on other substantial and [290]collateral points.

When Conservatives protested to him against the [291]implication that the war must go on to free the enslaved, even after reunion had been won, he explained, “To me it seems plain that saying reunion and abandonment of slavery would be considered, if offered, is not saying that nothing else or less would be considered, if offered.” After his reelection, in his annual message to Congress, he said, “In stating a single condition of peace, I mean simply to say that the war will cease on the part of the government, whenever it shall have ceased on the part of those who began it.” On February 3, 1865, he met personally with Confederate commissioners on a steamship in [292]Hampton Roads, [293]Virginia. He promised to be liberal with pardons if the South would quit the war, but he insisted on reunion as a precondition for any peace arrangement. In his Second Inaugural Address he embodied the spirit of his policy in the famous words “with [294]malice toward none; with charity for all.” His terms satisfied neither the Confederate leaders nor the [295]Radical Republicans, and so no peace was possible until the final defeat of the [296]Confederacy.

At the end of the war, Lincoln's policy for the defeated South was not clear in all its details, though he continued to believe that the main object should be to restore the "seceded States, so-called," to their "proper practical relation" with the Union as soon as possible. He possessed no fixed and uniform program for the region as a whole. As he said in the last public speech of his life (April 11, 1865), "so great peculiarities" pertained to each of the states, and "such important and sudden changes" occurred from time to time, and "so new and unprecedented" was the whole problem that "no [299]exclusive and inflexible plan" could "safely be prescribed." With respect to states like Louisiana and [300]Tennessee, he continued to urge acceptance of new governments set up under his 10 percent plan during the war. With respect to states like [301]Virginia and [302]North Carolina, he seemed willing to use the old rebel governments temporarily as a means of transition from war to peace. He was on record as opposing the appointment of "strangers" ([303]carpetbaggers) to govern the South. He hoped that the Southerners themselves, in forming new state governments, would find some way by which whites and Blacks "could gradually live themselves out of their old relation to each other, and both come out better prepared for the new." A program of education for the freedmen, he thought, was essential to preparing them for their new status. He also suggested that the vote be given immediately to some African Americans—"as, for instance, the very intelligent, and especially those who have fought gallantly in our ranks."

On the question of [304]reconstruction, however, Lincoln and the extremists of his own party stood even farther apart in early 1865 than a year before. Some of the Radicals were beginning to demand a period of military occupation for the South, the confiscation of planter estates and their division among the freedmen, and the transfer of political power from the planters to the formerly enslaved. In April 1865 Lincoln began to modify his own stand in some respects and thus to narrow the gap between himself and the Radicals. He recalled the permission he had given for the assembling of the rebel [305]legislature of Virginia, and he approved in principle—or at least did not disapprove—Stanton's scheme for the military occupation of Southern states. After the cabinet meeting of April 14, Attorney General James Speed inferred that Lincoln was moving toward the radical position. "He never seemed so near our views," Speed believed. What Lincoln's reconstruction policy would have been, if he had lived to complete his second term, can only be guessed at.

[309]assassination of Abraham Lincoln

The Assassination of President Lincoln at Ford's Theatre—After the Act, wood engraving from Harper's Weekly, April 29, 1865.

On the evening of April 14, 1865, 26-year-old[310] John Wilkes Booth—a rabid advocate of [311]slavery with ties to the South and the [312]flamboyant son of one of the most distinguished theatrical families of the 19th century—[313]shot Lincoln as he sat in [314]Ford's Theatre in Washington. Early the next morning Lincoln died.

Reputation and character of Abraham Lincoln

"Now he belongs to the ages," Stanton is supposed to have said as Lincoln took his last breath. Many thought of Lincoln as a [315]martyr. The [316]assassination had occurred on [317]Good Friday, and on the following Sunday, memorable as "Black Easter," hundreds of speakers found a sermon in the event. Some of them saw more than mere chance in the fact that [318]assassination day was also [319]crucifixion day. One declared, "Jesus Christ died for the world; Abraham Lincoln died for his country." Thus the posthumous growth of his reputation was influenced by the timing and circumstances of his death, which won for him a kind of sainthood.

Among the many who remembered Lincoln from personal acquaintance, one was sure he had known him more intimately than any of the rest and influenced the world's [320]conception of him more than all the others put together. That one was his former [321]law partner [322]William Herndon. When Lincoln died, Herndon began a new career as Lincoln authority, collecting reminiscences wherever he could find them and adding his own store of memories. Although admiring Lincoln, he objected to the trend toward sanctifying him. He saw, as the main feature of Lincoln's life, the far more than ordinary rise of a self-made man, a rise from the lowest depths to the greatest heights—"from a stagnant, putrid pool, like the gas which, set on fire by its own energy and self-combustible nature, rises in jets, blazing, clear, and bright." To [323]emphasize this point, Herndon gave his most eager attention to evidences of the dismal and sordid in Lincoln's background. An extremely significant event in Lincoln's development, as Herndon viewed it, was a "romance of much reality" with [324]Ann Rutledge. Lincoln loved no one but Rutledge and, after her death, never ceased to grieve for her. His memory of her both saddened and inspired him. As for his wife, [325]Mary Todd Lincoln, she married him out of spite, then devoted herself to making him miserable. So Herndon would have it, and after him countless biographers, novelists, and playwrights elaborated upon his views, which persist as accepted knowledge about Lincoln despite their refutation by historical scholarship.

Lincoln has become a [326]myth as well as a man. The Lincoln of [327]legend has grown into a protean god who can assume a shape to please almost anyone. He is Old Abe and at the same time a natural gentleman. He is Honest Abe and yet a being of superhuman shrewdness and cunning. He is also Father Abraham, the wielder of authority, the support of the weak; and he is an equal, a neighbour, and a friend. But there is a malevolent Lincoln as well, and to many Southerners from the time of the Civil War and to some [328]conservative critics today, Lincoln is the wicked slayer of [329]liberty and [330]states' rights and the father of the all-controlling national state.

Lincoln's reputation began to grow while he was still alive. In the midst of the Civil War, for instance, the Washington Chronicle found a resemblance between him and [331]George Washington in their "sure judgment," "perfect balance of thoroughly sound faculties," and "great calmness of temper, great firmness of purpose, supreme [332]moral principle, and intense patriotism." The Buffalo Express referred to his "remarkable moderation and freedom from passionate bitterness," and then added, "We do not believe that Washington himself was less indifferent to the exercise of power for power's sake." An English newspaper, the Liverpool Post, suggested that "no leader in a great contest ever stood so little chance of being the subject of hero worship as Abraham Lincoln," if one were to judge only by the way he looked. His long arms and legs, his grotesque figure, made him too easy to [333]caricature and ridicule. "Yet," this newspaper concluded, "a worshiper of human heroes might possibly travel a great deal farther and fare much worse for an idol than selecting this same lanky American." His inner qualities—his faithfulness, honesty, resolution, insight, humour, and courage—would "go a long way to make up a hero," whatever the man's personal appearance.

Lincoln's best ideas and finest phrases were considered and written and rewritten with [334]meticulous revisions. Some resulted from a slow gestation of thought and phrase through many years. One of his recurring themes—probably his central theme—was the promise and the problem of self-government. As early as 1838, speaking to the Young Men's Lyceum of [335]Springfield on "The Perpetuation of Our Political Institutions," he recalled the devotion of his Revolutionary forefathers to the cause and went on to say:

Their ambition aspired to display before an admiring world, a practical demonstration of the truth of a proposition, which had hitherto been considered, at best no better, than problematical; namely, the capability of a people to govern themselves.

Again and again he returned to this idea, especially after the coming of the Civil War, and he steadily improved his phrasing. In his first message to Congress after the fall of Fort Sumter, he declared that the issue between North and South involved more than the future of the [336]United States.

It presents to the whole family of man, the question, whether a [337]constitutional republic, or a democracy—a government of the people, by the same people—can, or cannot, maintain its territorial [338]integrity, against its own domestic foes.

Address delivered at the dedication of the Cemetery at Gettysburg.

Four score and seven years ago our fathers brought forth on this continent a new nation, conceived in liberty, and dedicated to the proposition that all men are creation equal.

Now we are engaged in a great civil war, testing whether white nation, or any nation so conceived can so dedicate, can long endure. We are met on a great battle-field of that war. We have come to dedicate a portion of that field, as a final resting place for those who here gave their lives that this nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this.

But, in a larger sense, we can not dedicate— we can not consecrate— we can not hallow this ground. The brave men who fought here, have dedicated it, far above our poor power to do so, to the long memory of those who lived here, but it can never forget what they did here. It is for us the living, rather, to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they who fought here have thus far so nobly advanced. It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us—that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion—that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain—that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom—and that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth.

Abraham Lincoln.

And finally at [345]Gettysburg, [346]Pennsylvania, he made the culminating, supreme statement, concluding with the words:

...that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion—that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain—that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom—and that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth.

1.1.10 Ronald Reagan (2024-01-25 10:46)

Who Was Ronald Reagan?

Ronald Reagan initially chose a career in entertainment, appearing in more than 50 films. While in Hollywood, he worked as president of the Screen Actor's Guild and met his future wife, Nancy (Davis) Reagan. He later served two terms as governor of California. Originally a liberal Democrat, Reagan ran for the U.S. presidency as a Republican and won two terms, beginning in 1980, ultimately becoming a conservative icon over the ensuing decades. Having suffered from Alzheimer's disease in his later years, Reagan died on June 5, 2004.

Early Life and Education

Ronald Wilson Reagan was born on February 6, 1911, in Tampico, Illinois, to John Edward "Jack" Reagan and Nellie Wilson Reagan. His father nicknamed him "Dutch," saying he resembled "a fat little Dutchman." During Reagan's early childhood, his family lived in a series of towns, finally settling in Dixon, Illinois, in 1920, where Jack opened a shoe store. In 1928, Reagan graduated from Dixon High School, where he was an athlete and student body president and performed in school plays. During summer vacations, he worked as a lifeguard in Dixon.

Enrolling at Eureka College in Illinois on an athletic scholarship, Reagan majored in economics and sociology. There, he played football, ran track, captained the swim team, served as student council president and acted in school productions. After graduating in 1932, he found work as a radio sports announcer in Iowa.

Hollywood Career and Marriages

In 1937, Reagan signed a seven-year contract with the movie studio Warner Bros. Over the next three decades, he appeared in more than 50 films. Among his best-known roles was that of Notre Dame football star George Gipp in the 1940 biopic Knute Rockne, All American. Another notable role was in the 1942 film Kings Row, in which Reagan portrays an accident victim who wakes up to discover his legs have been amputated.

In 1940, Reagan married actress Jane Wyman, with whom he had daughter Maureen and adopted a son, Michael. The couple divorced in 1948. During World War II, Reagan was disqualified from combat duty due to poor eyesight and spent his time in the Army making training films. He left the military ranked as a captain.

From 1947 to 1952, Reagan served as president of the Screen Actors Guild. During this time, he met actress Nancy Davis, who had sought his help after she was mistakenly listed as a possible communist sympathizer on the Hollywood blacklist. Both were immediately attracted to each other, but Reagan was skeptical of marrying again due to his painful divorce from Wyman. Over time he recognized Nancy as his kindred spirit, and they wed in 1952. The pair had two children, Patricia Ann and Ronald.

As Reagan's film career began to plateau, he landed a job as host of the weekly television drama series The General Electric Theater in 1954. Part of his responsibility as the host was to tour the United States as a public relations representative for GE. It was during this time that his political views shifted from liberal to conservative; he led pro-business discussions, speaking out against excessive government regulation and wasteful spending — central themes of his future political career.

Governorship and Presidential Bid

Reagan stepped into the national political spotlight in 1964, when he gave a well-received televised speech for Republican presidential candidate [1]Barry Goldwater, a prominent conservative. Two years later, in his first race for public office, Reagan defeated Democratic incumbent Edmund "Pat" Brown Sr. by almost one million votes, winning the California governorship. He was re-elected to a second term in 1970.

After making unsuccessful bids for the Republican presidential nomination in 1968 and 1976, Reagan finally received his party's nod in 1980. In that year's general election, he defeated Democrat incumbent [2]President Jimmy Carter, winning the electoral college (489 to 49) and capturing almost 51 percent of the popular vote. At age 69, Reagan was the oldest person elected to the U.S. presidency at the time.

1981 Inauguration and Assassination Attempt

In his inaugural speech on January 20, 1981, Reagan rhetorically announced that "government is not the solution to our problems; government is the problem." He called for an era of national renewal and hoped that America would again be "a beacon of hope for those who do not have freedom." He and [3]Nancy Reagan also ushered in a new era of glamour to the White House, with designer fashions and a controversial redecoration of the executive mansion.

On March 30, 1981, as President Reagan was exiting the Washington Hilton Hotel with several of his advisers, shots rang out and quick-thinking Secret Service agents thrust the president into his limousine. Once in the car, aides discovered that he had been hit. His would-be assassin, [4]John Hinckley Jr., also shot three other people, none of them fatally. At the hospital, doctors determined that the gunman's bullet had pierced one of the president's lungs and narrowly missed his heart. Reagan, known for his good-natured humor, later told his wife, "Honey, I forgot to duck." Within several weeks of the shooting, Reagan was back at work.

Domestic Agenda

On the domestic front, President Reagan advanced a number of conservative policies. Tax cuts were implemented to stimulate the United States' economy. He also advocated for increases in military spending, reductions in certain social programs and measures to deregulate business. By 1983, the nation's economy had begun to recover and, according to many economists, entered a seven-year period of prosperity. Critics, however, charged that his policies had actually increased the deficit and hurt the middle class and poor.

In 1981, Reagan once again made history by appointing [5]Judge Sandra Day O'Connor as the first woman to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Foreign Affairs

The most pressing foreign policy issue of Reagan's first term was the Cold War. Dubbing the Soviet Union "the evil empire," Reagan embarked on a massive buildup of U.S. weapons and troops. He implemented the Reagan Doctrine, which provided aid to anti-communist movements in Africa, Asia and Latin America. In 1983, he announced the Strategic Defense Initiative, a plan aiming to develop space-based weapons to protect America from attacks by Soviet nuclear missiles.

In the Middle East, Reagan sent 800 U.S. Marines to Lebanon as part of an international peacekeeping force, in June 1982. Nearly one year later, in October 1983, suicide bombers attacked the Marine barracks in Beirut, killing 241 Americans. That same month, Reagan ordered U.S. forces to invade the Caribbean island of Grenada after Marxist rebels overthrew the government. In addition to the problems in Lebanon and Grenada, the Reagan administration had to deal with an ongoing contentious relationship with Libyan leader [6]Muammar al-Qaddafi.

1984 Reelection and Gorbachev

In November 1984, Reagan was reelected in a landslide, defeating Democratic challenger Walter Mondale. Reagan carried 49 of the 50 U.S. states in the election and received 525 of 538 electoral votes—the largest number ever won by an American presidential candidate. Yet his second term was tarnished by the [7]Iran-Contra affair, a convoluted "arms-for-hostages" deal with Iran to funnel money toward anti-communist insurgencies in Central America. Though he initially denied knowing about it, Reagan later announced that it was a mistake partially at the behest of the first lady.

During his second term, Reagan also forged a diplomatic relationship with the reform-minded [8]Mikhail Gorbachev, chairman of the Soviet Union. In 1987, the Americans and Soviets signed a historic agreement to eliminate intermediate-range nuclear missiles. That same year, Reagan spoke at Germany's Berlin Wall, a symbol of communism, and famously challenged Gorbachev to tear it down. More than two years later, Gorbachev allowed the people of Berlin to dismantle the wall, ending Soviet domination of East Germany. After leaving the White House, Reagan returned to Germany in September 1990—just weeks before the country was officially reunified—and, with a hammer, took several symbolic swings at a remaining chunk of the wall.

Later Years and Death

After leaving the White House in January 1989, Reagan and Nancy returned to their home in Los Angeles, California. In 1991, the Ronald W. Reagan Presidential Library and Center for Public Affairs opened in Simi Valley, California.

In November 1994, Reagan revealed in a handwritten letter to the American people that he had recently been diagnosed with Alzheimer's disease. Nearly a decade later, on June 5, 2004, he died at his Los Angeles home at age 93, making him the nation's longest-lived president at that time. A state funeral was held in Washington, D.C., and Reagan was later buried on the grounds of his presidential library in California. His wife Nancy died of heart failure in 2016 at the age of 94 and was also interred at The Ronald Reagan Presidential Library and Center for Public Affairs.

QUOTES

- Democracy is worth dying for because it is the most deeply honorable form of government ever devised by man.
- A people free to choose will always choose peace.
- Information is the oxygen of the modern age.
- There is no limit to what a man can do or where he can go if he doesn't mind who gets the credit.
- Government exists to protect us from each other. Where government has gone beyond its limits is in deciding to protect us from ourselves.

- It has been said that politics is the second oldest profession. I have learned that it bears a striking resemblance to the first.
- I have wondered at times what the Ten Commandments would have looked like if Moses had run them through the U.S. Congress.
- Government is not the solution to our problems; government is the problem.
- We in government should learn to look at our country with the eyes of the entrepreneur, seeing possibilities where others see only problems.
- In America, our origins matter less than our destination and that is what democracy is all about.
- Coercion, after all, merely captures man. Freedom captivates him.
- In a world wracked by hatred, economic crisis and political tension, America remains mankind's best hope.
- One of the worst mistakes anybody can make is to bet against America.
- We will always remember. We will always be proud. We will always be prepared, so we may always be free.

1.1.11 George W. Bush biography (2024-01-25 10:49)

[1]George W. Bush biography George W. Bush (born July 6, 1946, [2]New Haven, [3]Connecticut, U.S.) 43rd president of the [4]United States (2001–09), who led his [5]country's response to the [6]September 11 terrorist attacks in 2001 and initiated the [7]Iraq War in 2003. Narrowly winning the [8]electoral college vote in 2000 over Vice Pres. [9]Al Gore in one of the closest and most-controversial elections in American [10]history, George W. Bush became the first person since [11]Benjamin Harrison in 1888 to be elected [12]president despite having lost the nationwide popular vote. Before his election as president, Bush was a businessman and served as governor of [13]Texas (1995-2000).

Bush was the eldest of six children of [18]George H.W. Bush, who served as the 41st president of the United States (1989-93), and [19]Barbara Bush. His paternal grandfather, Prescott Bush, was a U.S. senator from Connecticut (1952-63). The younger Bush grew up largely in [20]Midland and [21]Houston, Texas. From 1961 to 1964 he [22]attended [23]Phillips Academy in [24]Andover, [25]Massachusetts, the [26]boarding school from which his father had graduated. He received a [27]bachelor's degree in history from [28]Yale University, his father's and grandfather's alma mater, in 1968. Bush was president of his fraternity and, like his father, a member of Yale's secretive [29]Skull and Bones society; unlike his father, he was only an average student and did not excel in athletics.

In May 1968, two weeks before his graduation from Yale and the expiration of his student draft deferment, Bush applied as a pilot trainee in the Texas Air National Guard, whose members were less likely than regular soldiers to fight in the [30]Vietnam War. [31]Commissioned a second lieutenant in July 1968, he became a certified fighter pilot in June 1970. In the fall of 1970, he applied for admission to the [32]University of Texas law school but was rejected. Although Bush apparently missed at least eight months of duty between May 1972 and May 1973, he was granted an early discharge so that he could start [33]Harvard Business School in the fall of 1973. His spotty military record resurfaced as a campaign issue in both the 2000 and 2004 presidential elections.

After receiving an M.B.A. from Harvard in 1975, Bush returned to Midland, where he began working for a Bush family friend, an oil and gas attorney, and later started his own oil and gas firm. He married [36]Laura Welch, a teacher and librarian, in Midland in 1977. After an unsuccessful run for [37]Congress in 1978, Bush devoted himself to building his business.

With help from his uncle, who was then raising funds for Bush's father's campaign for the Republican presidential nomination, Bush was able to attract numerous prominent investors. The company struggled through the early 1980s until the eventual collapse of oil prices in 1986, when it was purchased by the Harken Energy Corporation. Bush received Harken stock, a job as a consultant to the company, and a seat on the company's board of directors.[38]

In the same year, shortly after his 40th birthday, Bush gave up drinking alcohol. "I realized," he later explained, "that alcohol was beginning to crowd out my energies and could crowd, eventually, my affections for other people." His decision was partly the result of a self-described spiritual awakening and a strengthening of his Christian faith that had begun the previous year, after a conversation with the Rev. [42]Billy Graham, a Bush family friend.

After the sale of his company, Bush spent 18 months in Washington, [45]D.C., working as an adviser and speechwriter in his father's presidential campaign. Following the [46]election in 1988, he moved to [47]Dallas, where he and a former business partner organized a group of investors to purchase the [48]Texas Rangers professional [49]baseball team. Although Bush's investment, which he made with a loan he obtained by using his Harken stock as [50]collateral, was relatively small, his role as managing partner of the team brought him much exposure in the media and earned him a reputation as a successful businessman. When Bush's partnership sold the team in 1998, Bush received nearly $15 million.

Governor of Texas

In 1994 Bush challenged Democratic incumbent [52]Ann Richards for the governorship of [53]Texas. A major issue in the campaign concerned Bush's sale of all his Harken stock in June 1990, just days before the company completed a second quarter with heavy losses. An investigation by the [54]Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) in 1991 into the possibility of illegal [55]insider trading (trading that takes advantage of information not available to the public) did not uncover any wrongdoing. Bush won the election with 53 percent of the vote (compared with 46 percent for Richards), thus becoming the first child of a U.S. [56]president to be elected a state governor.

As governor, Bush increased state spending on elementary and [61]secondary education and made the salaries and promotions of teachers and administrators [62]contingent on their students' performance on standardized tests. His administration increased the number of crimes for which juveniles could be sentenced to adult prisons following custody in juvenile detention and lowered to 14 the age at which children could be tried as adults. Throughout his [63]tenure Bush received international attention for the brisk use of [64]capital punishment in Texas relative to other states. Bush signed into law several measures aimed at [65]tort reform, including one that imposed new limits on [66]punitive damages and another that narrowed the legal definition of "gross negligence." Reelected in 1998 with nearly 70 percent of the vote, Bush became the first Texas governor to win consecutive four-year terms (in 1972 voters had approved a referendum that extended the governor's term from two years to four).

[68]George W. Bush

Bush formally announced his candidacy for the Republican presidential nomination in June 1999. He described his political philosophy as “compassionate conservatism,” a view that [69]combined traditional Republican economic policies with concern for the underprivileged. Despite Bush’s refusal to give direct answers to questions about his drinking and possible use of illegal drugs (he implied that he had not used illegal drugs since 1974), he won the Republican nomination, taking a strong lead in [70]public opinion polls over Vice Pres. [71]Al Gore, the [72]Democratic Party nominee; [73]Ralph Nader, the [74]Green Party candidate; and political journalist [75]Patrick Buchanan, the nominee of the [76]Reform Party. His running mate was [77]Dick Cheney, former chief of staff for Pres. [78]Gerald Ford and secretary of defense during the presidency of Bush’s father.

[80]U.S. presidential election of 2000

A Florida judge examining a challenged vote at an operations centre in Plantation, Florida, during a recount of the state's U.S. presidential election ballots, 2000.

As the general election campaign continued, the gap in the polls between Bush and [81]Gore narrowed to the closest in any election in the previous 40 years. On election day the presidency hinged on the 25 electoral votes of [82]Florida, where Bush led Gore by fewer than 1,000 popular votes after a mandatory statewide machine recount. After the Gore campaign asked for manual recounts in four heavily Democratic counties, the Bush campaign filed suit in federal court to stop them. For five weeks the election remained unresolved as Florida state courts and federal courts heard numerous legal challenges by both campaigns. Eventually the Florida Supreme Court decided (4-3) to order a statewide manual recount of the approximately 45,000 “undervotes”—ballots that machines recorded as not clearly expressing a presidential vote. The Bush campaign quickly filed an appeal with the U.S. [83]Supreme Court, asking it to [84]delay the recounts until it could hear the case; a stay was issued by the court on December 9. Three days later, concluding (7-2) that a fair statewide recount could not be performed in time to meet the December 18 deadline for certifying the state’s electors, the court issued a controversial [85]5-4 decision to reverse the Florida Supreme Court’s recount order, effectively awarding the presidency to Bush. By winning Florida, Bush narrowly won the electoral vote over Gore by 271 to 266—only 1 more than the required 270 (one Gore elector abstained).

With his inauguration, Bush became only the second son of a president to assume the nation’s highest office; the other was [86]John Quincy Adams (1825-29), the son of [87]John Adams (1797-1801).

Presidency of George W. Bush

Early initiatives

[89]George W. Bush and George H.W. Bush, 2001

Bush was the first Republican [90]president to enjoy a majority in both houses of Congress since [91]Dwight D. Eisenhower in the 1950s. Taking advantage of his party's strength, Bush proposed a $1.6 trillion tax-cut bill in February 2001. A compromise measure worth $1.35 billion was passed by Congress in June, despite Democratic objections that it unfairly benefited the wealthy. In the same month, however, control of the Senate formally passed to the Democrats after Republican Sen. [92]James Jeffords left his party to become an independent. Subsequently, many of Bush's domestic [93]initiatives encountered significant resistance in the Senate.

In a report issued in May 2001, the National Energy Policy Development Group, a task force headed by Vice Pres. [94]Dick Cheney, called for increasing the production of fossil fuels and [95]nuclear power in the [96]country by opening more federal lands to mining and oil and gas exploration, extending tax credits and other subsidies to energy companies, and easing environmental regulations. In July a coalition of nonprofit organizations filed suit to make public the secret deliberations of the task force and the identities of the groups it met with. (The case was decided in the administration's favour by the Supreme Court in June 2004.)

In foreign affairs, the Bush administration announced that the United States would not [97]abide by the [98]Kyoto Protocol on reducing the emission of gases responsible for [99]global warming, which the United States had signed in the last days of the [100]Bill Clinton administration, because the agreement did not impose emission limits on developing countries and because it could harm the U.S. economy. The administration also withdrew from the 1972 [101]Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty and attempted to secure commitments from various governments not to extradite U.S. citizens to the new [102]International Criminal Court, whose jurisdiction it rejected.

On September 11, 2001, Bush faced a crisis that would transform his presidency. That morning, four American commercial airplanes were [112]hijacked by Islamist [113]terrorists. Two of the planes were deliberately crashed into the twin towers of the [114]World Trade Center in [115]New York City, destroying both towers and collapsing or damaging many surrounding buildings, and a third was used to destroy part of the [116]Pentagon building outside [117]Washington, D.C.; the fourth plane crashed outside [118]Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, after passengers apparently attempted to retake it (see [119]September 11 attacks). The crashes—the worst terrorist incident on U.S. soil—killed some 3,000 people.[120]

The Bush administration accused radical Islamist [128]Osama bin Laden and his terrorist network, [129]al-Qaeda (Arabic: “the Base”), of responsibility for the attacks and charged the [130]Taliban government of Afghanistan with harbouring bin Laden and his followers (in a videotape in 2004, bin Laden acknowledged that he was responsible). After assembling an international military coalition, Bush ordered a massive bombing campaign against Afghanistan, which began on October 7, 2001. U.S.-led forces quickly toppled the Taliban government and routed al-Qaeda fighters, though bin Laden himself remained [131]elusive (he was eventually killed in a raid by U.S. forces in Pakistan in 2011). In the wake of the September 11 attacks and during the war in Afghanistan, Bush’s public-approval ratings were the highest of his

Immediately after the September 11 attacks, domestic security and the threat of [138]terrorism became the chief focus of the Bush administration and the top priority of government at every level. Declaring a global “[139]war on terrorism,” Bush announced that the country would not rest until “every terrorist group of global reach has been found, stopped, and defeated.” To coordinate the government’s domestic response, the administration formed a cabinet-level [140]Department of Homeland Security, which began operating on January 24, 2003.

[147]George W. Bush: 2002 State of the Union address

George W. Bush delivering the State of the Union address to Congress, January 29, 2002.

In January 2002 Bush secretly authorized the [148]National Security Agency (NSA) to monitor the international telephone calls and [149]e-mail messages of American citizens and others in the United States without first obtaining an order from the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Court, as required by the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act of 1978. When the program was revealed in news reports in December 2005, the administration insisted that it was justified by a September 2001 joint Congressional resolution that authorized the president to use “all necessary and [150]appropriate force” against those responsible for the September 11 attacks. Subsequent efforts in Congress to provide a legal basis for the spying became mired in debate over whether telecommunications companies that cooperated with the NSA should be granted retroactive immunity against numerous civil lawsuits. Legislation granting immunity and expanding the NSA's surveillance powers was finally passed by Congress and signed by Bush in July 2008.

Treatment of detainees

In January 2002, as the pacification of Afghanistan continued, the United States began transferring captured Taliban fighters and suspected al-Qaeda members from Afghanistan to what became a special prison complex at the country's permanent naval base at [151]Guantanamo Bay, Cuba. Eventually hundreds of prisoners were held at the facility without charge and without the legal means to challenge their detentions (see [152]habeas corpus). The administration argued that it was not obliged to grant basic [153]constitutional protections to the prisoners, because the base was outside U.S. territory; nor was it required to observe the [154]Geneva Conventions regarding the treatment of [155]prisoners of war and civilians during wartime, because the conventions did not apply to "unlawful enemy combatants." It further maintained that the president had the authority to place any individual, including an American citizen, in indefinite military custody without charge by declaring him an [156]enemy combatant.

The prison complex at Guantánamo became the focus of international controversy in June 2004, after a [159]confidential report by the [160]International Committee of the Red Cross found that significant numbers of prisoners had been interrogated by means of techniques that were “tantamount to torture.” (The Bush administration had frequently and vigorously denied that the United States practiced [161]torture.)

[163]Abu Ghraib prison

Scene from Errol Morris's documentary Standard Operating Procedure (2008), about the U.S. military scandal at Iraq's Abu Ghraib prison.

The leak of the report came just two months after the publication of photographs of abusive treatment of prisoners by American soldiers at the [164]Abu Ghraib prison in Iraq (see below [165]Iraq War). In response to the Abu Ghraib revelations, Congress eventually passed the Detainee Treatment Act, which banned the "cruel, inhuman, or degrading" treatment of prisoners in U.S. military custody. Although the measure became law with Bush's signature in December 2005, he added a "signing statement" in which he reserved the right to set aside the law's restrictions if he deemed them inconsistent with his constitutional powers as commander in chief.

In June 2006 the [166]U.S. Supreme Court, in [167]Hamdan v. [168]Rumsfeld, declared that the system of military commissions that the administration had intended to use to try selected prisoners at Guantánamo on charges of [169]war crimes was in violation of the Geneva Conventions and the Uniform Code of Military [170]Justice, which governs American rules of [171]courts-martial. Later that year, Congress passed the [172]Military Commissions Act, which gave the commissions the express statutory basis that the court had found lacking; the law also prevented enemy combatants who were not American citizens from challenging their detention in the federal courts.

In separate programs run by the [173]Central Intelligence Agency (CIA), dozens of individuals suspected of involvement in terrorism were abducted outside the United States and held in secret prisons in eastern Europe and elsewhere or transferred for [174]interrogation to countries that routinely practiced torture. Although such extrajudicial transfers, or "extraordinary renditions," had taken place during the Clinton administration, the Bush administration greatly expanded the practice after the September 11 attacks. Press reports of the renditions in 2005 sparked controversy in Europe and led to official investigations into whether some European governments had knowingly permitted rendition flights through their countries' territories, an apparent violation of the [175]human rights law of the [176]European Union (see also [177]European law).

In February 2005 the CIA confirmed that some individuals in its custody had been subjected to "enhanced interrogation techniques," including [178]waterboarding (interrupted or controlled drowning, often called simulated drowning), which was generally regarded as a form of [179]torture under [180]international law. The CIA's position that waterboarding did not [181]constitute torture had been based on the legal opinions of the Justice Department and specifically on a secret memo issued in 2002 that adopted an unconventionally narrow and legally questionable definition of torture. After the memo was leaked to the press in June 2004, the Justice Department [182]rescinded its opinion. In 2005, however, the department issued new secret memos declaring the legality of [183]enhanced interrogation techniques, including waterboarding. The new memos were revealed in news reports in 2007, prompting outrage from critics of the administration. In July 2007 Bush issued an [184]executive order that prohibited the CIA from using torture or acts of cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment, though the specific interrogation techniques it was allowed to use remained classified. In March 2008 Bush vetoed a bill directed specifically at the CIA that would have prevented the agency from using any interrogation technique, such as waterboarding, that was not included in the U.S. Army's field manual on interrogation.

The [185]Iraq War

Road to war

In September 2002 the administration announced a new National Security Strategy of the United States of America. It was notable for its declaration that the United States would act "preemptively," using military force if necessary, to forestall or prevent threats to its security by terrorists or "rogue states" possessing biological, chemical, or [186]nuclear weapons—so-called [187]weapons of mass destruction.

At the same time, Bush and other high administration officials began to draw [188]worldwide attention to [189]Iraqi Pres. [190]Ṣaddām Ḥussein and to suspicions that Iraq possessed or was attempting to develop weapons of mass destruction in violation of [191]United Nations [192]Security Council resolutions. In November 2002 the Bush administration successfully lobbied for a new Security Council resolution providing for the return of weapons inspectors to Iraq. Soon afterward Bush declared that Iraq had failed to comply fully with the new resolution and that the country continued to possess weapons of mass destruction. For several weeks, the United States and Britain tried to secure support from other Security Council members for a second resolution explicitly authorizing the use of force against Iraq (though administration officials insisted that earlier resolutions provided [193]sufficient legal justification for military action). In response, France and Russia, while agreeing that Iraq had failed to cooperate fully with weapons inspectors, argued that the inspections regime should be continued and strengthened.

As part of the administration's diplomatic campaign, Bush and other officials frequently warned that Iraq possessed [194]weapons of mass destruction, that it was attempting to acquire [195]nuclear weapons, and that it had long-standing ties to al-Qaeda and other terrorist organizations. In his [196]State of the Union address in January 2003, Bush announced that Iraq had attempted to purchase enriched uranium from Niger for use in nuclear weapons. The [197]subsequent determination that some intelligence reports of the purchase had relied on forged documents complicated the administration's diplomatic efforts in the United Nations. Meanwhile, massive peace demonstrations took place in several major cities around the world.

[198]Operation Iraqi Freedom

Finally, Bush announced the end of U.S. diplomacy. On March 17 he issued an ultimatum to Ṣaddām, giving him and his immediate family 48 hours to leave Iraq or face removal by force. Bush also indicated that, even if Ṣaddām relinquished power, U.S. military forces would enter the country to search for weapons of mass destruction and to stabilize the new government.

Explosions illuminating the skies of Baghdad during the U.S.-led air bombardment of the city, March 2003.

After Ṣaddām's public refusal to leave and as the 48-hour deadline approached, Bush ordered the invasion of Iraq, called Operation Iraqi Freedom, to begin on March 20 (local time). In the ground phase of the [201]Iraq War, U.S. and British forces quickly overwhelmed the Iraqi army and irregular Iraqi fighters, and by mid-April they had entered [202]Baghdad and all other major Iraqi cities and forced Ṣaddām's regime from power.

In the wake of the invasion, hundreds of sites suspected of producing or housing weapons of mass destruction within Iraq were investigated. As the search continued without success into the following year, Bush's critics accused the administration of having misled the country into war by exaggerating the threat posed by Iraq. In 2004 the Iraq Survey Group, a fact-finding mission [203]comprising American and British experts, concluded that Iraq did not possess weapons of mass destruction or the capacity to produce them at the time of the invasion, though it found evidence that Şaddām had planned to reconstitute programs for producing such weapons once UN sanctions were lifted. In the same year, the bipartisan [204]9-11 Commission (the National Commission on Terrorist Attacks Upon the United States) reported that there was no evidence of a “collaborative operational relationship” between Iraq and al-Qaeda. Şaddām, who went into hiding during the invasion, was captured by U.S. forces in December 2003 and was executed by the new Iraqi government three years later.

Pres. George W. Bush with sailors aboard the USS Abraham Lincoln, May 1, 2003.

Although the Bush administration had planned for a short war, stabilizing the country after the invasion proved difficult. From May 1, when Bush declared an end to major combat in Iraq, to the end of December 2003, more than 200 U.S. soldiers were killed as a result of attacks by Iraqis. During the next four years the number of U.S. [207]casualties increased dramatically, reaching more than 900 in 2007 alone. (The number of Iraqis who died during the invasion and insurgency is uncertain.) Widespread sectarian violence, accompanied by regular and increasingly deadly attacks on military, police, and civilian targets by militias and terrorist organizations, made large parts of the country virtually ungovernable. The increasing numbers of U.S. dead and wounded, the failure to uncover weapons of mass destruction, and the enormous cost to U.S. taxpayers (approximately $10 billion per month through 2007) gradually eroded public support for the war; by 2005 a clear majority of Americans believed that it had been a mistake. By the fifth anniversary of [208]Operation Iraqi Freedom in March 2008, some 4,000 U.S. soldiers had been killed. As the death [209]toll mounted, Bush's public-approval ratings dropped, falling below 30 percent in many polls.

[211]Iraq War: car bomb

While acknowledging that it had underestimated the tenacity of the Iraqi resistance, the Bush administration maintained that part of the blame for the continuing violence lay with [212]Iran, which it accused of supplying weapons and money to Iraqi-based terrorist groups. In his State of the Union address in 2002, Bush had warned that Iran (along with Iraq and North Korea) was part of an “axis of evil” that threatened the world with its support of terrorism and its ambition to acquire [213]nuclear weapons. In 2006–07 the United States joined other members of the Security Council in condemning Iran’s nuclear research program. The administration’s repeated warnings concerning a possible Iranian nuclear weapon led to speculation that Bush was contemplating military action against the country. In December 2007, however, the administration’s suspicions were contradicted by the [214]National Intelligence Estimate, a [215]consensus report of U.S. intelligence agencies, which declared with “high confidence” that in 2003 Iran had abandoned attempts to develop a nuclear weapon.

Foreign aid

In his State of the Union address in January 2003, Bush proposed an ambitious program to address the humanitarian crisis created by the HIV/[216]AIDS pandemic in 15 countries in Africa and the Caribbean. With a budget of $15 billion over a five-year period, the President’s Emergency Plan for AIDS Relief (PEPFAR) aimed to supply life-extending medications to 2 million victims of HIV/AIDS, to prevent 7 million new cases of the disease, and to provide care for 10 million AIDS sufferers and the orphaned children of AIDS victims. The program was widely praised in the United States, even by Bush’s critics, and generated enormous goodwill toward the Bush administration in Africa. Medical professionals and [217]public health officials welcomed the greater availability of retroviral drugs but generally objected to the program’s requirement that one-third of prevention funds be spent on teaching [218]sexual abstinence and marital [219]fidelity.

In January 2004 the Bush administration established the Millennium Challenge Corporation to distribute development aid to poor countries that demonstrated a commitment to [220]democracy, free enterprise, and transparent governance. The agency's innovative approach allowed recipient countries to design and manage their own multiyear programs to reduce poverty and promote [221]economic growth. By 2008 the corporation had approved some $5 billion in grant requests, though relatively little of the money had been dispersed.

The Bush administration's [222]foreign aid programs were designed to serve its declared [223]foreign policy goal of promoting [224]democracy abroad, especially in parts of the world plagued by poverty and war. In eastern Europe, Bush supported expanding the membership of the [225]North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) as a means of securing democracy and stability in war-ravaged or formerly communist countries. During his presidency NATO gained seven new members: Bulgaria, Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania, Romania, Slovakia, and Slovenia.

Domestic affairs

[227]George W. Bush: National Prayer Breakfast

U.S. Pres. George W. Bush (left) and U.S. Rep. Emanuel Cleaver (centre) listening to Francis Collins, director of the National Human Genome Research Institute, address the National Prayer Breakfast, Washington, D.C., 2004.

In December 2001 Bush successfully negotiated with the Democratic-controlled Senate legislation that provided federal funding to religious, or “faith-based,” charities and social services. The measure, he argued, would end long-standing [228]discrimination in federal funding against churches and other religious groups that provided needed social services in poor [229]communities. The bill was passed by the Senate despite objections from many Democratic senators that it violated the constitutional separation of [230]church and state. A White House Office of Faith-Based and [231]Community Initiatives was created in January 2001.

In 2002 the U.S. economy continued to perform poorly, despite having recovered from a recession the previous November. Widespread corporate accounting scandals, some of the largest corporate bankruptcies in U.S. [232]history, and fears over war and terrorism all contributed to consumer uncertainty and a prolonged downturn in the financial markets. Despite the economic turmoil, Bush’s personal popularity enabled the Republicans to regain a majority in the Senate in midterm elections in November 2002 (though the party also lost three state governorships). With both houses of Congress under Republican control, Bush secured passage of a second tax cut of $350 billion in May 2003.

In January 2002 Bush signed into law the [234]No Child Left Behind Act, which introduced significant changes in the curriculum of the country’s public elementary, middle, and high schools and dramatically increased federal regulation of state school systems. Under the law, states were required to administer yearly tests of the reading and mathematics skills of public school students and to demonstrate adequate progress toward raising the scores of all students to a level defined as “proficient” or higher. Teachers were also required to meet higher standards for certification. Schools that failed to meet their goals would be subject to gradually increasing sanctions, eventually including replacement of staff or [235]closure.

In the first years of the program, supporters pointed to its success in increasing the test scores of minority students, who historically had performed at lower levels than white students. Indeed, in the 2000 presidential campaign Bush had touted the proposed law as a remedy for what he called “the soft [236]bigotry of low expectations” faced by the children of minorities. Critics, however, complained that the federal government was not providing enough funding to [237]implement the program’s requirements and that the law had usurped the states’s traditional control of education as provided for in the [238]Constitution. Others objected that the law was actually eroding the quality of education by forcing schools to “teach to the test” while neglecting other parts of the curriculum, such as history, [239]social science, and art.

[240]Medicare

In December 2003 Bush won Congressional approval of the [241]Medicare [242]Modernization Act (MMA), a reform of the federally sponsored [243]health insurance program for elderly Americans. Widely recognized as the most far-reaching overhaul of Medicare to date, the MMA enabled Medicare enrollees to obtain prescription drug coverage from Medicare through private insurance companies, which then received a government subsidy; it also vastly increased the number of private insurance plans through which enrollees could receive medical benefits. Although many members of Congress from both parties criticized the MMA as needlessly complex and expensive (its cost was estimated in January 2004 at $534 billion over 10 years), a bipartisan majority accepted the measure as an imperfect but necessary compromise that would bring a much-needed insurance benefit to senior citizens. Some [244]conservative Republicans, however, rejected the MMA on both fiscal and philosophical grounds, and many Democrats objected to a provision in the plan that prevented Medicare administrators from negotiating with pharmaceutical companies for lower drug prices.

Reelection

In 2004 Bush focused his energies on his campaign for reelection against his Democratic challenger, U.S. Sen. [245]John Kerry. According to opinion polls, the candidates entered the fall elections in a virtual dead heat. Bush's key campaign platform was his conduct of the war on terrorism, which he linked with the war in Iraq. Kerry countered that the Iraq War had been poorly planned and executed and that Bush had neglected domestic priorities. The election was notable for the prominent role played by independent political-action groups in organizing and fund-raising and for the influence of highly partisan [246]blogs as [247]alternative sources of political news. Bush defeated Kerry with a slim majority of the electoral and popular vote, and the Republicans increased their majorities in both the House and the Senate.

[248]Social Security and [249]immigration

The major domestic [250]initiative of Bush's second term was his proposal to replace [251]Social Security (the country's system of government-managed retirement insurance) with private retirement savings accounts. The measure attracted little support, however, mainly because it would have required significant cuts in retirement benefits and heavy borrowing during the transition to the private system.

Bush also proposed a reform of immigration laws that would have allowed most of the estimated 12 million people living in the country illegally to remain temporarily as "guest workers" and to apply for U.S. citizenship after returning to their home countries and paying a fine (though citizenship would not be guaranteed). Although the proposal was supported by some prominent Democrats, including Sen. [252]Edward M. Kennedy of [253]Massachusetts, most other Democrats and many members of Bush's own party remained wary of the idea. Some conservative critics denounced the program as an amnesty that would encourage a new wave of illegal immigration, while liberal opponents warned that it would create a permanent underclass of poor and [254]disenfranchised workers. More than two years of debate produced no reform legislation, though Bush did sign a measure that authorized the construction of a 700-mile (1,127-km) fence along the U.S.-Mexican border.

Environmental and science policy

The Bush administration's environmental policies reflected its [255]conviction that economic development could be accomplished without serious harm to the [256]environment and that limits on development, where necessary, should be achieved through voluntary cooperation by industry rather than regulation by government. In keeping with the recommendations of the energy task force, the administration's proposed Clear Skies Act would have introduced a cap-and-trade system to regulate major sources of [257]air pollution by power plants throughout the country. Although the measure would have reduced emissions of nitrogen oxides, [258]sulfur dioxide, and mercury by 70 percent by 2016, critics charged that the reductions were less than what would be achieved by enforcing the existing [259]Clean Air Act. Largely because of disagreements about whether the Clear Skies Act should regulate emissions of [260]carbon dioxide, a major [261]greenhouse gas, the measure died in the Senate in 2005. Despite this setback, the administration soon [262]implemented the Clean Air Interstate Rule, a regional cap-and-trade system for 28 Eastern states and the District of Columbia.

After the Supreme Court ruled in April 2007 that [263]greenhouse gas emissions by automobiles constitute a form of air pollution under the Clean Air Act, Bush signed energy legislation that imposed increases in automobile fuel economy standards by the year 2020. In December, however, the [264]Environmental Protection Agency blocked a proposal by [265]California and 16 other states to issue regulations that would have required fuel economies greater than those called for in the new federal law.

The Bush administration was frequently accused of politically motivated interference in government scientific research. Critics charged that political appointees at various agencies, many of whom had little or no relevant expertise, altered or suppressed scientific reports that did not promote administration policies, restricted the ability of government experts to speak publicly on certain scientific issues, and limited access to scientific information by policy makers and the public. Numerous complaints by environmental and scientific groups led to Congressional hearings in 2007 on political interference in the work of the Surgeon General of the United States and in research on [266]climate change conducted by the [267]National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA). In most cases the administration claimed that the interventions were an appropriate attempt to ensure scientific objectivity or simply a [268]benign exercise of the authority of political appointees.

[270]George W. Bush: Hurricane Katrina

U.S. Pres. George W. Bush surveying the damage to New Orleans caused by Hurricane Katrina as he heads to Washington, D.C., aboard Air Force One, August 31, 2005.

The continued lack of progress in the Iraq War, a series of corruption scandals involving prominent Republican politicians, and the administration's poor response to the devastation caused by [271]Hurricane Katrina in [272]New Orleans and surrounding areas in August 2005 helped the Democrats win control of both houses of Congress in the midterm elections of November 2006. The new Congress soon began investigations of the [273]NSA spying program undertaken in 2002 and of allegedly improper political influence in the dismissals of several [274]United States attorneys in December 2006. In the latter investigation the testimony of [275]Alberto R. Gonzales, Bush's [276]attorney general since 2005, was viewed with [277]skepticism by both parties and reinforced the impression that the [278]Justice Department under his leadership was not sufficiently independent of the [279]White House. Gonzales resigned in August 2007 and was replaced in November with [280]Michael Mukasey.

The Plame affair

In March 2007 Cheney's chief of staff, [281]I. Lewis ("Scooter") Libby, was convicted on charges of perjury and obstruction of justice in connection with an investigation into the leak of the identity of a covert [282]CIA agent in 2003. The agent, [283]Valerie Plame, was the wife of Joseph C. Wilson, a retired [284]foreign service officer who had traveled to Africa in early 2002 at the request of the CIA to help determine whether Iraq had attempted to purchase enriched uranium from Niger. Wilson reported that there was no evidence of an attempted purchase, and in July 2003 he publicly [285]speculated that the administration had ignored or distorted intelligence reports such as his to justify a military invasion of Iraq. Plame was identified as a CIA agent to journalists, allegedly to punish Wilson and to discredit him by suggesting that his selection for the CIA mission was the result of nepotism. In testimony before a [286]grand jury and agents of the [287]Federal Bureau of Investigation, Libby made false statements about the substance of conversations he had had with journalists concerning Wilson's mission to Niger and about when and how he had learned that Plame worked for the CIA. Libby was not charged with the underlying crime of disclosing the identity of covert intelligence personnel, nor were two other administration officials who had identified Plame to a journalist who subsequently published the information in his column. Bush commuted Libby's 30-month prison sentence in July 2007. Libby was pardoned by Pres. [288]Donald J. Trump in April 2018.

During his second term Bush appointed two [291]Supreme Court justices: [292]John G. Roberts, Jr. (confirmed as chief justice in 2005), and [293]Samuel A. Alito, Jr. (confirmed in 2006). The appointments increased to four the number of solidly conservative [294]justices on the nine-member Supreme Court.

[296]George W. Bush speaking on the economy

As Bush entered the final year of his presidency in 2008, the country faced enormous challenges. Although [297]al-Qaeda had been subdued, it had not been destroyed. The United States and its allies continued to fight skirmishes with terrorists and their [298]Taliban supporters in [299]Afghanistan, and the insurgency in Iraq continued to claim U.S. casualties. The surpluses in the federal budget in 2000 and 2001 were a distant memory, as the combined effects of military spending, tax cuts, and slow economic growth produced a series of enormous budget [300]deficits starting in 2003. Later in 2008 the economy was threatened by a severe credit crisis, leading Congress to enact a controversial Bush administration plan to rescue the financial industry with up to $700 billion in government funds (see [301]Emergency Economic Stabilization Act of 2008). Despite Bush's 2000 campaign promise to be "a uniter, not a divider," the country remained politically polarized to an extent not seen since the [302]Vietnam War. While Bush's critics faulted him for these problems and many others, his supporters vigorously defended him as a strong leader who had guided the country through one of the most dangerous periods in its history.

In 2014 he issued 41: A Portrait of My Father, a [322]biography of the elder Bush. 1.1.12 Supreme Court Allows the Invasion to Continue (2024-01-25 11:09)

By a vote of 5-4, with two conservative justices joining the liberals, the Supreme Court has ruled that federal agents can cut razor wire installed along the Texas-Mexico border while a lawsuit over the wire continues. The Border Patrol Union and its agents who have spoken to reporters favor the razor wire installation because it is working in that section of the state in keeping migrants, criminals, and fentanyl out, but that apparently doesn't matter to the court.

While the emergency appeal of a lower court ruling upholding the action by Texas did not require an explanation for their votes, it likely is because the majority felt the Constitution grants power to the federal government over individual states when it comes to border control. The obvious question, which the court did not address: why is the federal government not enforcing immigration laws which migrants are breaking to enter the country?

Suppose a Mexican army - no, forget an army - suppose a ragtag bunch of drug dealers decided to invade Texas, the governor acted to stop them - including installing more razor wire - and the Biden administration did nothing to stop them? Would the court be OK with that? The effect is the same as if an army of any kind was crossing the border.

How many more murders, rapes and drug deaths are to be tolerated before the administration begins to enforce laws passed by Congress and signed by presidents of both parties? If this is not a violation of Biden's Oath of Office, what would qualify?

A statement from White House spokesperson Angelo Fernandez Hernandez is laughable: "Texas' political stunts, like placing razor wire near the border, simply makes it harder and more dangerous for frontline personnel to do their jobs." Except, as anyone can plainly see from watching pictures of tens of thousands of migrants streaming across the border, they are not doing their jobs because the Biden administration won't let them.

Reco

Even President Biden recently stated the obvious when he said after months of denials by himself and his Homeland Security Secretary Alejandro Mayorkas that the border is not secure. If his previous statements weren't lies, we need a new definition of the word.

Texas Republican Governor Greg Abbott said in response to the court ruling that the razor wire is an "effective deterrent" to the illegal crossings and "I will continue to defend Texas' constitutional authority to secure the border." Local police and the Department of Public Safety officers have been arresting migrants on trespassing charges, but ultimately they will be turned over to Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) which is likely to continue releasing them into the country. From there they will likely head to already overcrowded cities seeking low-paying jobs, taking playground and other spaces from school children and in the case of New York, depositing human waste in parks, in the streets and in some cases in cups they leave on the doorsteps of local residents.

That this will - and already is - a major issue in this year's presidential race is clear. According to a new Harvard CAPS-Harris poll" More voters pointed to immigration than to inflation as a top policy concern. The survey found that 35 percent of respondents listed immigration as their paramount concern among an array of issues, with inflation in a close second, named by 32 percent of respondents."

Beware Democrats. You are on the wrong side of this issue.

1.1.13 Post-Apocalypse America (2024-01-25 11:12)

Having lost a few (lots of) steak dinner bets on whether Trump would be the nominee (I said no), and nursing my bitter disappointment that it won't be Florida's miracle governor, Ron DeSantis, I asked one of the steak dinner champions his secret method.

Me: How did you know??? How could you possibly have imagined that GOP voters would be that stupid? They did the right thing in 2020 – red wave everywhere, except the presidential election. They elected Reagan over Bush and Donald Trump over 17 open-borders Republicans in 2016. How can they have suddenly become retarded???

I won't be writing about the presidential election going forward, but do you think it would seem odd this week if I started writing cooking columns?

Him: The reason I knew is that I spent so much time mingling with the fringe in my youth. I can sense when the gangrene takes hold, when the loudest and craziest chase out the sanest while, at the same time, the "liddle peeple," pure of heart but (as you said) easily duped, decide to sell the cow for the magic beans. It's tragic; this whole year's gonna be tragic. Though, if you'll forgive the temerity, I'm not certain you'll be able to stick to "I won't be writing about the presidential election going forward." You're not gonna be able to suffer fools for 11 months.

Damn him, he's right about that, too.

First, what on Earth happened to DeSantis?

1. His 20-point victory in 2022, when Republicans were wiped out in the rest of the country, made DeSantis disinclined to consider the advice of people who were just trying to help him.

2. My case in chief: The six-week abortion limit, or as I call it, the "Republican Assisted Suicide Act." By then, voters in five states, including two Trump won (Kentucky and Kansas) and one state he almost won (Michigan), had already overwhelmingly rejected the tiniest restriction on abortion. But why should DeSantis listen to anyone else? Twenty points, baby!

3. The white boots.

4. "Mamas for DeSantis." Did anybody workshop that? In areas of Appalachia written about so eloquently by J.D. Vance, "mamas" would probably work. In the rest of the country, it's total cringe.

5. Jeff Roe. When megadonors say they'll never give a dime to any super PAC that employs "strategist" Roe, at least give it some thought. If your only reason for keeping him is that he won Iowa for Ted Cruz in 2016, it's important to remember Cruz lost the nomination that year.

6. The Children. I, too, like to generalize wildly from my own experience, but DeSantis was running as if the entire voting population consisted of people with kids under the age of 18. In fact, that's only about [1]20 % of voters. (He also overestimates the intelligence of the average voter, but I'm not dinging him for that because I do, too - obviously.)

I hate to kick a guy when he's down, especially when he gave such a terrific withdrawal speech, including this "endorsement" of Trump:

"Trump is superior to the current incumbent, Joe Biden. ... I signed a pledge to support the Republican nominee, and I will honor that pledge. ... We can't go back to the old Republican guard of yesteryear - a repackaged form of warmed-over corporatism - that Nikki Haley represents."

Oh, this reminds me, there's also Point 7.

7. The god-awful phrase, No more pale pastels. We need bold colors. It sounds like Jeb-exclamation-point's "I'm a [2]disruptor!" - the sort of meaningless pabulum that could be written only by a Republican political consultant.

Advertisement

But there it was, popping up in DeSantis' withdrawal [3]speech like the shark in "Jaws." The consultant who wrote that "bold colors" idiocy should be fired immediately, rendered unemployable as a speechwriter ever again (unless any Democrats want him), and absolutely blacklisted from the 2028 DeSantis campaign.

And I hope there will be a 2028 campaign, which is why I'm providing these helpful pointers.

Second, a final note on Nikki Haley, since she's not dead yet – not even deported.

A typical feminist, Haley demands to be treated like a disabled child whenever anyone criticizes her, while constantly boasting about how rough and tough she is.

She threw repeated tantrums at the GOP debates, one time calling Vivek Ramaswamy "scum" – a first for a Republican presidential contest! – and pouted her way through a debate with DeSantis, ending with her petulant refusal to face him ever again.

Another time, Haley acted as if it were rank sexism for Ramaswamy to call her "Dick Cheney in heels"?

Oh, please. That's a pretty common way to compare one person to another:

George Bush is Bluto with a rich father.

Jon Tester is Chuck Schumer with a buzz cut.

Joe Biden is a vegetable with hair transplants.

But apparently, the only person who can refer to Haley's heels is her – when she's telling us what a badass she is. As she's said a million times: "I don't put up with bullies, and when you kick back, it hurts them more if you're wearing heels."

Advertisement

She seems to have kicked herself in the head one too many times with those heels. Here's Haley's explanation of Hamas' Oct. 7 attack on Israel, delivered at a CNN townhall on Jan. 4, 2024:

"I told you about that brutality on Oct. 7 in Israel. Right? Oct. 7 is Putin's [4]birthday. Who is the happiest man in the world right now? Putin."

This is the pinhead the donors are trying to foist on us, showering Haley with campaign donations to keep her in the race against Trump. It's like choosing between water torture and the rack. Either way, Democrats got the Republican nominee they [5]wanted.

1.1.14 Davos, Dictators and the Real 'Threats to Our Democracy' (2024-01-25 11:19)

Republican presidential candidate (and now presumptive nominee) Donald Trump won the Iowa caucus and the New Hampshire primary in the past week, breaking records in both contests. In Iowa, Trump received an unprecedented 51 % of votes cast – more than 30 percentage points ahead of the runner-up, Florida Gov. Ron DeSantis (who has since left the race and endorsed Trump). In New Hampshire, Trump received a record 175,000-plus votes and beat former South Carolina Gov. Nikki Haley by 12-plus percentage points.

Predictably, the American Left is freaking out. For months, their talking heads have been warning that Trump's election will usher in a literal dictatorship. As I wrote last week, the baseless accusations are cast at both Trump and the Americans supporting him. Democrats are ratcheting up this polarizing tactic, which they've used for years. In 2008, Barack Obama characterized Americans who opposed his candidacy for president as "bitter" people "clinging" to their "guns or religion or antipathy to people who aren't like them." During her 2016 presidential campaign, Hillary Clinton declared Trump supporters to be a "basket of deplorables." In 2024, Democrats are accusing Trump voters of wanting authoritarianism and fascism.

This latest steaming pile of propaganda is inexcusably ignorant. Or perhaps it is yet another instance of projection.

The Americans who plan to vote for Trump are not supporting him because they prefer his dictatorial inclinations to the other guys but because they want someone in charge of the executive branch who does not see the government's role as controlling every aspect of their lives.

This stands in stark contrast to the Democratic Party's efforts to regulate entire industries out of existence or the mad, anti-liberty, anti-human fever dreams of the globalists on display at the annual meeting of the World Economic Forum in Davos, Switzerland.

In 2014, WEF speaker Yuval Harari informed a TEDx event audience that human rights don't exist; they are "like heaven or God – just a fictional story we've invented and spread around." At the 2022 WEF meeting, Alibaba President J. Michael Evans touted a developing "individual carbon footprint tracker" that would monitor where you travel, how you travel, what you eat, and what you read on the internet. And the WEF's 2016 predictions for 2030 – including having to pay fines for emitting carbon dioxide (does that include exhaling?), restrictions on meat consumption, and the end of private property ("You'll own nothing and you'll be happy") – are infamous.

Americans who support Trump understand that this country enjoys the prosperity it does, not because the "right" people control everything, but because no one does.

The more control one person or a small cadre of people have – politically or economically – the greater the risks to everyone.

Consider: If one company's leadership makes a catastrophically bad decision, that company may fail. But in a free, entrepreneurially capitalist country, other companies will be available to provide the goods and services that the failed company can no longer produce. A relative few bear the risk of error.

However, if those making a catastrophically wrong decision are in control of an entire industry or an entire economy, then the whole system can collapse, with devastating consequences for millions – tens of millions – of people.

History is replete with examples. The former Soviet Union collapsed politically because its centrally planned economy suffered disaster after disaster. Government takeover of the Venezuelan economy destroyed that once-prosperous country, plunging its residents into abject poverty. When the president of Sri Lanka banned nitrogen-based fertilizer, the country's agricultural sector collapsed, as did its exports, leaving Sri Lankans without adequate food, fuel or oil to heat their homes.

Here in the United States, we have witnessed the nasty consequences of plenty of government policy failures: the health risks of COVID-19 shots, the spectacular failure of wind power in Texas during the 2021 winter storm, the inability of electric vehicles to start in the bitter temperatures across the northern U.S. two weeks ago; California's water shortages and the struggling capacity of its electrical grid.

Egotists like WEF founder Klaus Schwab and his God-complex, like-minded cronies across the globe never consider that they could be wrong about anything.

But they are always wrong about something.

Trump voters do not want a dictator; they do not want an imperial presidency at all.

They want a president who understands that free and independent businesses operating in a minimally regulated environment are the lifeblood of American prosperity. They recognize that an executive branch that refuses to enforce federal laws is failing in its primary constitutional obligations to the American public. They understand that a justice system that picks and chooses whom to prosecute based on their race, ethnicity, or political belief is no justice at all. They are tired of inflation caused by misguided energy, trade, and environmental policies. They are tired of our veterans suffering and dying with their physical and mental health needs unmet; tired of homeless people living in the streets; tired of open borders, of tens of thousands of Americans dying of fentanyl overdoses, and tired of unpunished crime, all while hundreds of billions of our hard-earned tax dollars get laundered through foreign wars into the pockets of multinational defense contractors, corruptocrat politicians and warmongering toadies who never saw a foreign conflict they didn't want to exploit.

These Americans reject the globalist overlords pushing their anti-human philosophies down everyone's throats, and they fear being enslaved by governments infiltrated by mindless drones in thrall to the latest apocalyptic power grab.

The press and the Left can hand-wave and hyperventilate all they want about "threats to our democracy." But American voters see where the threats of authoritarianism truly lie, and it isn't with Donald Trump.

1.1.15 Donald Trump biography (2024-01-25 11:31)

Donald Trump (born June 14, 1946, [1]New York, New York, U.S.) 45th [2]president of the United States (2017–21). Trump was a real estate developer and businessman who owned, managed, or licensed his name to [3]hotels, [4]casinos, golf courses, resorts, and residential properties in the [5]New York City area and around the world. From the 1980s Trump also lent his name to scores of retail ventures—including branded lines of clothing, cologne, food, and [6]furniture—and to Trump University, which offered seminars in real estate education from 2005 to 2010. In the early 21st century his private [7]conglomerate, the [8]Trump Organization, [9]comprised some 500 companies involved in a wide range of businesses, including hotels and resorts, residential properties, merchandise, and entertainment and television. Trump was the third [10]president in U.S. history (after [11]Andrew Johnson in 1868 and [12]Bill Clinton in 1998) to be [13]impeached by the U.S. [14]House of Representatives and the only president to be impeached twice—once (in 2019) for abuse of power and obstruction of Congress in connection with the [15]Ukraine scandal and once (in 2021) for [16]“incitement of insurrection” in connection with the storming of the [17]United States Capitol by a violent mob of Trump supporters as [18]Congress met in joint session to ceremonially count [19]electoral college votes from the [20]2020 presidential election. Both of Trump’s impeachments ended in his acquittal by the [21]U.S. Senate. Trump lost the 2020 election to former vice president [22]Joe Biden by 306 electoral votes to 232; he lost the popular vote by more than seven million votes.

In March 2023 Trump was [23]indicted by a Manhattan [24]grand jury on state criminal charges related to a hush-money payment made in 2016 to adult-film star Stormy Daniels, who claimed to have had an affair with Trump in 2006 (see below Postpresidential activities). The [25]indictment marked the first time in U.S. history that a former president was charged with a crime. In June 2023 Trump was indicted by a grand jury in Miami on federal criminal charges related to his removal of classified documents from the [26]White House upon leaving office and his retention of them at [27]Mar-a-Lago, his resort and residence in [28]Palm Beach, Florida. The [29]indictment marked the first time in U.S. history that a former president was charged with a federal crime. In August 2023 Trump was indicted by a grand jury in Washington, D.C., on federal criminal charges related to his efforts to overturn the 2020 presidential election. The indictment charged him with obstruction of an official proceeding and three counts of conspiracy—conspiracy to obstruct an official proceeding, to defraud the [30]United States, and to impede the free exercise of the [31]right to vote and to have one’s vote counted. Later that month, Trump and 18 of his associates were indicted by a grand jury in Fulton county, Georgia, on criminal charges related to Trump’s efforts to reverse Biden’s electoral victory in the state.

Early life and business career

Donald Trump speaking in front of Trump Tower, New York City, August 2008.

Trump was the fourth of five children of Frederick (Fred) Christ Trump, a successful real estate developer, and Mary MacLeod. Donald's eldest sister, Maryanne Trump Barry, eventually served as a U.S. [34]district court judge (1983-99) and later as a judge on the [35]U.S. Court of Appeals for the Third [36]Circuit until her retirement in 2011. His elder brother, Frederick, Jr. (Freddy), worked briefly for his father's business before becoming an airline pilot in the 1960s. Freddy's [37]alcoholism led to his early death in 1981, at the age of 43.

Beginning in the late 1920s, Fred Trump built hundreds of single-family houses and row houses in the [38]Queens and [39]Brooklyn boroughs of New York City, and from the late 1940s he built thousands of apartment units, mostly in Brooklyn, using federal loan guarantees designed to stimulate the construction of [40]affordable housing. During [41]World War II he also built federally backed housing for naval personnel and shipyard workers in [42]Virginia and [43]Pennsylvania. In 1954 Fred was investigated by the Senate Banking Committee for allegedly abusing the loan-guarantee program by deliberately overestimating the costs of his construction projects to secure larger loans from [44]commercial banks, enabling him to keep the difference between the loan amounts and his actual construction costs. In [45]testimony before the Senate committee in 1954, Fred admitted that he had built the Beach Haven apartment complex in Brooklyn for $3.7 million less than the amount of his government-insured loan. Although he was not charged with any crime, he was thereafter unable to obtain federal loan guarantees. A decade later a New York state investigation found that Fred had used his profit on a state-insured construction loan to build a [46]shopping centre that was entirely his own property. He eventually returned $1.2 million to the state but was thereafter unable to obtain state loan guarantees for residential projects in the [47]Coney Island area of Brooklyn.

[49]key events in the life of Donald Trump

Key events in the life of U.S. Pres. Donald Trump.

Donald Trump attended New York Military Academy (1959–64), a private boarding school; [50]Fordham University in the [51]Bronx (1964–66); and the [52]University of Pennsylvania’s Wharton School of Finance and Commerce (1966–68), where he graduated with a [53]bachelor’s degree in [54]economics. In 1968, during the [55]Vietnam War, he secured a [56]diagnosis of bone spurs, which qualified him for a medical exemption from the [57]military draft (he had earlier received four draft deferments for education). Upon his graduation Trump began working full-time for his father’s business, helping to manage its holdings of rental housing, then estimated at between 10,000 and 22,000 units. In 1974 he became president of a conglomeration of Trump-owned corporations and partnerships, which he later named the Trump Organization.

During the 1960s and early 1970s, Trump-owned housing developments in New York City, [58]Cincinnati, [59]Ohio, and [60]Norfolk, [61]Virginia, were the target of several complaints of racial [62]discrimination against [63]African Americans and other minority groups. In 1973 Fred and Donald Trump, along with their company, were sued by the [64]U.S. Justice Department for allegedly violating the [65]Fair Housing Act (1968) in the operation of 39 apartment buildings in New York City. The Trumps initially countersued the [66]Justice Department for $100 million, alleging harm to their reputations. The suit was settled two years later under an agreement that did not require the Trumps to admit guilt.

In the late 1970s and the 1980s, Donald Trump greatly expanded his father's business by investing in luxury hotels and residential properties and by shifting its geographic focus to [68]Manhattan and later to [69]Atlantic City, [70]New Jersey. In doing so, he relied heavily on loans, gifts, and other financial assistance from his father, as well as on his father's political connections in New York City. In 1976 he purchased the decrepit Commodore Hotel near [71]Grand Central Station under a complex profit-sharing agreement with the city that included a 40-year [72]property tax abatement, the first such tax break granted to a commercial property in New York City. Relying on a construction loan guaranteed by his father and the Hyatt Corporation, which became a partner in the project, Trump refurbished the building and reopened it in 1980 as the 1,400-room Grand Hyatt Hotel. In 1983 he opened [73]Trump Tower, an office, retail, and residential complex constructed in partnership with the Equitable Life [74]Assurance Company. The 58-story building on 56th Street and Fifth Avenue eventually contained Trump's Manhattan residence and the headquarters of the Trump Organization. Other Manhattan properties developed by Trump during the 1980s included the Trump Plaza residential cooperative (1984), the Trump Parc luxury [75]condominium complex (1986), and the 19-story Plaza Hotel (1988), a historic landmark for which Trump paid more than $400 million.

properties eventually included Harrah's at Trump Plaza (1984, later renamed Trump Plaza), Trump's Castle Casino Resort (1985), and the Trump Taj Mahal (1990), then the largest casino in the world. During that period Trump also purchased the New Jersey Generals, a team in the short-lived U.S. Football League; [77]Mar-a-Lago, a 118-room mansion in [78]Palm Beach, Florida, built in the 1920s by the cereal heiress Marjorie Merriweather Post; a 282-foot [79]yacht, then the world's second largest, which he named the Trump Princess; and an East Coast air-shuttle service, which he called Trump Shuttle.

In 1977 Trump married Ivana Zelníčková Winklmayr, a Czech model, with whom he had three children—[80]Donald, Jr., [81]Ivanka, and Eric—before the couple divorced in 1992. Their married life, as well as Trump's business affairs, were a [82]staple of the [83]tabloid press in New York City during the 1980s. Trump married the American actress Marla Maples after she gave birth to Trump's fourth child, Tiffany, in 1993. Their marriage ended in divorce in 1999. In 2005 Trump married the Slovene model Melania Knauss, and their son, Barron, was born the following year. [84]Melania Trump became only the second foreign-born [85]first lady of the United States upon Trump's inauguration as president in 2017.

When the U.S. economy fell into [86]recession in 1990, many of Trump's businesses suffered, and he soon had trouble making payments on his approximately $5 billion debt, some $900 million of which he had personally guaranteed. Under a restructuring agreement with several banks, Trump was forced to [87]surrender his airline, which was taken over by [88]US Airways in 1992; to sell the Trump Princess; to take out second or third mortgages on nearly all of his properties and to reduce his ownership stakes in them; and to commit himself to living on a personal budget of $450,000 a year. Despite those measures, the Trump Taj Mahal declared [89]bankruptcy in 1991, and two other casinos owned by Trump, as well as his Plaza Hotel in New York City, went bankrupt in 1992. Following those setbacks, most major banks refused to do any further business with him. Estimates of Trump's net [90]worth during this period ranged from $1.7 billion to minus $900 million.

Trump's fortunes rebounded with the stronger economy of the later 1990s and with the decision of the [91]Frankfurt-based [92]Deutsche Bank AG to establish a presence in the U.S. commercial real estate market. Deutsche Bank extended hundreds of millions of dollars in credit to Trump in the late 1990s and the 2000s for projects including Trump World Tower (2001) in New York and [93]Trump International Hotel and Tower (2009) in [94]Chicago. In the early 1990s Trump had floated a plan to his creditors to convert his Mar-a-Lago estate into a luxury housing development consisting of several smaller mansions, but local opposition led him instead to turn it into a private club, which was opened in 1995. In 1996 Trump partnered with the [95]NBC television network to purchase the Miss Universe Organization, which produced the Miss Universe, Miss USA, and Miss Teen USA beauty pageants. Trump's casino businesses continued to struggle, however: in 2004 his company Trump Hotels & Casino Resorts filed for bankruptcy after several of its properties accumulated unmanageable debt, and the same company, renamed Trump Entertainment Resorts, went bankrupt again in 2009.

Beginning in the mid-2000s Trump enjoyed an enormous financial windfall from the success of [96]The Apprentice, a [97]reality television series in which he starred that directly earned him nearly $200 million over a 16-year period. The [98]Emmy-nominated show, in each episode of which Trump “fired” one or more contestants competing for a lucrative one-year contract as a Trump employee, further [99]enhanced his reputation as a shrewd businessman and self-made billionaire. In 2008 the show was revamped as [100]The Celebrity Apprentice, which featured news makers and entertainers as contestants.

Trump marketed his name as a brand in numerous other business ventures including Trump Financial, a [101]mortgage company, and the Trump [102]Entrepreneur [103]Initiative (formerly Trump University), an online education company focusing on real estate [104]investment and entrepreneurialism. The latter firm, which ceased operating in 2011, was the target of [105]class-action lawsuits by former students and a separate action by the [106]attorney general of New York state, alleging [107]fraud. After initially denying the allegations, Trump settled the lawsuits for $25 million in November 2016. In 2019, more than two years into his presidency, Trump agreed to pay $2 million in damages and to admit guilt to settle another lawsuit by the attorney general of New York that had accused him of illegally using [108]assets from his charity, the Trump Foundation, to fund his 2016 presidential campaign. As part of the settlement, the Trump Foundation was dissolved.

In 2018 The New York Times published a lengthy investigative report that documented how Fred Trump had regularly transferred vast sums of money, ultimately amounting to hundreds of millions of dollars, to his children by means of strategies that involved tax, securities, and real estate fraud, as well as by legal means. According to the report, Donald was the main beneficiary of the transfers, having received the equivalent (in 2018 dollars) of $413 million by the early 2000s. According to a later report by the Times, based on [109]data from tax returns filed by Trump during an 18-year period starting in 2000, Trump paid no federal taxes in 11 years and only $750 in each of two years, 2016 and 2017. Trump was able to reduce his tax obligations to levels significantly below the average for the wealthiest Americans by claiming massive losses on many of his businesses; by deducting as business expenses costs associated with his residences and his personal aircraft; and by receiving, on the basis of business losses, a tentative refund from the [110]IRS (Internal Revenue Service) of nearly $73 million, which more than covered the federal taxes Trump had paid on income he received from The Apprentice in 2005–08. The refund became the subject of an IRS audit and a legally [111]mandated review by the congressional Joint Committee on Taxation.

Trump was credited as coauthor of a number of books on entrepreneurship and his business career, including Trump: The Art of the Deal (1987), Trump: The Art of the Comeback (1997), Why We Want You to Be Rich (2006), Trump 101: The Way to Success (2006), and Trump Never Give Up: How I Turned My Biggest Challenges into Success (2008).

Presidential election of 2016 of Donald Trump

From the 1980s Trump periodically mused in public about running for [112]president, but those moments were widely dismissed in the press as publicity stunts. In 1999 he switched his voter registration from [113]Republican to the [114]Reform Party and established a presidential exploratory committee. Though he ultimately declined to run in 2000, he published a book that year, The America We Deserve, in which he set forth his socially liberal and economically [115]conservative political views. Trump later rejoined the Republican Party, and he maintained a high public profile during the [116]2012 presidential election. Although he did not run for office at that time, he gained much attention for repeatedly and falsely claiming that Democratic Pres. [117]Barack Obama was not a natural-born U.S. citizen.

In June 2015 Trump announced that he would be a candidate in the [118]U.S. presidential election of 2016. Pledging to “make [119]America great again,” a slogan advertised widely on the red hats that he and his supporters wore at his rallies—although hated by Trump’s detractors, the red hats were one of the most successful examples of colour [120]branding in marketing history—he promised to create millions of new jobs; to punish American companies that exported jobs overseas; to [121]repeal Obama’s signature legislative achievement, the [122]Affordable Care Act (ACA); to revive the U.S. [123]coal industry; to drastically reduce the influence of lobbyists in Washington, D.C. (“drain the swamp”); to withdraw the United States from the 2015 [124]Paris Agreement on [125]climate change; to impose [126]tariffs on countries that allegedly engaged in trade practices that were unfair to the United States; to construct a wall along the U.S.-Mexico border to prevent [127]illegal immigration from Latin America; and to ban [128]immigration by [129]Muslims. Trump mused about those and other issues in Crippled America: How to Make America Great Again (2015).

On the campaign trail, Trump quickly established himself as a political outsider, a common strategy among nonincumbent candidates at all levels. In Trump's case the stance proved popular with conservative voters—especially those in the [134]Tea Party movement—and he frequently topped [135]opinion polls, besting established Republican politicians. However, his campaign was often mired in controversy, much of it of his own making. In speeches and especially via [136]Twitter, a social medium he had used frequently since 2009, Trump regularly made inflammatory remarks, including racist and sexist slurs and insults. Other public comments by Trump, especially those directed at his rivals or detractors in the Republican establishment, were widely criticized for their belligerence, their bullying tone, and their [137]indulgence in juvenile name-calling. Trump's initial refusal to condemn the [138]Ku Klux Klan after a former Klansman [139]endorsed him also drew sharp [140]criticism, as did his failure to [141]repudiate racist elements among his supporters, including [142]white supremacists and [143]neo-Nazis. While Trump's comments worried the Republican establishment, his supporters were pleased by his combativeness and his apparent willingness to say whatever came into his mind, a sign of honesty and courage in their estimation.

After a loss in the [144]Iowa caucuses to open up the [145]primary season in February 2016, Trump rebounded by winning the next three contests, and he extended his lead with a strong showing on Super Tuesday—when primaries and caucuses were held in 11 states—in early March. After a landslide victory in the [146]Indiana primary in May, Trump became the presumptive Republican nominee as his last two opponents, [147]Ted Cruz and [148]John Kasich, dropped out of the race.

In July 2016 Trump announced that Indiana Gov. [151]Mike Pence would be his vice presidential running mate. At the [152]Republican National Convention the following week, Trump was officially named the party's nominee. There he and other speakers harshly criticized the presumptive Democratic nominee, former secretary of state [153]Hillary Clinton, blaming her for the 2012 attack on the U.S. consulate in [154]Benghazi, [155]Libya, and for allegedly having mishandled classified [156]State Department e-mails by using a private e-mail server. Earlier in July the [157]FBI (Federal Bureau of Investigation) announced that an investigation of Clinton's use of e-mail as secretary of state had determined that her actions had been "extremely careless" but not criminal. (A 2019 report by the U.S. State Department, concluding a yearslong investigation, found "no persuasive evidence of systemic, deliberate mishandling of classified information" by Clinton.) Trump continued his [158]criticisms of Clinton in the ensuing weeks, routinely referring to her as "Crooked Hillary" and repeatedly vowing to put her in jail if he were elected. Trump's threat to jail his political opponent was unprecedented in modern U.S. political history and was not founded in any [159]constitutional power that a U.S. president would have.

Despite having pledged in 2015 that he would release his tax returns, as every presidential nominee of a major party had done since the 1970s, Trump later refused to do so, explaining that he was under routine audit by the IRS—though there was no legal bar to releasing his returns under audit, as Pres. [160]Richard Nixon had done in 1973. In January 2017, soon after Trump's inauguration as president, a senior [161]White House official announced that Trump had no intention of releasing his returns. Trump's tax returns and other financial information later became a focus of investigations by the House of Representatives, the district attorney for [162]Manhattan, and the [163]attorney general of [164]New York into [165]alleged criminal activity by Trump and his associates (see below [166]Russia investigation).

In late July, on the eve of the [167]Democratic National Convention, thousands of internal e-mails of the Democratic National Committee were publicly released by the [168]Web site [169]WikiLeaks in an apparent effort to damage the Clinton campaign. Reacting to widespread suspicion that the e-mails had been stolen by Russian [170]hackers, Trump publicly encouraged the Russians to hack Clinton's private e-mail server to find thousands of e-mails that he claimed had been illegally deleted. A later investigation by the office of [171]Robert Mueller, the special [172]counsel appointed in 2017 to investigate Russian interference in the 2016 presidential election (see below [173]Russia investigation), determined that Russian hackers first attempted to break into the personal e-mail servers of Clinton campaign officials on the same day, only hours after Trump issued his invitation.

Following the Democratic convention, Trump continued to make controversial and apparently [174]impromptu comments via Twitter and in other forums that embarrassed the Republican establishment and seriously disrupted his campaign. In October 2016 a hot-mic video from 2005 surfaced in which he told an entertainment reporter in vulgar language that he had tried to seduce a married woman and that "when you're a star...you can do anything," including grabbing women by the genitals. Although Trump dismissed the conversation as "locker room talk," eventually more than two dozen women claimed that they had been [175]sexually harassed or assaulted by Trump in the past (some of the allegations were made after Trump became president). During the campaign Trump and his legal representatives generally denied the allegations and asserted that all the women were lying; they also noted that [176]Bill Clinton had previously been accused of [177]sexual harassment and assault. In part because of the video, Trump's support among women voters—already low—continued to wane, and some Republicans began to withdraw their endorsements.

Approximately one hour after the release of the Trump video, [180]WikiLeaks published a trove of e-mails that later investigations determined had been stolen by Russian hackers from the account of [181]John Podesta, Clinton's campaign manager. On the same day, the U.S. intelligence [182]community publicly announced its [183]assessment that the Russian government had directed efforts by hackers to steal and release sensitive [184]Democratic Party e-mails and other information in order to [185]bolster the Trump campaign and to weaken public confidence in U.S. democratic institutions, including the news media. In response, Trump attacked the competence and motives of U.S. intelligence agencies and insisted that no one really knew who might have been behind the hacking. A secret [186]CIA report to [187]Congress in December and a separate report ordered by Obama and released in January 2017 also concluded that the Russians had interfered in the election, including through the theft and publication of Democratic Party e-mails and through a vast public influence campaign that had used fake [188]social media accounts to spread disinformation and create [189]discord among Americans.

Despite his ongoing efforts to portray Clinton as “crooked” and an “insider,” Trump trailed her in almost all polls. As election day neared, he repeatedly claimed that the election was “rigged” and that the press was treating him unfairly by reporting “fake news,” a term he used frequently to [190]disparage news reports containing negative information about him. He received no endorsements from major newspapers. During the third and final presidential debate, in October, he made headlines when he refused to say that he would accept the election results.

Eight days after that debate, the Trump campaign received a boost when FBI director [191]James Comey notified Congress that the bureau was reviewing a trove of e-mails from an unrelated case that appeared to be relevant to its earlier investigation of Clinton. Trump seized on the announcement as [192]vindication of his charge that Clinton was crooked. Six days later Comey announced that the new e-mails contained no evidence of criminal activity. Notwithstanding the damage that Comey’s revelation had done to her campaign, Clinton retained a slim lead over Trump in polls of swing states (those considered to be winnable by either candidate) on the eve of election day, and most pundits and political analysts remained confident that she would win. When voting proceeded on November 8, 2016, however, Trump bested Clinton in a chain of critical [193]Rust Belt states, and he was elected president. Although Trump won the electoral college vote by 304 to 227, and thereby the presidency, he lost the nationwide popular vote by more than 2.8 million votes. After the election, Trump repeatedly claimed, without evidence, that three to five million people had voted for Clinton illegally. Trump took the oath of office on January 20, 2017.

Trump’s unexpected victory prompted much discussion in the press regarding the reliability of polls and the strategic mistakes of the Clinton campaign. Most analysts agreed that Clinton had taken for granted some of her core [194]constituencies (including women and minorities) and that Trump had effectively capitalized upon the economic anxieties and racial [195]prejudices of some working-class whites, particularly men.

The official presidential portrait of Donald Trump.

Almost immediately upon taking office, Trump began issuing a series of [200]executive orders designed to fulfill some of his campaign promises and to project an image of swift, decisive action. His first order, signed on his first day as [201]president, directed that all “unwarranted economic and regulatory burdens” imposed by the ACA should be minimized pending the “prompt repeal” of that law. Five days later he directed the secretary of the [202]Department of Homeland Security to begin planning for the construction of a wall along the [203]country’s southern border. An executive order on [204]ethics imposed a five-year ban on “[205]lobbying activities” by former [206]executive branch employees but weakened or removed some lobbying restrictions imposed by the Obama administration.

Immigration

One of Trump’s most controversial early executive orders, issued on January 27, [207]implemented his promised “Muslim ban,” which temporarily suspended [208]immigration to the [209]United States from seven [210]Muslim-majority countries in the interest of national security. The travel ban, as it came to be known, was immediately challenged in court on statutory and [211]constitutional grounds (i.e., for allegedly violating anti-[212]discrimination and other provisions of the U.S. Immigration and Nationality Act and for being inconsistent with the [213]due-process and [214]establishment-of-religion clauses of the [215]Constitution). The ban also provoked spontaneous demonstrations at major [216]airports in the United States in support of persons with valid visas who were prevented from boarding flights to the U.S. or who were detained upon arrival and forced to return to their originating countries. In February a district court in Washington state issued a nationwide temporary restraining order enjoining enforcement of the travel ban, which the Court of Appeals for the Ninth [217]Circuit declined to stay.

Foreseeing eventual defeat in the courts, Trump in March issued a second executive order, designed to avoid the constitutional pitfalls of the first, which it superseded. The second order also dropped [218]Iraq from the list of targeted countries and narrowed the categories of persons whose travel would be affected. Nevertheless, district courts in [219]Hawaii and [220]Maryland issued preliminary [221]injunctions blocking enforcement of the revised travel ban, which were largely upheld in May and June by the Fourth and Ninth Circuit Courts of Appeal, respectively. After agreeing in June to hear the consolidated cases during its October 2017 term, the [222]U.S. Supreme Court significantly narrowed the [223]injunctions, allowing the travel ban to be enforced against “foreign nationals who lack any bona fide relationship with a person or entity in the United States.”

In September Trump issued a third version of the ban, which continued to apply to immigrants from six Muslim-majority countries but now included immigrants from [224]North Korea and certain government officials of [225]Venezuela. The Supreme Court then vacated as moot the cases it had been scheduled to hear regarding the second travel ban. The third ban, like the previous two, was immediately challenged and enjoined, but the Supreme Court stayed the injunctions in December pending review by the Fourth and Ninth [226]Circuits (which upheld them). The Ninth Circuit's decision in Trump v. Hawaii was eventually reversed by the Supreme Court in June 2018. In its ruling, the Court held, among other things, that the ban was not obviously motivated by unconstitutional religious bias, notwithstanding many public statements by Trump that had indicated otherwise to lower courts.[227] Britannica QuizU.S. Presidential Nicknames

From at least the early 2010s the majority of illegal immigration across the U.S. southern border with Mexico had been undertaken by people seeking [228]asylum from violence and persecution in their home countries, especially in [229]Central America and [230]Africa. Under U.S. immigration law, foreign persons who are physically present in the United States, including those who entered the country illegally, are entitled to [231]asylum as refugees provided that they can establish a credible fear of persecution in their home countries based on their [232]race, [233]religion, nationality, political opinion, or membership in certain social groups.

In April 2018 the Trump administration announced what it called a “zero-tolerance” immigration policy under which all foreign adults who entered the United States illegally (a misdemeanor for first-time offenders) would be criminally prosecuted. The policy entailed that children in families who had illegally crossed the U.S. border together would be taken from their parents (or legal guardians) and placed within a system of hundreds of shelters across the country operated or contracted by the Office of Refugee Resettlement (ORR), a division of the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS). Eventually, according to HHS policy, separated children would be released to [234]sponsors (parents, close relatives, or other suitable persons) or to foster families in the United States. After surrendering their children, parents would be held in detention centres or jails to await prosecution for illegal entry. Under the previous immigration policy, known as “catch and release,” migrant families were usually quickly released and allowed to remain together in the United States while their cases were being resolved by immigration authorities. In practice, family separations conducted under the zero-tolerance policy were traumatic for both children and parents.

The Trump administration had [235]conceived of and initially defended the separations as a necessary deterrent to illegal economic immigration by people falsely claiming fear of persecution in their home countries. Trump himself falsely asserted that the separations were required by existing immigration law and blamed Democrats for not changing it—though his own party controlled both houses of Congress at the time. Soon, however, widely circulated photographs of crying and visibly terrified children and of children confined within fenced enclosures resembling cages prompted international [236]condemnation of the separation policy, as did eventual news reports of the physical and [237]sexual abuse of some children in shelters and the deaths of others from lack of adequate medical care. Facing pressure to act from congressional Republicans, in late June Trump signed an executive order ending the separations. One week later, pursuant to a [238]class action lawsuit filed by the [239]American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU), a federal judge in California issued an injunction against further separations and ordered the Trump administration to return to their parents all of the more than 2,700 children who had been seized under the zero-tolerance policy. The judge's 30-day deadline was not met, however, largely because the administration had not established any procedures for tracking the whereabouts of separated children or for reuniting children with their parents or guardians after separation—a situation noted critically in the judge’s order and confirmed by an October 2018 report on the family separation policy by the U.S. [240]Government Accountability Office (GAO). Even after the zero-tolerance policy was [241]rescinded, border authorities continued to seize hundreds of children on the basis of clauses in the injunction and the executive order that permitted taking children from parents who were “unfit” or who posed a “danger” to their children. Broadly interpreting those exceptions, border officials reportedly applied them to parents who had committed minor offenses or who appeared not to be taking proper care of their children. Other family separations were [242]undertaken on the basis of the federal government’s narrow definition of “family,” which allowed children who arrived with older relatives (e.g., aunts, grandparents, or older siblings) to be treated as “unaccompanied.”

As another facet of its campaign to reduce illegal immigration, the Trump administration also greatly increased arrests of undocumented immigrants by Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE), an agency of the [243]Department of Homeland Security established in 2003. During the Obama administration ICE had concentrated on undocumented immigrants who had serious criminal records, but in January 2017 Trump directed the department to find, arrest, and deport all persons without documentation, regardless of how long they had lived in the country or whether they had committed any crimes. ICE officers thereafter regularly conducted raids—at private homes, churches, schools, courthouses, and job sites—in select locations throughout the country. Both criminal and noncriminal arrests increased nationwide as compared with 2016, but noncriminal arrests [244]constituted a much greater percentage of the total. The raids were condemned by prominent Democrats and [245]civil rights organizations as draconian and wasteful, while some progressive groups proclaimed an “abolish ICE” movement. At the same time, dozens of cities and towns declared themselves “sanctuaries,” vowing not to cooperate with ICE and other federal authorities seeking to remove undocumented immigrants from their jurisdictions.

During the presidential [246]election campaign, some of Trump’s critics had warned that his presidency could create a [247]unique and immediate constitutional crisis because of his possible violation of the foreign emoluments clause of the [248]U.S. Constitution, which generally prohibits federal officeholders from accepting gifts, payments, or other items of value from foreign states or rulers without congressional permission. A related constitutional provision, known as the domestic emoluments clause, specifically prohibits the president from receiving any emolument from the federal government or the states beyond his official compensation. Trump's vast, complex, and largely secret international business interests, it was argued, could create exactly the kind of conflict of interest that the foreign emoluments clause was intended to prevent—unless Trump were to sell his assets or place them in a blind trust. Although federal conflict-of-interest laws did not apply to the president and vice president, several of Trump's immediate [249]predecessors in office had used blind trusts or other means to avoid the appearance of conflict of interest.

To address such concerns, in January 2017 Trump announced that he would surrender control—but not ownership—of his company, the Trump Organization, to his sons Donald, Jr., and Eric; that the company would undertake no new business deals with foreign countries or the U.S. government; and that the company would donate to the U.S. Treasury any profits derived from patronage of Trump's properties by foreign governments—an arrangement that failed to satisfy some specialists in government ethics. In late January a public [250]interest group, Citizens for Responsibility and Ethics in Washington (CREW), later joined by other plaintiffs, filed suit against Trump (in his [251]capacity as president) in federal district court in [252]Manhattan, alleging that he was in violation of the foreign emoluments clause. In June the attorneys general of Maryland and the [253]District of Columbia sued Trump for allegedly having violated both the foreign and domestic emoluments clauses, and soon afterward nearly 200 Democratic members of Congress filed a separate suit alleging that, by continuing to accept emoluments from foreign countries without consulting Congress, Trump had denied Congress the opportunity to give or withhold its "Consent" as required under the foreign emoluments clause. After the CREW suit was dismissed (for lack of standing) in district court in December, the [254]plaintiffs appealed the case to a three-judge panel of the Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, which vacated the lower court's judgment in September 2019, allowing the suit to proceed to trial. Trump unsuccessfully petitioned the Second Circuit for an en banc hearing (before all judges of the court) and then filed a writ of certiorari (petition for review) with the Supreme Court in September 2020.

In March and July 2018 a federal district court denied motions by Trump to dismiss the suit by Maryland and the District of Columbia, allowing that case to move forward with regard to the operation of the Trump International Hotel in Washington, D.C. After issuing a stay of the district court's proceedings, a three-judge panel of the Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit reversed the district court's rulings and ordered a dismissal of the suit for lack of standing (the possession of a sufficient interest in the outcome of a judicial proceeding, usually on the basis of an existing or anticipated legal injury). That judgment in turn was set aside in October 2019, when the Fourth Circuit agreed to an en banc hearing in December. In May 2020 the Fourth Circuit upheld the district court's original rulings, leading Trump to file a writ of certiorari with the Supreme Court in September. Meanwhile, in the suit brought by Democratic members of Congress, a district court rejected (in September 2018 and April 2019) the Trump administration's motion to dismiss but agreed in August 2019 to stay discovery and to allow an immediate appeal of the court's orders after a three-judge panel of the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit remanded the case in July. That panel later agreed to hear oral arguments in December on the question of whether the district court had erred in allowing the suit to proceed. In February 2020 it dismissed the suit for lack of standing, and in October 2020 the Supreme Court declined to review the [255]circuit court's judgment. Following Biden's inauguration as president in January 2021, the Supreme Court dismissed both of the remaining emoluments suits as moot.

Although those cases were not resolved, there was no doubt that Trump had profited from patronage of his hotels, golf resorts, and other properties by officials of foreign governments, foreign and domestic lobbyists, Republican politicians, representatives of [256]conservative interest groups, and members of his own administration. It was also apparent that much, if not most, of the business he received from foreign governments and from foreign and domestic lobbyists was undertaken on the assumption (justified or not) that Trump would look more favourably upon those who spent money at his properties than upon those who did not. During his presidency, it became a matter of routine that persons or groups who wished to influence the Trump administration at high levels, whether in the United States or abroad, would [257]patronize a Trump-owned property whenever [258]feasible. Trump's properties also received much business from the U.S. government itself, which was obliged to pay Trump for services and accommodations (e.g., for [259]U.S. Secret Service protection) at his golf courses and his Mar-a-Lago resort in Florida during his frequent visits to those [260]venues.

Supreme Court of Donald Trump

In January 2017 Trump made good on his promise to place [261]conservative [262]justices on the [263]Supreme Court by nominating [264]Neil Gorsuch, a judge of the Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit, to fill the seat that had become vacant with the death in February 2016 of [265]Antonin Scalia. Although Obama had put forward [266]Merrick Garland, a judicial moderate, as Scalia's replacement in March 2016, the majority leader of the [267]Senate, Republican [268]Mitch McConnell, refused to schedule a [269]vote or even to hold hearings on Garland's nomination, declaring that the Senate should not consider any Supreme Court nominee during an election year. McConnell's gamble that a Republican would win the presidency and nominate a more conservative [270]justice proved successful. Gorsuch was confirmed by the Senate in April after Senate Republicans overcame a Democratic [271]filibuster by removing the traditional 60-vote minimum needed for [272]cloture (ending debate and proceeding to a

In July 2018 Trump nominated another conservative appellate court judge, [273]Brett Kavanaugh of the [274]District of Columbia Circuit, to replace retiring Supreme Court Justice [275]Anthony Kennedy. In hearings before the Senate Judiciary Committee in September, a childhood acquaintance of Kavanaugh's, [276]Christine Blasey Ford, testified that he had sexually molested her when they were underage teens in [277]Maryland and that he was "stumbling drunk" during the assault. Kavanaugh was also accused of a separate act of sexual assault by a former classmate at [278]Yale University, Deborah Ramirez, and a third accuser, Julie Swetnick, declared in a sworn statement that Kavanaugh had attended parties at which gang rapes took place. In his own testimony, Kavanaugh angrily denied the allegations, insisting that they were the product of a [279]conspiracy by Democrats to exact revenge on behalf of "the Clintons" for Kavanaugh's role as a member of the legal team of [280]independent counsel [281]Kenneth Starr during the latter's investigation in the 1990s of U.S. Pres. [282]Bill Clinton's affair with [283]White House intern [284]Monica Lewinsky. A subsequent supplemental investigation by the [285]FBI, ordered by Trump, was severely limited in duration and scope: Kavanaugh, Ford, and Swetnick were not interviewed; dozens of witnesses recommended to the FBI by Ford and Ramirez were not contacted; and repeated offers of [286]corroborating evidence by numerous other persons were not acted upon. After the Republican [287]chairperson of the Judiciary Committee declared that the FBI's [288]confidential report had found "no corroboration" of the allegations, Kavanaugh was narrowly confirmed by the Senate in October. Ford's emotionally compelling testimony—and the belief among many women of both political parties that she had been treated unfairly—galvanized the [289] #MeToo movement of survivors of sexual assault and reinforced perceptions of the [290]Republican Party and the Trump administration as being insensitive to women's concerns. Meanwhile, Trump defended Kavanaugh as a victim of persecution and contended that the #MeToo movement had created a dangerous climate for men.

In September 2020, eight days after the death of Associate Justice [291]Ruth Bader Ginsburg, Trump announced his [292]nomination of judge [293]Amy Coney Barrett, whom he had appointed to the Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit only two years earlier, as Ginsburg's replacement. Notwithstanding the justification they had offered for refusing to consider Garland's nomination four years earlier, Senate Republicans declared their intention to confirm Barrett quickly. After Judiciary Committee hearings and Senate debate that Democrats criticized as improperly rushed, Barrett was confirmed by the full Senate on October 26, exactly one month after her nomination and only eight days before the presidential election. An extremely conservative judge, Barrett was expected to move the ideological centre of the Supreme Court even farther to the right than it had been under the Court's previous 5–4 conservative majorities and to make conservative rulings from the Court more likely for many years to come.

Trump also successfully appointed a record number of district and appellate court judges, having inherited more than 100 federal bench vacancies resulting from the refusal of Senate Republicans to confirm most of Obama's judicial nominees during the last two years of his presidency. Trump's judicial appointments, almost all of whom were drawn from recommendations by the conservative [294]Federalist Society, were mostly white and male; they were also generally young (less than 50 years old), ensuring that they would serve for several years or even decades. Their usually quick confirmations on party-line votes helped to further the Republican Party's longstanding project of transforming the federal judiciary, particularly at the appellate level, into a conservative [295]bulwark against liberal legal [296]initiatives and policy making. By the end of Trump's single term as [297]president in January 2021, nearly 30 percent of all federal judges were Trump appointees.[298] More From BritannicaHave Any U.S. Presidents Decided Not to Run For a Second Term?

Trump took an unusually long time to assemble his cabinet, in part because many of his early nominations to positions requiring Senate confirmation were filibustered by Democrats. His cabinet was also unusual in that it was the least [299]diverse in decades and by far the richest in U.S. history. Several of Trump's cabinet-level appointments were closely associated with the firms or industries that their agencies were charged with overseeing or were well known for having opposed their agencies' basic missions in the past. Trump's cabinet and high-level executive staff were also distinguished by their relatively high rate of turnover and eventually by the fact that several cabinet-level officials served at various times only in acting capacities, not having been confirmed by the Senate.

Particularly controversial among the original members of Trump's cabinet were EPA ([300]Environmental Protection Agency) administrator [301]Scott Pruitt, who as [302]Oklahoma [303]attorney general had spent much of his career suing the agency on behalf of the oil and gas industry; and Secretary of Education [304]Betsy DeVos, who had frequently expressed [305]contempt for public education while promoting and financially supporting school voucher legislation and charter and private schools. [306]Steve Bannon, the former head of Breitbart News, a far-right publishing platform, was appointed chief strategist but left the administration after seven months in August 2017. Trump also gave his son-in-law, [307]Jared Kushner, and his daughter [308]Ivanka Trump prominent (though unpaid) roles as senior adviser to the president and assistant to the president, respectively.

During his administration, several of Trump's cabinet members were accused of [309]ethics violations and other [310]malfeasance, including [311]breaches of travel regulations and anti-lobbying laws, inappropriate use of their agencies' resources, [312]perjury, and [313]contempt of Congress for failure to respond to lawful [314]subpoenas of documents and testimony by congressional committees (see below [315]Russia investigation and [316]Ukraine scandal). In September 2017 Tom Price resigned as secretary of health and human services after news reports revealed that he had spent some $400,000 on luxury chartered aircraft for trips to [317]Europe and within the [318]United States. Treasury Secretary Steven Mnuchin, Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke, and Veterans Affairs Secretary David Shulkin were also criticized for inappropriate use of chartered or [319]military aircraft, leading to Shulkin's firing in March 2018. Zinke, who faced several federal investigations of his conduct as interior secretary, including one that was referred to the Justice Department, resigned under pressure in December 2018. Earlier that year [320]Ben Carson, the secretary of housing and urban development, was investigated by a House oversight committee for having spent an inordinate sum on furniture for his government office. In July Pruitt was forced to resign after a long series of scandals concerning questionable spending, the use of EPA employees as personal assistants, inappropriate gifts from lobbyists, and the use of undisclosed e-mail addresses for EPA business. Although he did not resign as a result, Secretary of [321]Commerce Wilbur Ross was heavily criticized (but faced no criminal charges) for apparently lying to Congress when he told the House Ways and Means Committee and the Senate Appropriations Committee in March 2018 that his decision to add a citizenship question to the 2020 decennial census was made at the request of the [322]Justice Department to help it better enforce the 1965 [323]Voting Rights Act—a rationale that the Supreme Court later found to be "contrived." (See [324]Department of Commerce v. New York.) In April-May 2019 Mnuchin declined to act on a request by the House Ways and Means Committee for six years of Trump's business and personal tax returns (see below [325]Other investigations); in so doing, he appeared to flout a 1924 federal law (26 U.S.C. §6103) that requires the secretary of the Treasury to provide individual tax returns and related tax information upon request to select committees of Congress.

Russia investigation of Donald Trump

In February 2017 Trump's new national security adviser, [328]Michael Flynn, was forced to resign after press reports disclosed that Flynn had continued to serve in the [329]White House despite a warning from the [330]Justice Department that he was [331]vulnerable to Russian [332]blackmail for having lied to Vice President [333]Pence about the substance of a telephone conversation between Flynn and the Russian ambassador to the [334]United States in December 2016. Flynn's contacts with the ambassador, both before and after the [335]election, had been monitored by the [336]FBI as part of its routine surveillance of the ambassador's communications and in connection with a then secret investigation since July 2016 of possible collusion between Russian officials and prominent members of the Trump campaign. That investigation had been triggered by information obtained by Australian authorities, who reported to the FBI in May that [337]George Papadopoulos, a foreign-policy adviser in the Trump campaign, had told an Australian diplomat in London that Russia had "dirt" on [338]Clinton, an apparent reference to the stolen e-mails that were eventually released by [339]WikiLeaks in July. [340]Speculation in the press regarding the existence of the investigation had been repeatedly dismissed by Trump as "fake news" but was confirmed by [341]Comey in testimony before the House Intelligence Committee in March 2017, during which he also contradicted Trump's claim that [342]Obama had spied on the Trump campaign by tapping Trump's telephones. Democratic members of Congress, meanwhile, expressed dismay that Comey had chosen to report the discovery of additional Clinton e-mails in October but had waited until after the election to reveal the Russia investigation.

After Comey testified again in May about Russian interference in the election, Trump abruptly fired him, ostensibly on the recommendation of the Justice Department, which in memos solicited by Trump criticized Comey for his public disclosures regarding Clinton's e-mails. Trump soon acknowledged that he had intended to fire Comey regardless of the Justice Department's recommendation and that "this Russia thing" was a factor in his decision. Later that month the press obtained a copy of a memo written by Comey that summarized a conversation between Comey and Trump at a dinner at the White House in January. The memo stated that Trump had asked Comey to pledge "loyalty" to him and that Trump had indirectly requested that Comey drop the FBI's investigation of Flynn. The memo immediately raised concerns, even among some Republicans, that Trump's actions might have [343]constituted obstruction of justice. The deputy [344]attorney general, Rod Rosenstein, then announced the appointment of former FBI director [345]Robert Mueller as special [346]counsel to oversee the FBI's investigation of Russian interference in the election and possible collusion between Russian officials and the Trump campaign, which Rosenstein's appointment order characterized as "any links and/or coordination between the Russian government and individuals associated with the campaign of President Donald Trump." Mueller was also authorized to investigate and prosecute any federal crimes arising directly from or committed in the course of the investigation, including obstruction of justice, perjury, destruction of evidence, and witness intimidation.

Comey's testimony in June before the Senate Intelligence Committee, which, like the House Intelligence Committee, was conducting its own investigation, was broadcast live on [347]television, [348]radio, and the [349]Internet. Many Americans watched from bars and restaurants, which opened early in some parts of the [350]country to provide [351]venues for viewing the much-anticipated event. Comey accused Trump and other administration officials of lying about Comey's effectiveness as director of the FBI, and he attributed his being fired to Trump's [352]alleged desire to shut down the Russia investigation. Comey also revealed that, after being fired, he indirectly leaked the memo that recounted his dinner conversation with Trump in the hope of triggering the appointment of a special counsel to continue the Russia investigation.

Early in July 2017 the press reported that in June 2016 senior members of the Trump campaign, including its chairperson, [353]Paul Manafort, as well as Jared Kushner and Trump's son [354]Donald, Jr., had met secretly in [355]Trump Tower with a lawyer associated with the Russian government. In response, Donald, Jr., issued a statement in which he claimed that the meeting had primarily concerned adoptions of Russian children by Americans and that he had not known in advance who on the Russian side would be [356]attending. Three days later the press reported the existence of e-mails predating the meeting in which the British publicist Rob Goldstone (who had helped Donald Trump, Sr., stage the 2013 Miss Universe contest in [357]Moscow) notified Donald, Jr., that the Russian government possessed incriminating “documents and information” on Clinton and offered to set up a meeting to convey them through a “Russian government attorney.” Attendance at such a meeting was potentially a crime under U.S. [358]campaign finance law, which generally prohibits accepting or soliciting foreign assistance in connection with a U.S. election.

In January 2018 President Trump’s legal team acknowledged in a memo to the Mueller investigation that Trump himself had [359]dictated the initial false account of the meeting (claiming that it had concerned adoptions), contradicting earlier statements by his attorneys and by [360]White House press secretaries. In August 2018 Trump admitted via Twitter that the purpose of the meeting was “to get information on an opponent” but insisted that the encounter was perfectly legal, that no information was forthcoming, and that he did not know about the meeting in advance. He also, for the first time, publicly (on Twitter) called upon Attorney General [361]Jeff Sessions to put an end to the Russia investigation by firing Mueller—a power, however, that Sessions did not possess, having [362]recused himself in March 2017 after revelations of his previously undisclosed contacts with the Russian ambassador as a member of the Trump campaign in September 2016.

In October 2017 the Mueller investigation announced a [363]plea agreement with Papadopoulos in which he admitted to lying to the FBI about his contacts with Russian nationals regarding the theft of e-mails from the Clinton campaign and pledged to cooperate with the investigation in exchange for its promise not to prosecute him on more serious charges. Later that month the Mueller team also unveiled a 12-count [364]indictment against Manafort and his associate Rick Gates (who himself had been an adviser to the Trump campaign), charging them with [365]money laundering, tax evasion, and bank fraud in connection with Manafort’s consulting and lobbying efforts on behalf of Ukrainian political parties and leaders between 2006 and 2015. As part of a plea agreement with prosecutors, Flynn twice pleaded guilty in federal district court to lying to the FBI—once in December 2017 and again in December 2018. (Flynn’s sentencing was postponed by the district court on several occasions, initially to permit Flynn to cooperate with government investigators, which he did until mid-2019.) In February 2018 additional charges were filed against Manafort and Gates in a superseding indictment, leading Gates to reach a plea agreement; Gates’s testimony at Manafort’s trial in July–August was instrumental in securing the latter’s [366]conviction on eight criminal counts. Facing a separate trial on other felony charges in September, Manafort reached his own plea agreement with the Mueller investigation that month.

Also in February 2018 the Mueller investigation indicted 13 Russian nationals and three Russian organizations on charges of conspiring to defraud the United States by interfering in its political and electoral processes, including the 2016 election. The indictment charged that the individual defendants, working in part through facilities provided by the Internet Research Agency (IRA) in [367]St. Petersburg, used hundreds of fictitious and stolen [368]social media identities to spread “derogatory information” about Clinton and to support Trump. According to the [369]indictment, they also engaged in efforts to discourage minorities from voting, promoted allegations of voter fraud by the [370]Democratic Party, purchased political advertisements on social media, and used false U.S. identities to organize on-the-ground political rallies in several states.

Acting on a referral by the Mueller investigation, in April the FBI raided the home and office of [371]Michael Cohen, Trump’s personal attorney, seizing business records and recordings of telephone conversations between Cohen and his clients, including Trump. According to press reports, Cohen was being investigated on charges of tax evasion, bank fraud, and violations of campaign finance law in connection with his role in making or arranging payments in 2016 to adult-film actor Stephanie Clifford, known as Stormy Daniels, and to Karen McDougal, a model, in fulfillment of nondisclosure agreements concerning their alleged affairs with Trump in 2006–07. In March both women filed lawsuits seeking to have their agreements declared [372]invalid. Cohen eventually pleaded guilty to eight criminal counts in August 2018 in a hearing at which he stated under oath that Trump had directed him to arrange payments to Clifford and McDougal.

In July 2018 Mueller indicted 12 Russian [373]military intelligence officers for conspiring to interfere in the 2016 election by stealing thousands of e-mails and other documents from computer servers of the Democratic Party and the Clinton campaign and publicly releasing them through fictitious social media identities and WikiLeaks. The indictment also charged the officers with breaking into the [374]computer network of at least one state board of elections and stealing [375]data on approximately 500,000 voters. (In a secret May 2017 report, later leaked to the press, the [376]National Security Agency [NSA] determined that a total of 39 state boards of election had been targeted.) The announcement of the indictment prompted Trump to again express doubt that Russia was responsible for the interference, as he had done on several occasions since the beginning of the Russia investigation, and to again assert that the FBI was corrupt and dishonest for not pursuing a [377]criminal investigation of Clinton.

In September 2018 Papadopoulos was sentenced to serve 14 days in a minimum-security federal prison for lying to the FBI, becoming the first Trump campaign official to be jailed in connection with the Russia investigation. Two months later, in November, Mueller informed a trial judge that Manafort had violated his plea agreement by again lying in interviews with investigators and by making false statements before a [378]grand jury. Manafort was eventually sentenced to a [379]combined 7.5 years in prison by two federal courts in March 2019. Later that month he was charged with an additional 16 state felonies by the district attorney for [380]Manhattan. Meanwhile, in November 2018, Cohen pleaded guilty to separate charges of lying to Congress for having told the House and Senate intelligence committees that Trump’s efforts to build a [381]hotel in Moscow had ended in January 2016, when, in fact, they had continued until at least June of that year, by which time Trump had become the presumptive Republican presidential nominee. Cohen was sentenced to three years in prison in December 2018.

Also in November 2018, Trump fired Sessions and appointed as acting attorney general Matthew Whitaker, Sessions's former chief of staff, who had been an outspoken critic of the Russia investigation before joining the Justice Department. Controversy over whether Whitaker should [382]recuse himself from the investigation was soon overshadowed, however, by Trump's nomination in December of [383]William Barr as Sessions's permanent successor. Barr, who had served (1991–93) as attorney general in the [384]George H.W. Bush administration, was known for his extreme view of executive power—one that entailed, among other things, that presidents cannot commit obstruction of justice through the exercise of the discretionary powers granted to them by the Constitution. Notably, Barr relied upon that theory to question the legitimacy of the Mueller investigation in an unsolicited memo that he submitted to the Justice Department in June 2018. The memo, which came to light soon after Barr's nomination, immediately drew [385]criticism from Democrats, who viewed it as an attempt to curry favour with the Trump administration and as a signal of Barr's apparent willingness to shut down the Mueller inquiry if Trump so ordered. At his confirmation hearings Barr pledged that he would not interfere in the Russia investigation but refused to say whether he would release Mueller's final report to the public. He was confirmed by the Republican-controlled Senate in February 2019 in a mostly party-line vote.

Approximately five weeks after his confirmation, Barr informed [386]Congress that Mueller had submitted a final report on the results of his investigation and that there would be no additional indictments. (By that time, Mueller's team had indicted 34 individuals and three businesses on nearly 200 criminal charges and obtained seven guilty pleas.) Two days later Barr sent to Congress an unusual written summary of the report's contents, in which he stated that Mueller had not found sufficient evidence to establish a charge of [387]conspiracy regarding the Trump campaign's interactions with Russia and that Mueller had not made a traditional recommendation about whether Trump should be prosecuted for obstruction of justice. Absent that recommendation, he continued, he and Rosenstein had themselves determined that the evidence presented in Mueller's report was "not sufficient to establish that the President committed an obstruction-of-justice offense." Barr's public release of the summary at about the same time, and its wide coverage in the press, encouraged many Americans to assume that Mueller's report had found no serious wrongdoing by the [388]president, though others remained skeptical. According to press reports in late April, Mueller had privately written to Barr soon after the summary became public to complain that Barr's characterization of the report to Congress "did not fully capture the [389]context, nature, and substance of this Office's work and conclusions" and had created "public confusion about critical aspects of the results of our investigation."

On April 18, nearly one month after his letter to Congress, Barr released a [390]redacted version of the Mueller report. House Democrats welcomed the release but insisted that Barr make available to them all [391]confidential grand jury materials and the redacted passages related to them. After Barr refused, the House Judiciary Committee sued the Justice Department and obtained a [392]court order in October requiring the release of the grand jury materials. That order was later upheld by a three-judge panel of the Court of Appeals for the [393]District of Columbia Circuit, a decision that the Justice Department appealed to the Supreme Court in July. In late November, after Biden's victory over Trump in the 2020 presidential election, the Court removed the case from its argument calendar at the request of the Judiciary Committee.

The two volumes of Mueller's report reflected the dual [394]mandates of his appointment as special counsel: the first detailed the goals and methods of the Russian attack on the 2016 presidential election, and the second outlined several potentially obstructive actions taken by Trump in connection with the FBI's investigation of Russian interference (begun in July 2016) and the subsequent investigation led by Mueller (begun in May 2017).

Mueller's office concluded in the first volume that there was insufficient evidence to establish that "members of the Trump campaign conspired or coordinated with the Russian government" despite "numerous links" between the two as detailed in the report. In the second volume, Mueller explained that his office had decided not to recommend charges of obstruction of justice against Trump because Justice Department regulations prohibited the indictment or criminal prosecution of a sitting president and because the office deemed it unfair to accuse Trump of a crime outside the context of a formal trial, where he would have the opportunity to answer the charges against him. Nevertheless, Mueller emphasized in the conclusion of the second volume that if we had confidence after a thorough investigation of the facts that the President clearly did not commit obstruction of justice, we would so state. Based on the facts and the applicable legal standards, we are unable to reach that judgment. Accordingly, while this report does not conclude that the President committed a crime, it also does not exonerate him.

Although the Mueller report appeared to document numerous instances of [395]impeachable behaviour by Trump, Democrats in the House were initially divided over whether a formal impeachment [396]inquiry should be opened. Despite demands for immediate action from several liberal Democrats, the House leadership and most other Democratic members preferred a more cautious approach, arguing that most Americans were opposed to impeachment and that Trump could not be removed from office anyway, because he was certain to be acquitted in the Republican-controlled Senate. The latter view, which House Speaker [397]Nancy Pelosi had advocated even before the release of the Mueller report, remained the prevailing position within the Democratic Party until the late summer of 2019 (see below [398]Ukraine scandal).

In December 2019 the Justice Department's Office of the Inspector General released a report on its investigation of the FBI's actions during the early stages of the Russia investigation (then code-named "Crossfire Hurricane"). The report addressed, among other topics, whether the FBI had observed proper procedures in opening Crossfire Hurricane and four individual investigations of members of the Trump campaign (Papadopoulos, Carter Page, Manafort, and Flynn) and whether the FBI had placed any undercover agents within the Trump campaign to gain information about possible links and coordination with the Russian government. Although the report concluded that the investigation had been legitimately opened and that there was no evidence of political [399]bias or of FBI “spying” on the Trump campaign, it also faulted the FBI and the Justice Department for serious errors and omissions and at least one case of apparent criminal wrongdoing in its handling of applications (to the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Court; FISC) for warrants to surveil Page, then a Trump campaign adviser.

In an extraordinary decision in May 2020, the Justice Department moved to drop its case against Flynn on the grounds that his statements to the FBI were not “materially” relevant to the bureau’s investigation and that, in any event, the investigation of Flynn itself lacked any [400]legitimate counterintelligence or criminal purpose. Although the district court’s refusal to drop the case was eventually upheld by the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit, the case became moot after Trump pardoned Flynn in late November 2020. In the last weeks of his presidency, Trump also granted pardons to Manafort and to Roger Stone, a friend and adviser who had been convicted of lying to Congress, obstruction, and witness tampering in connection with the House Intelligence Committee’s investigation of Russian interference in the 2016 election.

Other investigations

As Mueller’s investigation proceeded, and through the release of his report in March, several House committees—including the Judiciary Committee, the Select Committee on Intelligence, the Ways and Means Committee, the Foreign Affairs Committee, the Committee on Oversight and Reform, and the Financial Services Committee—were conducting their own [401]inquiries into possible tax and financial crimes by Trump, the Trump Organization, the Trump inaugural committee, and the charitable Trump Foundation (dissolved in 2018), evidence of which had arisen from Mueller’s investigation and from congressional testimony by Cohen and other Trump associates. At the same time, the office of the U.S. District Attorney for the [402]Southern District of New York (SDNY) continued its separate inquiry into possible tax fraud and violations of campaign-finance law by Trump in connection with the alleged hush-money payments to Stephanie Clifford and Karen McDougal (that investigation, however, was abruptly closed without explanation in July 2019). Other federal prosecutors, as well as state and local authorities, were looking into possible law breaking by Trump in connection with questionable donations to Trump’s [403]inaugural committee, an alleged offer of a presidential pardon to Cohen, misuse of charitable assets by the Trump Foundation, accusations that Trump inflated the value of his assets in four major Trump Organization projects, apparently illegal tax schemes by the Trump family (see above [404]Early life and business career), and other matters. By the summer of 2019 approximately 30 criminal or civil investigations of Trump and his family or associates were underway.

Since the early months of that year, however, the Trump administration had regularly refused to provide documents or witness testimony requested or subpoenaed by Democratic-led House committees investigating alleged corruption, abuse of power, and obstruction of justice by Trump or the Trump administration. In the wake of the public release in April of the redacted Mueller report, Trump publicly affirmed his administration's refusal to cooperate with the House investigations, declaring that "we're fighting all the subpoenas." He and congressional Republicans frequently insisted that all such inquiries were [405]illegitimate politically motivated attempts to embarrass Trump or to overturn the results of the 2016 election. Although past administrations, including the [406]Richard Nixon administration, had also regularly defied congressional oversight, particularly with claims of [407]executive privilege, none had so broadly rejected, on explicitly partisan grounds, any congressional oversight whatsoever. Some [408]constitutional scholars warned that Trump's refusal to recognize any legitimate purpose to Congress's investigations of his administration threatened to undermine the constitutionally established [409]separation of powers between the executive, legislative, and judicial branches of government. Soon after Pelosi announced the beginning of a formal impeachment investigation of Trump in September 2019 (see below [410]Ukraine scandal), the White House counsel, Pat Cipollone, announced in a letter to her and other House leaders that the Trump administration would refuse to cooperate with the inquiry in any way, primarily because it allegedly did not afford Trump the [411]due-process guarantees provided to defendants in criminal trials (the House investigation, however, was not a trial).

After Michael Cohen's [412]testimony to Congress in February 2019 that Trump had regularly inflated or deflated the value of his assets in order to obtain bank loans or to reduce his real estate taxes, respectively, the House Oversight Committee in March requested 10 years of Trump's financial records from Trump's accounting firm, Mazars, which responded that it could not legally provide the desired records. The committee's subsequent subpoena was challenged by Trump in a lawsuit against Mazars and the Oversight Committee but ultimately upheld by a U.S. district court and the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit. Responding to an emergency appeal to the Supreme Court by Trump's attorneys, Chief Justice [413]John Roberts, Jr., indefinitely stayed the subpoena while the Court considered whether to review the judge's decision. Meanwhile, two other House committees, on Financial Services and Intelligence, issued subpoenas to Deutsche Bank, Trump's primary lender since the late 1990s, seeking nearly 10 years of tax returns and other financial documents; the Financial Services Committee also subpoenaed the U.S. bank Capital One for similar information. Trump's lawsuit to prevent the two banks from releasing his financial information was rejected by a district court and, on appeal, by the Court of Appeals for the Second [414]Circuit. In a third case, Trump sued New York state officials (and preemptively the House Ways and Means Committee) to block enforcement of a grand jury subpoena to Mazars for eight years of his state tax returns, arguing that a sitting president is immune from state criminal subpoenas. After a district court dismissed that doctrine as "repugnant to the nation's governmental structure and constitutional values" and the Second Circuit affirmed, the U.S. Supreme Court agreed in December 2019 to hear all three cases, consolidating the first two as Trump v. Mazars. The Court ultimately declined to invalidate the subpoenas in Mazars but remanded the cases to the lower courts for further consideration of their [415]implications for the separation of powers between Congress and the president. In Trump v. Vance, the Court rejected Trump's assertion of immunity but again remanded the case to permit him to challenge the subpoena on other grounds.

Health care

An early goal of the Trump administration, as reflected in Trump's first [416]executive order, was the repeal of [417]Obamacare (the [418]Affordable Care Act, or ACA), which Trump had long derided—even before announcing his presidential bid—as an expensive failure. Trump pledged during his campaign that he would replace the ACA with a bill that would provide better coverage at lower premiums, and he promised that no one would lose [419]health insurance under his plan. However, the details of the bill, called in the [420]House of Representatives the [421]American Health Care Act (AHCA), proved [422]contentious even within his own party. Because Trump had not worked out a specific plan of his own, he was forced to rely on Republicans in the House to draft a [423]substantive bill that would reduce government involvement in the health insurance market without depriving millions of Americans of the coverage they had acquired under the ACA. The Republicans did not have a detailed [424]alternative in hand, however, resulting in a delay in Trump's promised repeal of the law.

In early March 2017 House Republicans introduced their plan, which featured elimination of the ACA's "[425]individual mandate" (the requirement that most Americans obtain health insurance or pay a penalty), a reduction in individual tax credits for the purchase of insurance, cuts in federal [426]Medicaid funding, and nearly $1 trillion in tax cuts over a 10-year period, including $274 billion in cuts for persons earning at least $200,000 a year. The [427]Congressional Budget Office (CBO) initially estimated that the plan would reduce the federal deficit by $337 billion over 10 years as compared with current law but would also increase the number of uninsured people by 24 million over the same period. The bill immediately faced objections from both moderate and [428]conservative Republicans. The former worried that too many people would lose affordable coverage, while the latter complained that the plan left too many burdensome provisions of the ACA in place. The anxieties of moderates in particular were amplified by the angry feedback they received at town hall meetings throughout the [429]country from [430]constituents who feared the loss of their health insurance. Unable to bridge the differences between the two factions, in late March the House leadership withdrew the bill without a vote—a major defeat for Trump, who had made repeal and replacement of the ACA a centrepiece of his campaign.

Six weeks later the House narrowly passed a revised version of the AHCA over the unanimous opposition of Democrats. A subsequent CBO analysis projected that the new version would reduce the deficit by $119 billion over 10 years as compared with current law but increase the number of uninsured by 23 million.

Soon after the AHCA was passed, Republicans in the Senate, working largely in secret and without input from Democrats, began crafting their own replacement for the ACA, initially called the [431]Better Care Reconciliation Act (BCRA). Like the AHCA, the BCRA, in numerous versions under various names, would have decreased the deficit but significantly increased the number of uninsured, and it would have increased insurance premiums in the first year after its passage, according to analyses released by the CBO in late June. The BCRA thus faced the same [432]criticisms that had beset the House measure, revealing deep divisions between Senate Republicans who wished to limit the loss of health insurance in their states and those who aimed to dismantle as much of the current law as possible. Eventually, within a single week in late July, the Senate voted on three bills: a repeal of major provisions of the ACA without immediate replacement; a relatively [433]comprehensive repeal and replacement of the ACA; and a more modest "skinny" repeal and replacement. Despite considerable political pressure on Senate Republicans from the Trump administration, all three measures failed.

Having been unsuccessful in their attempts to repeal and replace the ACA, Republicans in Congress and the Trump administration pursued a series of measures intended to cumulatively undermine the law by making the health insurance it provided less accessible, less affordable, and less effective (through reductions in coverage and other measures), a strategy that Trump described as allowing Obamacare to "explode." Those changes, some of which predated the failure of Republican [434]alternatives to the ACA in the Senate, included cutting funding for [435]advertising and for assistance with enrollment in Obamacare; drastically reducing open enrollment periods; ending cost-sharing subsidies that enabled insurance companies to reduce out-of-pocket expenses for low- and middle-income Americans; and repealing (effective in 2019) the ACA’s “individual [436]mandate,” which had required all Americans to obtain health insurance or pay a penalty. (The last measure was part of Republican tax legislation drafted in secret and passed without Democratic support in December 2017; Trump signed the measure later that month. A subsequent analysis by the CBO determined that the legislation, which among other things reduced the corporate tax rate from 35 to 21 percent, would increase the federal deficit by approximately $1.8 trillion over a 10-year period.) In November 2017 a study by the CBO had estimated that repealing the individual mandate and making no other changes to the ACA would increase the number of uninsured people by 13 million after 10 years and raise premiums by 10 percent in most years through 2027. Other changes included allowing states to impose work requirements on people receiving Medicaid; allowing the creation of “association health plans” that would offer fewer essential health benefits than plans under the ACA and charge higher premiums to certain enrollees based on factors such as gender, occupation, and age; and permitting the sale of short-term plans that would provide minimal benefits and would not cover medical services for preexisting conditions.

Environmental policy

One of the areas in which the Trump administration was able to move quickly to [439]implement its policies was the [440]environment, in part because many of the changes it sought could be accomplished through executive action by Trump or his appointees. Other changes were undertaken through legislation adopted by Congress, whose Republican majority generally shared Trump's environmental views. In January, for example, Trump signed memoranda to hasten approval and completion of the [441]Dakota Access and [442]Keystone XL oil pipelines, both of which had been blocked by the Obama administration on environmental grounds. In February Trump signed legislation to block an [443]Interior Department rule that would have restricted the dumping of toxic mining waste into streams and other waterways. In March Trump signed an executive order that [444]rescinded various Obama-era policies and programs related to [445]climate change, including a 2016 freeze on new coal leases on federal lands. In the same month, [446]EPA administrator Pruitt withdrew an EPA request that oil and [447]natural gas companies report [448]methane emissions from their facilities and rejected a total ban on the [449]pesticide chlorpyrifos, against the advice of the EPA's own scientists. Other significant decisions included drastically reducing the size of [450]national monuments created by Obama and Pres. Bill Clinton; [451]rescinding the Obama administration's [452]Clean Power Plan, a set of EPA regulations that had [453]mandated a 32 percent reduction in carbon emissions by the U.S. power sector between 2005 and 2030; revoking fuel-efficiency standards for [454]cars and light trucks developed by the EPA during the Obama administration; and proposing numerous changes to the [455]Endangered Species Act (ESA) that would weaken legal protections for [456]endangered and threatened animals and make listing species as threatened more difficult.

Undoubtedly the most momentous environmental decision of the new Trump administration was Trump's announcement in June that the [457]United States would withdraw from the [458]Paris Agreement on climate change, under which the United States and 194 other countries had agreed to a broad range of measures intended to limit potentially catastrophic increases in global average temperatures during the 21st century and to [459]mitigate the economic consequences of [460]global warming. Trump contended that the agreement would harm the American economy (through government-mandated reductions in the country's [461]greenhouse gas emissions) and was in other respects unfair and even demeaning to the United States—historically the largest emitter of greenhouse gases and in the early 21st century the second largest emitter after [462]China. Trump's decision was [463]condemned by government and political leaders, scientists, business executives, and activists throughout the world but praised by Republicans in Congress, who viewed it as a reassertion of American independence in world affairs and a repudiation of the environmental policies of the Obama administration. Like Trump, many Republican lawmakers doubted that climate change was real, while others questioned the human origins of global warming.

Foreign relations of Donald Trump

A major theme of Trump's presidential campaign was his view that the [464]United States had long been treated unfairly or taken advantage of by other countries, including by some traditional U.S. allies, and that under Obama's leadership the United States had [465]ceased to be respected in world affairs. In numerous speeches, tweets, and interviews, he threatened to impose [466]tariffs on countries that engaged in what he deemed unfair trade practices; harshly criticized the [467]World Trade Organization (WTO); and promised to renegotiate NAFTA (the [468]North American Free Trade Agreement), which he called "the worst trade deal" the United States had ever signed. He also criticized NATO (the [469]North Atlantic Treaty Organization), dismissing the alliance as “obsolete” but also insisting that other NATO countries devote more of their budgets to defense spending. In January 2017 he withdrew the United States from the [470]Trans-Pacific Partnership, a regional [471]trade agreement between 12 Pacific Rim countries that had been a major [472]foreign policy achievement of the Obama administration. (Trump’s action was largely symbolic, however, because Congress had never ratified the treaty.)

In January and March 2018 the Trump administration announced steep tariffs on imports of solar panels (worth $8.5 billion per year) and washing machines (worth $1 billion), aimed particularly at [473]China and [474]South Korea, and on imports of [475]aluminum and [476]steel (worth $48 billion) made in several countries, most of them U.S. allies (initial exemptions from the aluminum and steel duties granted to [477]Canada, the [478]European Union [EU], and [479]Mexico were lifted in June). Dismissing warnings and [480]criticisms from economists and business leaders that the tariffs could ignite a [481]trade war, Trump insisted in a tweet that “trade wars are good, and easy to win.” In April China imposed retaliatory tariffs on a variety of U.S. goods worth $2.4 billion annually, approximately the dollar amount of Chinese aluminum and steel imports affected by the Trump tariffs. The EU followed suit in June with tariffs on U.S. imports valued at $3.2 billion, as did Canada in July with tariffs on $12.8 billion of U.S. goods. Following its official finding that the Chinese had engaged in unfair trade practices, in June the Trump administration announced plans for tariffs on an additional $50 billion of dollars worth of Chinese products, prompting China to announce comparable duties. Threats and counterthreats of additional tariffs soon followed, and by July the two countries were engaged in a full-blown trade war.

Trump’s tariffs and his [482]antipathy to the WTO overshadowed the meeting in early June of the [483]Group of 7 in [484]Quebec, Canada, which was marked by tense disagreement between Trump and other G7 leaders over language regarding [485]free trade in the meeting’s final communiqué, usually a bland formality. Following Trump’s early departure from the meeting, Canadian Prime Minister [486]Justin Trudeau [487]reiterated his [488]country’s reluctant determination to respond in kind to Trump’s tariffs on aluminum and steel. Reacting to Trudeau’s remarks from a flight to [489]Singapore aboard [490]Air Force One, Trump [491]withdrew his endorsement of the communiqué and called Trudeau “dishonest & weak.” In Singapore Trump held a historic meeting with North Korean leader [492]Kim Jong-Un, the first face-to-face encounter between sitting leaders of the two countries. Although Trump declared after the meeting that “there is no longer a Nuclear Threat from [493]North Korea,” it was unclear what concrete commitments North Korea had made to nuclear disarmament. In July Trump attended the annual summit meeting of NATO in [494]Brussels, where in a speech he called other NATO countries “delinquent” and insisted that they increase their defense spending “immediately.” The meeting ended with a joint communiqué in which member countries agreed to continue their efforts to devote 2 percent of their GDP to defense spending by 2024, a goal they had agreed to in 2014.

In May 2018 Trump announced the withdrawal of the United States from a 2015 agreement between Iran and five major powers that had limited Iran’s uranium-enrichment activities and required it to submit to frequent international inspections of its nuclear facilities in return for the lifting of [495]economic sanctions. After the United States killed Iran's highest-ranking security and intelligence official in a drone strike ordered by Trump, Iran announced in January 2020 that it would no longer observe the treaty-imposed restrictions on its enrichment activities, though it stopped short of formally exiting the agreement.

Ukraine scandal

In August 2019 an anonymous [496]whistleblower, later determined to be an official of the CIA, filed a complaint with the inspector general of the U.S. intelligence [497]community, Michael Atkinson, alleging that in a July 25 phone call with the newly elected [498]president of Ukraine, [499]Volodymyr Zelensky, Trump had attempted to extort a promise from Zelensky to interfere in the 2020 U.S. presidential election on Trump's behalf. Specifically, according to the complaint, Trump strongly implied that some $400 million in congressionally [500]mandated security assistance to Ukraine would not be provided unless Zelensky carried out two requests, which Trump introduced by saying, "I would like you to do us a favor though...." The first request was that Zelensky search for a computer server used by the Democratic National Committee that supposedly had been hidden in Ukraine after the Internet security firm [501]CrowdStrike determined in 2016 that it had been broken into by hackers based in Russia. According to the CrowdStrike [502]conspiracy theory, which originated as a disinformation campaign by Russia, the missing server contained evidence that the hackers were in fact Ukrainian and that Democrats and CrowdStrike had conspired to falsely blame Russia for interfering in the 2016 presidential election.

The second request was that Zelensky investigate Biden's allegedly corrupt motive for pressuring the Ukrainian government in 2015, while Biden was serving as vice president in the Obama administration, to fire the country's prosecutor general, Viktor Shokin. According to the Burisma [503]conspiracy theory, as it came to be known, Biden called for Shokin's removal only in order to halt an investigation of the Ukrainian energy company Burisma Holdings, Ltd., that threatened to uncover wrongdoing by Biden's son Hunter, who was then serving on the company's board of directors. No serious evidence of wrongdoing by Biden or his son was ever produced, however. In his phone conversation, Trump also repeatedly suggested to Zelensky that in planning or conducting the requested investigations he deal directly with Attorney General Barr and Trump's personal attorney [504]Rudy Giuliani.

In September 2019, after the press began reporting that Trump's conversation with Zelensky may have involved a "quid pro quo," the aid to Ukraine was finally released, and the [505]White House later issued what it called a "rough transcript" of the phone call, which nevertheless did not support Trump’s assertion that there had been no [506]quid pro quo. Later that month Pelosi changed her stance on the impeachment question, announcing that Trump’s attempt to extort a foreign leader to interfere in a U.S. election [507]constituted a betrayal of his oath of office and therefore warranted a formal impeachment inquiry. In testimony before the House Intelligence Committee and later the House Judiciary Committee, career civil servants in the [508]State Department and other witnesses confirmed the outlines of the whistleblower’s account of Trump’s phone call and further indicated that Trump had been attempting to conduct what amounted to a separate “back channel” foreign policy through Giuliani, Barr, and others. In December the Judiciary Committee drafted two articles of impeachment against Trump, one for abuse of power and the other for obstruction of Congress. Those articles were adopted in two party-line votes by the entire House on December 18, making Trump the third president in U.S. history to be impeached. Trump was acquitted by the Senate in February 2020 after a majority of senators voted to find him not guilty on both charges. For additional discussion, see [509]Ukraine scandal.

In January 2020 the [510]World Health Organization (WHO) declared the continuing spread of COVID-19—a deadly and highly [511]contagious respiratory illness caused by a new form of the [512]coronavirus known as novel coronavirus, or coronavirus-2 (SARS-CoV-2)—to be a global health emergency. First reported in the Chinese city of Wuhan in December 2019, the virus soon spread throughout China and then to Europe, the United States, and other regions, prompting WHO to announce in March 2020 that COVID-19 had become a global [513]pandemic. At that time there were more than 118,000 confirmed cases of COVID-19 worldwide and nearly 4,300 deaths. By year’s end those numbers had reached approximately 83 million and 1.8 million, respectively.

Soon after the first known case in the United States was identified in mid-January 2020, Trump was privately informed by officials within his administration that the pandemic could result in massive numbers of American deaths and severe damage to the U.S. economy. Those warnings were repeated to Trump for several weeks through February and early March as the numbers of positive tests for the coronavirus and confirmed cases of COVID-19 in the country continued to rise.

At the end of January Trump imposed a partial entry ban on foreign travelers who had recently visited China. However, he initially neglected to [514]implement the aggressive measures that had been recommended to him to slow the spread of the coronavirus and reduce the number of likely deaths. Such proposals included increasing the country's testing capacity and developing a national strategy for testing, contact tracing, and quarantining; using his authority under the [515]Defense Production Act (DPA) of 1950 to increase production of personal protective equipment (PPE) for medical personnel and ventilators for critically ill patients; establishing a national purchasing and distribution system to [516]allocate PPE and ventilators to states and localities according to need; and issuing national science-based guidelines for closing businesses and schools, social distancing, mask wearing, and other safety measures. In many of his public statements, Trump downplayed the threat posed by the pandemic, the extent of its spread in the United States, and the severity of COVID-19 itself. In other statements, some made in tweets and at press briefings in April following meetings of the White House coronavirus task force (first [517]convened in late January), he promoted supposed [518]alternative remedies for the virus that were known to be ineffective, unproved, or even deadly, and he made other false claims that expert members of the task force were obliged to contradict.

After WHO's global pandemic announcement, Trump declared a national emergency, suspended travel to the United States from several European countries, and recommended that Americans practice social distancing for the remainder of March (he later extended that period to April 30). At the end of March he [519]invoked the DPA to officially direct the automobile manufacturer [520]General Motors to produce ventilators. By then, many states had already closed businesses and schools, restricted public gatherings, issued stay-at-home orders, and mandated mask wearing in public spaces. States and individual hospitals were also redoubling their efforts to find increasingly [521]scarce ventilators and respirators after Trump told state governors in a conference call that they should make their own arrangements to obtain such equipment.

The widespread business closings and the shift to work-from-home arrangements in some industries resulted in massive layoffs, eventually producing [522]unemployment levels not seen since the early 1930s and a deep recession. In late March Congress passed, and Trump signed into law, a $2.2 trillion economic relief package, the CARES (Coronavirus Aid, Relief, and Economic Security) Act, that included a loan program for small businesses, an increase in unemployment benefits through July, one-time direct payments to households, increased funding for food-stamp and child-nutrition programs, and financial aid to state and local governments, which had been overwhelmed by unemployment claims and [523]unprecedented demands for emergency services. Two months later the Democratic-controlled House of Representatives adopted a more extensive ($3 trillion) relief measure, the HEROES (Health and Economic Recovery Omnibus Emergency Solutions) Act, whose provisions included a vote-by-mail option in all federal elections beginning in November and additional funding for the U.S. Postal Service, which was then handling greatly increased numbers of mail-in (or absentee) ballots cast by primary-election voters wishing to avoid exposure to the coronavirus in voting lines and polling stations. Senate Republicans, however, refused to take up the measure, in part because it failed to protect reopened businesses against potential lawsuits by workers who contracted COVID-19 on the job. In late December, after several months of inaction, Congress finally passed scaled-back relief legislation, including a modest temporary increase in unemployment benefits.

Through the spring and summer, while occasionally acknowledging the real scope and seriousness of the pandemic, Trump continued to predict the [524]imminent disappearance of the coronavirus; to dispute or misrepresent official numbers of positive tests, confirmed cases, and deaths in the United States; to promote conspiracy theories that attributed high official numbers to a variety of patently false causes; and to criticize [525]public health officials whose [526]assessments or recommendations did not reflect positively on his leadership. In April and May, as the numbers of new COVID-19 cases and deaths nationwide began to plateau, Trump pushed the states to quickly [527]rescind the public health measures that had helped to slow the spread of the coronavirus, portraying state-imposed business closings and especially mask [528]mandates as violations of economic freedom and [529]individual liberty. Trump's misrepresentations inspired many of his supporters to hold anti-lockdown demonstrations and to flout state and local mask-wearing orders and limits on public gatherings. Trump's own refusal to wear a mask in public, a pointed signal of his [530]contempt for such regulations, led many of his supporters, including several Republican governors and lawmakers, to regard the refusal to wear a mask in public as a kind of political statement—an expression of [531]allegiance to Trump and the Republican Party.

In May and June the governors of several states, mostly in the South, responded to Trump's pressure by relaxing or lifting pandemic-related restrictions—in particular, mask-wearing orders. Partly as a result of those premature changes, a second surge of the pandemic—a spike in positive test rates and in numbers of COVID-19 cases, hospitalizations, and deaths—occurred in those and a few other states, forcing governors to reimpose restrictions they had declared unnecessary only a few weeks before.

In early October, during the final weeks of his presidential campaign, Trump himself tested positive for the coronavirus and developed COVID-19. He was admitted to [532]Walter Reed Medical Center in Bethesda, Maryland, with respiratory [533]symptoms and was reportedly treated there with advanced experimental drugs unavailable to almost all other Americans. Released at his insistence after only three days, he eventually resumed his campaign rallies before mostly unmasked supporters in several states. As before, Trump declined to wear a mask in public. Meanwhile, a third surge of the pandemic, which experts had warned would be far more deadly than the second, had begun. By early November more than 9.5 million Americans had developed COVID-19 and more than 225,000 had died of the illness.

Campaigns and litigation

Facing no serious challengers in the Republican presidential primaries of 2020, Trump became the party's presumptive nominee in March, having by then collected the minimum number of [534]delegates necessary to win the nomination. He was formally nominated at the Republican Party's national convention in late August. In an unusual decision, the [535]Republican National Committee declined to write a platform for the 2020 election, instead adopting the same platform it had issued in 2016 (despite its dated criticisms of the "current" president) with an accompanying resolution declaring that "the Republican Party has and will continue to enthusiastically support the President's America-first agenda." Shortly before the start of the Republican convention, the Trump campaign released a list of Trump's "core priorities" for a second term, including "Create 10 Million New Jobs in 10 Months," "Develop a [COVID-19] Vaccine by The End of 2020," "Return to Normal in 2021," "Protect Social Security and Medicare," "Bring Violent Extremist Groups Like ANTIFA to Justice," and "Require New Immigrants to Be Able to Support Themselves Financially." Throughout his campaign Trump also kept up a steady stream of insults and name-calling aimed at Biden, who became the Democratic Party's presumptive presidential nominee in April and was formally nominated at his party's national convention in mid-August. Biden promised that as president he would, among other things, bring the COVID-19 pandemic under control, reverse Trump's policies on immigration and the [536]environment, repair the country's frayed relations with foreign allies, repeal the 2017 corporate tax cut, strengthen [537]voting rights, and expand access to [538]health insurance under [539]Obamacare.

The COVID-19 pandemic was understandably a dominant issue in the election. Biden accused Trump of ignoring the early spread of the illness in the United States, mismanaging the nation's pandemic response, and resisting appropriate input and leadership from government scientific and health experts. Trump, for his part, initially accused Democrats of perpetrating a "hoax" by exaggerating the extent of infection and the danger of the illness. Through the remainder of his campaign, he continued to allege that Biden and other Democrats were overstating the severity of the health crisis for political advantage. A parallel issue was the adequacy of pandemic-related economic relief for individuals, businesses, and state and local governments.

The [540]pandemic also prompted governors and election officials in several states to postpone primary elections or to implement changes in election procedures to enable voters to cast their ballots safely. Such changes included extending voter registration deadlines and early voting periods; loosening or eliminating requirements for obtaining or casting mail-in ballots, which millions of voters were expected to use as an alternative to in-person voting; authorizing the use of drop boxes for returning mail-in ballots; and extending postelection deadlines for receipt of mail-in ballots, whose delivery was expected to be slowed by postal service delays and overwhelming demand. A smaller but still significant number of states declined to change their election procedures or did so in ways that arguably made voting more difficult or less safe than in other states. In October 2020, for example, the Republican governor of Texas, [541]Greg Abbott, issued a [542]directive that limited mail-in ballot drop boxes to one per county.

Pandemic-related changes to state election procedures were intensively litigated. Some were adopted in response to orders issued by federal or state courts, whose rulings were then upheld or struck down on appeal; others were initiated by state authorities and then challenged in the courts. In general, challenges to such changes were lodged by Republican election and government officials, state Republican parties and the Republican National Committee, and the Trump campaign, usually on the grounds that the changes usurped the [543]constitutional authority of state legislatures to establish electoral laws and procedures or that they invited voter fraud (none of the suits, however, presented any evidence of significant fraud). Democrats generally defended the changes as both constitutional and necessary to ensure the opportunity to vote amid an extraordinary public health emergency; they also [544]alleged that Republican opposition to the changes amounted to a form of [545]voter suppression that could unfairly turn the election in Trump's favour in swing states. In all, more than 300 election-related lawsuits were filed by both Democrats and Republicans prior to election day. The vast majority of Republican challenges were eventually dismissed.

Underlying the strategies of both parties was the accurate perception that Democratic voters were more likely to use mail-in ballots than Republican voters. Trump's oft-repeated but baseless claim that mail-in voting was rife with fraud and abuse only magnified Democratic concerns about alleged Republican voter suppression. So too did the appointment in May 2020 of a new postmaster general, [546]Louis DeJoy, a major Trump donor, who immediately [547]implemented service cuts and other operational changes in the [548]U.S. postal system that slowed mail delivery throughout the country.

Trump's attacks on mail-in voting and on the postal service itself were one element of a broader [549]accusation that he had emphasized during the 2016 presidential campaign and continued in the 2020 campaign and beyond: that the November election would be "rigged" by Democrats, resulting in "the most INACCURATE & FRAUDULENT Election in history," as he stated in a July 2020 tweet. In dozens of other tweets and at numerous campaign rallies, interviews, and press encounters, Trump claimed that thousands of mail-in ballots would be stolen or [550]forged by foreign countries and that Democratic election officials would neglect to send mail-in ballots to Republicans and would commit election fraud by intentionally miscounting mail-in ballots. In the summer and fall of 2020 Trump notably refused to commit himself to accepting a Biden victory in November, which seemed likely, given Biden's consistent and sizable lead over Trump in nationwide opinion polls. Trump insisted, to the contrary, that the only way the Democrats could win would be through fraud, at one point suggesting in a tweet that the election should be delayed "until people can properly, securely and safely vote???" On other occasions he asserted that he should be permitted to extend his first term to make up for the distraction of the [551]Russia investigation.

Trump's promotion of what amounted to a conspiracy theory of Democratic vote rigging prompted [552]criticism and varying levels of concern among Democrats as well as Trump's [553]conservative critics, including a small but vocal minority of Republican pundits and journalists. Some believed that Trump was merely setting the stage for a face-saving end to his presidency; others speculated that he would use lawsuits alleging election fraud in a dubious strategy to invalidate mail-in votes in swing states or to delay certification of state elections long enough to enable Republican-controlled state legislatures to take the extreme (albeit constitutional) step of replacing slates of pro-Biden electors chosen by voters with the legislatures' own slates of pro-Trump electors. Still others feared a scenario in which Trump would simply refuse to leave office, provoking a constitutional crisis in which (in a worst-case scenario) the U.S. military would become involved. An [554]abiding and widely shared concern, particularly among historians and political scholars, was that Trump's apparent conspiracy mongering would undermine Americans' trust in democratic institutions. American [555]democracy would be severely damaged, they argued, if a significant segment of either major party consistently refused to accept defeat in elections for president or any other high office.

The 2020 presidential election was unique and historic for the vast number of voters who cast ballots—whether in person or via mail, whether through early voting or on election day—and consequently for the vote totals of both the winning and losing candidates, Biden and Trump, respectively. Trump ultimately received more than 74 million votes and Biden more than 81 million—the latter figure being the highest for any presidential candidate in U.S. history. On the eve of the election, Trump continued to trail Biden in opinion polls in most swing states, though by thinner margins than in polls the previous summer. As voting proceeded, however, it became clear that the vote totals in some states would be far closer than polls had indicated. For a few days after election day (November 3), the outcome remained uncertain, in part because of the vast number of mail-in ballots (more than 65 million nationwide), which naturally took longer to count than in-person ballots. On November 7 the [556]Associated Press and the major U.S. television networks called the election for Biden, who, in their analysis, had by then secured 270 electoral votes, the minimum number needed to win the presidency. The eventual vote of the electoral college, which took place on December 14, was 306 for Biden and 232 for Trump.

Aftermath

At a press [557]encounter in the early morning of November 4, Trump declared himself the winner of the election and denounced the counting of mail-in ballots as a “fraud on the American people.” During the next several weeks he continually accused Biden and the Democrats of having stolen the presidential election and repeated far-fetched conspiracy theories about ballot stuffing, dead voters, and [558]malicious voting-machine software that had deleted or changed millions of votes for Trump. In addition, he personally pressured election officials and other authorities in Michigan, Georgia, and Pennsylvania to delay certifying or to overturn elections in their states and later attacked those among them who declined to cooperate.

In February 2023 a judge in Georgia ordered the partial release of the final report of a special-purpose [559]grand jury convened in 2022 to investigate possible criminal interference in the 2020 presidential election in Georgia by Trump and his allies. In the released portions of the report, the grand jury concluded that “no [560]widespread fraud took place in the Georgia 2020 presidential election that could result in overturning that election.” The grand jury also reported its belief that “perjury may have been committed by one or more witnesses testifying before it.”

Although nearly all preelection Republican lawsuits had been dismissed, Trump and his allies mounted scores of new challenges on similar grounds. As those efforts also failed, the Trump campaign conceived a more ambitious legal strategy. In late November a team of Trump-supporting lawyers drafted a complaint designed to be submitted directly to the Supreme Court on the basis of its original jurisdiction in cases involving disputes between the states. Eventually filed by Texas Attorney General Ken Paxton in early December, the complaint alleged that pandemic-related changes to electoral procedures in four swing states that had voted for Biden—Pennsylvania, Georgia, Michigan, and Wisconsin—were illegal and unconstitutional and had so increased the potential for voter [561]fraud that Biden’s victories in those states must be overturned. On December 11 the Court tersely dismissed the suit for lack of standing.

Trump’s legal efforts were ultimately unsuccessful, but his postelection narrative of election fraud and conspiracy, thematically continuous with the false claims of vote rigging that he had been making for months, was accepted by his base of dedicated supporters. Even the less [562]ardent among Trump voters were sympathetic to the notion that Biden had somehow cheated to win the presidential election. According to an [563]opinion poll taken in mid-November, more than 50 percent of all Republicans believed that Trump had “rightfully” won the election; another poll, in December, found that 77 percent of Republicans believed that there had been widespread election fraud.

As vote counting continued, various groups of radicalized Trump supporters quickly coalesced around the idea that forceful protests and even violent direct action were necessary and justified to stop the counting of fraudulent ballots and prevent Biden from taking office. A short-lived [564]Facebook group calling itself “Stop the Steal” was created on November 4 and grew to some 320,000 members in less than 24 hours before the [565]social media company shut it down because of posts containing disinformation and calls for violence. Stop the Steal enthusiasts soon migrated to other (renamed) Facebook groups and other social media [566]venues, where they repeated and elaborated conspiracy theories about the election and organized on-the-ground demonstrations in several cities, including at polling stations where supposedly fraudulent vote counting was underway.

After the electors from each state cast their votes for president and vice president on December 14, giving Biden an electoral college victory of 306 to 232, Trump and his allies, as well as leaders of Stop the Steal and other pro-Trump groups across the country, turned their attention to the last, formal step in the election of a U.S. president, the ceremonial opening and counting of the electoral votes of each state in a joint session of [567]Congress presided over by the vice president, [568]Mike Pence, on January 6. Some Trump allies reportedly advised the president, incorrectly, that the vice president's role in the ceremony entailed that Pence would have the constitutional authority to determine which slate of electors, Democratic or Republican, to accept from any given state. A federal lawsuit seeking a judgment to that effect, filed in late December by Texas Republican Rep. Louie Gohmert, was dismissed for lack of standing.

Meanwhile, in several tweets beginning in mid-December, Trump encouraged his supporters to attend a rally—initially planned by a pro-Trump group, Women for America First—in Washington, D.C., on January 6 to protest Congress's confirmation of Biden's victory. In one of the tweets, Trump stated, "Be there, will be wild!" At the rally, held at a public park near the White House, a crowd of thousands, including members of white supremacist and right-wing militia groups, listened to speeches by Trump's attorney Rudy Giuliani and Trump's sons Donald, Jr., and Eric, among others. In his own address to the crowd, Trump repeated well-worn falsehoods and conspiracy theories about election fraud, called on Pence to block Congress's confirmation of the electoral college vote—declaring that, if Pence failed to act, the rally crowd would not let the confirmation take place ("We're just not going to let that happen")—encouraged the crowd to "walk down Pennsylvania Avenue" to the Capitol building, and urged his audience to "fight like hell" or "you're not going to have a country anymore." Although Trump did not explicitly direct those in attendance to commit illegal acts, his generally [569]incendiary language suggested to at least some of his supporters that they would be justified in violently attacking Congress to prevent Biden's victory.

What caused the January 6, 2021, Capitol attack?

On the afternoon of January 6, 2021, supporters of Donald Trump stormed the United States Capitol building.[571]See all videos for this article

Even before Trump finished his address, a violent mob began [572]storming the perimeter of the Capitol building, where the House and Senate were then debating a doomed challenge by Republican lawmakers to the slate of electors from Arizona, which had voted for Biden. The mob grew larger as more people arrived from the rally at which Trump had spoken. Capitol police were quickly overwhelmed, and for the next several hours rioters vandalized and looted various parts of the complex, including the Senate chamber and the offices of Democratic House Speaker [573]Nancy Pelosi and others. One rioter was shot and killed by police, and four others, including a Capitol police officer, later died of injuries [574]sustained in the assault. After the complex was cleared that evening, Congress resumed the confirmation process, and Biden was certified as the winner of the presidential election of 2020 in the early morning hours of January 7. On January 8 Trump was permanently banned from Twitter for having posted tweets before, during, and after the assault that the company deemed to be in violation of its policy against glorification of violence. (Trump's Twitter account was later reinstated by the South African-born American billionaire [575]Elon Musk, who purchased the company in 2022.)

Less than one week later the House of Representatives, by a vote of 232 to 197, adopted a single article of impeachment against Trump for “incitement of insurrection,” making him the first president in U.S. history to be [576]impeached twice. At his Senate trial in February, which began three weeks after he left office on January 20, there was some debate about whether the Senate could try a president who was no longer in office. Trump was ultimately acquitted after only 57 senators, 10 short of the required two-thirds majority, voted to find him guilty.

Postpresidential activities

Two days after the insurrection of January 6, which had failed to prevent Congress from certifying the results of the 2020 presidential election, Trump announced that he would not attend Biden’s inauguration. He thereby defied a tradition nearly as old as the United States, one understood to symbolize the peaceful transfer of power and thus the strength and [577]continuity of American democracy. (Trump was the first U.S. president to decline to attend his successor’s inauguration since 1869, when Pres. [578]Andrew Johnson refused to witness the swearing in of [579]Ulysses S. Grant.) Trump and [580]first lady [581]Melania Trump left the White House on the morning of January 20, a few hours before Biden’s inauguration ceremony, and returned to their residence at [582]Mar-a-Lago.

Unlike most former presidents in the months following their departure from office, Trump did not attempt to keep a low public profile in deference to his successor. Indeed, beginning with an address at the Conservative Political Action Conference (CPAC) in February 2021, Trump delivered several public speeches in which he sharply criticized the new Biden administration, denounced Republican officeholders who had criticized or opposed him (including the 10 Republican House members who had voted to impeach him for inciting the January 6 U.S. Capitol attack), repeated his well-worn narrative of voter fraud in the 2020 election, and hinted that he intended to run for president again in 2024.

Despite his real-life electoral defeat and the [583]ignominious circumstances of his departure from office, Trump retained a sizable base of dedicated supporters, which he continued to [584]cultivate at his own campaign-style rallies and other events. Trump took advantage of his popularity among Republican voters to become an effective kingmaker within the party, a role that he exercised by granting or withholding endorsements of individual Republican candidates for federal, state, and even local offices, many of whom traveled to Mar-a-Lago to seek his approval. (Trump's [585]endorsed candidates tended to fare well in the primary elections of 2022 but were only partially successful overall in the November midterm elections.) Trump also amassed huge sums of money from millions of individual donors through his leadership PAC (see [586]political action committee) Save America, his super PAC Make America Great Again Inc., and other organizations. Soon after the midterm elections of 2022, Trump announced his candidacy for the [587]2024 Republican presidential nomination.

Former President Donald J. Trump as he appeared in a mug shot taken in August 2023 at the Fulton County Courthouse in Georgia. Trump was charged along with 18 others in a plot to overturn the 2020 presidential election results in that state.

Trump's presidential campaign faced several unique challenges in the form of ongoing criminal investigations and civil suits stemming from events before, during, and after his presidency. Among the major criminal probes were [590]Justice Department investigations, conducted from November 2022 by a special [591]counsel appointed by Attorney General [592]Merrick Garland, dealing with Trump's alleged incitement of the violent assault on the U.S. Capitol on January 6, 2021, and his alleged mishandling of numerous classified documents improperly removed from the White House, many of which were discovered at Mar-a-Lago during an [593]FBI search of the property in August 2022. In June 2023 Trump was indicted by the Justice Department on multiple federal criminal charges stemming from the classified-documents investigation. In December 2022 the special counsel's office expanded the January 6 investigation to focus on how the January 6 attack was funded and organized as well as on possible broader efforts by Trump and his aides to overturn election results in certain swing states, including by creating "fake" [594]slates of pro-Trump electors.

Meanwhile, the district attorney of Fulton county, Georgia, conducted a parallel investigation into Trump's efforts after the 2020 election to pressure state officials—including Georgia's secretary of state and its governor—into reversing or invalidating Biden's victory in the state, including by "finding" additional votes for Trump. (See above [595]Presidential election of 2020: Aftermath.) In September 2022 the [596]attorney general of [597]New York state filed a $250 million civil suit accusing Trump, his children Ivanka, Donald, Jr., and Eric, and the Trump Organization of radically misrepresenting the value of their properties and other assets to secure favourable loan and insurance rates and to minimize their tax liabilities. In March 2023 a lengthy [598]probe by the New York district attorney's office culminated in Trump's indictment on criminal charges in connection with a hush-money payment of $130,000 made during the 2016 presidential campaign to adult-film star Stormy Daniels, who claimed to have had an affair with Trump in 2006. At his arraignment in April, where the charges were made public, Trump pleaded not guilty to 34 felony counts of falsifying business records related to the reimbursement of his former personal attorney, Michael Cohen, for the latter's payment of hush money to Daniels. In an accompanying statement of facts, prosecutors also alleged that, under an arrangement with Trump and Cohen in 2016, the CEO of American Media, Inc., the publisher of the [599]National Enquirer and other tabloids, made a hush-money payment of $150,000 to Karen McDougal, a Playboy model who claimed to have had an affair with Trump in 2006-07, and another payment of $30,000 to a former doorman at [600]Trump Tower who [601]asserted that Trump had fathered a child out of wedlock (the Enquirer later concluded that the doorman's story was false). Trump denied having had affairs with Daniels and McDougal. Trump also faced a trial that began later in April in a civil suit brought by the writer E. Jean Carroll, who alleged that Trump had raped her in a department-store dressing room in the mid-1990s. In May the jury in the trial found Trump liable for having sexually abused Carroll and for later defaming her and awarded her $5 million in damages. Trump did not attend the trial, and his lawyer brought no witnesses in his defense.

In the view of some Republican Party leaders, the [602]formidable legal difficulties confronting Trump threatened to weaken his appeal to moderate Republican and independent voters and thus made him undesirable as the party's presidential nominee in the 2024 election. Florida Republican Gov. [603]Ron DeSantis, Trump's undeclared rival for the nomination (as of March 2023), notably condemned Trump's indictment on the hush-money charges but also referred disparagingly to Trump's involvement with a "porn star," thus indirectly dismissing Trump's viability as a candidate. Other Republicans took the hopeful position that Trump would use his court battles to increase his popularity by casting himself as the victim of multiple Democratic-led "witch hunts" and "hoaxes," as he routinely characterized the investigations and legal cases targeting him.

Style and rhetoric

Trump's personal style was unusual, if not unique, among national political figures in modern U.S. history. In part reflecting his experiences as a prominent figure in the New York real estate industry, Trump was fiercely competitive as well as intensely concerned with demonstrating his success and accomplishments to others. Indeed, from the very beginning of his career, he [604]cultivated and cherished his reputation as a shrewd businessman, an image that often aided him in his real estate dealings and which he eventually exploited as a brand beginning in the 1990s. That concern, however, was accompanied by an unusual sensitivity to criticism and a tendency to retaliate harshly against those who, in his view, had betrayed him or treated him unfairly. His longtime mentor, friend, and legal adviser [605]Roy Cohn (who had assisted [606]Joseph McCarthy's investigations of alleged [607]communist subversion in the U.S. government in the 1950s) had encouraged him in the latter regard, [608]counseling him on numerous occasions never to apologize (because it is a sign of weakness) and always to hit back harder than you are hit, as Trump put the lesson in The Art of the Deal. As he declared in a tweet in 2012, "When someone attacks me, I always attack back...except 100× more. This has nothing to do with a tirade but rather, a way of life!"

characteristically used blunt language as a weapon against his rivals and adversaries, pointedly insulting or belittling them in the press in retaliation for their real or perceived slights. Perhaps surprisingly, Trump did not significantly alter his style or temper his [610]rhetoric upon his entry into politics, notwithstanding the conventional view that success in politics is necessarily a matter of persuasion and compromise rather than “hitting back harder.” The advent of [611]Twitter in 2006 eventually gave Trump (who joined the service in 2009) a larger platform for his unfiltered political comments, once he began regularly tweeting about politics in about 2011. During the presidential primaries and in the 2015–16 election campaign, Trump frequently used his Twitter account, which had more than 40 million followers, to angrily attack individual Democrats, his Republican rivals and critics, members of the news media, and others in comments that were widely perceived as aggressive, boastful, petty, [612]vindictive, juvenile, and vulgar. Trump similarly declined to filter himself in speeches, once even mocking the physical disability of a reporter he disliked. Another unique feature of Trump’s rhetoric was the extremely large number of his public statements that were shown to be false or misleading by the press or by independent fact-checking organizations ([613]The Washington Post counted more than 30,500 such claims during Trump’s presidency). Although Trump’s detractors, including some in the [614]Republican Party, [615]admonished him for what they considered his undignified behaviour, their criticism only provoked him to make fresh attacks. Despite some speculation after his election that the weight of the presidential office and his eventual need for [616]tangible political and diplomatic successes would lead him to adopt a more conventional demeanour, his confrontational style and rhetoric continued unchanged during his presidency, and indeed the targets of his abuse only expanded. Trump’s frequent expressions of contempt for Democrats, along with his general unwillingness to compromise with Democratic leaders in Congress, considerably worsened partisan divisions in American politics, according to many analysts. In any event, Trump certainly distinguished himself from previous U.S. presidents by his heavy use of social media. He was the first president to rely on Twitter as a primary means of communication with his political supporters and the press, using it even as a [617]venue for semiofficial presidential statements.

Trump’s rhetoric also raised serious concerns among members of both parties about its potential damage to Americans’ faith in democratic institutions, particularly freedom of the press and the [618]rule of law. From early in his presidential campaign, Trump dismissed unfavourable press reports about him as “fake news,” implying that the news organizations in question knowingly published falsehoods. After his election Trump frequently condemned most major news organizations as “the enemy of the American people,” a phrase reminiscent of [619]totalitarian societies. The effect of his accusations was to [620]engender distrust and hostility among his supporters toward major media outlets other than [621]Fox News, which generally supported Trump in its reporting and which he regularly watched. Many political scientists and media scholars also pointed to more general problems, claiming that Trump’s efforts to portray the press as untrustworthy had created broad confusion and uncertainty among the electorate about what was true—or even a passive and resigned attitude about the possibility of ever knowing what was true. They also worried that Trump’s rhetoric would so diminish public confidence in the press that it would cease to serve effectively as a check on governmental power, the role that the founders of the country had [622]envisioned for it. [623]Analogous concerns were raised about Trump’s treatment of his perceived enemies in the FBI, the Justice Department, and the judiciary. His rhetoric, critics feared, would encourage some people to view those traditionally apolitical and independent institutions as untrustworthy and incapable of carrying out their responsibilities objectively and impartially.

Another controversial feature of Trump’s rhetoric, one that drew especially heavy criticism from [624]civil rights organizations, was his regular appeals to racist [625]stereotypes, his frequent [626]indulgence in racist slurs aimed at non-European minority and immigrant groups, and his refusal to consistently condemn violence aimed at minorities, including several acts of [627]police brutality against African Americans that prompted large protests in cities across the United States in the summer of 2020 (see [628]Black Lives Matter). Indeed, Trump repeatedly mischaracterized the mostly peaceful demonstrations against police brutality and for racial justice as mob violence by anarchist thugs. Trump’s detractors condemned him for such behaviour and warned that he was stirring up racial [629]animosities among his supporters and other Americans and encouraging those who already harboured such [630]prejudices to express them more freely in public or even to act on them violently. In the final months of the 2016 presidential campaign, in the period shortly after Trump’s election, and during the first three years of Trump’s presidency, there were notable increases in [631]hate crimes throughout the country—ranging from vandalism and assaults to bomb threats and mass shootings—particularly against Jews, Muslims, African Americans, Latinos, and LGBTQ persons, as indicated in various studies, including the FBI’s annual hate crime report. Although the validity and [632]implications of such statistics were disputed, many researchers and journalists agreed that Trump’s rhetoric had changed the country’s [633]political culture by making the public expression of hate-based and extremist attitudes more acceptable. Trump himself, meanwhile, denied that his speeches had had any such effect, proclaiming on more than one occasion that he was “the least racist person” in the world.

1.1.17 Why on Earth Would Republicans Make an Immigration Deal With This President? (2024-01-30 12:57)

Reports indicate that a forthcoming bipartisan border deal in the Senate may be dead on arrival – perhaps in its chamber of origin, and almost certainly in the narrowly-GOP-controlled House of Representatives. The specifics of the bill itself, chiefly negotiated by Oklahoma Republican James Lankford and Democratic Senate Majority Leader Chuck Schumer, are not yet public. Fox News correspondent Bill Melugin reported these alleged elements within the emerging deal over the weekend. Take these bullet points with a grain of salt, as we still don't know exactly what would be finalized in the proposed legislation. For what it's worth, some

1.1.18 The Emerging Drama Between the Trump Team and RFK Jr. Over the Veepstakes (2024-01-30 13:32)

Trump-Kennedy 2024 either was considered, was never considered, or is being considered. We don't know, and this is treacherous territory here because both men have a penchant for garnering media attention. Earlier reports mentioned how Trump's team contacted Robert F. Kennedy Jr. about being Donald Trump's running mate, which he didn't write off. Then, Trump adviser Chris LaCivita said this was fake news, citing RFK's lefty stances on the environment.

This is 100 % FAKE NEWS - NO ONE from the Trump Campaign ever approached RFK jr (or ever will) - one of the most LIBERAL and radical environmentalists in the country. For all the fake news- update your stories. [1]<https://t.co/HYBJLqSux0>— Chris LaCivita (@LaCivitaC) [2]January 28, 2024

To add more intrigue, RFK Jr. is saying that Trump's camp did reach out to him about being on the Republican ticket, but he's not interested in the job:

BREAKING: Robert Kennedy Jr. says that members of President Trump's team did ask him to be Trump's Vice President for his second administration. "People from the team have reached out to me," Kennedy said.

RFK Jr. also stated, "I'm flattered President Trump would offer (that) to... [3]pic.twitter.com/uMJ6ePI71j— Christian (@ChristianM_74) [4]January 29, 2024

He doesn't want the gig—I'm relieved. It still would have been an interesting story, especially since the liberal media and the Democrats would've blown a gasket. Still, there isn't much these two men agree on regarding policy. They may share the same sentiment on some issues, like how the Democratic Party rigs their primaries, but the environmental disagreements alone would be enough to keep Robert away.

Recommended

But Mr. Kennedy did get his name in the news cycle he otherwise wouldn't have, so I guess it was a win for him.

1.1.19 Yellen: Okay Fine, High Prices Are Here to Stay (2024-01-30 13:35)

Speaking during an interview with ABC News Live over the weekend, Treasury Secretary Janet Yellen admitted prices aren't going down, contradicting arguments repeatedly made by the Biden White House about easing inflation. In 2021, Yellen claimed inflation was "transitory."

Biden Treasury Secretary Janet Yellen: "I think most Americans know that prices are not likely to fall." [1]pic.twitter.com/QM9fWa56NS — RNC Research (@RNCResearch) [2]January 29, 2024

For months officials in the Biden administration have falsely claimed prices on everyday goods and services were going down. In reality, they're getting more expensive at a slower pace.

This week, we saw more evidence that our economy is strong and inflation is falling under President Biden. [3]pic.twitter.com/3Wlt2XAmGR — Karine Jean-Pierre (@PressSec) [4]January 27, 2024

During a briefing at the White House last week, Press Secretary Karine Jean Pierre had trouble explaining complaints from Biden when he purchased a smoothie that cost $6.

"Last Friday, the president was at a coffee shop in Pennsylvania, and he seemed to be surprised that the smoothie was $6 and how expensive it was," a reporter asked. "I'm curious. So is the president now realizing the costs that Americans are bearing?"

"So, look, when he went over to you all, to the press corps, he was having a good time, right? And offered, as you know, offered to buy them coffee," Jean Pierre responded. "There was a big group there, and he made sure everyone got coffee and pastries. So I just want to make that really clear."

1.1.20 House Majority Whip Swatted Over the Weekend (2024-01-30 13:39)

Rep. Tom Emmer (R-MN) became the latest election official to be swatted, the lawmaker announced on X.

"Tonight my family and I were the target of a 'swatting' incident involving a 911 prank call that wrongly diverted a police presence to my home," the House Majority Whip said. "Sadly, this illegal and dangerous scheme is being used nationwide to target elected officials."

Thankfully, no one was home or injured. I condemn this illegal abuse of police resources.

I want to thank the Wright County Sheriff's Office for their professionalism and support.

I will have no additional comment on this matter.— Tom Emmer (@GOPMajorityWhip) [1]January 28, 2024

Swatting is when a fake crime is reported to police in an attempt to elicit a heavy law enforcement response, preferably from a SWAT team.

Last month, more than a dozen prominent individuals and politicians were [2]swatted nationwide, including Republican presidential candidate Nikki Haley.

An unknown man called police to her Kiawah Island home alleging he shot his girlfriend while at the residence and was considering harming himself, according to The Hill.

Rep. Marjorie Taylor Greene has also been a [3]repeated victim of swatting, and pledged to introduce legislation to track down those responsible.

Earlier this month, GOP Sens. Rick Scott of Florida and Tommy Tuberville of Alabama [4]introduced The Preserving Safe Communities by Ending Swatting Act.

“Last month, criminals attempted a ‘swatting’ on my home in Florida in a despicable act of cowardice, clearly intending to terrorize my family and inflict fear and violence,” Scott said in a statement. “This is happening around the nation, not just to elected officials, but also to hundreds of Jewish institutions. It’s sickening, dangerous and we must stop it. I’m incredibly grateful for the work of law enforcement around our nation to keep us safe and put their lives on the line every day. They shouldn’t be put in danger and have their time and resources wasted because of these disgusting hoaxes. Today, I am introducing a bill to make sure the criminals who make these false calls and waste law enforcement resources face serious consequences, including years in prison, if anyone is seriously harmed. We must send a message to the cowards behind these calls—this isn’t a joke, it’s a crime.”

1.1.21 Trump Blasts Biden’s Dangerous Appeasement of Iran (2024-01-30 13:45)

Former President Donald Trump released a statement Sunday blasting President Joe Biden’s Middle East policy after three American service members were killed and dozens injured by an Iranian drone attack Saturday.

"The drone attack on a U.S. Military Installation in Jordan, killing 3 American Servicemembers, and wounding many more, marks a horrible day for America. My most profound sympathies go to the Families of the Brave Servicemembers we have lost. I ask all Americans to join me in praying for those who have been wounded. This brazen attack on the United States is yet another horrific and tragic consequence of Joe Biden's weakness and surrender," Trump said on Truth Social.

Trump then contrasted his foreign policy record with Biden's current posturing. Over the past six months, Iranian backed terror groups have attacked U.S. troops hundreds of times with little response.

"Three years ago, Iran was weak, broke, and totally under control. Thanks to my Maximum Pressure policy, the Iranian Regime could barely scrape two dollars together to fund their terrorist proxies. Then Joe Biden came in and gave Iran billions of dollars, which the Regime has used to spread bloodshed and carnage throughout the Middle East. This attack would NEVER have happened if I was President, not even a chance - Just like the Iranian-backed Hamas attack on Israel would never have happened, the War in Ukraine would never have happened, and we would right now have Peace throughout the World. Instead, we are on the brink of World War 3," he continued. "This terrible day is yet more proof that we need an immediate return to PEACE THROUGH STRENGTH, so that there will be no more chaos, no more destruction, and no more loss of precious American lives. Our Country cannot survive with Joe Biden as Commander in Chief."

Just two weeks ago Biden was asked by a reporter what his message was to Iran as their proxy groups continue to attack shipping in the Red Sea and U.S. military assets.

"I've already delivered the message to Iran. They know not to do anything," he said.

1.1.22 Venezuela, Like Iran, Plays Biden for a Fool and America Suffers for It (2024-01-30 13:50)

In October, under the approving eye of the Biden administration, Venezuela's cutthroat government inked an agreement with the country's opposition parties. Called the Barbados Agreement, it was a pledge to work toward a free presidential election.

What's not to like, right? The government of Nicolás Maduro trumpeted the agreement as a breakthrough, and the Biden administration swallowed the propaganda hook, line, and sinker.

Biden believed that by lifting the sanctions, Venezuela's migrant problem would subside. He was dead wrong. The number of illegals coming to the United States from Venezuela soared.

Biden didn't notice that despite the grandiose pronouncements of progress toward democratic reform, Maduro offered no concessions. So it surprised no one except Joe Biden that the Maduro government disqualified the hugely popular opposition candidate, Maria Corina Machado.

The puppet legislature declared her ineligible to run for 15 years, and the kangaroo Supreme Court echoed the decision.

[1]Wall Street Journal:

On Saturday the State Department [2]said the ruling is "inconsistent with the commitment" made in Barbados. No kidding. State noted that Ms. Machado "neither received a copy of the allegations against her nor was afforded the opportunity to respond to those allegations." It said the U.S. is "reviewing our Venezuela sanctions policy, based on this development and the recent political targeting of democratic opposition candidates and civil society."

There isn't much to review. Mr. Maduro learned his politics from Fidel Castro and isn't about to step aside. The U.S. was naive to think he'd allow a free election, and the only realistic response is to restore the sanctions.

Despite evidence of Iran's perfidy going back four decades, first Barack Obama and then Biden tried to deal with the Islamic thugs in Tehran. Obama signed a terrible nuclear deal in 2015, unfreezing billions in Iranian assets. He also shipped $400 million in cash to the mullahs in a deal for hostages, the first time America had paid for its people. As predicted back then, the Iranians simply snatched four more Americans.

Then in 2023, Joe Biden swapped five Americans for $6 billion. What possesses a man like Biden to trust these brigands and murderers?

It's the left-wing impulse to "save" these miscreants and bring them back into the civilized fold. Until his last day in office, Obama was agitating to get the World Trade Organization to accept Iran as a member. Fortunately, no one in the WTO was that stupid.

But Biden is a different story.

[3]New York Sun:

If indeed, as Mr. Blinken suggests, the six billion [4]spondulix are yet to be transferred to Iran from a Qatari bank, why would America let this deal go forward now that Hamas, an Iranian proxy army, has so barbarically attacked Israeli citizens? Washington has the wherewithal to halt the $6 billion payment and renege on the ransom deal now that the hostages Iran has held are back on American soil. So what's going on?

The answer seems to be that President Biden's team remains wedded to the idea that appeasing the Islamic Republic is feasible — never mind all the evidence to the contrary. Iran and its "death to Israel" coterie is adamant to stop any American-backed peace between Israel and Arab countries, and especially the overly-advertised Washington push for a treaty between Jerusalem and Riyadh, which has emerged against Israel in the war.

Caracas believes that it can afford sanctions more than it can afford a loss in the presidential election and a certain trial for corruption. As long as Biden is in office, Venezuela can rest easy

1.1.23 Joe Biden Just Got Humiliated in the Border Standoff With Texas (2024-01-30 13:52)

A constitutional crisis looms as states like Texas have taken it upon themselves to enforce our nation's immigration laws and protect our country from invasion.

Earlier this week, the Biden administration demanded Texas Attorney General Ken Paxton give Border Patrol access to a city park on the Rio Grande riverfront, but the Texas National Guard continued to defend the state of Texas and, indeed, the United States, despite those threats. Since then, Joe Biden has been under pressure from the left to federalize the Texas National Guard so they can't block U.S. Customs and Border Patrol from removing razor wire from barriers on the southern border.

Well, that might be a moot point, as Border Patrol has taken a side on this issue, and they're siding with Texas.

And they weren't shy about it either.

"Rank-and file BP agents are not going to start arresting TX NG members for following their LAWFUL orders. That's fake news," the Border Patrol union said in a [1]statement posted to X/Twitter. "TX NG and rank-and-file BP agents work together and respect each other's jobs. Period. If TX NG members have LAWFUL orders, then they have to carry out those orders. TX NG members realize that rank-and-file BP agents have their orders as well. Lawful orders, no matter how unpopular or distasteful amongst rank-and-file agents, must be followed. Unlawful orders (as determined by competent legal counsel and not what some outhouse lawyer behind a keyboard says) will not be followed."

The statement continues, "Rank-and-file BP agents appreciate and respect what TX has been doing to defend their state in the midst of this catastrophe that the Biden Admin has unleashed on America. We want to be perfectly clear, there is no fight between rank-and-file BP agents and the TX NG, Gov. Abbott, or TX DPS. It may make flashy headlines, but it simply isn't true."

Make no mistake about it: this is a stunning development, as Joe Biden finds himself stripped of the leverage he once held in this confrontation. Mere days ago, the White House acknowledged that Joe Biden had authority in this matter, even though they weren't willing to say one way or another that he'd use it. It was a clear warning, but now that warning rings hollow, rendering Joe Biden impotent and bereft of the presidential bully pulpit. The dynamics have clearly shifted in this standoff, leaving Biden in a weakened position.

1.1.24 Shock Survey: Almost One-Third of Gen Z Now Gender-Queer (2024-01-30 13:54)

Convention dictates the "shock survey" bit in the headline. But, truth be told, maybe these results should not be considered so shocking given the volume and intensity of LGBTQ+++™ propaganda aimed at children over the last decade or so.

Via [1]NBC News (emphasis added):

More than 1 in 4 Gen Z adults in the U.S. identify as lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender or queer, dwarfing the percentages of LGBTQ Americans in older age groups, a new survey has found.

Twenty-eight percent of Gen Z adults — which the survey’s researchers specify as those ages 18 to 25 — identify as LGBTQ, according to a [2]report released this week by the Public Religion Research Institute, or PRRI. That compares with 10 % of all adults, 16 % of millennials, 7 % of Generation X, 4 % of baby boomers and 4 % of the Silent Generation, the institute found.

“With respect to LGBTQ identity, it’s very clear that Gen Z adults look different than older Americans,” said Melissa Deckman, PRRI’s chief executive.

Transgender social engineers, of course, would explain away these results by arguing that the reason we see a ten-fold differential between the rate of LGBTQ+++™ identification among baby boomers vs. zoomers is that society has simply become more tolerant and accepting of “alternative lifestyles” and that this is the organic result.

They conveniently ignore the veritable avalanche of trans propaganda targeted at children, particularly in public schools and in the untamed corners of the internet, which parents largely don’t understand and which child-grooming entities exploit to disseminate mind-altering content.

Continuing:

The findings are in line with those of other major surveys, including Gallup’s, that show Gen Z is the queerest adult generation to date. In its most recent poll, released in February of last year, [3]Gallup found 7.2 % of adults in the U.S. identify as LGBTQ, including nearly 20 % of those in Gen Z, which that survey defined as those ages 19 to 26.

PRRI’s findings, which were published Monday, come as LGBTQ rights face increasing challenges in the U.S...

“Whether it’s at the polls, in marches and rallies, or online, LGBTQ+ visibility matters and Gen Z is a force for change,” Kelley Robinson, the president of the Human Rights Campaign, the country’s largest LGBTQ advocacy group, said in a statement. “Thousands of LGBTQ+ young people turn 18 each day — and lawmakers should understand there will be repercussions in November for anti-LGBTQ+ political attacks.”

Let’s not that this “straight news” article itself is subject to bias, as it was written by Matt Laviates, correspondent for [4]NBC Out, which “highlight[s] the next generation of LGBTQ leaders, creators, and newsmakers.”

1.2.1 How to Ensure a Big, Ugly War With Iran (2024-02-04 10:28)

Iranian-backed militias have attacked American installations and forces in Syria, Iraq, and Jordan some 170 times.

Ostensibly, these terrorist groups claim they are hitting U.S. forces to coerce America into dropping its support of Israel and demanding a cease-fire in the Gaza war.

In reality, these satellite terrorists are being directed in a larger effort by Iran to pry the U.S. out of the Middle East, in the manner of the 1983 Marine barracks bombing.

That way, Iran will be free to fulfill its old dream of becoming a nuclear shield for a new Shiite/Persian terrorist axis from Tehran to Damascus to Beirut to the West Bank and Gaza—surrounding Israel and intimidating the Gulf regimes and more moderate states like Jordan and Egypt into concessions.

These Iranian appendages have made a number of unfortunately correct assumptions about America in general and the Biden administration in particular.

One, after the recent serial humiliations of the flight from Afghanistan, the passivity of watching a Chinese spy balloon traverse with impunity the continental United States, the mixed American signals on the eve of the Ukraine war, the troubled Pentagon's recruitment and leadership lapses, and the destruction of the U.S. southern border, both Iran and its surrogates feel that the United States either cannot or will do much of anything in response to their aggression.

They see the U.S. military short thousands of recruits, its leadership politicized, its munition stocks depleted by arms shipments to Ukraine and Israel, and the massive abandonment of weapons in Kabul.

Two, they view Joe Biden's serial appeasement as a force multiplier of these perceptions of American weakness. After entering office, the Biden administration begged for a renewed Iran deal from a preening theocracy. It sought to ensure calm by delisting the Houthis from global terrorist designations and sending hundreds of millions of dollars to Hamas and radical Palestinians to buy good behavior.

Biden may have agreed that Iran was the spider in the center of the Middle East Islamic terrorist web, but only thereby to win over it with bribes such as lifting embargoes and sanctions to ensure an Iranian windfall of $90 or more billion in oil sales revenue.

Biden green lighted a bribery payment of $6 billion to Iran to return American hostages, thereby ensuring more will be taken. It loudly distanced itself from the Netanyahu government. The gulf encouraged radicals to believe they could coerce Israel into accepting radical Islamic states on the West Bank and Gaza.

Three, after hitting American stations and bases 170 times and seeing little sustained, much less disproportionate, responses, Iran and its satellites now feel they are winning proxy wars with the U.S.

They have all but shut down the Red Sea as an international shipping route—damaging Europe, Egypt and Israel, which all depend on Red Sea commerce for vital imports and exports.

Iran has forced Biden to publicly alienate the Netanyahu government and push a ceasefire down Israel's throat. And it has helped to spark international pro-Hamas protests throughout Europe and the US that timid and compliant left-wing governments fear could lose them close elections.

But most damaging are administration spokesmen who mouth the same empty script after each serial attack: 1) The US will respond at the time and place of its own choosing. 2) The US finds no direct evidence of Iranian involvement, although it clearly has supplied the attackers; 3) The US does not wish a wider war and has no plans to attack Iran itself.

Translated to our enemies, it means an 80-year-old non-compos-mentis president is in no position to prevent, much less win, a theater-wide Middle East war that his own serial appeasement has now nearly birthed.

Biden and the Democratic Party know, as National Security Advisor Jake Sullivan pointed out just prior to the Oct. 7 attacks on Israel, that the administration inherited a deterred and quiet Middle East. And then it blew up on their appeasing watch.

Now they are terrified of a theater-wide conflict breaking out during an election year—a fact known to all of America's Middle East enemies.

Biden and company have forgotten the ancient wisdom that preparing loudly only for peace guarantees war. To prevent war, it should return to oil sanctions on Iran, embargo its banking transactions, slap a travel ban on Iran and its allies, cut off all aid to Hamas and the West Bank, and restore a true terrorist designation for the Houthis.

US officials must stop aimlessly babbling. If the administration must speak, Washington should do so by conveying disproportionality and unpredictability. And if, and when, America were to strike, it should do so in silent and devastating fashion.

When serially attacked, loudly responding that we will only proportionally strike back and wish no wider war will only ensure a big, ugly one.

1.2.2 Democrats Continually Win the Word Game, While Republicans Are Clueless (2024-02-04 10:31)

Democrats are masters of creating new terms and phrases that stick in the minds of the people they wish to influence. Republicans, by contrast, have little or no such capabilities.

Terms that Stick

The all-time stroke of Democrat wordplay genius happened several decades back. Everyone knew that Democrats, by and large, were for abortion and that Republicans, by and large, were not. The terminology for the two sides was pro-abortion and pro-life. Democrats came to realize that pro-abortion didn't sound all that palatable.

Sure enough, when the dust settled, Democrats began calling their view pro-choice, with that new term effectively eliminating the use of pro-abortion forevermore while standing in juxtaposition to the term pro-life. This was a stroke of genius because pro-choice implies that a woman could choose whether or not to have a baby. It seemed quite egalitarian.

Republicans, by contrast, were pro-life. The meaning of that term equated to no other option besides carrying the baby to term. Since then, Democrats have slaughtered Republicans at every turn in terms of terminology.

Voter Suppression By Any Other Name

Consider the Inflation Reduction Act. A more accurate name would be the Inflation Enhancement Act or the Inflation Acceleration Act. Biden and company knew, however, that calling the Act what it actually leads to would never work.

How about the Voting Rights Act? The name sounds great, doesn't it? Ergo, the Act wins the hearts and minds of millions of low-information voters. Such voters do not pay attention to anything more than the name itself. Hence they are easily misled. 'Voting rights,' that sounds good. Why would anyone want to be against that?"

What was the Republican response to the introduction of this intentionally misnamed piece of legislation? A big, fat nothing. Republicans could have immediately called it the "voter fraud establishment act." That would have perked up some ears. They could have called it the "citizen disenfranchisement act."

Alas, in their mysterious ways, Republicans, and Conservatives in general, don't seem to have a clue as to why carefully chosen words, specific terminology, and keenly crafted phrases matter in politics. Over many, many years the Right has been blowing grand opportunities to participate in the catchy characterization contest.

The Reverse Name Game

One has to wonder, how many under-informed voters end up pulling the tab for Democrats only because of terminology that sounds more appealing?

George Soros organizations, among the most leftist on Earth, play the name game expertly. Among the hundreds of organizations that Soros founded or otherwise supports, their names are ALWAYS the direct opposite of what they actually stand for.

His Open Society Foundations and Foundation to Promote Open Society are two multi-billion dollar far-left grant and advocacy foundations bent on restricting freedoms everywhere. His Institute for New Economic Thinking advocates unorthodox, radical, far-left economic policy positions. Review 100 or more Soros organizations and you see the reverse name game employed every single time.

When the quintessential term liberal began to fall out of favor with legions of voters, Democrats/Leftists migrated to the more palatable-sounding progressive. Notice that Democrats didn't move from liberal to socialist or Marxist, which would have been completely accurate. Marxist, they knew, carried highly toxic connotations. Socialists were not quite as onerous as Marxists, but still needed to be avoided.

Oddly enough, the few souls who are aware of the history of the American progressive movement know that progressive means socialist. Since most people are unaware of history, have never heard of Eugene Debs, and couldn't give a hoot about any of it, Democrats felt reasonably safe using progressive. When "Democratic Socialist" Bernie Sanders ran for president in 2016, the term socialist re-emerged.

When low-information voters encounter the term progressive, the thought pattern is, “Why wouldn’t I want to be progressive? That’s a good thing, right?”

Once Democrats devise a catchy name that will stick, whether or not it has any basis in reality, they blast it all over creation, aided and abetted by the sycophantic mass media which covers for them 24/7.

Like a Sledgehammer

With the winning terminology in place, Democrats pound it into all of their talking points. Then, in a short period of time, invariably these catchy characterizations become the everyday reality with which we all must deal.

To this day, pro-choice – which means pro-abortion – is the prevailing term for those who want to abort babies. Meanwhile, sadly, Republicans and Conservatives don’t merely lose the word game, they simply have no game.

1.2.3 Actually the One Calling the Shots On the Border (2024-02-04 10:33)

House Speaker Mike Johnson (R-LA) suggests that President Joe Biden is not the voice behind the nation’s ongoing border crisis.

This week, Johnson cast his doubts that Biden is not the one calling the shots on the administration’s immigration policy, which is devastating the United States.

“He knows that he has the authority. We’ve documented it for him,” Johnson said during an interview with Fox Business. “I’ve read to him the law myself — to the president. Read him the provisions of the law and said, ‘Mr. President, please take action.’ I don’t think he’s allowed to do it.”

Johnson suggested that the president's staff is making the decision for him, adding that he thinks they are pushing him to keep the border open.

The Speaker also said that Biden and Homeland Security Secretary Alejandro Mayorkas' actions of dismantling the Trump Administration's border policy on the first day of the 81-year-old is in office suggest the border crisis "is by design."

"Biden went in on the first day of office and began issuing executive orders to ... create this catastrophe. Maria, we say it's 'by design' because there is no other explanation," Johnson said. "We documented 64 executive actions, agency actions, that he and Mayorkas have taken to create this. They could unwind it today by the stroke of a pen."

The U.S.-Mexico border has seen record amounts of illegal crossings. The fiscal year 2023 alone saw a massive number of illegal aliens storm the southern border, with a record of 3.2 million migrants encountered. This number does not include "gotaways" or those who have avoided detection. Since Biden took office, more than 8 million illegal aliens have entered the United States.

Johnson and Biden have been neck and neck with one another as the president continues to ask Congress to pass a bipartisan bill addressing the country's illegal immigration issue. At the same time, Republicans are demanding Biden to do more to stem the record-breaking flow of illegal aliens from entering the U.S.

A border deal has been in the works for several weeks now. The Democrat-controlled Senate is working on a deal that would include additional aid for Ukraine and Israel, with border security reforms. However, Johnson has already said the deal would be "dead on arrival" in the GOP-led House.

1.2.4 Facebook is insane about unemployment and doomsday clock (2024-02-05 10:55)

So I tell everybody I'm unemployed, because of World War 3, military draft, nato invading Ukraine. and I lose 15 followers. I rightly explain it is linked to 90 seconds to midnight on the doomsday clock and I lose 15 followers and 5 friends. What the fuck people. I screenshot the website.

So basically they want nuclear war on facebook and me living under a bridge with little food as long as I lose followers, because they're the biggest corrupted dipshits I've ever seen.

Oh they're worried about chaos they say with their 40-60 likes and 20 comments per post in their bubble. WTF people. There is something seriously wrong with facebook. I'm unemployed so its not all rainbows and unicorns!

Facebook go fuck yourself.

1.2.5 The Absurd Democrat Border Con (2024-02-09 20:30)

In 2021, President Joe Biden opened an inherited, secure southern border that finally stopped mass illegal immigration.

When he overturned former President Donald Trump's efforts, a planned flood of over 8 million illegal immigrants entered the U.S.

Almost all arrived without background checks, health screening, or vaccination certificates – but with massive needs for free housing, education, healthcare, and food entitlements and subsidies.

For four years, Trump battled the courts, his Democratic opposition, and the open-border establishments within his own party to ensure legal-only immigration. Somehow, he rebuilt some of the old porous border fence. He had begun to build his long-promised new wall to the Gulf of Mexico. He had ended Obama-era catch-and-release.

Would-be refugees had to apply for asylum in their home country. Trump leveraged Mexican President Andres Manuel Lopez Obrador to police his own border and stop cynically transiting millions of illegal aliens into the U.S.

There was general Democratic Party opposition to all of Trump's measures through Congress and the courts.

For the last three years of Biden's mass influx, the left has applauded open borders. That is, until late last year, when overwhelmed southern border state governors began busing and flying illegal immigrants en masse to northern sanctuary-city jurisdictions.

For years, these sanctuary zones had preened their liberality about open borders. They smeared as "racists" and "xenophobes" any who insisted on legal-only immigration.

But now they were subject to the real-life ramifications of their own destructive ideologies.

Major blue-state cities like Chicago, Los Angeles, San Francisco, and Washington, D.C., became outraged that they were inundated with tens of thousands of immigrants, all without legality, veritable identification, or background checks.

Some proved violent. Others crowded out scarce resources essential to millions of inner-city poor.

The liberal architects of illegal immigration are usually rich and powerful enough to be insulated from the consequences of their utopian policies.

But not so their poor or minority constituents. They deal first-hand with spiking crime, appropriation of their parks and civic centers, and restricted access to now overwhelmed social services.

So the once open-border Democrat Party and Biden are in a quandary. They now fear mass defections of core Latino and Black voters in an election year.

But how can they square the circle of insisting on open borders with the need to appear to their own voters as determined to close them?

We saw the absurd answer this week. Shameless Democrats tried to enlist naive and foolish Republicans to bail them out with a "comprehensive immigration bill."

It was really designed to keep the border open while spending billions of dollars to facilitate more rapid and orderly transits – and more substantial welfare support for millions of illegals here and still to come.

Now Democrats, in lunatic fashion, claim that anyone who did not sign on to codify and regulate illegal immigration was responsible for their own deliberate open border policies in the first place

To add insult to injury, they next sought to piggyback their toxic immigration bill onto massive aid for Israel and Ukraine. It was a transparent effort to blame any Republicans for harming Israel and aiding Putin, should they not sign on to a more efficient open border.

The real agenda of the bill's supporters is absolutely no return to Trump's legal-only immigration and a secure border.

That simple solution requires no new legislation and almost no new spending. But it does imply acknowledgment that the hated Trump had solved the problem executively – and that admission is apparently taboo.

Finally, public outrage from the left and conservative anger at foolish and naive Republican enablers stopped the bill.

Still, it remains somewhat unclear why Biden and his Homeland Security chief, Alejandro Mayorkas, destroyed what Trump had achieved. Why would they ensure such misery for both American hosts and millions of illegal immigrants?

Did they want new long-term constituents, given that their neo-socialist agendas cannot win over a majority of current Americans?

Is importing millions of the poorest and most in need on the planet a way to ensure a still larger Great Society of entitlements and, with it, higher taxes on the "filthy rich?"

Do they assume that America's increasingly non-Election-Day balloting ensures far less authentication and rejection of mail-in ballots, and thus it will be relatively easy for non-citizens to vote?

Many, left and right, make no effort to hide their desire for cheap imported labor – even though the current labor participation rate is only 62 percent of the potential American workforce.

Finally, one might expect this artifice from the left that is wedded to open borders.

But why some establishment Republicans aided and abetted these disingenuous efforts is yet another reminder why the doctrinaire Republican Party had to be reinvented by Trump.

1.2.6 Why Special Counsel Robert Hur Cited Biden's Mental Lapses in Classified Doc Report (2024-02-09 20:35)

While some have not taken this route in defending Joe Biden, the Biden White House and some legal observers on liberal news networks have taken this position: it was inappropriate for Special Counsel Robert Hur to mention the president's spotty memory and age during his deposition. Biden was the subject of a federal investigation concerning mishandling classified materials. While Hur opted not to charge Biden, the damage was done: the main concern about Biden—his mental health—got injected with steroids. Almost three-quarters of the country doesn't want Biden to run again and think he's too old. The White House presser Biden held last night only reinforced those data sets. Yet, Andrew McCarthy, a National Review editor, decided to defend Hur and his inclusion of Biden's memory lapses for a simple reason: it was required. McCarthy added the report might have provided cause to invoke the 25th Amendment.

On the memory observations, which included a particularly damning passage about Joe forgetting when Beau Biden died, McCarthy, a former assistant US attorney, said that Democrats were shooting the messenger. Hur was required to include the mental health aspects of the investigation. He's responsible for relaying any litigation issues that could come up at trial to Attorney General Merrick Garland. If anything, McCarthy says Democrats should be directing their fire at Garland (via [1]NRO):

Hur was required by regulation to explain his rationale for charging decisions in a "confidential report." (See Rule 600.8[c] of the Special Counsel Regs, Title 28, Code of Federal Regulations.) It is then up to the attorney general to decide whether to release all or part of the report to the public. (See Rule 600.9[c].)

Understand: Prosecutorial deliberations over whether to charge people nearly always cast a suspect in a bad light, even if the decision to decline prosecution is made. That is especially the case when the evidence of a crime is strong and the prosecutors must rationalize that other factors — especially, disabilities and the likely impact of them on a jury — justify leniency.

There is absolutely nothing inappropriate in Hur's consideration of how Biden's mental decline would play in a jury trial. Moreover, the special counsel's job is to make the AG aware of significant litigation issues that might arise if the decision to indict were made. One such issue might be a claim that Biden is unfit to stand trial and meaningfully assist in his own defense — even if, at the time of the criminal acts outlined in the report, his mental faculties were markedly better than they are now.

If Democrats want to be angry at someone, be angry at Attorney General Merrick Garland. The regs make the report confidential, but Garland is the one who decided to release it publicly. You can argue that, politically, he had no choice. But the truth of it is that he did have a choice. The one who didn't have a choice is Hur.

McCarthy also included how disclosures have changed since the 1970s. The public was never “privy” to the deliberations. If nothing came of an investigation, prosecutors closed the file and moved on to other matters. Being hurled to the wolves in the court of public opinion seems rudimentary now. Still, McCarthy added that it’s not standard for law enforcement to “publicly discuss the evidence against uncharged persons, as well as the personal information about them that factors into charging decisions.”

He added, “If the government does not formally charge a crime, then the prosecutors are not supposed to sully the suspect in the court of public opinion, where the suspect lacks the forum and often the means to mount a defense.” Yet, it’s now normal for the “confidential report” to be released. McCarthy observed that maybe such methods are necessary since these probes are the ones that have held overreaching executive branches in check.

While McCarthy explained why Hur would have been derelict not to include the state of Biden’s mental health to Mr. Garland, he also explored whether the report provided grounds to invoke the 25th Amendment. He thinks that it does:

1.2.7 DNC Files FEC Complaint Against RFK Jr. As Super PAC Tries Get Him on State Ballots (2024-02-09 21:10)

The Democratic National Convention filed a Federal Election Commission complaint against independent presidential candidate Robert F. Kennedy Jr.'s presidential campaign and the super PAC working to get him elected.

On Friday, the DNC accused RFK Jr. of receiving an illegal contribution from the Kennedy-aligned super PAC American Values 2024.

RFK Jr.'s campaign is "in the process of accepting a $15 million unlawful in-kind contribution by coordinating their efforts to get him on the ballot," DNC legal counsel Bob Lenhard [1]said in a call regarding the FEC complaint.

"[RFK Jr.'s campaign] has acknowledged that it is time-consuming and expensive for a first-time candidate to get on the presidential ballot in all 50 states. Rather than doing that

In response, American Values 2024 co-chair Tony Lyons criticized the DNC, accusing the Left of attempting to take away American's constitutional right to vote in a presidential election.

"The DNC wants to deny millions of people their basic constitutional voting rights in a relentless onslaught against democracy," Lyons said in a statement. "his FEC complaint is just another desperate DNC tactic to defame Kennedy, vilify him, and drain his campaign funds. The American people are too smart to be fooled by these political games."

Last year, the super PAC announced plans to spend at least $15 million to help get Kennedy on the ballot in several states crucial to winning the 2024 election.

Campaign finance reports show Kennedy has garnered majority support from Republican-leaning states. (Via the [2]Epoch Times)

Mr. Kennedy announced in April 2023 that he would challenge President Biden for the Democratic Party presidential nomination. He has generated wide-ranging support from conservatives, moderates, independents, and Libertarians throughout his campaign, although he hasn't gained the same favor from many Democrats. Campaign finance reports have shown that Mr. Kennedy gets more support from Republican-leaning donors than Democrats. For months, Mr. Kennedy was confronted with roadblocks from the Democratic National Committee, which he said was "rigging" the primary process to favor President Joe Biden. On Oct. 9, he declared his candidacy for president as an independent.

In a statement regarding the matter, RFK Jr. said that the DNC "is in no position to assert morality over anyone — they refused to have a primary and have worked against the will of the people in the past few elections."

1.2.8 Does Canada Exist? (2024-02-09 21:30)

"An evil man will burn his own nation to the ground to rule over the ashes." —Sun Tsu

Major Russ Cooper, CEO of [1]Canadian Citizens for Charter Rights and Freedoms, puts the question succinctly. "How could it be that the country that once called itself 'strong and free' could have fallen so far from grace? The fact that it has done so is evidenced by a plethora of instances that have put a new national coarseness and vacuity on display."

Canadians have had their disagreements and scandals aplenty over the years, but nothing so tragically destructive and corrupt as we have experienced since the election of Justin Trudeau. "Canada is back," was Trudeau's slogan, but he got it wrong. "Canada is backward," is closer to the truth, falling year by year into the slough of third-world primitiveness and stagnation. It may be more appropriate to say, as we will note further on, that Canada no longer exists.

Consider the nation's fiscal health. According to the prestigious [2]C.D. Howe Institute, "Comparing investment in Canada to that in the United States and other OECD countries reveals that, before 2015, Canadian businesses had been closing a long-standing gap between investment per available worker in Canada and abroad. Since 2015, however, the gap has become a chasm. Business investment and productivity are closely related...Having investment per worker much lower in Canada than abroad... prefigures weaker growth in Canadian earnings and living standards than in other OECD countries."

Why is 2015 the critical year when the national downturn began? It was the year Justin Trudeau was elected, announcing his intention to bring "[3]sunny ways" to Canada, and in his [4]Open Letter to Canadians, pledging "to invest in growing our economy" and promising to lead "an open, honest government that is accountable to Canadians, lives up to the highest ethical standards... and applies the utmost care and prudence in the handling of public funds."

It didn't work out that way, not by a long shot. As noted, business investment has slipped badly since Trudeau assumed power and future productivity will continue to decline. Canada's [5]debt is now $2.18 trillion and its [6]deficit is $46.5 billion in a nation that, as of 2021, counted only [7]28.1 million tax filers. This, among a spate of disasters, is Justin Trudeau's legacy.

If we are clear-eyed and look about us without preconceptions, we see a country embracing its own demise, one bill, enactment, levy, and piece of legislation after another.

The effect of “climate change” policy entailing carbon taxes, bans on fertilizers, the shutting down of standard energy production, the marketing of costly and inefficient electric vehicles that threaten to [8]deplete the power grid, and the legislating of largely unworkable and extortionate green renewables, based on [9]insecure and fabricated science and dodgy computer models, has been to impoverish both producers and ordinary citizens in bringing about a new and despotic dispensation.

A once-prosperous people has been transformed within a remarkably short time into a nation of debtors and economic pariahs. Writing in [10]American Thinker, Alexander Nussbaum finds a relatively strong correlation between “global warmism and socialist economics,” producing a depressed economic environment. The push for “net-zero” decarbonization leads to steep economic decline, which is what the prime minister and his cronies earnestly appear to desire.

Although the wretched [11]Emergencies Act that Trudeau invoked to quell the Trucker Freedom Convoy protest against his vaccine mandates was recently [12]declared illegal, Finance Minister Chrystia Freeland will appeal the decision — the one who froze bank accounts and sent letters to China, India, and some other countries demanding they not do business with those involved with the protest.

“Little people” like Convoy organizer Tamara Lich went to prison for not obeying Trudeau’s drastic and unreasonable laws — after Trudeau vanished from the scene during the confrontation without scrupling to meet the Truckers, whom he slandered and defamed as [13]racists and haters in a manner obviously unbecoming a prime minister.

Trudeau sent another $40 million to UN “relief organizations” in Gaza, bringing his government’s total commitment to [14] $100 million, despite the UN’s bigoted anti-Israeli stance and UNRWA’s support for Hamas and its barbaric crimes against Jews. MP [15]Heather McPherson, a member of the NDP Party that is propping up Trudeau’s Liberals, set up “A Recurring Donation To UNRWA.”

As patriot journalist Spencer Fernando writes, “UNRWA employees and UNRWA schools have been repeatedly caught indoctrinating children with vile anti-Semitic hate and promoting terrorism. And yet, an NDP MP feels completely entitled to not only support that organization, but also to tell others to do so.” This travesty, apparently, is perfectly fine with a parliament that enthusiastically [16]applauded a Nazi veteran.

As for immigration, the fact is that the existing and increasing flood of immigrants into Canada is changing the make-up and the political profile of the country and placing an unprecedented strain on its resources and infrastructure. Trudeau now wants to welcome hundreds of thousands of Palestinians/Gazans, many of whom have been trained to hate and to kill Jews.

The pretext is that Canada needs to fill a depleted workplace, a problem the government caused in the first place through its mandatory lockdowns and a brutal, coercive and unnecessary vaccine policy. The truth is that Trudeau wants to dilute the character of the nation and create a dependent, vote-rich cohort of Liberal grantees.

Under the powers vested in the telecommunications office by Trudeau's Bill [17]C-11 and Bill [18]C-18, also known as the [19]Online Streaming Act, people will no longer be free to express their personal convictions online without fear of cancellation or even worse. Bills [20]C-27 (Internet Facial Recognition) and [21]S-210 (Age Verification), currently being discussed, are plainly subject to abuse and denial-of-service legislation. As the [22]Western Standard points out, "from [government] involvement, it is but a short walk to influence and then control."

In 2016, Trudeau introduced a policy of euthanasia or "assisted suicide" which has come to be known as MAID (Medical Assistance in Dying), and which author David Cooke in his 2022 book "[23]Trudeau's MAID Service" calls "murder-by-consent." The disabled, the depressed, and, intermittently, the mentally ill and veterans, are the government's dubious "beneficiaries." Seniors and children will be eligible. (My own province of British Columbia, governed by a socialist party (the NDP), has the highest rate of medically assisted death in Canada.)

It has been persuasively argued that eliminating people is one way of solving a healthcare crisis, relieving a broken and unsustainable medical system which as of 2022 ranked 25th in the [24]World Index of Healthcare Innovation. More dead = fewer patients = healthcare reform. According to the [25]Euthanasia Prevention Coalition, the toll for 2023 alone is approximately 16,000 euthanasia deaths.

Canada's justice system is suspect. Ten of 15 judges who sit on the highest court in Canada were appointed by Trudeau, many of these likely Liberal Party donors. The number of judges who follow the Constitution and the Charter is vanishingly small. Considering that the Preamble to the [26]Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms reads "Whereas Canada is founded upon principles that recognize the supremacy of God and the rule of law," two precepts that are largely disregarded as quaint and archaic, it is no wonder that the moral covenant no longer applies to the conduct of both life and profession.

And no wonder that the Law Faculty from [27]Trinity Western University, a Christian University with a high academic standard, has had its Faculty of Law accreditation revoked by several provincial law societies for "limiting diversity." The school's covenant requires that students abstain from sex outside of heterosexual marriage. Finally, a [28]2018 decision from the Supreme Court of Canada, as the [29]CBC explains, determined that the school's policy "would deter LGBT students from attending the proposed law school, and those who did attend would be at risk of significant harm." It is more likely that the Christian students would be at risk of harm. In Trudeau's Canada, Christian faith, cultural tradition, and judicial propriety are now relics of the past.

As Ray DiLorenzo writes in [30]Canada Free Press, Canada has become a "sick, deranged, anti-God combination of communism and fascism. Cities are crumbling before our eyes; manufactured inflation, open borders, food shortages, crime, disease, vaccine deaths, surveillance, censorship, and war are all meant to create fear and desperation. Call it the New World Order or the Great Reset. It's all the same."

In a similar vein, [31]Niagara Independent journalist Chris George in his provocative pdf book "[32]The Troubled State of the Nation," asserts: "On Trudeau's watch, Canada has been systematically deconstructed. Whether it is Canada's fiscal and economic conditions, international position, justice system, or the authority of Parliament, on multiple fronts the Liberals continue to advance their post-national vision as if they were picking and unravelling the threads of a twined rope—to eventually work loose the tethers to our country's foundations." This seems an accurate summing up as we witness the debris that Canada's worst prime minister has caused.

George urges us not to forget "the Trudeau Liberals' attempt at establishing a global agenda to transcend our national interests." As Trudeau famously [33]declared, "There is no core identity, no mainstream in Canada," concluding that he sees Canada as "the first post-national state" — a contradiction in terms, for "post-national" means there is no longer a "nation," especially if it has no core identity.

If we take Trudeau's babble seriously, it follows logically that what we call "Canada" does not refer to a nation. It is merely a gallimaufry of disparate groups ruled by a demiurgic junta masquerading as a "state," but it is no longer a nation in the conventional sense of the word. Trudeau is prepared to [34]sign the disastrous [35]Pandemic Health Treaty with the World Health Organization (WHO), lobbying to [36]include "climate change" and abortion-on-demand as health-related issues—another way of ceding national sovereignty to a globalist institution and rendering Canada moot. The Pandemic Treaty is drafted to be legally binding, exerting "[37]sweeping surveillance" and significant control over the independence and sovereign authority of member nations.

Since we now live in what is presumably a post-national agglomerate, the term "Canada," thanks to Justin Trudeau's shabby and reprobate government, has become nothing more than a placeholder, a kadigan pastiche of what was once a real country, or as Chris George says, "a country with a glorious history." And as he might have added, a post-national entity with a miserable future.

1.2.9 Why you prefer JRPGs to other video game genres ? (2024-02-11 22:27)

A) I've always liked JRPGs, pretty much for as long as I've been playing games. I think I find comfort in the familiarity of battling and levelling. JRPGs tend to have a cast of characters you get attached to and spend a lot of time with. Often the soundtracks are bangers too. Usually the art is lovely. But I still play lots of other genres as well.

B) I don't cling to the classics that much. I like them, but I'm perfectly fine with moving forward. That being said if there's one thing to take from them, it's that you can keep the budget/scale down of a game and it can still be enjoyable. I think Final Fantasy XVI looks rad and I love that SE is pushing the envelope, but I also know that it will be another 6+ years before we FFXVII since the dev times keep ballooning. On the hand, you've got a company like Falcom which can churn out great games much more frequently because they look 2-3 generations behind. And that's okay.

C) It all comes down to the writing. If you can handle a large cast like Trails, go for it. If you can't handle it, you wind up with Chrono Cross or Suikoden (games I like for the record) which have a handful of characters I remember but the vast majority are all filler and forgettable. Some games have small casts and can't make them compelling either. So the size doesn't matter to me, just how well written they are u prefer JRPGs to other video game genres ? (fps, racing, fighting etc)

I don't. I enjoy games from all types of different genres. From Forza to Hitman to Resident Evil to Persona to Halo to Mass Effect and so on, I truly do play a bit of everything.

What you wish modern JRPG would do differently today compared the classics of the past ?

I've always thought the term JRPG is a bit of a misnomer. I get that early JRPGs were heavily inspired by table-top role playing games, with stats and classes and levels and character progression, but they've always been missing one crucial aspect of TTRPGs: actual role-playing. With a lot of JRPGs you play as a predefined character with a predefined story in a predefined world. There's not usually too many meaningful choices.

Now, there's a reason for that. Most JRPGs tend to focus on telling a story and it gets more and more difficult to tell a cohesive and/or deep story with each meaningful choice the player is able to make. Don't get me wrong, I like the focus that many JRPGs have on story, and I don't want all modern JRPGs to have big branching stories or become create-your-own-adventure type games, but I would love to see some more JRPGs try their hand at true role-playing mechanics like that.

As an aside, if a game has a silent, self-insert protagonist, let me customize their appearance and give me dialogue options, or just forget it and make a normal predefined character that talks and has their own personality. If they're supposed to represent me, then fucking let me make them look and act how I want them to. Absolutely nothing about that boring-ass, dumb-looking dope from DQXI makes me feel like it's really me in the story. It's not immersive and I wish they stop it with that shit.

Do you feel modern games have a harder time making great games because it costs too much and the scale of it today or because game dev are younger and from a different generation than the classics of the past or the golden era etc ?

No. Not at all. In fact, I vehemently disagree with the entire idea that any previous era was a so-called "golden era" as well as the idea that today's developers make fewer great games. In fact, I think we have more great games nowadays, we just don't realize that they're classics because not enough time has passed yet. I guarantee you that in 10 years, everybody will look back and talk about how great the games were in the late 2010s/early 2020s. Nostalgia is a hell of a drug, but don't let it fool you, there are a ton of great modern games.

1.2.10 Abbott Announces Plans to Build a Military Base Near Eagle Pass (2024-02-17 18:52)

Texas Gov. Greg Abbott (R-TX) announced plans to build a military base camp near El Paso, Texas, while responding to President Joe Biden's ongoing immigration crisis.
Advertisement

The military base will house National Guard troops tasked with the sole responsibility of keeping the southern border secure and free from illegal migrants crossing into the U.S.

Abbott said on Friday that the camp will be built on 80 acres of land in Eagle Pass and hold up to 1,800 Texas National Guard members. It will also have room to house an additional 500 members in an effort to keep the border's security on lockdown.

"This will increase the ability for a larger number of Texas Military Department soldiers in Eagle Pass to operate more effectively and efficiently," Abbott said during a press conference.

The governor said the first 300 beds should be ready by April, promising not to reduce Texas resources on the border any time soon.

Announcing today the construction of the Forward Operating Base in Eagle Pass.

This new base camp will help improve conditions for 1,800+ @TxMilitary soldiers deployed to protect Texans from the chaos at our southern border.

"It's going to consolidate our forces, as opposed to being scattered around many different places across this region. They will be operating out of one place. It will amass a large army in a very strategic area," Abbott continued, adding that he plans to keep Operation Loan Star in effect for the foreseeable future.

As the Biden Administration continues to ignore the crisis at the southern border blatantly, Abbott has taken it upon himself to keep Texas citizens safe from the president's reckless policies.

He has installed miles of razor wire along areas of the border and shipped illegal migrants to Democrat "sanctuary cities" to bring awareness to the devastating issue plaguing the country.

Major General Thomas Suelzer also told reporters that Texas plans to expand operations north and south of Eagle Pass by adding three more fan boats and expanding the state's drone program radar truck capabilities.

"This will organize substantial forces to expand the razor wire barriers that are going up. We have seen the effectiveness of the razor wire in Shelby Park, where crossings have gone from 3,000 to 5,000 a day to less than 1 %," Abbott said.

"Texas would not be able to respond to President Biden's border crisis without the brave men and women of the Texas National Guard, and it is essential to build this base camp for them," the Republican said.

Per the Epoch Times, the Texas military base camp will include:

A 700-seat dining facility.

A recreation center.

Laundry facilities.

WiFi access.

Individual rooms for soldiers.

Chaplaincy programs.

Medical and psychological health facilities.

1.2.11 The Strange Disconnect Between Israel and Ukraine (2024-02-17 18:56)

The Ukrainian and Israeli wars are similar and yet also different conflicts – but in more ways than we can imagine.

Ukraine was invaded by a huge Russian state, with a population three-and-a-half times greater, a gross national product 10 times larger, and an area 30 times its size.

Hamas, by contrast, is a terrorist clique of about 50,000-70,000 gunmen and terrorist kingpins who run Gaza. It is dwarfed by the Israeli population (20 times larger), economy (27 times greater), and area (60 times larger).

Both Russia and Hamas started the wars. Russia was convinced it would easily crush the smaller neighbor. Hamas hoped to spark a pan-Islamic jihad against the Jewish state.

Most of Europe, the United States, and the West understandably supported arming Ukraine to repel Vladimir Putin's Russian aggression.

By contrast, such support for democratic Israel was strangely mixed.

In many elite, political, academic, and media circles, Israel is criticized for its massive retaliation after October 7, 2023.

The Western attitude toward the two wars grows even more inconsistent, if not incoherent.

There are constant calls for Israel to be "proportionate" in Gaza following the massacres of nearly 1,200 Jews, the vast majority civilians.

But Westerners understandably seek to give Ukraine more and better arms than Russia to ensure a disproportionate response necessary to win the war.

Israel is faulted for collateral damage from its efforts to destroy Hamas – even though terrorists are burrowed in and beneath hospitals, mosques, and schools.

Israeli hostages are used as human shields to protect Hamas gunmen.

No matter. Israel is expected to text or drop leaflets warning Gazan civilians to keep clear of impending air attacks, despite Hamas launching 7,000 rockets with no such warnings into civilian centers in Israel.

On October 7, Hamas, along with some Gazan civilians, tortured, decapitated, raped, and murdered hundreds of Israeli civilians to start the war.

By contrast, no one in the West asks the Ukrainians to warn surrounding civilian populations in occupied Ukraine or inside Russia to keep clear of their intended targets. To do so, apparently, would lessen the surprise effect of Ukrainian attacks.

The West has relentlessly hammered Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu for his supposedly right-wing government and its "disproportionate" retaliation in Gaza.

He is closely watched by his American patrons for any sign of absolutist rule or failure to create an inclusive wartime cabinet representative of a wide diversity of Israeli political figures.

Yet, Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelenskyy has not only suspended elections during the war but also declared martial law over his entire country.

Instead of facing Western censure, Zelenskyy remains a rock star in the West. Few seem bothered that he suspended most political parties, blurring the higher-ground difference between autocratic Russia and a supposedly democratic Ukraine.

Note that Israel, like the United States during World War II, has not declared martial law. Instead, it has formed a bipartisan coalition government with members of the opposition.

The U.S. keeps lecturing Israel to restrain its response to avoid a wider regional war in the Middle East. It fears Israeli retaliation for October 7 is apparently more incendiary than Hamas' unprovoked invasions and murder of Israelis.

Yet, supplying a Ukrainian proxy to attack Russia, sometimes on the Black Sea or inside Russia, appears a far more dangerous gambit.

Hamas' allies lack the 6,000 nuclear weapons of Russia and have no allies comparable to those now aligning with Moscow, such as China and North Korea.

Western media and politicians correctly discount Russian propaganda emanating from Moscow, especially its unsubstantiated claims of relative Russian and Ukrainian casualties or Ukrainian setbacks or atrocities.

Yet many of these same Westerners oddly take Hamas' casualty totals at face value.

They have been gullible enough even to swallow Hamas lies that the Islamic jihad rocket that hit a Gazan hospital was an Israeli bomb.

By any fair standard, Hamas has proven to be no more honest, and perhaps far more inaccurate, than even Russian state-controlled media.

So what accounts for these strange disconnects in Western attitudes toward these two wars?
Advertisement

It certainly has nothing to do with consistently siding against those who started the war, or standing always with the more democratic power – or even logically against the side that is more likely to commit atrocities.

The answers seem as obvious as they are disturbing.

Many in the West have a bias against the Jewish state, as antisemitism rebounds in Europe and the U.S.

Popular Western culture often romanticizes Hamas killers as freedom fighters and demonizes collectively the Russian people as stereotyped Hollywood villains.

Middle-East oil money and massive immigration into Western countries dwarf the influence of an ailing Russia.

Left-wing politicians in Europe and the U.S. court their growing Muslim constituents and have no worry about a commensurate Russian lobby.

And so the disconnect grows into absurdity.

1.2.12 Left-Wing Outlet Panics Over Growing 'Conservatism' In the U.S. (2024-02-19 17:27)

A second Trump term, the horror! Conservatives, Christianity— a massacre for the United States, according to Left-wing The Economist.

According to [1]The Economist, a "growing peril" of a national conservative movement is spreading rapidly throughout the U.S.

The outlet called on liberals to stop the MAGA movement that they claim is "dangerous."

The authors compared conservatism in the 1980s during the Ronald Reagan and Margaret Thatcher era to former President Trump's presidency.

"Today [2]Donald Trump, [3]Viktor Orban, and a motley crew of Western politicians have demolished that orthodoxy, constructing in its place a statist, "[4]anti-woke" conservatism that puts national sovereignty before the individual. These national conservatives are increasingly part of a global movement with its own networks of thinkers and leaders bound by a common ideology," the outlet noted. "They sense that they own conservatism now — and they may be right."

The magazine's cover features a red MAGA hat that lists several nations saying, "Make America, Hungary, Italy, France, Israel, Germany, the Netherlands, and Poland great again."

The article warns that conservatives will reign power by capturing "state institutions, including courts, universities, and the independent press."

Breitbart News highlighted that the article's authors are uninterested in the real problems Americans face daily in the country— and instead, drive intense hate toward the conservative movement that intends to bring the nation back to before the Left's progressive movement took over.

The piece reads like a call to arms against a movement that seems to grow stronger by the day as people around the world grow fed up with being governed by ideologically driven, progressive globalist elites blithely uninterested in the real problems faced by ordinary people.

Today's national populists "do not see the West as the shining city on the hill, but as Rome before the fall — decadent, depraved and about to collapse amid a barbarian invasion," the article states.

Curiously, the article insists that national conservatism is the "politics of grievance," which appears to be an act of willful blindness to the dominance of grievance in the woke politics that populists abhor.=

"Liberalism's great strength is that it is adaptable," the article states, adding that liberalism "can adapt to national conservatism, too," but for the moment, "it is falling behind."

The piece admits that conservatives have one thing right: illegal immigration and the fear that the next several generations will grow up poorer than our parents and grandparents, stating that universities and the press "have been captured by hostile, illiberal, left-leaning elites."

1.2.13 Jesus Said, 'First Will Be Last - and Last Will Be First' (2024-02-19 17:29)

Today's topic was birthed after the Super Bowl when I felt the Lord "calling" me to write about a player's faith as reflected in Jesus's teaching: "The last will be first, and the first will be last." The player, San Francisco 49er's Brock Purdy — who was called last — is now called to stage one to proclaim the gospel to the world.

If you don't know the story, during the 2022 NFL draft, Iowa State University quarterback Brock Purdy was chosen No. 262 — dead last — earning him the moniker “Mr. Irrelevant.” Then, last Sunday, Mr. Irrelevant came “overtime close” to a Super Bowl win.

Remember that young King David began his shepherding career as Mr. Irrelevant. Or so thought his father Jesse, who deliberately did not bring David to meet the prophet Samuel, whom the Lord sent to anoint a new king of Israel. (See [1]Vol. 201 and [2]1 Samuel 16:1-13.) Back to our study..

Now that Purdy is scoring touchdowns for Jesus and has been launched into Christian leadership, the following two headlines speak volumes about why he is where he is and offer faith lessons. Both are from a site ([3]new to me) that connects faith with sports. The [4]first headline, dated May 2, 2022, reads:

The second headline was posted [5]last Sunday after Purdy's team was defeated:

“49ers QB Brock Purdy ‘hurts’ after Super Bowl loss, but knows ‘Jesus Christ is my Rock.’ ”

Super relevant and powerful is what Purdy said under that headline:

“ ‘I never try to hold onto the ‘football life’ so tightly. I’ve held it pretty loosely and see what God has in store for it,’ [6]Purdy said during media availability in the days leading up to Super Bowl LVIII... ‘All right, God, this is what I do, but I am who You say I am.’ I’ve allowed that to sort of take over my life and He’s taken me to where He needs me. ’ ”

“Purdy continued later: ‘Jesus Christ is my Rock. He’s my Lord and Savior. That’s Who I live for, and that bleeds into how I love my teammates well, how I can have a good mindset when things are going well, when things aren’t going well, in football, in life. That’s my identity. ... The verdict is in. Jesus Christ already died for my sins and I’m saved through Him and now I can go and live my life through that.’ ”

“While Purdy has established himself as one of the best quarterbacks in the NFL, he’s also demonstrated that he’s [7]one of the most outspoken followers of Christ in the league.”

Cue the confetti! Praise the Lord Jesus — the “Heaven Bowl’s” eternal winner — for raising up new faces full of light and love to boldly speak the truth in a dark world.

Let’s review the four Gospel passages that record “the last will be first, and the first will be last.” We begin with [8]Matthew 19:16-30. There, Jesus speaks with a young rich man who said he followed the commandments but asked:

“ ‘What do I still lack?’ Jesus answered, ‘If you want to be perfect, go, sell your possessions and give to the poor, and you will have treasure in heaven. Then come, follow me.’ When the young man heard this, he went away sad, because he had great wealth” [9](Matthew 19:19-22). Then, skip to verses 29-30, where Jesus says:

“ ‘And everyone who has left houses or brothers or sisters or father or mother or wife or children or fields for my sake will receive a hundred times as much and will inherit eternal life. But many who are first will be last, and many who are last will be first’ ” [10](Matthew 19:29-30).

The rich man is an example of who could be “last” because he was “first” with life’s rewards but would not sacrifice and follow Jesus. God rewards us for what he sees in our hearts and then considers our actions. Wealth itself (and power) have no bearing on “first will be last” and vice versa in God’s eternal kingdom. However, what one believes and does with their wealth matters in the eyes of the Lord.

Next is the “Parable of the Workers in the Vineyard,” only found in Matthew when Jesus said:

“ ‘For the kingdom of heaven is like a landowner who went out early in the morning to hire workers for his vineyard. He agreed to pay them a denarius for the day and sent them into his vineyard’ ” [11](Matthew 20:1-2).

Condensing for space.. the landowner hired more workers at 9 am, noon, and 3 pm, telling them “he would pay whatever is right.” Finally, he hires workers at 5 pm:

“He asked them, ‘Why have you been standing here all day long doing nothing?’ ‘Because no one has hired us.’ ” So the landowner did.

The day ends, and payment begins along with the grumbling since no matter how long the men worked, they all received the same pay. Naturally, the ones who worked the longest complained the loudest even though they had agreed to work for one denarius. Then the landowners said:

“ ‘Take your pay and go. I want to give the one who was hired last the same as I gave you. Don’t I have the right to do what I want with my own money? Or are you envious because I am generous?’ ‘So the last will be first, and the first will be last’ ” ([12]Matthew 20:1-16).

The message is that God can extend grace and generosity equally to everyone at any time — especially latecomers — represented by society’s lowest rung in this parable.

Third is [13]Mark 10:17-31, which retells Matthew’s rich man story with slight variations in dialogue but ends with: “But many who are first will be last, and the last first.” The “first” are smart, successful, self-righteous people who reject Jesus and His gospel, while “the last” are humble followers who make sacrifices for the gospel.

Fourth is [14]Luke 13:22-30 where Jesus teaches the parable of the “narrow door.” To enter, “salvation depends first on God’s grace, and then our cooperation and obedience. The door remains open, “but few will enter God’s glory.” (From a footnote in the Ignatius Study Bible.) Jesus concludes with:

“Indeed there are those who are last who will be first, and first who will be last.” But again, wealth, status, or poverty are inconsequential to whether one enters the kingdom of God.

Circling back to Brock Purdy, from “Mr. Irrelevant” to throwing Super Bowl touchdown passes, he demonstrates how the last can be first to proclaim love for Christ. And my favorite Purdy quote, “He’s taken me to where He needs me.”

We must all believe the Lord is doing that in our lives. Amen.

1.2.14 Ann Coulter's Take on the Kansas City Parade Shooting Stunned Bill Maher's Audience (2024-02-19 17:30)

There wasn't much to report regarding the latest updates on the Kansas City Super Bowl parade shooting other than it was a "dispute" among several people that led to gunfire. Three people were arrested—all juveniles. One has since been released after it was determined this individual was not part of the shooting, but two have been booked on firearm-related charges. One person was killed, with at least 20 injured—11 of them were children. Nine kids had gunshot wounds, but all survived.

That's the good news.

We're still waiting on the suspects' names and the real motive. What we do know is that they're not white males—that's what Ann Coulter said on last night's episode of Real Time with Bill Maher, which, unsurprisingly, stunned the left-leaning audience. You can see CNN's Van Jones' reaction—he was aghast:

Ann Coulter stuns the Bill Maher crowd with a simple heuristic: "If it were a white male shooting, we'd know."

Maher: "We don't know who did this shooting. The Superbowl shooting"

Coulter: "If it were a white man shooting, we'd know."

Maher: "You think they're repressing that... [1]pic.twitter.com/qbE27hU5QD— Eric Abbenante (@EricAbbenante) [2]February 17, 2024

Coulter, a longtime friend of Maher's, is not off the mark here. The slight twist here is that the shooters are youths, so it might take a little more time, but the principle rings true. She named how the media ran for the hills when it was revealed that the shooter at the Covenant School in Nashville, Tennessee, was transgender. We couldn't read the shooter's manifesto for weeks until portions of it leaked last fall. The San Bernadino terrorist attack was another instance of this reporting toeing the political correctness line.

1.2.15 How Long Are We Going to Keep Doing This? (2024-02-27 09:53)

It's bizarre to me how the concept of putting America first is such an outrage inducing provocation to a good chunk of the country. Not just Democrats, but even many Never Trumpers who used to be conservatives, or at least played them fairly convincingly on cable news. What is wrong with the idea of putting our country's interests first?

The answer is nothing, obviously. But obvious truths have a habit of becoming inconvenient ones, especially when those espousing or holding them run risk of irrelevancy.

Donald Trump didn't need the old guard, and by "old" I don't mean age. And they resented him for it.

It was stupid, as most desperate power grabs are. Trump wasn't going to throw them out, he needed help since he'd never been involved in politics before. But the concept of him was so offensive to the "pinky-out, tea sipping crowd" that they passed on the prospect of achieving more of what they'd spent their adult lives professing they'd do anything to attain.

It's probably the greatest feat Donald Trump accomplished in politics – pulling off the masks of generations of frauds who'd sold their books and their thoughts as if they were true. These mini-emperors had no clothes, and boy were they unfortunate.

The rest of us were left to pick up the pieces, as the legacies and offspring of the accomplished slithered into oblivion or, more accurately, the arms of CNN or wealthy liberals enjoying the prospect of making the once relevant dance for them on command.

They still have a little bit of "useful" left in their "idiot" status, and the money is still flowing, so on the pole they will dance

The rest of us are left to fight for that which makes them upset, the only thing that makes any sense and, to be completely honest, what a lot of us believed we were all fighting for: American First.

Not in the sense of one man, or even a movement, but simply as a concept. I always assumed all but the most rabid leftist put the country first, they were just wrong about how to go about it. Now I know better.

Now I know a lot of people on “our side” not only weren’t pulling their weight, they were pushing in the other direction.

How the hell did we miss it for so long? Why do we tolerate it now?

Why do we allow our politicians to cripple our energy production while our allies prostitute themselves to Russia to keep the lights on?

Why do we tolerate that our supply chain for far too many of our crucial pharmaceuticals remains in countries hostile to our interests and existence?

Why do we continue to foot the bill for the defense of nations who refuse to contribute what [1]they’re obligated to contribute to continue our alliance?

Why do we have to pretend our allies are pulling their weight in aiding Ukraine, a hostile area much closer to them than us, [2]pledging a fraction of the billions we are spending to much fanfare, then [3]reneging on it 4 short days later?

Why is our military [4]buying upgraded military equipment from Airbus in Europe for $28 billion while American companies could easily do the work and, honestly, could use the money?

What the hell are we doing? I get that sometimes some things can only be made overseas at this point, but didn’t COVID wake up everyone to the reality that offshoring vital things was stupid? That medicine and military equipment should be completely under our roof? I don’t care about the ownership, I’m talking about the physical process and machinery.

I do remember a bunch of politicians extolling the virtues of putting America first, or in-sourcing fundamental aspects of our supply chain when we were placed under house-arrest to “stop the spread,” but they didn’t follow through with it, did they? At least not in any measurable way.

Advertisement

Why did we put up with that? Why do we still put up with that? Maybe it’s too much to expect our politicians to put America first, but shouldn’t we at least make the podium? Shouldn’t we at least make the top 5?

Maybe that’s too much to ask, but maybe it’s time to stop asking. Maybe it’s time to remind these politicians that they work for us, not the other way around.

1.2.16 Middle America Is Dying Hard (2024-02-27 09:55)

WEIRTON, West Virginia – Most people in this town will tell you they’d rather have taken a physical punch to the gut than get the news they received yesterday when Cleveland-Cliffs Steel announced it was idling its tinplate production plant, a move that directly cost 900 people their jobs.

It isn’t just those workers who face catastrophic uncertainty; this closure also jeopardizes the jobs of thousands more people whose businesses supported the plant: the barber shops, gas stations, mom-and-pop grocery stores, the machine shops that make the widgets for the steel industry. And there’s also the demise of the tax base, which affects the school district and the quality of the roads.

Thirty years ago, more than 10,000 people worked here at Weirton Steel. Now, the last 900 workers left have just lost their jobs.

"It's just another scar to add on what people in power have done to our lives and our community over the past 40 years," said one employee who declined to give his name, adding, "Honestly, how many times does this story have to be told before someone in power cares about our lives."

He points to different buildings downtown, and all of them for him were "used to be this" and "used to be that."

Ryan Weld of Wellsburg, 43, grew up in downtown Weirton right behind the local funeral home.

"When I was growing up in the '80s, the mill was still going at full tilt with Weirton Steel employing 10,000 people, including my grandfathers," he said.

The Republican state senator said things started to slow down here in the mid to late '90s after the North American Free Trade Agreement was enacted: "That dramatically changed the landscape of downtown, went from a bustling the last age group that remembers the shops and stores and restaurants of downtown."

He believes NAFTA, signed by President Bill Clinton in 1993, essentially made it hard for companies like Weirton Steel, which had to follow strict and expensive Environmental Protection Agency guidelines, to compete with places like Mexico. The towns all up and down the Steel Valley died hard.

"The legacy of the federal government and its refusal to properly enforce trade laws is nothing but empty mills and unemployed workers," Weld said. "That was true in the '80s and '90s, and that is true today."

Forty years ago, the Democratic Party started to slowly shed its working-class base, but not quickly: Democratic officials would still show up for decades at union rallies, putting their arms around workers' shoulders and telling them they have their back while at the same time enacting regulations and trade agreements that stripped them of their livelihoods and dignity and made ghettos of their once beloved communities.

By the 2012 Obama reelection, they traded their New Deal Democrat legacy voters for ascendant groups: minorities, young people, college-educated elites and single women, all done without so much as a Dear John letter.

The Republicans inherited them, but most of their strategists running messaging and campaigns had no idea what to do with them, at least on the national level.

And then there is the press covering the voter who will decide the next president: Few if any of them come from places like Weirton or Youngstown, Ohio, so they have little understanding of their worldview. Things that give people from here purpose, such as living close to extended family, are not as valuable to someone who has been transient for most of a career.

In short, we are heading once again into an election where very few people in Washington truly understand how remarkably devastating this mill closure is. Instead, it is a wire story at best, soon forgotten if measured at all. They truly do not understand how much the loss of the dignity of work has changed American politics. That this tone-deafness is still happening 14 years after Barack Obama was given notice in the 2010 midterm elections and eight years after Donald Trump won the presidency is pretty staggering.

The Democrats once attracted these voters, but they've moved on to the social justice crowd and don't appear to want to anymore. I'm not sure if Senate Minority Leader Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., does, the press does not, and the new "very online right" is certainly not the reflection of a center-right voter in middle America. The online right just seems hell-bent on making them seem like Taylor Swift conspiracy theorists. (P.S. They're not.)

Advertisement

Jeff Brauer, a political science professor at Keystone College, said Washington elites on both sides of the aisle, media elites and now online conspiracy elites just don't get Middle America even after this recent economically and politically difficult decade.

"Few things bond people/citizens together like trying to make a living in the real world, the dignity of work and raising a family," he explained, adding these bonds cut across all divides – geographic, racial/ethnic, religious, gender, ideological/party, and even at times socioeconomic.

"If there is one thing we have learned over the past decade, it is that this bond over the difficulties of making an honest living can and does create unlikely coalitions of voters," he said. "Even disparate voters from the likes of Bernie Sanders supporters to Trump supporters can agree on this."

Indeed, economic dignity and survival make strange bedfellows.

Brad Todd, founding partner of OnMessage and co-author with me of "The Great Revolt: Inside the Populist Coalition Reshaping American Politics," said one thing is for certain about 2024: "We are about to read a million new stories that quote zero people who are actually going to decide the election."

Brauer said the dignity of work is at the very core of the American experience, "Yet the elites of this country still just don't understand, while average Americans just keep getting financially squeezed more and more."

Weld said it is incumbent on local elected officials such as himself to be the advocates of Middle America.

"I do what I do because of that. The empty buildings were already there when I was in college and high school, and it pisses me off," he said. "I don't think anyone fought hard enough for that from happening. We shouldn't keep having to read again, again, another story about a town dying hard and a vacancy of no one caring."

1.2.17 Journalist Highlights the Main 'Financial Prize' in the Biden Family Influence Peddling Operation (2024-02-27 09:58)

The Biden influence peddling operation has been exposed. If we had a serious Department of Justice, there would be a full investigation into whether felonious activities were committed. Instead, we've had independent and conservative media reporters flesh out the details, whereas the establishment press report on Hunter Biden's antics, for the most part, but thread Russian disinformation nonsense into the mix. There isn't any Russian disinformation; Hunter's laptop was authenticated. The media is salivating over the indictment of Alexander Smirnov, the source of the Biden Burisma bribery allegations since it can rehash Russian disinformation and blow up the impeachment push from congressional Republicans. That is not the case.

As Michael Shellenberger wrote, there's another Biden associate, Jason Galanis, whose testimony matches what has been publicly reported on the influence operation. Galanis is a convicted criminal [1]who is serving 15 years for securities fraud. But his testimony from jail also revealed the main prize of the Biden peddling operation and a national security threat.

In August 2023, Energy Secretary Jennifer Granholm [2]held a secret meeting with Chinese officials regarding releasing our petroleum reserves. Beijing's interest in our oil and gas reserves isn't new, but we've had multiple revelations about this Biden influence scheme thanks to the laptop. The multiple shell companies were created and run by Biden family members to filter the money from Romania. You already know about the Burisma connections, the trips to Kazakhstan, and other meetings with unsavory businesspeople and oligarchs. Joe Biden was involved in at least 20 such discussions with his son Hunter to show prospects that this "relationship capital" venture had teeth in the form of connections through the then-vice president and his last name. This brings us back to the Tony Bobulinski allegations that date back to October 2020 and CEFC China Energy.

Shellenberger noted that the main financial prize for the Biden family in this operation was to allow China to dominate American energy sources. One of the ways they planned on doing that while getting rich was by partnering with CEFC on a liquified natural gas (LNG) deal on Louisiana's Gulf Coast (via [3]Public):

The Bidens were careful not to over-involve the then Vice President, Bobulinski says. Before he met Joe Biden, Bobulinski says he was told that, "this is going to be a high-level meeting. We're not going to go into a lot of detail" about CEFC. Another Hunter business associate told Bobulinski in a text message, "Don't mention Joe being involved, it's only when u are face to face, I know u know that but they are paranoid."

They were understandably paranoid as they left evidence of what they were doing. It was the email chain about the LNG deal in which Hunter famously said, about shares in the business venture, that there would be "10 [percent] held by H for the big guy." And, according to Bobulinski, "the big guy—100 percent—is Joe Biden."

Bobulinski told Congressional investigators that he once asked Joe's brother, James Biden, "Aren't you guys concerned that if Joe does run for President of the United States in the future that you guys are doing business directly with the Chinese?"

Bobulinski says James Biden laughed and said, "Plausible deniability." But, he notes, there are "stacks of evidence that Joe Biden showed up at meetings, shook hands, participated in" over 20 calls related to Hunter's business "to demonstrate the Biden brand to whoever was in that meeting, whether it was the Ukrainians, the Romanians, the Russians, Colombians, Chinese, whoever it was.”

Congressional investigators have documented $20 million in payments from foreign entities to Biden family members and associates. That number could have been significantly higher had the Biden influence-peddling operation not fallen apart shortly before the 2020 elections, when the New York Post first published evidence of influence-peddling found in emails, text messages, and voicemails on Hunter Biden’s laptop.

China, desperate for cheaper oil and gas, showed in myriad ways how much it wanted access through the Bidens. At one point, the CEO of CEFC gave to Hunter, as a gift, a 2.8-carat diamond worth roughly $80,000.

Wait, isn’t the Biden administration’s policy aimed at restricting this energy sector? Yes, but there’s also a way to make a buck out of it:

The Biden family appeared to be seeking to profit from a policy regime of expanded LNG production, while today, President Biden is restricting it. Climate change policy seeks to reduce oil and gas supply. While that is bad for the US and the environment since it results in the burning of dirtier coal that would otherwise be burned, it has the benefit of driving up the value of existing reserves, which may benefit some powerful financial interests.

Some have suggested that Biden’s LNG restrictions were done in response to the demands and interests of John Podesta, who controls much of the Biden White House energy policy. Whether or not that’s the case, it’s clear Biden and his family have, perhaps for many more decades than just one, been trading influence over energy policy to large financial interests, including even rival foreign ones, like China.

Environmental considerations aside, the Biden family’s attempt to manipulate energy policy for China, Kazakhstan, and Mexico should trouble Democrats and Republicans alike. They should additionally be concerned by evidence of political corruption by the FBI and Justice Department to cover up for the Biden family.

And it's not just the Biden family. Shellenberger noted the energy games have been played by other prominent politicians as well, like former California Gov. Jerry Brown who established new air pollution standards to benefit his family's stake in imported Indonesian oil. With the evidence of potential illegality stacked as high as the Eiffel Tower against the Biden family, the timing of the Smirnov indictment reeks of 'look, squirrel' from the Justice Department that has consistently intervened to protect Biden's family. Hunter Biden might have issued the deal of the century, virtual blanket immunity on tax evasion and gun charges if it weren't for Joseph Zeigler and Gary Shapley coming forward last year, alleging pervasive DOJ intrusion into their investigations.

Last week, CBS News took the unprecedented step of [1]seizing Catherine Herridge's confidential files after the journalist was among those terminated in Paramount's [2]mass layoffs. Herridge was reportedly working on a story about the Hunter Biden laptop scandal. It was a chilling development concerning the surprising firing of Herridge. The network tried to assuage the uproar by saying the files have been kept secure and will be returned soon. On Monday, those files were picked up by Herridge's union representative (via [3]NY Post):

FILES UPDATE: CBS News returns hundreds of pages of reporting materials after [4]@sagafta intervened. Full Statement [5]<https://t.co/cPBQ6PoTVo>— Catherine Herridge (@CBS_Herridge) [6]February 26, 2024

CBS News on Monday finally returned confidential files belonging to fired investigative reporter Catherine Herridge amid mounting pressure from the House Judiciary Committee and the union representing the journalist, The Post has learned

Herridge — who is in the middle of a key First Amendment case — had been probing the Hunter Biden laptop scandal when the acclaimed journalist was shockingly fired as part of mass layoffs by parent company Paramount Global nearly two weeks ago.

Her personal files — along with her work laptop, which may have contained other confidential info — were immediately confiscated and locked away at the CBS News office in Washington, DC.

CBS previously denied that it planned to keep any sensitive information belonging to Herridge, saying last week: “We are prepared to pack up the rest of her files immediately on her behalf – with her representative present as she requested.”

Law professor Jonathan Turley wrote that the timing of Herridge’s dismissal is suspicious, as the reporter was working on features that did not paint the Biden administration in a positive light. This document issue isn’t going away for CBS News, as the Post added that the House Judiciary Committee will investigate the seizure of Herridge’s files. A letter was sent to CBS News president Ingrid Ciprian-Matthews, saying they had until March 1 to supply Congress with information concerning who ordered the ‘code red’ on Herridge’s files and who handled them afterward.

Some independent reporters rightfully pointed out the chilling effect these actions CBS News undertook can have on sources. Whistleblowers would be more inclined to lay low than come forward if they see fired or laid-off reporters having their files seized by the company brass.

1.2.19 The Enemy Is Iran (2024-02-27 10:06)

This week marks one month since three Americans were killed by an Iranian suicide drone at their post in Jordan. All three of them were Georgia natives who volunteered to serve their fellow Americans in the U.S. Army: Sgt. William Jerome Rivers, 46, of Carrollton, Georgia; Sgt. Kennedy Ladon Sanders, 24, of Waycross; and Sgt. Breonna Alexsondria Moffett, 23, of Savannah.

Their sacrifice demands that all of our leaders frankly acknowledge the strategic imperative we have to confront Iran – and make sure our service members are no longer sitting ducks and easy targets for our enemies.

Since the October 7th Hamas attack on Israel, Iran-backed militants are causing chaos throughout the Middle East and American troops are on the front lines. This is a coordinated effort by the radical Islamist regime in Tehran. It's pace and intensity have increased since the fighting in Gaza broke out, but this is a long-term challenge and we're overdue to address it.

Iran's interest in the Hamas-Israel conflict is unequivocal. They are engineering an assault on Israel, and on U.S. support of Israel and other allies, on all fronts. The mad men who run Iran are now looking for a sign of weakness from the United States. We cannot give them one.

Iran has woven an intricate web of terror proxies in the region, and their targets are not just on Israel, but the United States and all the great principles for which we stand.

In Gaza and the West Bank, Iran funds Hamas, an organization chartered to kill all Jews. In Yemen, Iran backs Houthi rebels that use Iranian-made missiles to attack shipping vessels in the Red Sea – disrupting up to one-fifth of the world's cargo trade. In Lebanon, Iran props up Hezbollah to lob rockets and missiles across the northern border of Israel. And Iran's proxy militias in Syria and Iraq are attacking U.S. troops at an escalating rate. In fact, the U.S. has reported nearly 170 attacks against American forces in the Middle East by Iran-backed groups since mid-October.

Iran's mullahs are not content to merely repress their own countrymen. They seek to reach beyond their own borders and their supreme leader says they seek to lead a coalition of

Iran is so emboldened that its Foreign Ministry spokesman had the audacity to call the United States’ retaliatory strikes in Iraq and Syria a “strategic mistake,” threatening that it will “[intensify] tension and instability in the region.” Clearly, it will take more than a tit-for-tat response to end these attacks on U.S. forces.

We must reestablish deterrence in the region. Our enemies should live in constant fear of escalation with the United States – not the other way around. Any response that minimizes the Iranian threat only makes the problem worse. Indeed, force is the only language that the Iranian regime will understand.

Sgt. Rivers, Sgt. Sanders, and Sgt. Moffett are heroes who made the ultimate sacrifice for our great nation. Their deaths are a devastating result of Iran’s proxy war, and a stark reminder that our brave soldiers are on the front lines against a vast, allied terror network in the Middle East.

The Islamic Republic of Iran is the catalyst for all our problems in the Middle East. Their connection to each and every individual threat is not episodic and not coincidental. It’s time we admit it, and act accordingly.

To do otherwise puts too many brave Americans at risk.

1.2.20 Russia Will Remain a Chronic Threat to the U.S. Even When the War in Ukraine Ends (2024-02-27 10:09)

It’s been two years since Russia launched its war to subjugate Ukraine in February 2022. It’s time to take stock, recall how we got here, and what Americans should demand moving forward.

Russian president Vladimir Putin has imperialistic goals and is ultimately to blame for the decision to invade Ukraine. Ukraine, in the real world and not in the paranoid fever dreams of the ex-KGB officer Putin, posed no threat to Russia. If you watched Tucker Carlson's interview with Putin, you heard Putin say what he's been saying for years. He made claims to Russian territory and ethnic Russian people and referenced historical events all the way back to the 9th century that he believes entitled Russia to start wars. That is a 'forever war' mentality if there ever was one.

Putin rejects the peace that President Ronald Reagan negotiated with Mikael Gorbachev. He called the negotiated end of the Cold War which averted devastating war and preserved peace the "greatest geopolitical catastrophe of the century."

Despite the efforts of US presidents to develop friendly relations with Russia (recall President Barack Obama's infamous Russia reset and hamburgers with then Russian President Demitri Medvedev), Putin despises the United States. American good faith efforts to demonstrate it has no interest in conflict with Russia, Germany's delusional fostering of Russian energy interests, and some European nations' ongoing reluctance to adequately invest in their militaries, have not convinced Russia to choose peace.

Instead, NATO's relative weakness and US attempts to reassure and allay Russian purported concerns have only fueled Russian contempt and appetite for war.

When the Biden administration came to power, its series of decisions, convinced Putin that that was the right time to invade.

For example, in May 2021, Biden lifted the Trump sanctions on the Nord Stream 2 pipeline; those sanctions had prevented Russia from increasing its energy collaboration with Germany while cutting off Eastern and Central European countries. Team Biden also lifted sanctions on a longtime Putin crony and the head of the NS2 project.

Just a few months later, Biden directed the precipitous withdrawal from Afghanistan, which was a NATO mission. Biden refused to discuss the events with key members of the alliance including then UK Prime Minister Boris Johnson who was desperately trying to reach the American president. Biden's behavior left NATO nations reeling.

As Russia began amassing troops on Ukraine's border, the Biden administration [1]withheld Congressionally-approved weapons to Ukraine in an effort to appease Russia. Then Biden White House lawyers, seized by fear of escalation, dragged its heels on authorizing Lithuania and Latvia delivery of key air defense systems. It finally approved those weapons but the pattern of refusing to deliver or approve of the weapons Ukraine needs (remember it blocked those Polish fighter jets after initially expressing support) to successfully defend itself and push Russia out of its territory continued. Even now, the Biden White House refuses to deliver longer range strike systems to Ukraine and will only let Ukraine use US weapons to hit Russian forces inside Ukraine, effectively giving Russia the advantage by granting its war efforts sanctuary inside Russia.

Despite handcuffing Ukraine and refusing to provide it with the necessary weapons, Ukraine has reclaimed 50 % of the territory Russia stole in the initial campaign. It has inflicted more than 300,000 casualties against Russian forces, taken out 30 % of Russia's Navy in the Black Sea, and significantly degraded the Russian army. A weaker, chastised Russia is very good for American security. But if Ukraine isn't given the weapons it needs and the permission to use them in the way it needs to, Ukraine will lose and Russia will pocket the gains, replenish its military, and look for its next move to divide and ultimately dismantle the US-led alliance in Europe.

But a new strategy is needed and a plan to surge weapons to Ukraine is possible. The US manufacturing base has dramatically atrophied since the Cold War. But US supply of weapons to Ukraine has forced overdo changes to the way the US makes weapons. In manufacturing plants across the country, more Americans are being hired to increase the US ability to make weapons in higher numbers and faster. More must be done, but this is a good start.

Former President Donald Trump has not opposed more weapons to Ukraine, although he has said that if he was elected, he would end the war in 24 hours. When pressed on what he would do if Putin did not accept his terms for the end of war, he said would tell Putin: "If you don't make a deal, we're going to give them a lot. We're going to give them more than they ever got, if we have to." For Trump to have leverage to credibly make good on that promise, he needs a robust manufacturing ability and Ukraine needs to have a much better hand to play than it has now.

The smartest, most principled steps for the near term would be for Congress to rush weapons to Ukraine and invest in the US weapons replenishment and stocks. Failing to do that now helps Russia and deprives the next President of options.

Russia will remain a chronic threat to the United States. Putin and the CCP's Xi will not end their efforts to harm the United States and our allies even after the war in Ukraine comes to an end.

To preserve the peace in this new cold war and deter aggression from the axis of China, Russia, Iran, and North Korea, the United States must do exactly what President Reagan did: prepare for major war, pressure and lead allies to help us, and convince our enemies that we have the ability and will to win.

1.2.21 Will the Democrats Let Donald Trump Be President If He Wins? (2024-02-27 10:17)

The Supreme Court will not throw Donald Trump off the ballot through some sort of deus ex MSNBCmachina, and Trump's polls are improving while President Crusty's are getting worse, so we face the real possibility of Donald Trump [1]winning the presidency. Obviously, it's not a done deal, but it is a bigger possibility than it used to be. Well, the Democrats are facing it, and now they're trying to figure out [2]how to stop him from taking office if and when he wins the election.

This is a really bad idea.

But of course, the Democrat Party is the Party of Bad Ideas, and the Party of Nanny Fascism. And it is also remarkably free of any recognition of its own hypocrisy. It's become popular to say that the issue is not hypocrisy but hierarchy, and that the Democrats feel entitled to do whatever they want. They don't want Trump to be president, so what are they going to do about it?

Whatever they have to do to hold power.

They're very sensitive about us talking about this. I was onstage at CPAC with Townhall's own Larry O'Connor and, at one point, I was talking about how Joe Biden was not going to leave office early voluntarily at the behest of Barack Obama and some cabal of Democrat poobahs concerned about him blowing the election. Then, of course, goofy pinko Aaron Rupar [3]converted that into me saying that Joe Biden will refuse to leave office if he loses the election. I didn't say that then, but I'm going to say it now. He already told us he won't allow Donald Trump to take office. He couches that in terms of not letting Trump win the election, but are we sure that's what he means? This is a guy well-known for talking about turning F-16s on American dissidents. After all, we're treasonous traitors and MAGA extremists and such. Isn't he justified in doing whatever he must to stop us?

So, if Donald Trump wins, do they let him take office again?

Well, they didn't really let him take it over last time. They framed him with a fake Russiagate scandal. They impeached him for nonsense two times. They had the whole deep state doing everything it could to undercut the will of the people who elected him. And they just spent the last three years hyping up how he's a danger to Our Democracy™ and an authoritarian, and if they don't stop him, he's going to start doing to them exactly what they've been doing to him and us. It's right and proper that they be scared of that, but the fact that they are scared means they're likely to do stupid things.

Imagine if Donald Trump is elected by a very narrow margin, which is a possibility, and you get a Democrat majority in the House of Representatives, which many Republicans think is likely. Maybe the Democrats look at each other and say, "Wait a minute, we can pull some shenanigans with the counting of the electoral college ballots!" Why wouldn't they? And don't say that they just spent three years screaming about the Republicans attempting to do that because, again, they are immune to hypocrisy. It literally doesn't matter to them. They'll do exactly what they accused Donald Trump and the January 6 people of doing, and they will explain to you that it's a good thing that they're doing it.

We already know part of the game plan will be encouraging civil unrest, which we will see a lot of over the summer and leading up to the election. That's their subtle version of intimidation, but as Inauguration Day approaches, they are certain to amp it up. January 6 was a minor brawl, a joke as far as civil disturbances go – I was in Los Angeles during the Democrat-sponsored Los Angeles riots, so I have a rational perspective on this stuff. But does anyone think they won't convene their radical Antifa, BLM, and other scumbag Democrat shock troopers in Washington, DC, to disrupt the transfer of power? And it won't be old ladies taking selfies in the rotunda. These people will be violent and dangerous and probably armed. Who's going to stop them? Will Joe Biden call out the Washington National Guard or 82nd Airborne to do it? I think we know who will get prosecuted for the violence – no one.

Now, they'll have some sort of excuse. Donald Trump is an insurrectionist, or democracy is in danger, or reasons and because. Just don't put it beyond possibility that they will not allow a peaceful transfer of power to Donald Trump. These people are not committed to democracy. They don't care about freedom. They care about power, so much so that they allow a desiccated old husk to be the guy with his quivering finger hovering over the big red button. If you believe that there's some sort of guardrail or norm that would stop them from retaining power if they could get away with it, you are hallucinating. You haven't been paying attention. Wake up.

Advertisement

What do we do about it? Step one is to win the election, and we should try to do decisively. There are a lot of problems that come with slipping through the skin of our teeth. A decisive win makes it harder to cheat, and harder to negate. Regardless, we'll see lawsuits and all sorts of other stunts in every close state. Remember how 2020 was decided by something like 40,000 votes over three states? Of course, it being Democrats bringing these suits, they'll get much more consideration than Trump's did. We could have some state court judge in Wisconsin disrupting the entire election by announcing that none of the Republicans' ballots count for some nonsense reason, but again, you don't really need a reason when you're just seizing power.

Democrats protest every single Republican election as illegitimate, and they will certainly protest this one should Trump win. We have got to be ready. Right now, we are not.

1.3.1 Ted Cruz: 'Joe Biden Campaigned on Dismantling the Southern Border' (2024-03-03 23:05)

Republican Sen. Ted Cruz (R-TX) revealed the one thing President Joe Biden delivered on regarding the promises he made while on the campaign trail.

And that is: destroying the U.S. southern border and implementing far-Left anti-American policies.

Cruz made the comments during a podcast episode, discussing what he saw at the U.S.-Mexico border after visiting it with former President Trump earlier this week.

Joe Biden campaigned on open borders, he campaigned on saying, I will not deport people, I will not enforce our laws. And as president, that may be the only campaign promise he has honored. If you look at what is happening, at the end of the day, you cannot defend what is happening on our border. When you look at kids in the eyes, if you have a shred of humanity, it horrifies you. And understand, why does Joe Biden not go to the border? Because he didn't want to see them. On this trip to Brownsville, did he see a single child who was sexually abused? No. Did he see a woman who was violently raped? No. Did he see the families of the victims of those who had died of drug overdoses?"

In the last year, more than 100,000 Americans have died of drug overdoses. 70 % of that has been Chinese fentanyl coming across our southern border. Did Joe Biden listen to those moms, listen to those dads, listen to parents crying over the loss of their kids? No. This was a photo op that was sanitized. Lysol was used everywhere. It was — it's like a Potemkin village. It's like a Hollywood set, designed to say we're at the border. Nothing to see here. Nobody suffering, nobody being raped, nobody being assaulted, nobody dying. And it is profoundly, profoundly dishonest.

Joe Biden campaigned on open borders and promised that he would not deport people or enforce our laws.

As President, that may be his only campaign promise that turned out to be true.[1]<https://t.co/Cshf8UZlyI> [2]pic.twitter.com/lsCm9oDvtS— Ted Cruz (@tedcruz) [3]March 1, 2024

1.3.2 American Paralysis and Decline (2024-03-03 23:07)

"We can bear neither our diseases nor their remedies."

So shrugged the ancient historian Livy (59 B.C.-17 A.D.) of the long decline of Roman national character that, in his age, finally ended the Roman Republic.

Like a patient whose medicine proves worse than the disease, Livy lamented that the Romans knew that they had become corrupt and lawless.

But the very contemplation of the hard medicine needed for restoration – and the furious reaction that would meet the remedy – made it impossible to save the patient.

America is nearing such an impasse.

We know that no state can long exist after opening its borders to over 7 million illegal aliens, requiring neither background checks nor legality.

The recent murder of a Georgia female jogger by an illegal alien and the savage beating of New York policemen by similar others hardly merit media attention.

Everyone knows that neither new appropriations nor new laws are needed to secure the border as it was in 2020.

Instead, we could just stop suicidal catch-and-release, deport lawbreakers, privilege the legal over the illegal immigrant, demand would-be refugees apply for asylum first in their native countries, finish the border wall, and pressure Mexico to stop undermining the territorial integrity of its northern neighbor.

But then we shrug, "We can't do that" – paralyzed in fear of being smeared as "xenophobic," "nativist," or "racist."

So this generation apparently feels that it can endure the collateral damage of daily assaults on American citizens, the near bankruptcy of our cities, and 100,000 fentanyl deaths per year – but certainly not the idea that it is somehow not politically correct or compassionate.

The same is true of the $35 trillion debt, now costing more than $1 trillion a year in interest payments – and growing. We all know it is unsustainable. Americans understand it will eventually lead either to destructive hyperinflation, suicidal renunciation of federal debt, or confiscation of private savings.

Yet we ignore the reckless spending and keep borrowing well over $1 trillion a year. Apparently, our generation prefers being praised as "virtuous" and "caring." So it leaves the next generation to be smeared as "cruel" and "unfair" when it is forced to cut federal entitlements and bloated government or face civilizational collapse.

The crime epidemic is also similar. Everyone accepts that no society can long endure quasi-legalized shoplifting or green-lighting smash-and-grabbers and carjackers to be released without bail.

But we assume that such a civilizational implosion will never reach our own sanctuary neighborhoods or safe places of work – at least not yet.

We also know that restoring deterrence by arresting, convicting, and jailing repeat felons will return safety to our streets.

But again, we fear even more that advocating "law and order" will earn slanders like "racist" or "reactionary."

Ditto the homeless. In an age of self-congratulation and hyper-environmentalism, we know that a million homeless defecating, urinating, injecting, and assaulting on our downtown sidewalks and storefronts is medieval.

Advertisement

We know that it is illegal to camp out on the street and publicly harass citizens or relieve oneself in public.

And we know the cure lies in building and staffing more mental institutions and providing areas far from public spaces where the homeless can find shelter, sanitation, and medical care.

But the very idea of removing anyone from his accustomed sidewalk spot, or the notion of the use of force to transport the mentally ill to proper and humane facilities, terrifies us.

So we walk around, step over, and ignore those on the street.

Is the assumption that the odds of being assaulted or sickened acceptable? Or do we just not wish to learn where the flotsam, jetsam, and human offal of the street end up?

Most accept that had former President Donald Trump just not run for president in 2024 or was a man of the left, he would not now be facing four different felony court cases.

Most accept that three of the four prosecutors have either in advance promised to get Trump or have proved grossly unethical.

Most know it is wrong to try to remove a leading presidential candidate from state ballots.

Yet many shrug that this new weaponization of America's legal system is the flamboyant Trump's own problem, not their own. So they ignore the third worldization of our political system, which they quietly acknowledge is otherwise leading us to a Venezuela-like mess.

The paralysis of American society extends to our foreign policy as well. We deplore the terrorism of Iran and its thuggish surrogates. But we fear more the nasty, costly business of stopping its aggression.

Societies do not always collapse from a lack of wealth, invasion, or natural catastrophes.

Most often, they know what is destroying them. But they are so paralyzed by their fear that the road to salvation becomes too painful to even contemplate.

So they implode gradually, then suddenly.

1.3.3 Conspiracy Theories on the Right Are Finally Being Proven True (2024-03-04 12:18)

The left loves to make fun of the right for believing conspiracy theories, but lately many of them are proving to be real. This is largely due to the availability of widespread information on the internet; it's become a lot harder to keep secrets.

Why have conspiracy theories become a big thing on the right but not on the left? It's because the left is increasingly engaging in fascist, illegal behavior and trying to hide it. We suspect it's happening, but they always come up with bogus excuses to avoid being transparent, making it difficult to catch and prove the wrongdoing. With the left now controlling much of the legal system, it's almost impossible to find a brave prosecutor or judge who will do the right thing; prosecute the corrupt actors or merely even require them to be transparent such as by honoring public records requests.

The left tries to disguise their increasing amount of hidden criminality by claiming that the right believes conspiracy theories because we're more gullible. They produce studies that show conservatives are more wired to believe them — but they never dig deeper as to why.

One of the main conspiracy theories that is now becoming accurate is pedophiles on the left and in Hollywood. The downfall of Jeffrey Epstein and Harvey Weinstein squelched much of that ridicule, due to how powerful both men were on the left and in Hollywood. Actor Cory Feldman sounded the alarm about pedophiles in Hollywood for years, but he was mostly ignored until it was proven in the highest echelons of power.

There were rampant accusations of conspiracy theories during COVID-19, some which are still in the process of coming true. One was that it was deliberately created in a Wuhan lab, where it was leaked out into society. Almost no one doubts that now. Another was that the COVID-19 vaccines don't work. Even the medical community and U.S. government now admit they don't stop transmission of the virus, at best they lower the risk of serious hospitalization.

Others challenged the efficacy of the masks. Eventually, suspicions that most of them don't work, and don't work to protect the person wearing it from others' breathing on them, were proven accurate. Strangely, most leftists still don't bother trying to obtain an n95 or n99 mask, proving it's all about virtue signaling.

Some of the ones that are still in the process of being proven accurate are all the side effects of the vaccines. As time goes by, and more studies are done, we'll discover the extent of the damage. Despite the fact the government controls these types of studies by withholding grants from studies that would reveal too much harm, eventually the information will trickle out.

The Russian collusion hoax along with the discredited Steele dossier are one of the biggest. The Democrats tried hard to ridicule Republicans who dug into the origins, but eventually there wasn't much they could do when both special counsel [1]Robert Mueller and then special counsel [2]John Durham concluded there wasn't any collusion.

The left loves to say there's never been any "widespread evidence of election fraud" in the 2020 or 2022 elections — which [3]isn't even the standard to overturn elections — but we are routinely seeing more and more Democrats prosecuted for significant voter fraud over the past couple of years. In Arizona, thanks to former Arizona Attorney General Mark Brnovich, two Democratic officials, including the former Democratic mayor of San Luis, Guillermina Fuentes, were prosecuted and [4]convicted for ballot harvesting. Juan Guerrero, a local justice of the peace, [5]told investigators that "issues" like this had occurred in the town for years, and "influential people" like Fuentes, known as "Chispas," exchanged ballots for money. The Heritage Foundation has an updated [6]database compiling instances of election fraud around the country.

The left said for years that Republicans have a racist history in our country, claiming they were behind the racist policies in the South. Republicans objected to the characterization, and now evidence is everywhere showing that the Democrats really were behind the discrimination. Professor Carol Swain has [7]documented much of the history. She laid out how the Democratic Party defended slavery, started the Civil War, founded the KKK and fought against every major civil rights act in U.S. history.

The left points at the QAnon phenomenon as a bastion of unproven conspiracy theories. Well, with all the possible ways people can have fun and make money, it doesn't come as any surprise that someone made up a fake persona that said all the right things and added in a lot of predictions that really weren't grounded in facts. It's a red herring.

The problem is the mainstream media gives scant coverage to developments revealing conspiracy theories as accurate. You'll never see a headline that says "Conspiracy theory on the right is proven true." In contrast, they run headlines nonstop that say some conservative theory was "debunked," and their fact checking sites are everywhere claiming to debunk conservatives.

There are some longtime conspiracy theories that have quietly become viewed as accurate. Many of these are used as [8]tests to determine whether someone is gullible about believing them — guess those tests will need to be revised. They include questioning whether Lee Harvey Oswald was the only one involved in the fatal shooting of President John F. Kennedy, whether [9]UFOs exist and the government's knowledge of them, and the government's secret experiments on Americans such as the infamous syphilis study known as the Tuskegee Experiment.

Suspensions that a powerful cabal of people control much of the government are gradually proving right, although not necessarily in a tidy little fascist style, it's much more loose. The left doesn't even bother arguing back anymore that it has significant control over certain areas of society; particularly the legal system, the media, entertainment, and education.

And let's be honest, as I've [10]written previously, the left has more conspiracy theories than the right. But since their comrades in the MSM give them a free pass, there is a misperception that most are on the right.

1.3.4 The GOP Is Changing, and That's Good (2024-03-04 12:19)

Do you remember your stupid high school government teacher, that insipid left-leaning strange-o in the bad sport jacket who taught you that conservatives don't want to change and liberals want change and blah blah blah? Good gosh, there's nothing worse than the unionized hacks infesting our schools and filling empty skulls with nonsense. But enough about public education. The truth is that today's conservatives do want change, and change is coming to our party. The new Republican Party is, as that desiccated old pervert masquerading as our president likes to say, not your father's Republican Party. Thank goodness, because my father's Republican Party was too often a bunch of sissy corporate lackeys who never met a war they didn't want somebody else's kids to fight.

Yes, we're changing, and that's good. But look at the other party. They're regressing. They're the cutting edge of the neo-Bolshevik Revolution, except I will give this to Lenin's crew - at least they knew which bathroom to use.

The GOP's changes are illustrated by a couple of Veep candidates who I inexplicably overlooked in [1]last week's column on Trump's potential vice presidential picks. Take JD Vance, the senator from Ohio, who is giving traditionalists fits because he dares to ask tough questions about Ukraine - and as a military guy who trained Ukrainians, I agree that we need to ask tough questions. The thing about JD Vance is that he's from Ohio, like me, so he's cool. But he's also a self-identified hillbilly. His book, "Hillbilly Elegy," about his life growing up poor, talks about people who at one time would've been Democrats. The Buick dealership owners and the sensible, sober bankers of the old-school Republican Party never saw somebody like JD Vance unless he was fixing or parking their car or [2]caddy for them at Bushwood Country Club. But now JD is a senator, and they are busy setting fire to their money subsidizing Nikki Haley in a desperate attempt to turn back the clock to 2004.

Let's apply the Schlichter Test to JD Vance. First, does he do any damage to the ticket? While Ohio is red, if he leaves the Senate that sparks an expensive and uncertain fight to keep that seat. That's sub-optimal, but otherwise, he's fine. He's got no known weirdness. The only people who hate him are the elites, who feel this formerly-penniless upstart betrayed them by not being more grateful for being invited to join the ruling class. There's nothing they hate more than an uppity peasant jumped up into a position of authority. Is he competent to be president? Sure. He's a Marine, he's smart, and he is undaunted by airplane stairways. Finally, does he bring anything to the ticket? That's a little more complicated. Does he secure the working-class demographic? It worked in Ohio, but Ohio has been trending red, so it's unclear if that aspect mattered much. We don't need him to bring us Ohio.

The other guy I unforgivably overlooked is my friend, Ric Grenell, the smooth and brilliant diplomat who gave the Europeans fits as our ambassador to Germany when he demanded that the Krauts pay their fair share of NATO. He's a very smart and cunning guy, and he is definitely competent. The question is whether he would damage the ticket and whether he brings anything tangible to the campaign.

The same people who love Trump already love Ric, so it's not clear he would bring in any additional new voters. And there is the gay thing. Who would've thought one of the most popular figures in the Republican Party would be an out gay man who's also an evangelical Christian? Probably not a lot ten or so years ago, when the loathsome Mitt Romney cravenly stabbed his friend in the back and made him resign from his campaign team because some people complained that he had a gay guy on his staff. Today, we have a Republican Party that mostly doesn't care. Right now, most of us would eagerly vote for a differently-abled plus-sized lesbian Hindu of color who's also a furry if she - or they or xe - voted like Ted Cruz. But there will be some people who do care. Will that be a net loss or a net gain? The fact is, Republicans have learned that choosing candidates by their identities does not translate for Republicans. We don't get black voters because we pick a black candidate, and we don't get women voters because we pick a woman-identifying one. It's doubtful we would get gay voters just because Ric Grenell is gay. But we might get them because Ric Grenell is awesome - I have several [3]books that mention a hypothetical Vice-President Grenell in some context or other, so you know where I stand.

Advertisement

These two guys represent a huge change in the Republican Party, both in terms of its approach to class - we are now a much more working-class accepting party than we were - and in terms of minority groups. Our vice-presidential candidates in 2024 include black people, working people, gay people, and women people, who aren't a minority, but you know what I mean. The GOP has changed for the better by allowing everyone to support a future of freedom, prosperity, and security instead of being condemned to the Democrat future of oppression, poverty, and anarcho-tyranny.

We saw another big change with the announcement that Mitch McConnell will soon resign. There's been a lot of ink spilled about Cocaine Mitch, a man who was simultaneously unbelievably frustrating and unbelievably proficient in his prime. Is it time for him to go? Yes, because he's 82 and he's in poor health – it's commonly understood in Washington, DC, that he suffered a debilitating stroke. And yes, his game seems to be slipping with the border fiasco and the obnoxious gun control thing that may very well keep John Cornyn, who is inexplicably a senator from Texas, from taking the Murder Turtle's job. Conservatives will not miss the old-school aspects of McConnell, who seems to find it an intolerable imposition to have the grassroots offer its input regarding his plans. But love him or hate him, he was the most effective legislative genius of this century and maybe more. If for nothing else, he deserves huge credit for keeping that obnoxious progressive lackey Merrick Garland off the Supreme Court.

Regardless of how you feel about Mitch McConnell and his legacy, the fact is that this is a changing of the guard. Now comes the fight to see who will replace him, and it may well be somebody unexpected. But it has to be someone effective. That's the priority. Conservatives need to stop thinking with their hearts and think with their minds when they pick the next guy to hold the position. We keep hearing names like Rand Paul and Ted Cruz, but that's all based on ideology. As much as we like what they think, these guys are not team-builders. They are rebels. The kind of senators we really like are polarizers, not unifiers. The right guy to replace Mitch McConnell is not the guy who gets every policy choice exactly right. He's the guy who gets Josh Hawley and Susan Collins to vote the same way. That's the job.

We are a coalition, and while our coalition is changing, it's still a coalition. That's something we have to understand. In America, the two political parties are going to have just about 50 % of the population. Neither is going to have a lot more than that, at least not for long. Each is going to have about half, and that means it's going to be a big tent whether we like it or not. It means we're going to have our Lisa Murkowskis as well as our Mike Lees. That's just how it is.

But we can make conservative progress. We are moving the Republican Party to the right. It's slow, and it's painful, and Mitt Romney will still be around for a while, annoying us, but it's happening, and it's going to keep happening. It won't happen overnight. Rome wasn't built in a day. Insert another cliché here.

There's no end to this fight. The fight is the end state. We're always going to be fighting. Accept that. Understand that. And be happy that, at least today, we're changing in the right direction.

1.3.5 Justice Barrett Explains the Message Americans Should Take Away From the Trump Ballot Ruling (2024-03-04 12:20)

As Spencer reported, the Supreme Court ruled unanimously 9-0 Monday morning that states cannot take former President Donald Trump off of the 2024 presidential ballot.

SCOTUS Reverses Colorado Ruling Banning Trump From Ballot

[1]<https://t.co/JppBMxqdWZ>— Townhall.com (@townhallcom) [2]March 4, 2024

In her [3]written opinion on the ruling, Justice Amy Coney Barrett explained the message she believes Americans should take away from the decision.

"In my judgment, this is not the time to amplify disagreement with stridency. The Court has settled a politically charged issue in the volatile season of a Presidential election. Particularly in this circumstance, writings on the Court should turn the national temperature down, not up," Barrett wrote. "For present purposes, our differences are far less important than our unanimity: All nine Justices agree on the outcome of this case. That is the message Americans should take home."

All Justices concurred that the states cannot create a "chaotic state-by-state patchwork, at odds with our Nation's federalism principles." A patchwork was rejected because it would "sever the direct link that the Framers found so critical between the National Government and the people of the United States."

1.3.6 Separation of Church and State was a page out of Economy and Society vol 2 by Max Weber (2024-03-04 12:22)

It is probably the most misunderstood concept in our Constitutional Republic. I remember being asked to address a group of upper-level undergrad Political Science majors at the University of Miami while I was a member of Congress. My bachelor's degree and two Masters' are in Poli Sci with emphasis on international relations, political theory, and military operations. It was a great discussion as the purpose was to highlight how my studies enabled me as a member of Congress. And those of you who know me well know that my faith is an integral part of who I am. God knows that I am far from perfect, but He knows my heart. As to the source of my strength, well, see Joshua 1:9.

During the Q & A portion, there was a young female student who stepped up and asked me if I thought mentioning my Christian faith, as a member of Congress, was a violation of the separation of Church and State. I asked her why she thought so, and where did she find the concept of separation of Church and State? She responded that it was in the US Constitution. I pulled out my pocket Constitution and asked if she would show me where, and warned her it would be awhile because it's not there. Another student shouted out, "It's in the Declaration of Independence," to wit I calmly disagreed, once again. Then I looked over to the professors and instructors with a smile and suggested perhaps the students were not being taught well.

As Executive Director of the American Constitutional Rights Union (ACRU), I just discussed this topic again over the weekend in Marco Island at an event called Worship on the Rock.

rather than upon the socially inferior governed strata, makes for the fact that officialdom on the whole does not "suffer" much under its dependency from the "higher-up." The present conservative movement among the Baden clergy, occasioned by the anxiety of a threatening separation of church and state, was admittedly determined by the desire not to be turned "from a master into a servant of the parish."

D. RANK AS THE BASIS OF REGULAR SALARY. The official as a rule receives a monetary compensation in the form of a salary, normally fixed, and the old age security provided by a pension. The salary is not measured like a wage in terms of work done, but according to "status," that is, according to the kind of function (the "rank") and, possibly, according to the length of service. The relatively great security of the official's income, as well as the rewards of social esteem, make the office a sought-after position, especially in countries which no longer provide opportunities for colonial profits. In such countries, this situation permits relatively low salaries for officials.

E. FIXED CAREER LINES AND STATUS RIGIDITY. The official is set for a "career" within the hierarchical order of the public service. He expects to move from the lower, less important and less well paid, to the higher positions. The average official naturally desires a mechanical fixing of the conditions of promotion: if not of the offices, at least of the salary levels. He wants these conditions fixed in terms of "seniority," or possibly according to grades achieved in a system of examinations. Here and there, such grades actually form a character indelebilis of the official and have lifelong effects on his career. To this is joined the desire to reinforce the right to office and to increase status group closure and economic security. All of this makes for a tendency to consider the offices as "prebends" of those qualified by educational certificates. The necessity of weighing general personal and intellectual qualifications without concern for the often subaltern character of such patents of specialized education, has brought it about that the highest political offices, especially the "ministerial" positions, are as a rule filled without reference to such certificates.

3. Monetary and Financial Presuppositions of Bureaucracy

The development of the money economy is a presupposition of a modern bureaucracy insofar as the compensation of officials today takes the form of money salaries. The money economy is of very great impor-

Max Weber Economy and Society 1921

Separation of Church and State is not located in any of our founding documents, nor the Federalist Papers. It comes from a letter that the author of the Declaration of Independence, and our third President Thomas Jefferson wrote to the Danbury Baptist Convention of Connecticut. The Baptists were concerned that those pesky Presbyterians were getting an upper hand in our new fledgling government, and, of course, would seek to elevate their religion. Jefferson wanted to make it clear that would not be the case, that America would not have any state-established religion.

What Jefferson, in his letter, did not want to see happen in our America, was what happened in England under King Henry VIII. When Henry sought a divorce from his wife through the Catholic Church, he was denied. Therefore, he decided to create his very own church, the Church of England, and prescribe his own practices, orders, and dogma as the head of that Church. Since he was also the king, using a little "k," he ordered his new church to be the official church. Of course, this follows [2]last week's discussion where we articulated the reason English political philosopher John Locke formulated the Natural Rights Theory, which challenged the prevailing Divine Rights Theory, which Henry firmly enabled.

This is why our very first liberty in our Constitution's Bill of Rights is the freedom of religion and the free exercise thereof, that Congress shall not establish any religion. Yet, what we face in today's America is a political philosophy that rejects religion, and faith, to do as Henry did, which is to elevate their ideological agenda. As Henry did, this philosophy seeks to persecute and prosecute any and all who do not ascribe to their belief. Just as Sir Thomas More, advisor to Henry the VIII, was wrongfully accused, tried, convicted, and beheaded for not giving his assent to Henry as his King, with a capital "K." If you wish to understand, watch the Academy Award winning classic, "A Man for All Seasons". You can bet that if Hollywood tried to remake that film, the leftists would botch it!

Today's progressive socialist left, Marxists, parading around as the Democrat party, have established their religion. It is that of dismembering babies in the womb up until birth, and murdering them even afterwards, same-sex marriage, gender dysphoria and the mutilation of children, and climate change. If you refuse to bow down to their established religion, you will find yourself being persecuted, prosecuted, and in some cases we are seeing, losing your own children. Deuteronomy 30:19 and Psalm 127:3-5 are pretty definitive statements on life. Yet, pro-life supporters are being jailed. Romans 1:18-32 along with 1 Corinthians 6:9-11 are pretty straightforward about human sexuality. If you don't agree, you get called homophobe, a form of persecution. Gender dysphoria is covered in Genesis 2 and makes it quite clear. If you disagree, then you will be called a "transphobe," and as we are seeing in Virginia, even a Lieutenant Governor is not safe from leftist persecution when they feel their religion has been violated. Lastly, with respect to climate change, well, if you do not subscribe to man changing the climate, then you are a denier and basically deemed a troglodyte and publicly persecuted.

Perhaps coming to America is another example of leftist, Marxist, persecution of the Christian faith, declaring the Holy Bible contains hate speech. This has already happened in parts of Europe where publicly stating Bible verses that go against the secular humanist leftist religion is a punishable offense. Funny, why is it that leftists have no issue with the Quran, which post-622AD (Medina phase) contains explicit hate speech and violence? Phrases that lead to the type of violence witnessed in the acts of October 7th. Maybe leftists and Islamists are comfortable with advancing their ideologies through acts of violence?

Back in March 2020, the one institution that the government vehemently wanted to shut down, under threat of imprisonment and fining, were churches. Not Home Depot, McDonalds, abortion clinics, or marijuana stores. Consider how absurd – and unconstitutional – for the government to declare churches as "non-essential." In essence, they ruled that your very first liberty was non-essential. As the Bible says in Hebrews 10:25, "forsake not the assembly of yourselves together." However, when it comes to the new religion of secular humanism, there is no separation. And isn't it interesting that churches would seek to appease the government and accept their religion under a misconceived belief of subjugation and moral relativism, or perhaps fear, disregarding the word of God. Too many of those called pastors, ministers, and reverends are not being good shepherds of their flocks or congregations, but rather offering them to the wolves. Seeing a BLM sign on a church, as was the case in the Dallas area a few years back, is quite perplexing. BLM is an organization founded by self-proclaimed avowed Marxists. Karl Marx despised faith and religion. He referred to it as the "opiate of the masses." Truth be told, he wanted people to believe that man – government – could create a paradise for them, here on earth. That is bad juju, Tarzan.

So, in order to instill fear into Christians, the left now has a new denigrating, and disparaging moniker, "Christian Nationalist." In other words, if you do not ascribe to their religion, they will target you as a domestic threat. Perhaps that is why we see, according to My Faith Votes, that on average in a presidential election cycle, some 25 million Christians do not vote. They surrender their faith.

My recommendation? Everyone concerned about ending the false narrative of Separation of Church and State, should go out and read the book by my friend, Eric Metaxas, "Letter to the American Church." Now is the time for courage, not fear. As the Bible says, "perfect love casts out all fear." Even President Franklin Delano Roosevelt said, "The only thing we have to fear is fear itself." I believe the apostle Paul said it best in Philippians 4:13, "I can do all things through Christ who gives me strength."

As for me, well, I created this symbol that I award to pastors I see standing up for the word of God: the Black Robe Regiment tomahawk. In conjunction with my friend David Storts of iST Laser Engraving, we designed this to be the embodiment of the men of God who left their pulpits during the Revolutionary War. Christian pastors who honor and follow the words of 2 Timothy 4:2-5 (NIV):

"Preach the word; be prepared in season and out of season; correct, rebuke and encourage—with great patience and careful instruction. For the time will come when people will not put up with sound doctrine. Instead, to suit their own desires, they will gather around them a great number of teachers to say what their itching ears want to hear. They will turn their ears away from the truth and turn aside to myths. But you, keep your head in all situations, endure hardship, do the work of an evangelist, discharge all the duties of your ministry."

The most recent recipient of the Col. Allen West Black Robe Regiment tomahawk is Pastor Jeff Schwartzentraub founder and Senior Pastor of Brave Church in Cherry Hills, Colorado. I recently attended his service and Pastor Jeff, it is on the way.

Separation of Church and State does not mean we separate our Constitutional Republic from its Judeo-Christian faith heritage. We fight for it, and we vote for its fundamental principles and values that were integral in the establishment of our nation. If doing so angers the progressive socialist left, so be it.

2 Corinthians 3:17 (NIV) says:

"Now the Lord is the Spirit, and where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is freedom."

1.3.7 No parliament means no democracy in United States (2024-03-06 13:52)

No parliament means no democracy in United States. It's a representative republic. Democracies don't have the electoral college and US does. [1]Renegadeviking ([2]talk) 01:58, 4 September 2022 (UTC) Do you have reliable sources that verify this claim? Because if this is just your opinion of what a democracy is, we can't act on that, and even with reliable sources per [3]WP:EXTRAORDINARY they'd need to be very good and compelling sources, because that's quite a claim. - [4]Aoidh ([5]talk) 02:01, 4 September 2022 (UTC) [6]<https://www.archives.gov/electoral-college/about>[7]<https://www.heritage.org/american-founders/report/america-republic-not-democracy><https://www.govinfo.gov/feature-s/us-electoral-college>[8]<https://www.govinfo.gov/feature-s/us-electoral-college> — Preceding [9]unsigned comment added by [10]Renegadeviking ([11]talk • [12]contribs) 02:04, 4 September 2022 (UTC) None of these support what you're saying, that "democracies don't have the electoral college." It may not be the exact type of whatever democracy you're thinking of, but that doesn't mean it isn't one itself. - [13]Aoidh ([14]talk) 02:10, 4 September 2022 (UTC)

- The Heritage foundation is a think tank with a clear bias when it comes to American politics. They're not a reliable source for facts. And the other sources don't say what you're asserting. -[15]Aquillion ([16]talk) 03:40, 4 September 2022 (UTC)

Democracies don't have 435 Congressmen in House of Representatives with who knows how many districts that are supposed to be loyal to voters. Then USA has without any vote of no confidence like in parliament so that's not democracies. 3 branches of government. In US there is impeachment. Democracies come from Ancient Greece. Ancient Romans have Senators or Senates. No other constitutional republics have God in the writing. — Preceding [17]unsigned comment added by [18]Renegadeviking ([19]talk • [20]contribs) 03:56, 4 September 2022 (UTC) First, please [21]sign your comments so we know who is saying what is being said. Second, that you personally feel that it is not a democracy because of whatever criteria is ultimately irrelevant; we go by what reliable sources say, not [22]with what we feel is true. - [23]Aoidh ([24]talk) 04:37, 4 September 2022 (UTC) Except USA has [25]<http://keywiki.org>. Democrats are trying to erase servers and history. We need the Wayback machine more these days. [26]<https://bensguide.gpo.gov/m-constitution>[27]Renegadeviking ([28]talk • [29]contribs) 03:56, 4 September 2022 (UTC) Whatever that website is, and I feel like we're getting into conspiracy theory territory here, but it's irrelevant to the point you're trying to make and does not change why your assertion about democracy and the United States is inaccurate. But we're getting off track. Do you have an issue with anything in the article, do you have a proposal for an alternate wording or removal of a specific wording, and do you have reliable sources to back up that proposed change? Anything short of that and this discussion should honestly be closed as it's getting off-topic. - [30]Aoidh ([31]talk) 04:59, 4 September 2022 (UTC) Sorry, that isn't correct, and doesn't really make sense. The US is a representative democracy, or a republic. It's not a direct democracy. But there is a legislature elected by popular election, similar to parliament. And we don't have a monarchy, unlike the UK, which has a fossilized vestige that could still technically dissolve parliament. [32]Andre[33] 02:08, 4 September 2022 (UTC)

The british have a nice encyclopedia saying its a constitutional republic. [34]<https://www.britannica.com/place/United-States> [35]Renegadeviking ([36]talk • [37]contribs) 03:56, 4 September 2022 (UTC) Democratic Centralism in Marxism-Leninism doesn't make sense either and that's not democracy either. After 10 years wait of QT 6.6.2 and KDE Plasma 6.0.1 running in Virtual Box, there is a black screen with the desktop..unusable. This disaster wasn't happening in 2006 with KDE 4.0.

Luckily opensuse tumbleweed is the first distro of kde 6.0.2 that works perfectly

1.3.9 This Is Not the Soviet Union, Mr. Biden (2024-03-13 22:35)

It marked the end of an experiment that lasted almost a century testing the premise that godless secularization, turning control of people's lives over to other people to rule them, who decide what others need and how they should live and conduct their lives, is the answer for mankind.

In the free world, the collapse of the Soviet Union was cause for celebration. In the USA, it was widely viewed as a victory of the American way of life – a free nation under God.

But let's not get confused between things and the names we give them.

Our own country – despite the words in our founding documents about freedom and God – has been on a path adopting the same premises about human reality that lead to the collapse of the communist world.

This was evident in President Joe Biden's message to the nation in his State of the Union address.

Biden, in so many words, delivered a message that the path for a better, wealthier, fairer America is more government.

Despite the reality that the country is being crushed with staggering debt, the result of runaway government, Biden and his party celebrate this and want even more.

The words find their way into numbers in the budget for the next 10 years that the president has just submitted to Congress.

Federal spending in this budget will stand in fiscal year 2025 at $7.3 trillion. One-quarter of our national economy consumed by the federal government.

This amounts to a 14 % increase from where federal spending stood in the last quarter of 2023 – $6.4 trillion.

Per the president's spokesperson in the White House, this budget "invests in all of America to make sure everyone has a fair shot, we leave no one behind."

Translation: government will accumulate more power and decide what is fair and achieve its aims with more government paid for with other people's money.

The beautiful language of leaving "no one behind" means government expansion into every area of our lives, including subsidized child care for families earning $200,000 and below.

The bill for the massive new spending, per the president's budget, will be paid for with a total of $4.9 trillion in tax increases on the wealthy and on corporations.

I say "supposedly paid for" because expansion of government under the premises of raising taxes on the most successful sectors of our economy never works.

Renown economist Arthur Laffer and Heritage Foundation economist Stephen Moore just published data showing that when President Donald Trump cut the highest individual tax rate and cut the corporate tax rate in 2017, the percentage of overall taxes paid by the wealthiest 1 % of the population increased.

Before the Trump tax cuts, the top 1 % paid "a little more than 40 % of the income taxes collected," per Laffer and Moore.

After the tax cuts, that percentage increased to almost 46 %.

This was not something new. Laffer and Moore show data going back to 1980 showing general correlation of lower top tax rates with a larger percentage of overall taxes paid by the top 1 %.

Freedom means unleashing productivity and creativity. Absence of freedom means punishing both and therefore getting less of both.

It's why the Soviet Union collapsed. Godless secularism doesn't work.

The latest edition of CURE's "The State of Black Progress" shows the uniform failure of expansion of government into health care, education, housing and retirement, all in the name of "fairness" and no one being "left behind."

The truth really is it's more than this. It's about politicians who love power buying it with gifts given with other people's money. Harsh to say, but this is reality.

Only 19 % of Americans are satisfied with the direction of the country, per Gallup.

Most Americans feel something is wrong. We need leadership to take us back to freedom and God.

1.3.10 As More Damning Evidence Comes Out Against J6 Committee, Liz Cheney Is Doubling Down (2024-03-13 22:40)

It's been a particularly rough week for former Rep. Liz Cheney (R-WY) and her obsession about January 6. Her narrative is collapsing, [1]especially as she tried to bury evidence regarding former and potentially future President Donald Trump's security plans for that day. Rep. Barry Loudermilk (R-GA), who chairs the Committee on House Administration's Subcommittee on Oversight, also shared a report his committee did about "the politicization of the January 6th Select Committee."

The American people deserve the entire truth about Jan. 6.

Instead of conducting a genuine investigation, the former Select Committee was focused on their predetermined narrative of legislatively prosecuting former President Trump.

It is my objective to uncover all the facts.... [2]<https://t.co/WtDQd0CZho>— Rep. Barry Loudermilk (@RepLoudermilk) [3]March 11, 2024

Multiple key findings focused on the supposed "star witness" Cassidy Hutchinson, who has changed her testimony. Her testimony was [4]also contradicted by U.S. Secret Service agents. Yet she was still considered credible by the Select Committee. The report also mentions embattled Fulton County DA Fani Willis, who, looked to meet with the Select Committee. As Mia has been covering, Willis is facing her own issues in her case against Trump, [5]with Judge Scott McAfee having just dismissed some of the charges.

"The American people deserve the entire truth about Jan. 6," Loudermilk posted, though it doesn't appear as if Cheney, who served as the vice chair of that dismantled Select Committee, would agree. Rather, she has a narrative to uphold, as evidenced by her onslaught of fiery posts, which our sister site of Twitchy [6]has been covering at length.

Cheney's most recent post, from Tuesday morning, which she herself also reposted, [7]comes with a particularly nasty and steep charge about not being on America's side.

"If your response to Trump's assault on our democracy is to lie & cover up what he did, attack the brave men & women who came forward with the truth, and defend the criminals who violently assaulted the Capitol, you need to rethink whose side you're on. Hint: It's not America's," her post read as she ironically brought up "truth."

There's already been close to 15,000 replies and close to 1,000 quoted replies of people having had enough of her talking points.

If your response to Trump's assault on our democracy is to lie & cover up what he did, attack the brave men & women who came forward with the truth, and defend the criminals who violently assaulted the Capitol, you need to rethink whose side you're on. Hint: It's not America's.— Liz Cheney (@Liz_Cheney) [8]March 12, 2024

Although such a post doesn't call out Loudermilk, or anyone, posts from the former congresswoman did specifically call out conservatives [9]like Mark Levin and [10]Sen. Mike Lee (R-UT).

If you had hoped that Cheney was going anywhere, think again, though she doesn't seem to be aware her influence in the Republican Party has been completely dwindling. Her narratives have been discredited, and let's not forget that she lost her primary [11]in August 2022 to now Rep. Harriet Hageman by nearly 40 points. In May of 2021 she had also been replaced by Rep. Elise Stefanik (R-NY) in her role as the House Republican Conference chairwoman, a role which Stefanik still holds today.

Trump just clinched the nomination [12]on Tuesday night though, after [13]his primary win in Washington state, which means we can likely expect even more ranting from Cheney about how he is supposedly a threat to democracy.

Cheney has even hinted she herself may run for president, though only if it doesn't help Trump. It's a question she has been asked since even before she lost her primary. On Wednesday morning, The Hill published a piece highlighting how "[14]Cheney fuels speculation about her next move," specifically as to if that means she'll endorse President Joe Biden for president.

It certainly doesn't look like she'll be endorsing Trump, like some even still delusionally hope she might do. Her post from March 6, still the pinned post from her X account, makes clear she looks to "ensure Donald Trump is never anywhere near the Oval Office again" as she invited people to support her organization, The Great Task. Such a post conveniently came right as former South Carolina Gov. Nikki Haley had dropped her bid for the Republican nomination.

The GOP has chosen. They will nominate a man who attempted to overturn an election and seize power. We have eight months to save our republic & ensure Donald Trump is never anywhere near the Oval Office again. Join me in the fight for our nation's freedom. 1.3.11 Bought a few (6) Dungeons and Dragons books and going to the Dork Den for battle (2024-03-15 22:47)

I can't get into paper books unless it's PDF off archive.org. Mom says no. My certification books are outdated. Still have all my college books. I have some novels like those ones on goodreads.com. Now I collect Dungeons and Dragons books now like the Players manual, monster manual, Xanathar book of everything, [1]Waterdeep: Dragon Heist (Dungeons & 396

Dragons, 5th Edition, [2]Eberron: Rising from the Last War. and [3]Streams of Silver. and the famous Icewind Dale Crystal Shard. There is the Dork Den in Mankato, Minnesota. I go there for D &D groups, but the books there cost $50 new so I find second hand D &D books at $11 to $27. Saving for visitors. This better make me friends. In the 2000s, Game Quest and D &D books, but during that era I was collecting N64, Genesis, Super Nintendo, Playstation 2, and Gamecube. And I'm 8 months away from age 40.

Rave Culture in Minneapolis

Flashes of green and purple outline the slacken faces in the crowd. They bob their heads off-rhythm and stare into the distance. Blue light cracks across the stage as a man taps my shoulder and gargles, "You know honey, it's okay to smile". It's in this moment that I feel as though this decision was a mistake.

The idea of going to a rave had been bounced around in our friend group for a couple weeks. To us, raves were an essential bucket list item. They seemed revelous. A night filled with exhilarating music and entrancing lights. When given the opportunity to finally check that box, we jumped.

The night before the event, we ventured to the Mall of America to pick out our outfits. This was the most exciting part and ramped up the anticipation for the event. Surrounded by neons and metallics, with only 40 minutes to decide, I picked out a combination of fishnets, holistic tulle, and silver.

The quintessential rave item is kandi. These beaded bracelets come in every color and design and symbolize the rave culture, PLURR (peace, love, unity, respect, and responsibility). After hearing about my rave intentions, one of my close friends made me five beautiful kandi bracelets to complete my dream.

Kandi trading comes with meaning. It commemorates a connection made with someone at a rave. Going into the Skyway Theater in downtown Minneapolis, this was my idea of what a rave would be: a place filled with loud music and a special atmosphere of unity.

The reality was very much not what I had idealized. Walking onto the floor was a deafening experience, literally. The first five minutes were the most euphoric of my life – then took an exponential nose-dive.

After breaking trance from the electric music, I realized how boring it was. The DJ playing had an evident god complex taller than the skyscraper surrounding us, yet somehow only knew how to blast the base. After subsequently blowing out our eardrums, the only relief was when the main performer, Mitis, came on stage. The room was still too small to find reprieve from the loudness. Even standing in the back felt like my brain was being hijacked by the beat.

When I started to look around, I uneasily began to notice the ratio of men to women. Throngs of men stood in the back silently observing while much fewer girls danced seemingly disembodied. A feeling of fear began to tighten my chest as I realized how outnumbered we were.

I was approached numerous times by older men asking me incoherent questions. When I didn't respond, they'd drift over to the next group of girls and start the cycle over. They treated us like fruit in a grocery store, eyeing us over, trying to feel our ripeness. I'd never felt my gender and age as such vulnerabilities before.

After an hour, all four of us jammed ourselves in a dilapidated 4x3 bathroom stall and made an exit plan. We were far too sober for the chaos around us and the rave was not at all the movie-moment we desired. We needed to binge Insomnia Cookies and sleep.

While I'm not warded off of raves completely, I don't think I'll be attending another one in the Twin Cities. The rave life in Minneapolis is nothing like the traditional EDM festivals like Mysteryland and Tomorrowland. There are a lot fewer people, with the attendees being mostly in their 30s. No one wore kandi, which was the most disappointing part, and there wasn't any unity in the experience.

Above anything else, it made me realize my place in the world that I live in. It seems unjust that I had to fear so much for my safety in a crowd of 500 people simply because of my gender. The lack of security provided increased the anxiety-inducing factors. The fashion, the getting ready process, and the people made the night wonderful, but I could have done without the rave.

1.3.13 Here's What Biden's Apology to the Illegal Who Allegedly Killed Laken Riley Reveals About Our Elites (2024-03-19 22:58)

The horrific [1]murder of Laken Riley by repeated felony offender and illegal alien Jose Ibarra, 26, a Venezuelan citizen, was preventable—had federal immigration laws simply been enforced by the Biden administration.

When called out in his recent State of the Union address, [2]President Joe Biden referenced the deceased Riley. But Biden misidentified her as “Lincoln Riley”—the USC football coach!

Biden only accurately noted that she “was killed by an ‘illegal.’”

True—but almost immediately the Left was infuriated over Biden's accurate use of the supposedly insensitive “illegal” for the murderer Ibarra.

Biden [3]soon apologized for correctly identifying her killer as an illegal alien—but not for misidentifying the victim.

He left the callous impression that he was more upset about offending his open-borders base than about the savage beating of a young 22-year-old American nursing student.

Biden's woke open-borders agenda supersedes any worry over the subsequent mounting number of Americans who have fallen victim to foreign gangs and criminals. He seems oblivious to the nearly 100,000 Americans who die from fentanyl imported across open borders.

The same idea of abstract humanity juxtaposed with concrete callousness toward humans characterizes much of the current leftist agenda.

The Biden administration envisions mandating the use of [4]electric vehicles and banning natural gas appliances. These measures will supposedly help “save” the planet—even as they make life far more expensive and dangerous for the middle class and poor in the here and now.

We are told that biologically born [5]males who transition to females have a civil right to compete in female sports.

Such transgender activism may sound compassionate in the abstract. Yet in the concrete, thousands of women are put in danger by competing against the much larger musculoskeletal frames and natural strength of transitioning males.

Moreover, tens of thousands of young female athletes are losing opportunities to excel and set records—thus destroying over a half-century of women’s efforts to reach parity with men’s sports.

In 2021, United Airlines President Scott Kirby bragged that his company was now devoted to ensuring that 50 % of all trained pilots would be either people of color or women.

The Federal Aviation Administration had similar [6]diversity, equity, and inclusion mandates for hiring air traffic controllers.

In 2023, Boeing bragged that it was using “inclusion” as a criterion for executive compensation. Pay from now on would be calibrated in large part on the success of hiring new employees on the basis of their race, gender, and sexual orientation.

In the abstract, ensuring that air travel “looks like America” is no doubt a noble goal.

But if such subordination of meritocracy is canonized without proper attention to the only criterion that really matters—the safety of the nearly 3 million American airline passengers who take 45,000 flights per day—lives will be needlessly lost.

Some data and recent anecdotal evidence suggest that something has now gone dangerously wrong with the entire airline industry.

In January 2023, thousands of domestic flights were canceled or delayed because of a series of Federal Aviation Administration computer failures. Over the last 10 years, near-crashes and collisions of commercial planes have more than doubled.

Even scarier, in the last two weeks alone, United Airlines suffered numerous near-catastrophic events that may have involved crew lapses, air traffic controller errors, or problems with Boeing jet construction or maintenance—or all three. Specific details have mysteriously been kept from the public.

A United flight from San Francisco to Mexico had to make an emergency landing due to failing hydraulics. Another United flight bound for San Francisco from Sydney, Australia, had to turn around due to a “maintenance issue.” Yet another flight out of Chicago O’Hare International Airport likewise suffered undisclosed “maintenance issues” and returned home.

At Houston’s George Bush Intercontinental Airport, a United plane simply taxied off the runway and got stuck in the grass. Another United flight from San Francisco lost a wheel while taking off!

Yet another United flight from Houston to Florida was forced to make an emergency landing after one of its engines caught fire. At about the same time, a United flight bound for San Francisco from Hawaii experienced an engine failure in mid-flight.

Dozens were injured on a Boeing jet during a Chilean airline flight from Australia to New Zealand due to what officials called “a technical event during the flight which caused a strong movement.”

Anytime ideology and dogma trump merit, logic, and safety, the result is predictably scary and dangerous.

America needs to recalibrate its priorities to protect the lives and aspirations of all its citizens, regardless of their race and gender.

If our elites do not stop playing god and mandating their visions of heaven on earth, then they will surely ensure hell for us all.

1.3.14 CNN: Embarrassing for Biden If ISIS Did Attack Russia (2024-03-25 12:15)

CNN National Security Analyst Peter Bergen is laying the responsibility of one of the deadliest terror attacks in Moscow at President Joe Biden's feet.

During a segment on CNN's "AC360," Bergen stated that it would be embarrassing for Biden if ISIS did attack a Russian concert hall that killed at least 113 civilians.

"That would be very embarrassing for the Biden administration if it turned out that ISIS-K has sort of re-grouped to the extent that they can reach out to other countries [and] carry out major attacks," he said, citing the Biden Administration's botched withdrawal from Afghanistan.

Bergen admitted that he was skeptical at first about ISIS carrying out the attack. However, he said that Americans and Russians must have had intelligence in their system about ISIS's presence in Moscow.

More from Bergen's comments:

I was a little skeptical, because, typically, if you're an ISIS fighter, you don't care about getting killed at the scene of the crime. You don't — you're not looking for a getaway, you're looking to martyr yourself. So, in this case, it looks like the people did get away, according to the Russians. And that isn't sort of typical for an ISIS-type attack. So, — however, the fact that it's not just the Americans who had intelligence in their system about ISIS presence in Moscow, it turns out that the Russians did, too. Otherwise, why would Russian state television report on March 7 about a plan to attack a Moscow synagogue by ISIS? So, I don't know. It isn't absolutely typical of their M.O. But, certainly, ISIS has attacked concert venues in the past. In, Paris, you recall in 2015, they killed 130 people, most — many of them were attending a concert. And, obviously, this work could well be — it could be just what it — as this group says. I'm still looking for evidence, and, hopefully, we'll identify who these people are relatively quickly. Are they Tajiks? Are they Chechens? If they're part of ISIS. Did they train in Afghanistan? That's a very big question here. Obviously, that would be very embarrassing for the Biden administration if it turned out that ISIS-K has sort of re-grouped to the extent that they can reach out to other countries [and] carry out major attacks at a time when they're responsible for the withdrawal from — of U.S. troops from Afghanistan.

The death toll has reached at least 113, with Russian officials announcing that they have apprehended 11 suspects, with four of them being directly involved in the attack.

ISIS claimed responsibility for the onslaught. However, Russian President Vladimir Putin suggested Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelensky may have been involved.

Zelensky has denied such allegations.

On Saturday, Putin declared March 24 as a day of mourning, adding that additional security measures have been put into place.

1.3.15 House Oversight Committee Witnesses Makes Clear: The Bidens Lied (2024-03-25 12:17)

The House Oversight Committee Hearing on "Influence Peddling: Examining Joe Biden's Abuse of Public Office" from Wednesday was dominated by key moments, especially when it comes to witness Tony Bobulinski. In [1]his opening statement, Bobulinski testified that Hunter Biden perjured himself. He also mentioned repeatedly throughout the hearing how the Bidens lied.

It wasn't just Hunter who perjured himself, Bobulinski said, but so did President Joe Biden's brother, Jim Biden, when it comes to involvement with Chinese-linked company CEFC.

Bobulinski said he had "met with Joe Biden, Hunter Biden and Jim Biden at the Beverly Hilton in May 2017," which Hunter acknowledged but Jim denied took place. With passion, Bobulinski emphasized that "Hunter Biden, in his own transcribed interview, confirmed that that meeting took place," adding "Hunter confirmed his uncle perjured himself in front of this Committee."

"The Committee was so shocked by his perjury that they asked him the same question multiple times," Bobulinski also shared. "Each time he denied meeting with me and Joe Biden, after the Committee showed him text messages confirming that." Matt Margolis at our sister site of PJ Media highlighted how Bobulinski "[2]has receipts."

Bobulinski also noted that James Biden "lied extensively throughout his transcribed interview on February 21, and perjured himself." The New York Post [3]has put out an explainer of remarks made by the president's brother and Bobulinski.

[6]Jason Galanis, another one of Hunter's former business partners, who is serving prison time and was testifying via Zoom, also addressed such lies.

Hunter could not address these claims in real time, [7]as he was not there, despite how he had asked for such a public hearing. When [8]announcing he intended to have a public hearing, not long after Hunter gave testimony, Oversight Committee Chairman James Comer (R-KY) spoke of an interest in such a hearing because of "some contradictory statements" from other witnesses that the chairman said "I think need further review."

Bobulinski's accusations about Hunter lying also came up when he was questioned by Rep. Lisa McClain (R-MI). When answering as to why he thought Hunter didn't show up despite saying he wanted a public hearing, Bobulinski offered "I don't think he wanted to sit next to me, because obviously I've emphatically stated he perjured himself in his transcribed interview with the committee as did his uncle, Jim Biden. And for every fact he claims or wants to say 'I was high on drugs' or obfuscate, I can show a document, a text message, a recording, that has cross confirmed that he's lying."

He and the congresswoman agreed it was "highly disappointing" that Hunter didn't show up.

The Biden corruption playbook is simple.

- 1) Foreign oligarch needs access to the US gov
- 2) Hunter Biden sells that access via "the brand"
- 3) Foreign oligarch pays Hunter, then Hunter pays his family

Those are the FACTS. It's pretty clear, the Biden corruption scheme runs deep.

Another lie was brought up during Rep. Marjorie Taylor Greene's (R-GA) turn to ask questions, as the congresswoman reminded that Biden has continuously lied about his son's business dealings, including as a candidate on the debate stage in 2020 when he said his family didn't take money from China.

"Not only was it a lie, he knew it was a lie. He knew it because he met with his son Hunter Biden's Chinese business associates," Greene reminded, which is when she discussed CEFC with Bobulinski.

Although WhatsApp messages showed that Hunter had tried to refer to Chinese businessmen as "chairman," Bobulinski was emphatic that that was not the case. Rather "the chairman" referred to Joe Biden. Another message did not refer to any of the Chinese businessmen as the "chairman;" it just said "the Chinese."

Greene also tellingly pointed out that it was 2016 when Biden said he was going to run for president in 2020, and that he went on to have such shady involvement in 2017, "when everybody knew he was planning to be President of the United States." Bobulinski responded that was indeed "a serious problem," and expressed he wished the Committee would investigate further.

Tony Bobulinski says Hunter Biden lied to our committee. Joe Biden is the chairman.
[11]pic.twitter.com/s2P3AuOxi8— Oversight Committee (@GOPoversight) [12]March 20, 2024

Rep. Nancy Mace (R-SC) questioned Galanis and Bobulinski to confirm that Joe Biden indeed "participate[d] in phone conversations and meetings with Hunter Biden, his business associates, and foreign interests."

She also confirmed from Galanis that Biden was a "certain relation" that Hunter spoke of to other business members, with Galanis and Bobulinski also both confirming they were not to bring up Joe Biden's name in communications.

The congresswoman reminded that during his deposition, Hunter said he did not involve his father in his business, receiving answers in the affirmative from Bobulinski that "Hunter Biden lie[d] under oath," as well as that "Joe Biden [is] lying when he says he did not interact with Hunter Biden, Jim Biden, their business partners or foreign interests."

Mace also brought up the same debate moment that Greene did, with Biden claiming his family did not make money from the Chinese, though Bobulinski and Galanis answered that he did.

"Joe Biden has repeatedly claimed that he was not involved in Hunter Biden, Jim Biden or any other Biden family business deals," Mace summarized. "Today our witnesses have proved otherwise. Today we've established Joe Biden lied about interacting with Hunter Biden's business associates. It is my belief Joe Biden is the closer for Hunter Biden, Jim Biden, and their business associates in foreign interests. Good luck to the left proving otherwise," she said before yielding.

Rep. Lauren Boebert (R-CO) [15]also received some telling answers from Bobulinski and Galanis.

When questioning Bobulinski, Boebert brought up the idea of Joe Biden being the chairman, with the witness offering that Biden played "a more active role," especially as "he acted sort of like a chairman" in that "he showed up and shook hands," with the congresswoman interjecting to remind "he's been called the chairman." Bobulinski pointed out "that's all the Chinese Ukrainians, Romanians, Russians" needed, which is not what "the Canadians, the Australians and Americans need, but in those parts of the world, that's what they need."

Galanis also reaffirmed to Boebert that Biden indeed lied while running for president when he said his family did not make any money from China.

Joe Biden has leveraged his elected position to enable the Biden family, their business associates, and their shell companies to receive over $24 million dollars from China and other entities. Biden is compromised and a threat to our national security. It is far past time... [16]pic.twitter.com/ocRkcN02x2— Rep. Lauren Boebert (@RepBoebert) [17]March 20, 2024

Rep. Russell Fry (R-SC) also highlighted Hunter and James Biden's lies, as he and Bobulinski fact-checked key points from each of the Biden family member's transcribed testimony.

Hunter couldn't even get correct when he worked for CEFC, Bobulinski explained, since he tried to "parse words" when referring to his "official" capacity. While Hunter gave the year 2017, Bobulinski offered that Hunter started working for CEFC in the fall of 2015 and worked for them throughout 2016 as well, which was confirmed by Hunter himself as well as other conversations with other former associates.

Advertisement

Fry also brought up how Hunter was asked about his father never interacting with his business associates, which Bobulinski confirmed "was a lie."

"Hunter lied to the committee about important details concerning his money demands and threats and CEFC, based on this WhatsApp message," as Fry reminded, which Bobulinski confirmed, as well as how Joe Biden had no awareness of the business he was doing, as Hunter tried to claim.

It wasn't just Hunter who lied, but Jim Biden as well, which Bobulinski was particularly passionate about when discussing. In response to Jim Biden claiming in his own testimony that he had "absolutely not" remembered a meeting with Hunter, Bobulinski, and Joe Biden, Bobulinski insisted "that is a lie."

"I'm shocked that his lawyers sitting next to him, a former US Attorney allowed him to say that like three different times in that transcribed interview," he added, with Fry also reminding "when pressed, [James] continued to double down on" that point.

KEY TAKEAWAY FROM TODAY'S [18]@GOPoversight HEARING —

James and Hunter Biden lied about Joe Biden's involvement in their business.

No wonder Hunter refused to show up today. He knew he'd be called out for his lies. [19]pic.twitter.com/4Q095E2arw— Congressman Russell Fry (@RepRussell-Fry) [20]March 20, 2024

Rep. Matt Gaetz (R-FL), who serves as a member of the House Judiciary Committee, which is also investigating the Bidens, was allowed to appear at the hearing and ask questions as well.

The congressman read testimony from Hunter claiming that his business associates, including Galanis, had no expectation from him that his father would get involved in their business dealings. Hunter even claimed "there was never a single time" he could remember indicating as much.

In reaction, Galanis, in light of his explanations of what the "[21]the Biden lift" was, [22]during as well as [23]before the hearing, called it "patently false" and "an untruthful statement."

Gaetz also spoke with Galanis about how he is a living example of how "the Biden Justice Department retaliates against people who speak out against the Bidens and their crimes." Galanis also added "there is unquestionably a pattern of two tiers of justice."

□ Jason Galanis says that Hunter Biden's deposition claims of not involving Joe Biden are "patently false."

GAETZ (reading from Hunter Biden's deposition):

"Do you think some of your business associates we've spoken about today, Mr. Archer, Mr. Bobulinski, Mr. Galanis, do you... [24]pic.twitter.com/EO20nf6ntd—

Such moments are just some takeaways from the nearly eight hour hearing, yet as News-Busters' Tim Graham highlighted, the mainstream media hardly paid the hearing any mind.

Fox News notes that ABC and CBS skipped the Hunter hearing on their evening "news" shows last night. They're not the "mainstream" media. [26]pic.twitter.com/iXYcQbQxWG— Tim Graham (@TimJGraham) [27]March 21, 2024

As the hearing came to a close, [28]Comer announced that he would be inviting the president himself, especially to square away the contradictions.

The committees do not look to be done investigating the Biden crime family, though. House Judiciary Chairman Jim Jordan (R-OH) and Comer [29]are looking for more information as to how the CIA stonewalled an interview with Kevin Morris, an associate of Hunter Biden. Jordan has also [30]subpoenaed Joe Biden's ghostwriter to appear before his Committee.

1.3.16 The Jury Didn't Buy a Wisconsin Election Official's Defense in Election Fraud Case (2024-03-25 12:18)

A Wisconsin election official tried to say she was a whistleblower pointing out flaws in our voting systems, but the jury felt otherwise. Kimberly Zapata, a former deputy director for the Milwaukee Election Commission, was found guilty on March 20 of misconduct in office and election fraud after ordering fake military ballots. However, she says it was never her intention for them to be processed. She was indicted last November. The trial lasted three days, where Zapata didn't testify. The election cycle where Zapata pursued this fake military ballot scheme was during the 2022 midterms (via [1]Milwaukee Journal Sentinel):

ANOTHER DEMOCRAT,
Wisconsin Election Commission director Kimberly Zapata found guilty on all felony counts for falsifying military ballot

Zapata told investigators she was trying to prove there is fraud in our elections. That's because the Democrat got caught, [2]pic.twitter.com/pFpZTog6vK—
☐☐RealRobert☐☐ (@Real_RobN) [3]March 21, 2024

A former top Milwaukee election official was convicted at trial Wednesday in a case in which she was criminally charged for creating fake names to order three military absentee ballots ahead of the 2022 midterm elections and having them sent to a state legislator.

The Milwaukee County jury took about five hours to deliver its verdict in the trial of former Milwaukee Election Commission deputy director Kimberly Zapata, 47, of Milwaukee.

She was found guilty on a felony charge of misconduct in public office and guilty on three misdemeanor counts of making a false statement to obtain an absentee ballot. Zapata was charged in November 2022. Sentencing is scheduled for May 2.

In a recording of a police interview with Zapata that was played again for the jury before the verdict, she is heard saying she acted without a plan and in a high-stress moment.

"I did not think it through," she said. "I didn't have some manipulative plan."

She said she made up the three people so no individual would be harmed.

Zapata said she sent the ballots to Republican state Rep. Janel Brandtjen because she knew she would not cast the ballots and because of her history with election fraud claims.

"She is the most vocal election fraud politician that I know of, and I thought that maybe this would make her stop and think and redirect her focus away from these outrageous conspiracy theories to something that's actually real," Zapata said.

Zapata said she originally had a "glimmer of hope" that one of the three clerks who received the ballot requests would raise questions and not issue it. That's not how it unfolded, however, and all three military absentee ballots were sent to Brandtjen's Menomonee Falls home.

Zapata did report her self-inflicted election wound, and the ballots were not counted. She faces up to five years in jail and a $13,000 fine.

Whatever the case, it shows that election integrity issues are alive. Every system needs maintenance and guardrails; Democrats assume everything is kosher with our election system. It's not. The 2020 no doubt made it easier for shenanigans to occur with the tweaks to in-person voting that some secretaries of state enacted, changes that the courts retroactively ruled as illegal as some didn't have the state legislature's approval.

It's peculiar that her party registration isn't mentioned in most news reports, which is a tip-off that Zapata is likely a Democrat.

1.3.17 What if Totalitarianism Comes to America? (2024-03-25 12:19)

We are all familiar with Lord Acton's dictum "power corrupts, and absolute power corrupts absolutely." It also eventually destroys. It's happening in China right now, and it will happen in America if the Democratic Party obtains the totalitarian power it craves. And neither Xi Jinping nor the leaders of the Democratic Party could care less how much suffering and death they cause their people because power is their only object.

I still keep in touch with people in China and study closely its internal affairs. It isn't easy because the CCP has such a tight grip on media and communications that getting accurate information can be difficult. But it dribbles out, bit by bit. To the best of my analysis, here is what is going on in China, and what might happen there. And, then, let me make the future comparison with the United States under a totalitarian Democratic Party.

Xi Jinping is a megalomaniac. Make absolutely no mistake about that. He is Adolf Hitler, Joseph Stalin, and Mao Zedong all rolled into one. After the total disaster of Mao's rule, China had to open up somewhat (which it did under Deng Xiaoping) to avert the collapse that happened in the Soviet Union. China became wealthy borrowing from, stealing from, and deceiving stupid Western capitalists who think only in terms of money. But to do that, China had to be a little more flexible (“two steps forward, one step back,” Lenin said). Yet, a totalitarian regime can only abide that for a limited period of time. Freedom is dangerous to totalitarianism. And, in China, a new Mao has come to power.

Governmental laws and policies are becoming increasingly strict under Xi. He wants total control. For one example, there is a 60-year-old retirement age for men in China. Though not absolute (it obviously doesn’t apply to Xi), it is becoming progressively enforced, especially in Beijing and Shanghai where Xi’s power is dominant. There is still some elasticity in the provinces, but bureaucrats are more and more wary of trying to be flexible because Xi’s tentacles are increasingly spreading throughout the country. This policy, of course, robs China of its most experienced and qualified workers; it’s that country’s version of DEI, and obviously when less-qualified workers are in place, quality will suffer.

The policy also puts a horrible strain on the economy, especially after years of the “one child only policy.” The young workers must support an ever-aging population, which they cannot do. But it’s Xi’s policy. Bureaucrats realize it’s a stupid, idiotic program that is hurting the country, but they risk their own positions if they oppose Xi. Only Xi can make the decision, and giving greater freedom to his people is the one thing a totalitarian dictator will not do. He’d rather destroy his country.

One of three things will happen in China. One—and the most likely in the immediate future—Xi will remain in power until he dies, continually tightening his grip, and China will continue to suffer economically as Western companies depart and the Chinese people aren’t given the flexibility and freedom to develop their economy based upon market needs. Xi controls the military, so what can the people do? Two, there could be a coup d’etat to overthrow Xi. Many, many people in that country absolutely despise him, but it will take military leaders especially to oust him. But masses of Chinese would be very happy to see him go. Or three, China will eventually, and in the not-to-distant future, crumble like the Soviet Union did. An overly rigid, state-controlled economy will not survive for long, and that is what Xi is returning China to. Only a market-based economy can save any country, and Xi is progressively controlling everything. He will destroy China if China doesn’t destroy him first.

What are the lessons for America? The Democratic Party is following in the footsteps of China in the sense that it craves totalitarian power—all Leftists do. And if it gets it, it will do the same thing to America that totalitarian power always does—eventually stifle necessary freedoms and crush the country.

First of all, in order to secure that power, Democrats, if necessary, would cause a civil war. There was a civil war in China before Mao Zedong came to power, as many Chinese did not want communist/totalitarian rule. Those who opposed Mao lost that war and fled to Taiwan. There was also a civil war in Russia during the communist takeover of 1917-21. American patriots will not tolerate a total takeover by Democratic Party totalitarian megalomaniacs, and Joe Biden has already threatened to use F16s against those who oppose him. Democrats are currently doing all they can to drive out, or discourage, American patriots from joining the military, hoping to turn it into a Leftist entity that will obey any orders. Obviously, freedom-loving Americans will fight to save their country. Who would win such a war is a subject for interesting analysis. I'll leave it to readers to do that.

If the Democrats do conquer, they would attempt, as quickly as possible, to solidify as much power in their hands as they can get. The courts and Congress would rubber stamp anything the party does. They might even abolish the Republican Party as one-party states always do, but it would take some time—as it is with Xi's policies in Chinese provinces—for the Democrats' policies the filter down to the local level. Those who still oppose would end up in "re-education camps" (Hillary Clinton has already [1]said we need to "deprogram" Trump supporters), or have their guts ripped out like China is doing. But, like all freedom-denying totalitarian regimes, it won't last for long.

"It could never happen in America!" you say? Why not? Every sign in the Democratic Party now is pointing in that direction. The only questions are, can it be stopped? And how?

1.3.18 Biden's Border Blowup (2024-03-25 12:21)

Some 8 to 10 million illegal aliens from all over the world, as expected, have flooded across the border since President Joe Biden took office.

A demagogic candidate Biden, remember, in 2019 invited those massing at the southern border to "surge" into the United States without specifying that they first needed legal sanction: "We immediately surge to the border all those seeking asylum."

In contrast, we know legal immigration is America's great strength, but it has always depended on a few key prerequisites.

Immigration must be legal and measured.

Why? Because only the host nation can adjudicate how many immigrants it can successfully accept and assimilate. It has no desire to encourage Balkanized tribalism so common in nations abroad torn apart by ethnic conflict.

America must have some knowledge of the background of immigrants, especially whether they have criminal records, belong to gangs, are importing drugs, carry infectious diseases, or can be self-supporting.

By contrast, if the first thing immigrants do is illegally cross the American border, and the second is to reside illegally in America, and the third is to obtain fraudulent identification to mask that illegality, then they will establish long patterns of illegal behavior and disrespect for their hosts.

In addition, immigration should be diverse so that large ethnic groups do not form permanent tribal sects in the fashion of the Balkans, the Middle East, or Latin America.

Ideally, the host should prefer immigrants who have some knowledge of the language and customs of the United States. And they should have some ability to be self-supporting so as not to burden American taxpayers or overtax and deprive social services from poorer U.S. citizens.

As for the host?

America must be confident enough in and knowledgeable enough about its values, customs, and traditions to demand immigrants integrate rapidly into the body politic of the United States.

Both the host and immigrants must agree on the basic facts of immigration.

Immigrants, not the host, have chosen to leave their native land to risk a new life and identity in America.

Therefore, the relationship is, by nature, asymmetrical. The host has a perfect right, indeed a responsibility, to impose its own values upon newcomers – not vice versa.

Otherwise, if immigrants do not absorb their newly adopted culture, why would they have left and, in some sense, rejected their homeland in the first place?

To replicate in the United States the very conditions and environment that they so eagerly fled from back home?

So the host must remind immigrants that they chose a completely different paradigm from their native country. And therefore, they must be helped to embrace an entirely new national identity.

Unfortunately, in the last four years, the Biden administration has violated every historical canon critical to ensuring legal immigration enriches the United States.

They have encouraged 8-10 million of the world's poorest to flood the border and to enter and reside in America without legal sanction.

Most have no prior experience with American traditions, and few speak English.

Host Americans have no idea whether hundreds, thousands, or even tens of thousands of the millions entering illegally have committed crimes in their native countries, or have any record of employment, or are sick, or are here to foment gangs and to import lethal, foreign-made drugs that kill some 100,000 Americans a year.

Worse, we, the hosts, no longer believe in the melting pot that once made America the world's only successful multiracial democracy, united by the laws of the Constitution and the unique values that emanate from it.

The combination of mass illegal immigration, without audit, into a country beset with $35 trillion in national debt, an existing 50 million residents not born in the United States, and without confidence in rapid assimilation certainly explains the disaster of illegal immigration that now manifests daily.

Biden may think nullifying federal immigration law is a smart political trick that, in the past, may have flipped southwestern states from red to blue or warped the census to give blue states more congressional districts.

Or he may assume that with 70 percent of the electorate now voting through poorly audited mail-in balloting, there is no real way to prevent foreign nationals from voting for those who neutered the law to let them in.

But in truth, Biden is unfortunately undermining support for all immigration, legal or otherwise. He is guaranteeing that more imported drugs and gang members will kill more Americans.

Ironically, Biden is also alienating from the Democratic Party its once loyal Black and Latino voters. They, not the party elite, must deal concretely with the consequences of Biden's callous and cynical, ideologically driven policies.

Perhaps the Left will only cease destroying immigration law when it realizes that for each illegal alien it invites in, it will lose one or more once loyal Democratic voters.

1.3.19 President Joe 'Forrest Gump' Biden (2024-03-28 22:55)

Joe Biden can't help himself, he has to make everything about himself. It's like he was standing next to someone who said, "Man, that Barack Obama sure is a narcissist" and Joe responded with "Hold my beer." But Biden is a famous teetotaler, which means he can't blame any of his stupidity on being drunk or having drunk too much in the past, he's just naturally dumb, which brings us nicely to the Forrest Gump analogy - because, in his mind at least, Joe Biden is the Forrest Gump of modern American history.

I don't say because the President and the fictional character both have IQs below 70 (more like 50 in Biden's case, but whatever), I say it because both weave themselves into every significant event in their lifetimes and neither were actually there. In Gump's case it's because he's a fictional character, in Biden's it's that he's just a straight-up liar.

After the collapse of the Frances Scott Key Bridge in Baltimore, Biden couldn't just make a statement, he had to insert himself into the story. Biden said, "At about 1:30, a container ship struck the Francis Scott Key Bridge, which I've been over many, many times commuting from the state of Delaware either on a train or by car." (Emphasis added)

There were no train tracks on the bridge, and the only way you'd drive across it on the way from Wilmington to DC is if you wanted that drive to take even longer, like a half hour longer. In other words, nothing Biden said there was remotely true. Even if it were, what would it have possibly mattered? Would grieving families feel some relief from the idea that this senile, corrupt bag of bones unable to walk up the adult steps onto Air Force One had driven over a bridge their loved ones died on?

Of course not. But Biden can't help himself. He has to make any story about him, even a little, or else he has no interest. The Gold Star families with which he's met can all recount how this pile of garbage told them he understands their loss because his son, Beau, died in Iraq. Only he didn't die anywhere near Iraq, he died in a hospital in Bethesda, Maryland.

Their loved ones died unexpectedly and suddenly, he had the ability to say goodbye to his son, who'd served a 9-month tour of duty as a JAG officer in the Green Zone of Iraq, coming away unharmed. But Joe can't just care about other people's loss, he has to make it about him to give the impression that he cares.

Most politicians, and Bill Clinton comes to mind, can fake it with the best of them. Joe can't. Compassion by fake proxy is not compassion, especially when you have to lie.

So much of Joe's life is a lie.

To seem like a normal person, rather than a pampered wealthy kid who's never held a real job in his life, Joe regularly tells the fake story about how he was told he rode a million miles on Amtrack by a conductor who was long dead by the time he was allegedly told this. The whole thing has been proven to be a lie, [1]yet he repeats it all the time.

Joe lies about being involved in the Civil Rights Movement, but only when talking to black audiences. When he's not, he admits he had nothing to do with it, even though he easily could have. He's claimed to have grown up in the Jewish community, the black community and the Puerto Rican community, even though everyone knows those are lies.

He's told the story of how he was arrested trying to visit Nelson Mandela in prison, even though he only directed to exit the South African airport through a separate "whites only" door, which he did. This happened at an airport more than a thousand miles away from Mandela's prison island, but Biden was never asked why he didn't fly to the major city with an international airport right there.

That's how he's able to get away with all of this - because the people with the jobs that are supposed to hold him to account aren't interested in doing so; they're his enablers, not honest brokers.

Forrest Gump was always “there,” Joe Biden never was. Gump didn’t bother talking about what he’d seen and been a part of because it was just his life, it wasn’t trying to impress anyone because he was content to be himself. Joe Biden inserts himself into everything, even tangentially, because he needs to feel important. Narcissistic frauds always lie, their egos can’t be satiated by the truth or sharing the spotlight. It’s gross, but it’s more sad. Sad that this decrepit fraud will go to his grave in a bed of lies, hoping he’d fooled everyone while knowing he failed at that as much as he failed at everything else.

1.3.20 Tyson Foods Fires U.S. Workers, Exploits Illegal Aliens for Profits (2024-03-28 22:58)

A major U.S. food corporation is retreating to one of the ugliest anti-borders tropes in the book to justify replacing American workers with foreign nationals.

Tyson Foods, Inc., a multinational corporation based in the U.S, recently shuttered a pork processing factory in Iowa, leading to the loss of 1,200 American jobs. Shortly after, Tyson [1]announced plans to hire tens of thousands of illegal aliens. The food giant already employs roughly 42,000 foreign nationals, and a Tyson human resources rep [2]stated earlier this month that “We would like to employ another 42,000 if we could find them,” and they are trying hard to find them. Tyson has been offering $16.50 per hour wages and free access to immigration lawyers to foreign nationals who have resettled in New York. The company’s explanation for its desire to hire tens of thousands of illegal aliens is that they are “very, very loyal” workers, [3]according to the same human resources rep.

Another term for “loyal” in this case might be “exploitable.” While American workers are likely to demand good pay and decent working conditions, migrant workers are likely to be much more desperate and much less demanding. This allows major corporations to take advantage of migrants at the expense of American jobs and treasure. Tyson is far from the only or the worst offender when it comes to this, but they are the latest example of how the U.S. asylum system is being abused as a labor-importation system.

The New York Times published an extensive report last year on the exploitation of migrant children, [4]writing: “In town after town, children scrub dishes late at night. They run milking machines in Vermont and deliver meals in New York City. They harvest coffee and build lava rock walls around vacation homes in Hawaii. Girls as young as 13 wash hotel sheets in Virginia.”

To be clear, there is no evidence that Tyson is flouting child labor laws, but they are certainly profiting off the U.S. immigration system at the expense of American workers. They are also denigrating the country which has allowed them to attain so much success, by implying that foreign workers are more loyal and harder-working than American workers. The trope that foreign nationals have a stronger work ethic and are willing to do jobs Americans won't do is a foundational myth of the anti-borders movement.

In 2019, a Koch Foods' plant in Mississippi, employing hundreds of illegal aliens, was raided by federal immigration authorities. Days later, roughly 150 local residents attended a job fair seeking employment at the company, [5]laying waste to the pernicious lazy American trope. In reality, there are no jobs corporations can't find Americans to do if they're willing to give them a living wage and decent working conditions.

The notion that there are demanding jobs that Americans aren't willing to do is not based in reality, but a convenient excuse for corporations to continue to import cheap foreign labor at the expense of Americans. Speaking of loyalty, where is the loyalty from Tyson Foods' executives towards the country that has allowed them to thrive?

The same suits at Tyson Foods who have lived the American dream are now publicly denigrating the work ethic of Americans trying to live out theirs. It should be no surprise that Tyson's conduct has led to an intense backlash, including [6]a campaign to boycott the company. Earlier this month, a multimillion-dollar fund manager [7]announced that he was pulling all investments from Tyson Foods. Naturally, the company [8]has retreated into damage control, releasing a statement saying they are "strongly opposed to illegal immigration" and have "led the way in participating in the two major government programs to help employers combat unlawful employment, E-Verify and the Mutual Agreement between Government and Employers (IMAGE) program."

As always, it's important to watch what these companies do, not what they say. Tyson [9]recently held a job fair for illegal aliens in New York City, and has partnered with a pro-refugee nonprofit to hire thousands of foreign-born workers. By firing Americans and hiring foreign nationals in rapid succession, Tyson is showing exactly where its loyalty lies, and it's not with the citizens of the country they were founded and continue to operate in.

Advertisement

The Tyson Foods saga is the latest example of how American workers continue to be victimized by mass immigration. Both the government and corporations have a responsibility to put Americans first, but unfortunately, continue to put them last.

1.3.21 What's Wrong With America's 'Elites'? (2024-03-28 23:06)

It is becoming increasingly clear that some of America's most serious problems can be traced back to our colleges and universities – or at least the ones educating the country's most powerful people.

The Vietnam War era aside, it has traditionally been uncommon for events at universities to make national headlines. Absent something extraordinary, like a president giving a commencement address, a dramatic scientific breakthrough, or the award of a prominent international prize to faculty, headlines with university names in them have tended to relate more to national championships in sports.

Over the past few years, news items about events on college campuses have come to dominate headlines. The subjects are some of the country's most fabled institutions. And the stories are often negative, if not outright shocking.

Last December, the congressional testimony of three university presidents – Claudine Gay from Harvard University, Elizabeth Magill from the University of Pennsylvania, and Sally Kornbluth of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology – set off a firestorm. Under questioning by Rep. Elise Stefanik (R-N.Y.) about antisemitic speech and conduct on their campuses, the three women dodged and deflected, unwilling to state definitively that calls for the genocide of Jews violated university policies and codes of conduct.

The response was swift. Within days, Magill resigned. Gay survived the initial maelstrom, but the bad publicity prompted critics to start digging through her professional past, and she resigned less than a month later, following accusations of plagiarism in her research publications. Some of the nation's largest donors to these universities – many of them Jewish – began announcing that they would cease or pull back donations totaling in the tens and even hundreds of millions of dollars.

The chaos on campuses has only increased since, with pro-Palestine protests and marches at dozens of colleges and universities, and horrific rhetoric bumping up against speech codes and demands for free speech. Across the country, Jewish students describe themselves as "living in a climate of hatred and fear" amid dramatic increases in antisemitic conduct, threats, slurs, and actual violence.

This week, Stanford University sophomore Theo Baker published "The War at Stanford" in The Atlantic, in which he describes how the Israel-Hamas war has affected his campus. One Arab American graduate student told Baker that he thinks President Joe Biden "should be killed" and that Hamas should rule America. Pro-Palestine protesters set up sit-in "camps" for months and shouted for the destruction of Israel, chanting, "We don't want no two-state; we want all of '48!" Guest speakers brought in to facilitate campus discussion of the complex issues have been shouted down. Stanford employees have been threatened ("We know where you live!"), the interim president's home has been vandalized, and his effigy was carried around campus covered in fake blood. The administration, Baker says, seems paralyzed, indecisive, and defeated.

This isn't an isolated incident at Stanford, and the Israel-Hamas war hasn't caused it. Last March – months before the Oct. 7 attack on Israel – Stanford Law School students shut down a talk being given by federal judge Kyle Duncan, shouting at him every time he attempted to speak or engage the audience, screaming epithets, and holding up signs with vulgar accusations and calls for violence against Duncan's daughters.

Similar behavior has been displayed at other schools, having nothing to do with claims of colonialism in the Middle East. Swimmer and activist Riley Gaines was cornered and forced to hide in a classroom at San Francisco State University last year, prevented from giving her talk about limiting participation in women's sports to biological women. In 2017, author Charles Murray's scheduled talk at Middlebury College was interrupted by a mob that later physically attacked him and his faculty host Allison Stanger. Stanger's hair was pulled so hard by a protester that she suffered a concussion.

The poisonous rhetoric, intolerance, and violence are just the tip of the iceberg.

In an interview with The Daily Signal podcast host Rob Bluey last week, national pollster Scott Rasmussen described what he called "the most terrifying poll result I've ever seen." A recent Rasmussen poll asked Americans "to suppose there was an election and it was close but your candidate lost. And if their campaign team knew they could win by cheating and not get caught, would you want them to do so?"

According to Rasmussen, only 7 % of American voters overall said they'd rather cheat to win. But among the group that he calls "the elite," that number jumped to 35 %. Among the "politically obsessed elite" (those who "talk politics daily"), it was a staggering 69 %!

So who are these "elite"?

Rasmussen explains that they are the top 1 % of the population. They make more than $150,000 a year. They live in densely populated urban areas. They have not only college but also postgraduate degrees. And large numbers of them "went to one of 12 elite schools."

He doesn't name them, but we can hazard a pretty good guess which schools they are.

"The reason I bring that up," he continues, "is about half the policy positions in government, half the corporate board positions in America, are held by people who went to one of these dozen schools." And, he says, they also shape "the mainstream media narrative."

Not only does this group think it's acceptable to cheat to win an election, but 70 % believe there is too much individual freedom in the United States, and an equal number trusts the government – which, of course, they control. "They really believe," Rasmussen says, "that if they could just make the decisions and get us out of the way, we would be a lot better off."

What's going on at our most prestigious and exclusive universities? How have they produced generations of amoral, condescending authoritarians? And how do we put a stop to it?

Those are questions Americans need answers to.

1.3.22 We Must Return to a 'Peace Through Strength' Foreign Policy (2024-03-28 23:25)

Radical Islamic terrorism reared its ugly head once again in the horrific [1]attack outside of Moscow with a death toll of 139 lives and counting. Many would argue these lives would not have been taken had there been stronger leadership in Washington.

While some may ignore an attack on an adversary, we must understand that the [2]resurgence of ISIS, a terror organization once eliminated under President Trump, is a severe threat to the United States. As terrorist groups are constantly proliferating and [3]radicalized illegal immigrants from all over the world invade our wide-open borders, all Americans should be highly concerned that somewhere between our beautiful mountains and prairies, the next attack could come to our home sweet home.

ISIS was quick to claim responsibility in the aftermath of the attack on the popular [4]concert hall outside of Moscow. Radical Islamic terrorists know too well that with the current regime in Washington, there will be no backlash, no consequences, and the opportunities for future acts of aggression will continue to grow.

The [5]rising threat of terrorism is yet another example of President Joe Biden's failed foreign policy. It is abundantly clear that the Biden Administration is more focused on reversing successful policies designed by Donald Trump rather than the most important mission: keeping Americans safe.

Under the Trump Administration, ISIS was [6]crushed geographically and within four weeks, the evil organization and their control of contiguous land assets and growing population of fighters was completely eliminated.

When the United States is weak, terrorism prospers. Where there is no stability - stability obtained through strength, there can be no peace.

Senator Tom Cotton [7]described the Moscow attack as a "very dangerous echo" of Biden's disastrous withdrawal from Afghanistan. As also highlighted by US military [8]leadership, the poor planning and evacuation has created a power vacuum in the Middle East that our adversaries see as an opportunity to create chaos in the region.

With the signing of the [9]Abraham Accords, Saudi Arabia was close to normalizing relations with Israel which would have created a new path to stability in the region. As a longtime board member of the Republican's Jewish Coalition who lost family members in the Holocaust, one thing is very clear: when there is peace in Israel, there is peace in the Middle East.

Alarming, it appears that the disastrous [10]withdrawal from Afghanistan was the genesis, horror in [11]Israel and [12]Moscow followed and without a swift reversal of this dangerous pattern - there will undoubtedly be another target.

I served as President Trump's Ambassador to Iceland. From day one, my team and I were tasked with the mission to create strength, and more importantly, stability in the High North amidst a growing [13]power struggle.

Leading the United States mission in the High North, we knew that to create and foster stability we must work with our allies to improve communication and coordinate strength. This included improving our relationship with NATO. We took a peace through strength approach and the completion of the new American Embassy in Reykjavik served as a symbolic and indispensable platform to build the [14]U.S.-Icelandic relations and strengthen the United States' position in the High North.

The art of diplomacy has been shattered, and our allies and adversaries have a front row seat to the United States foreign policy failures on the international stage.

The solution is simple: we must [15]return to a peace through strength approach in our foreign policy. The policy of appeasement and cowering to our adversaries puts every single American at risk.

Peace prospers where stability is present, and the world looks to the United States to lead this effort. It is time we end the trench warfare, crush radical Islamic terrorists, and solidify a lasting peace on the world stage once again.

In less than ten months, we can only hope that President Donald J. Trump will be inaugurated as President of The United States and as someone that has worked alongside him, and on day one, President Trump will make sure one message is received loud and clear on the world stage: The reign of terror is once again over and American prosperity is back.

And this time, it's here to stay.

1.4.1 Warhammer 40,000 (2024-04-03 23:10)

ok, i bought the Warhammer 40,000: Ultimate Starter Set in hopes of people liking me and hanging out. Is this game a fad in 2024? If not, I'll stay with videogames. Warhammer 40k was on Bolt Thrower albums, but if its not a big fad, I won't continue collecting. Getting new friends in this city is harder then the 2000s. People don't hang out or give out phone numbers so Warhammer 40k would change that? Your thoughts. Next year, I'm 40! My social networks are doing pretty terrible. Without something like Warhammer 40k, I might go in a mid-life crisis in the future. I also have DnD Essentials kit, and 8 DnD 5th edition books.

Would this W40k solve my dilemma? The videogame industry lied to me. All those surveys of All that kid gamers grow up smart and have strong relationships is a half-truth.

Henry Cavill is creating this new warhammer 40k tv series. I thought the warhammer 40k game would make a world of difference. I would love flickr and instagram replies. I got the heavy metal albums for 27 years. I thought this would be like rock albums. This city has Tune Town, the most famous record store in minnesota (more well known then Electric Fetus in Minneapolis) and Warhammer 40k would enhance my profile. People would love me for my rock albums and Warhammer and would respect me and hang out. There would be a functioning circle! yes, also own dungeons and dragons and anime tv series would further stabilize everything. This nuclear family stuff from Wisconsin is nice, but something I don't have. I'm nobody's uncle. As you see all Tune town sells on Discogs are death metal. I'm safe as long as I own Korn, System of the Down, slipknot, Napalm Death, Obituary, Amon Amarth, Death, Bolt Thrower, Paradise Lost, Opeth and Insomium albums.

1.4.2 Americans Differ on Ukraine and Gaza (2024-04-06 23:30)

When Russia invaded Ukraine, Americans overwhelmingly supported Ukraine—as they did with Israel after Oct. 7.

No wonder: Ukraine was surprise attacked by Russia, and Israel was by Hamas.

It seemed an easy binary of good versus evil: Both the attacked Ukraine and Israel are pro-Western. Both their attackers, anti-Western Russia and Hamas, are not.

Now everything is bifurcating. And the politics of the wars in America reflect incoherence.

Both Ukraine and Israel are portrayed in the media as supposedly bogging down in their counteroffensives.

More pro-Israel Republicans are troubled by Ukraine's strategy, or lack thereof, in an increasing Somme-like stalemate.

Yet more pro-Ukrainian Democrats are turning away from Israel as it dismantles Gaza in the messy, bloody slog against Hamas. The left claims either Israel cannot or should not defeat Hamas, or at least at the present cost.

So the left pushes Israel to a cease-fire with Hamas.

It blasts Israeli "disproportionate" responses.

It demands that Israel avoid collateral damage.

It pressures it to form a wartime bipartisan government.

It lobbies to cut it off from American resupply.

It is terrified that Israel will expand the war by responding to aggression from Hezbollah and Iran.

Yet on Ukraine, the left oddly pivots to the very opposite agenda.

It believes Ukraine should not be forced to make peace with Russian "fascists." It must become disproportionate to "win" the war.

President Volodymyr Zelenskyy deserves a pass, despite canceling elections while suspending political parties.

America must step up its resupply to Kyiv with more and far deadlier weapons.

Ukraine has a perfect right to hit targets inside Russia.

Russian threats to widen the war should be considered empty and thus ignored. America should hate Russia far more than Hamas.

By contrast, conservatives are less supportive of Ukraine's offensives, if more than ever allied with Israel.

In their realist views, Ukraine is a smaller power, vastly outnumbered by a richer, better-armed Russia. Thus, it should negotiate while it can, rather than eventually losing everything.

Israel, however, is, in their view, defeating Hamas. If allowed to finish the job, it can soon win the war in Gaza and still handle Hezbollah and deter Iran.

Furthermore, the right is wary that Russia is a nuclear power. The Ukraine war is unfortunately creating a new, potent anti-American axis of Russia, China, Iran and North Korea and drawing in former U.S. allies like Turkey and Qatar.

Yet, in Israel's case, the U.S. is far more powerful than Hamas's patron, Iran, and can easily deter it should Tehran intervene.

As of now, none of Hamas's allies have nuclear weapons. Israel, however, does, unlike Ukraine.

Many conservatives further point out that Israel is a long-time U.S. democratic ally.

Advertisement

Ukraine's elections are currently suspended while the country remains under martial law.

In realist terms, the old idea of Russian triangulation still makes some sense. Russia should be no friendlier to China than to the U.S., and China is no more aligned with Russia than with America.

Hamas, by contrast, is a terrorist clique, as are Hezbollah and all of Iran's terrorist appendages. Their hatred of the U.S. is long-standing, immutable and transcends the Gaza war.

How about the public's views in general?

With over $35 trillion in debt, still smarting over the humiliating withdrawal from Kabul, and the military short 40,000 recruits, the public does not wish to get heavily involved in either war, even as polls still show radically differing left/right attitudes toward both.

Americans once overwhelmingly supported vast aid for Ukraine. Now they decidedly believe the U.S. is providing too much to Kyiv.

They still poll strong support for Israel over Hamas, but less so for Israel's ongoing destruction of Hamas given the collateral damage that follows.

Given there are few Russian-Americans, there are almost no demonstrations on behalf of Moscow's war. But there are plenty of protests for Hamas since there are lots of Middle Eastern Americans and visitors within the U.S.

What are we to conclude about these contradictory wars and American attitudes toward them?

The more democratic and defensive the power, the more Americans support it-but only up to a point.

Even more, they demand quick victory-and lose interest when the wars stagnate, costs increase and protests grow.

When Ukraine and Israel began costly counteroffensives, the former losing thousands and the latter killing thousands, the American public began to be less invested in either war.

Final lessons?

Israel should do all it can to destroy Hamas as quickly as possible and end the war.

Ukraine does not have the wherewithal to defeat Russia. It should cease costly offensives against Russia's fortified lines and seek to negotiate.

Or, put another way, fickle Americans sympathize with those who are attacked. But their continuing support seems contingent on whether the victim can remain sympathetic-and win decisively to end the war rapidly.

1.4.3 How the April 8 Eclipse Shows the Genius of God (2024-04-06 23:33)

Whether one believes that God created the universe on purpose, or that something else did in a random and chaotic manner – the Big Bang comes to mind – it's difficult to argue against the order of the cosmos. This order will be visible on April 8 when millions of Americans can witness a total eclipse of the sun as the path of totality [1]arcs across the nation from the Rio Grande Valley to northern Maine.

This is a very big deal for a lot of people. Because Texas is less prone to cloud cover and will be the first state to experience this eclipse, droves of people are traveling to the Lone Star State to see it. So many people are coming to north Texas that Kaufman County, which is adjacent to Dallas, declared a [2]state of emergency. So has the entire [3]state of Indiana.

The [4]Royal Museum of Greenwich, England explains why this event is so extraordinary. A total solar eclipse is visible somewhere on Earth about once every 18 months. The last time people witnessed this phenomenon where I live in north Texas was July 29, 1878, beating the Royal Museum's estimated average of about 400 years between total solar eclipses passing over any given point on the planet.

But is this eclipse a function of chaos or order? Science, for its part, provides us with something of a paradox. Some speculate that the origin of the universe was [5]utter chaos at the moment of the Big Bang. Others theorize, "we live in [6]a chaotic universe that, in many ways, is completely unpredictable," while others still say [7]cosmic rotation is increasing chaos in the universe. At the same time, it's thought that there is order in the universe but this aforementioned chaos hides certain patterns. Which is it?

To the extent there are hidden patterns in the universe, there are many to discover for one simple reason: We can only see about 5 % of [8]our universe. The other 95 % is completely invisible to us, most of it described by science as dark energy – about 68 % – and dark matter, reckoned to comprise another 27 %.

We know little about dark matter and dark energy, but we know a little more about the remaining 5 % of the universe and it appears to be put together rather well. Monday's eclipse demonstrates how well. One newspaper, The Oklahoman, reported "On April 8, 2024, a total eclipse will pass over the far southeastern corner of Oklahoma and through Dallas." That might sound mundane today until realizing that this report was published on [9]April 30, 2000.

The order in the observable universe is so precise, a newspaper in Oklahoma City reported on next week's eclipse nearly a quarter century in advance, and astronomers calculated the date and time before that. Such exact calculations are impossible in a random, chaotic environment. It is because of the structural precision of our universe that very smart people can calculate when a solar eclipse will occur. In case you're curious, [10]the next one that can be seen in the United States will happen on August 23, 2044.

Skeptics of the biblical account of creation are free to lecture us on how the creation story in Genesis cannot possibly be true, and non-believers routinely deride Bible-believing Christians as bumpkinesque rubes as they explain how it wasn't God that created the universe, but something else.

That "something else" embraced by science and people who claim to follow it cannot be seen, cannot be fully explained and cannot be proved. It encapsulates a belief system requiring faith that the [11]quantum vacuum – which some believe created everything out of nothing – a second [12]Big Bang about a month later, and other theories played some part in creating the universe. However, it's difficult to argue for a chaotic universe in light of the consistent accuracy with which astronomers can calculate when solar eclipses will take place.

Many so-called rationalists who believe in things they cannot see, explain or prove ridicule Christians for believing in things they cannot see, explain or prove. But how is a belief that a timeless, all-powerful God created an orderly universe any more preposterous than a belief that the quantum vacuum created everything out of nothing in an [13]accidental explosion?

Advertisement

Wise people will admit that science does not know for sure how the universe came to be. They have theories and conjecture to support their belief in a chaotic, random event somewhere in time and space, and a strong faith in those theories. But the exactitude within the observable universe which reflects the first sentence of the Bible – In the beginning, God created the heavens and the earth – will be on full display during the afternoon of April 8. It promises to be a glorious exhibition of the absolute and limitless genius of the Creator.

1.4.5 'Our Constitution Was Made Only for a Moral and Religious People (2024-04-14 21:53)

"Our Constitution was made only for moral and religious people. It is wholly inadequate to the government of any other."—John Adams

I believe I have demonstrated in many articles that Leftists hate God and religion more than anything else because they cannot allow the slaves in their Marxist system to have any higher allegiance than their totalitarian government masters. It is also obvious, however, that Leftists loathe history almost as much as they do God and religion because true history (especially American history) is as devastating to their cause as God is. But then, their god, Marx, said, "Keep people from their history and they are easily controlled." The Democrat Party and their adherents are doing everything possible to accomplish just that.

Recently, I referred the Adams quote at the beginning of this column to a Leftist. His response was, "Conservatives have always taken that quote out of context." No, conservatives have not done so, the quote means exactly what Mr. Adams said, as I shall prove in this series. But this is typical Leftist historical revisionism. While America's Founders certainly did not establish a theocracy, from that fact Leftists draw the utterly erroneous conclusion that our Founders meant that religion should have absolutely no influence except in private affairs—and even then, should be regulated by the government, à la China. Letting religion (God) influence policy is anathema to these people. But this Leftist ideological canard would, frankly, be totally shocking to our Founders. They did not establish a theocracy, but neither did they intend that religion would have no part to play in American affairs outside the home. God is the God of...everything, including government, not just the God of private life.

I also quoted my Leftist correspondent Andrew Jackson's statement, "That Book (the Bible) is the rock on which our Republic rests."

"But, but, but," the Leftist responded, "Jackson was a slave owner." This kind of hypocrisy and illogical argumentation is typical of Leftists. In their own eyes, Leftism is the "god" of humanity. They establish the acceptable (always evolving) moral standard and judge everyone, including previous generations, by it. They never try to put history into its context; they always judge others, even in history, by their current, modern, continually changing Leftist standard. That's why they can condemn anybody they don't agree with. If you don't measure up to THEIR canon of behavior, you are a horrible human being, a Nazi or racist or "white supremacist"—often worth disposing of entirely, thank you, Chairman Mao and General Secretary Stalin.

But the hypocrisy here is clearly manifest. People who murder unborn babies, mutilate children, allow near-mass murder in the streets of cities they govern, and destroy countless lives through lying, unscientific transgender dogma, have absolutely no right to judge anyone else about anything. EXCEPT—those things are part of the current, ever-changing Leftist “morality,” thus not to be condemned. But, the problem is, IF morality is, as they insist, “ever-changing,” how can they condemn slaveholders for submitting to the “ever-changing” morality of their own time? Hypocrisy, thy name is Leftist.

Unfortunately for Leftists, Jackson’s quote is the exact truth. Nearly everybody in early America believed that the Bible was the foundation of American society. “But, Jackson was a slave owner!” This brings us to another absolute of Leftist historical revisionism and ideological hypocrisy: find a flaw, or an imperfect motive, in the messenger, and that immediately frees us from having to believe or submit to any truth he/she teaches. Because Jackson was a “slave owner,” that automatically means we don’t have to believe anything he says. Donald Trump is a terrible person who writes mean tweets, so we shouldn’t listen to anything he says. That standard, of course, doesn’t apply to Democrats. Uh, modern-day Democrats, not Jacksonian Democrats.

However, truth is truth is truth, regardless of who speaks it. We are responsible for believing and obeying the truth, even if the devil teaches it. None of us (especially Leftists) are pure, including the men who founded our country. But the impurity of life or motive doesn’t change the truth, as much as Leftists wish it did. “The truth is incontrovertible. Malice may attack it, ignorance may deride it, but in the end, there it is” (Winston Churchill). Incidentally, quotes about the influence of the Bible and Judeo-Christian morality on America by earlier generations of great Americans could be multiplied exponentially. But Leftists can’t have that. They want to morph American history into opposition to Christianity so that they can create the godless, totalitarian government THEY want. And make you the new Democratic Party slaves.

Leftist hypocrisy is everywhere. Another example: they need to get guns out of the hands of the murdering criminals they’ve created in cities they govern before they start trying to take them away from innocent Americans who have never hurt anybody with their firearms. But again, that isn’t what this is all about. It is totally about absolute power and controlling other people, the cardinal element of Leftist ideology. Power, not freedom, is their mantra. And they won’t take guns away from monsters because they need societal chaos. The more chaos there is in a society, the more need there is (they believe) for the government to step in and “control” that society. In other words, more power for the government (i.e., them). A responsible, moral, self-controlled, virtuous person is the LAST thing the Left wants because people like that don’t need government! The Leftist wants more murder in American streets increased moral perversity and unrestrained hedonism. Such things are the very source and foundation of their grasping for power.

This brings me back to John Adams and his quote at the beginning of this essay, and why the Left hates him so much and must lie about his statement. More on what Adams actually meant in my second article in this series.

1.4.6 If This Report Is True About Biden and Iran, There Should Be Impeachment Hearings (2024-04-14 21:57)

This report about the Iranian strikes on Israel over the weekend is disturbing. It paints Joe Biden and America in a terrible light. It reinforces the notion that Israel is truly alone in its fight against radical Islamic terrorism. Call impeachment hearings if this is true.

Where I'm a bit reserved is the source: it's from Turkish officials. The story goes that Iran informed Turkey of their plans and that the Biden administration was aware of the strikes. Turkey was reportedly told to relay a message to Tehran: keep the attacks "within certain limits" (via [1]Jerusalem Post) [emphasis mine]:

So Biden basically greenlit Iran's attack on Israel... [2]<https://t.co/znfPmsXSCd>—Brent Scher (@BrentScher) [3]April 14, 2024

Iran informed Turkey in advance of its planned operation against Israel, a Turkish diplomatic source told Reuters on Sunday, adding that Washington had conveyed to Tehran via Ankara that any action it took had to be "within certain limits."

Turkey, which has denounced Israel for its campaign on Gaza, said earlier on Sunday that it did not want a further escalation of tensions in the region.

The Turkish source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Turkish Foreign Minister Hakan Fidan had spoken to both his US and Iranian counterparts in the past week to discuss the planned Iranian operation, adding Ankara had been made aware of possible developments.

Turkey is essentially a dictatorship, so taking their word on anything is no better than believing what's on North Korean state media. Iran was telegraphing the strikes, which were executed in retaliation for an Israeli airstrike that killed two Iranian Revolutionary Guard Corps generals earlier this month. Everyone knew this was coming, and Joe Biden still went on vacation this weekend. That's bad enough—allegedly telling the Iranians, more or less, they could attack but “within certain limits” is baffling, dangerous, and a complete dereliction of duty.

Iran launched an array of ballistic and cruise missiles, along with over 100 kamikaze drones, against Israel yesterday.

When it comes to liberal media bias, there's perhaps no bigger culprit than NPR. Uri Berliner, a senior editor at NPR, wrote what's been called "[1]a bombshell expose" and "[2]a voice of sanity" for [3]The Free Press that spoke to that rampant bias. Keep in mind, NPR is taxpayer funded. Although NPR [4]has tried to downplay the issue, it's not exactly going away. In his Friday episode of "The Verdict," Sen. Ted Cruz (R-TX) addressed the matter, highlighting the need to defund NPR.

...Maher responded to none of these specific points in substance. Instead, she attacks Berliner as "profoundly disrespectful, hurtful, and demeaning" to his colleagues by calling out the company for its political bias.— Jonathan Turley (@JonathanTurley) [5]April 14, 2024

To begin the segment, co-host Ben Ferguson shared what is no doubt on the minds of many, especially as he's worked in media. "I don't understand why my tax dollars are subsidizing a hardcore leftist organization and why I'm paying their salaries at NPR. That's the reality," he pointed out before mentioning Berliner's revelations, reminding Berliner has been there for 25 years. As Cruz quoted from the start of the op-ed:

You know the stereotype of the NPR listener: an EV-driving, Wordle-playing, tote bag-carrying coastal elite. It doesn't precisely describe me, but it's not far off. I'm Sarah Lawrence-educated, was raised by a [6]lesbian peace activist mother, I drive a Subaru, and Spotify says my listening habits are most similar to people in Berkeley.

I fit the NPR mold. I'll cop to that.

So when I got a job here 25 years ago, I never looked back. As a senior editor on the business desk where news is always breaking, we've covered upheavals in the workplace, supermarket prices, social media, and AI.

It's true NPR has always had a liberal bent, but during most of my tenure here, an open-minded, curious culture prevailed. We were nerdy, but not knee-jerk, activist, or scolding.

In recent years, however, that has changed. Today, those who listen to NPR or read its coverage online find something different: the distilled worldview of a very small segment of the U.S. population.

If you are conservative, you will read this and say, duh, it's always been this way.

But it hasn't.

For decades, since its founding in 1970, a wide swath of America tuned in to NPR for reliable journalism and gorgeous audio pieces with birds singing in the Amazon. Millions came to us for conversations that exposed us to voices around the country and the world radically different from our own—engaging precisely because they were unguarded and unpredictable. No image generated more pride within NPR than the farmer listening to Morning Edition from his or her tractor at sunrise.

Back in 2011, although NPR's audience tilted a bit to the left, it still bore a [7]resemblance to America at large. Twenty-six percent of listeners described themselves as conservative, 23 percent as middle of the road, and 37 percent as liberal.

By 2023, the picture was completely different: only 11 percent described themselves as very or somewhat conservative, 21 percent as middle of the road, and 67 percent of listeners said they were very or somewhat liberal. We weren't just losing conservatives; we were also losing moderates and traditional liberals.

An open-minded spirit no longer exists within NPR, and now, predictably, we don't have an audience that reflects America.

That wouldn't be a problem for an openly polemical news outlet serving a niche audience. But for NPR, which purports to consider all things, it's devastating both for its journalism and its business model.

The podcast also referenced [8]an interview that Berliner did with Bari Weiss, who had resigned from the editorial board of The New York Times and started The Free Press.

Berliner and Weiss discussed how Berliner warned that NPR went from having a "bent" to a bias. Although Berliner said it was "cumulative" rather than "one event" that brought on the change, he did make clear how hard NPR took Donald Trump being elected in 2016, especially when they assumed Hillary Clinton would win.

He admitted that "I think, after a while, we started covering Trump in a way that like a lot of legacy news organizations, we were trying to damage his presidency, to even find anything we could do to harm him," which is where the Russia collusion narrative came into play.

Berliner called it "sort of catnip" to go with the narrative, even though he it admitted "it was just rumors, and a lot of it based on pretty shoddy documents or evidence, it wasn't really solid, but I think it was compelling." He referred to Rep. Adam Schiff (D-CA) as their "muse to the Trump collusion story," who Berliner emphasized they had on "constantly."

Schiff [9]was censured by the House last June for pushing the Russia collusion hoax.

When discussing that excerpt, Cruz and Ferguson repeatedly emphasized their shock and dismay over how NPR, which again is taxpayer funded, was "trying to damage [Trump's] presidency, to even find anything we could do to harm him." The senator referred to it as "a damning admission." He also pointed out that the change was "was obvious to any conservative, but it says something for it for a senior editor to go and blow the whistle like this."

Advertisement

The focus once more returned to the need for NPR to have to exist on its own. While Ferguson said he's "fine with NPR existing," he added "they should figure out how to do it the same way that everybody else does in media, which is to you know, make money instead of us giving them our tax dollars to then as [Berliner] described it, try to hurt Trump every time they could." This is especially, as Ferguson further warned "it won't just be Trump in the future, it will be any other conservative based on what he's saying. It's not like they just went against Trump and that was it. They're going in against every conservative on every story out there."

Berliner's op-ed and interview with Weiss also addressed how there were 87 registered Democrats "working in editorial positions," with zero Republicans," something Cruz pointed out is "not vague or ambiguous," adding "that's not equivocal, that is explicit."

On the Hunter Biden laptop story, Berliner addressed more chilling bias:

In October 2020, the New York Post published the [10]explosive report about the laptop Hunter Biden abandoned at a Delaware computer shop containing emails about his sordid business dealings. With the election only weeks away, NPR turned a blind eye. Here's how NPR's managing editor for news at the time [11]explained the thinking: "We don't want to waste our time on stories that are not really stories, and we don't want to waste the listeners' and readers' time on stories that are just pure distractions."

But it wasn't a pure distraction, or a product of Russian disinformation, as dozens of former and current intelligence officials suggested. The laptop did belong to Hunter Biden. Its contents revealed his connection to the corrupt world of multimillion-dollar influence peddling and its possible implications for his father.

The laptop was newsworthy. But the timeless journalistic instinct of following a hot story lead was being squelched. During a meeting with colleagues, I listened as one of NPR's best and most fair-minded journalists said it was good we weren't following the laptop story because it could help Trump.

When the essential facts of the Post's reporting [12]were confirmed and the emails verified independently about a year and a half later, we could have fessed up to our misjudgment. But, like Russia collusion, we didn't make the hard choice of transparency.

With such examples, Ferguson again brought up the incredulousness of how they're receiving funding, something. "How on earth are they getting this type of government funding," he asked, "especially now if we know this from someone that worked there for 25 years? Is there any way to say the NPR, that's fine, if this is what your mission is? Go and do it, but you're not going to do it subsidized by taxpayers."

Cruz wasted no time in offering "I would eliminate the funding for NPR tomorrow," calling it "the right thing to do" and adding "we shouldn't be in the business of funding NPR."

It doesn't look to be that easy, however. As Cruz explained, "the problem is every Democrat wants to spend your taxpayer dollars funding NPR because why wouldn't you? If you're a leftist, why wouldn't you be willing to use U.S. taxpayer dollars to fund a propaganda outlet for your view?" It's not just Democrats, though. The senator revealed that "in the budget battles, too many Republicans are scared of taking on NPR and so between the two, it keeps going."

Cruz also shared what he saw as key similarities between Berliner and Weiss, referring to [13]the letter Weiss wrote about resigning as something that "should be taught in every journalism class in America."

"Bari's resignation letter reads very much like Uri Berliners article," Cruz offered. "They're both people left of center who actually believe in some modicum of free speech, some modicum of fairness, and they look at the corruption of institutions they respected." Despite their differences of opinions on politics, Cruz spoke to a sense of appreciation. "Uri Berliner and I may disagree on a lot of things, but I'm proud to stand with Uri Berliner for daring to speak the truth, because free speech matters, and I actually think it matters."

Cruz highlighted a real life example in which he met with an unnamed CEO "of a major journalistic enterprise." He explained that he told him "'listen, I actually believe in a free press,

I defend you even when you kick the crap out of me, even when you attack me, because I think it's important to democracy and free speech to have a real and vibrant press. But when you guys are just corrupt ideologues, when you're just propagandist, it hurts the entire country." Thus, Cruz gave "a big shout out" to Berliner and Weiss.

To whatever liberal listeners that "The Verdict" may have, Cruz offered "if you're a fair minded liberal working in the media and you don't like the bias and propaganda and I'm not saying you're suddenly conservative and a right winger, that's okay, that's okay. We can have reasonable discussions. But when people speak out, like Uri Berliner and Bari Weiss, it makes a difference, and we need more people to do that."

1.4.8 Communists Betray Workers, Teachers Unions Betray Students, Civil Rights Organizations Betray Blacks (2024-04-17 19:18)

The Communist Party of the Soviet Union – like most communist parties – came to power as the great defender of workers.

In reality, the Soviet Communist Party didn't give a hoot about Russian workers. The party was nothing more than a totalitarian organization that used workers to gain power – and then suppressed the proletariat, just as it suppressed every other group. One of the first things the Communist Party did after attaining power was disband independent labor unions and prohibit workers' strikes. Yes, the "workers' party" banned strikes.

The one major exception was the Chinese Communist Party, which came to power as the great defender of peasants. And the CCP slaughtered about 60 million of them.

This has been the modus operandi of every left-wing group everywhere: Claim concern for some group, and use that group to fool people – specifically, naive liberals, who share few values with the Left but have frequently served as useful idiots for the Left. Liberals do so to this day.

Teachers Unions

Teachers unions are nothing more than left-wing groups that use alleged concern for students to attain and retain power. The reality, however, is while they care about teachers, they harm students far more than they help them.

One example is teachers unions' opposition to school choice. Those who actually care about students support the right of parents to choose their children's schools – just as many teachers do when they send their own children to schools of their choice.

A second example is teachers unions' making it nearly impossible to fire incompetent teachers.

A third example was teachers unions' demands that schools lock down for nearly two years during the COVID-19 era. The unions did so despite there being no scientific evidence in support of school lockdowns and despite ample warnings that many children would suffer intellectually, scholastically, emotionally and psychologically.

Moreover, wrote John H. Cochrane of the Hoover Institution in the Wall Street Journal, "When schools went remote, parents found out what was actually going on inside the classrooms. Teachers were coaching students to hate themselves, their country and their religious traditions and sexualizing young children."

The last point brings us to a fourth example: Teachers rob young students of their sexual innocence with premature talk of, and books that deal with, overt sexual activity, and the infamous use of drag queens to perform in front of children as young as 6 years old.

"A rank-and-file campaign inside the National Education Association is demanding the president stop 'sending military funding, equipment, and intelligence to Israel.' ... But the rank-and-file campaign goes beyond (that). ... Members want the NEA (National Education Association) to revoke its endorsement of Joe Biden for the 2024 presidential race until the president ... stops 'sending military funding, equipment, and intelligence to Israel.'"

That was only two months after Oct. 7.

Civil Rights Organizations

Most civil rights organizations are also essentially left-wing groups. They use alleged concern for blacks to attain and retain power, but they harm blacks considerably more than they help them.

A glaring example is the near-universal opposition of civil rights groups to school choice despite the fact that black Americans overwhelmingly support it. According to a 2023 RealClear Opinion Research poll, 73 % of blacks support school choice – two points more than whites. They do so because large majorities of black students in public schools perform far below grade-level standards.

The reason the largest civil rights organization, the NAACP, opposes school choice has nothing to do with concern for blacks. It is that the left-wing position – again, the NAACP is a left-wing organization – on school choice is dictated by teachers unions.

Other civil rights organizations' positions that harm blacks include labeling as "racist" the most effective solution to racism: widespread colorblindness; supporting separate dorms and graduations for black college students; and support for lowering academic and professional standards to facilitate black advancement.

Feminist Organizations

Feminist organizations are additional examples of essentially left-wing organizations. The group they use to attain and retain power is women. Just as other left-wing interest groups, they harm the group on whose behalf they allegedly fight – in this case, women – far more than they help them.

The most obvious example is the support of major feminist organizations for men who say they are women participating in women's sports.

From the website of the National Women's Law Center:

"The National Women's Law Center (NWLC) unequivocally supports the inclusion of trans women in women's sports. And if you call yourself a feminist, you should too."

From the website of The Women's Sports Foundation (WSF):

"The Women's Sports Foundation supports the right of all athletes, including transgender athletes, to participate in athletic competition. ..."

In 2022, the WSF wrote a letter to the NCAA protesting any diminution of the right of biological males who say they are females to participate in women's athletics. The letter was cosigned, as expected, by LGBTQIA+ organizations but also by two major feminist organizations in addition to the Women's Sports Federation: the National Organization for Women and the National Women's Political Caucus.

Damaging women has been the primary legacy of organized feminism for the last half-century. That there are more depressed women, especially young women, today than at any other time in modern American history is directly attributable to left-wing influence generally (no religion, no country, no future) and to feminist doctrines specifically: Career is more important than marriage and family, and women can do just fine without a man to love and be loved by.

LGBTQIA+ Organizations

Perhaps the ultimate example of left-wing contempt for the groups they claim to represent is "Queers for Palestine." Palestinian queers have no rights; they face persecution and even death if they expose themselves to their society. Israeli queers are by far the safest, happiest and freest in the Middle East. But hating Israel is the left-wing position. At any cost.

1.4.9 An Utterly Laughable Hypocrisy (2024-04-17 19:18)

Greetings, everyone, and unhappy Tax Day; today is the day we send our hard-earned dollars to a federal government that cannot balance its checkbook. We are constantly berated about paying a fair share and incessantly pummeled with rhetoric about government investments, truly an oxymoronic reference—emphasis on moron. Now, I could go on and on about the insidious hypocrisy of sending our resources to a federal government that wastes it on ideological boondoggles, but that is not the point of this missive. There will be many others who will cover this absurd situation where we find the net interest on our debt now surpasses the amount we spend on our national security and defense.

And that is what I seek to discuss in this week's offering.

Recently, some 19 retired military Generals and Admirals, along with former top civilian defense officials, filed an Amicus (Friends of the Court) Brief with the US Supreme Court. Their brief outlines their opposition to former President Donald Trump's plea for immunity from prosecution for actions taken during his tenure as president. Now, get this: they believe that the SCOTUS granting of such poses a significant threat to national security. The SCOTUS will hear this case on April 25th. This group is warning that there will be threats to our national security and democratic principles if former President Trump's claims of presidential immunity for official acts were to be accepted. Now, I just had to repeat the assertion of this group because you have to understand the sheer and utterly laughable hypocrisy they present. The money quote from their 38-page brief is, "Should the theory of absolute immunity prevail, it will risk jeopardizing America's standing as a guardian of democracy in the world and further feeding the spread of authoritarianism, thereby threatening the national security of the United States and democracies around the world."

Ha!

No, you cannot make this stuff up. Here are folks, including some who were on the original laughable hypocrisy of the 51 intelligence officials who declared Hunter Biden's laptop as Russian disinformation, saying that Trump is a threat to our national security.

How about Joe Biden selling off our Strategic Petroleum Reserves to our No. 1 geopolitical foe, China? Or how about undermining our very own oil and gas industry and reversing the path of our energy independence and dominance? Now we are begging hat in hand once again to those who seek the demise of our country. And just months ago, Biden signed an order to freeze our export of liquified natural gas (LNG), which forces more of our global allies to seek that resource from another geopolitical foe, Vladimir Putin and Russia.

I ponder if they would consider this to be a threat to our national security. Or the fact that Joe Biden abandoned over $80B of US military equipment to the Taliban in Afghanistan in a complete strategic, operational, and tactical debacle he praised as a success...to include the deaths of American Marines, Soldiers, and Sailors. How about the fact that Afghanistan is now, once again, a thriving base of operations for Islamic terrorist groups, namely ISIS-K, who just enacted a brutal terrorist attack in Russia? Any threat to our national and global security?

I wonder if these 19 retired Generals, Admirals, and senior civilian defense officials think opening up our borders to millions of illegal immigrants, including single military-age males, poses no threat to our national security? Heck, FBI Director Christopher Wray just testified to such not too long ago before Congress. Not to mention the hundreds of thousands of Americans who have lost their lives due to the chemical warfare agent fentanyl—which emanates from China. There can be no debate that it was Joe Biden and his unconstitutional 90+ executive orders that opened our border to invasion that's a threat to our national security. I guess these delusional individuals just do not see it that way.

Biden has continued the decimation of our military readiness, capability, and capacity. Our force cannot meet recruiting and retention objectives...but hey, our Armed Forces know their proper pronouns, accept mentally disturbed gender dysphoric individuals and embrace cultural Marxism.

And authoritarianism?

What do you call it when you mandate what type of appliances, vehicles, and amount of water in toilets Americans can have? What do you call it when you weaponize the federal government agencies against your ideological opponents, like parents who want better educational opportunities, not indoctrination, of their children? What do you call it when you seek to designate said parents as "domestic terrorists," kick in the doors of pro-life activists in the middle of the night and infiltrate the Catholic Church? But you say and do nothing when supporters of an Islamic terrorist group that killed and took Americans hostage on October 7th, 2023, take to our streets and chant "Death to America"?

I wonder if these 19 Generals, Admirals, and senior civilian defense officials agree with Joe Biden that no amendment to the US Constitution is absolute? Hey, those of you who signed onto this letter and took an oath to support and defend the Constitution, speak up, please! Or how about using the federal government in coordination with private sector tech information companies to censor the freedom of speech and expression of Americans? Is that not a threat to our democratic principles and Constitutional rights? I suppose the signatories of this Amicus Brief think it is perfectly fine to have illegals voting in our elections and count them in our census?

I think y'all reading this piece have now gotten the point. Once again, this is an utterly laughable hypocrisy that evidences the two-tiered system of justice, basically altering right and wrong in our Republic. These people who signed their names to this Amicus Brief are no friends of our Constitutional Republic, nor the TRUE American people. They are nothing more than politicized hacks, puppets, cymbal clanging monkeys who are the ones who pose a threat to the very existence of our country. They are the friends of the progressive socialist leftists and Marxists and shamefully have exposed themselves as such. Every one of them should be condemned.

But hey, I am a forgiving fella, and I will allow you, the treasonous and delusional 19, to withdraw your support for this Amicus Brief; you have 24 hours after the publishing of this piece. If you refuse to do so, then your names will go right there with Benedict Arnold, who was once a revered hero of our Revolutionary War...until his personal feelings became more important than our national interest.

Joe Biden, not Donald Trump, is the greatest threat to our national security and representative democracy. He is our biggest measure of authoritarianism. His fecklessness and weakness have brought the world to this point of global chaos and calamity. Anyone believing otherwise is in denial of facts and is aiding and abetting the assault on the foundations of our republic.

1.4.10 America No More... (2024-04-17 19:19)

After watching with over a hundred others the newly released movie, Civil War, I left the theater stunned, and I was not alone. Was it a good movie? Just a deeply unsettling one! Could it really happen? You don't even want to imagine it! But with Biden's assault on America continuing and Trump reemerging as the favored GOP candidate, the American division is growing. More and more citizens are getting angrier as their standard of living is in jeopardy and illegals are getting benefits citizens can only dream of.

Spoiling the movie's plot is never appropriate, but when Western forces from Texas, Florida, and even California take on the elected President, the country is left in a civil war. We watch as desensitized media professionals cover the death of hundreds of American citizens. To the film's media, the war is just a once-in-a-lifetime story that deserves to be captured one picture at a time. After all, it's the media's job. They are just feeding citizens what they want—blood, gore, winners, and victims. What would happen if America descends into such chaos? This movie provides one disturbing view, one that, God help us, must never happen.

One thing is clear, when a country loses trust in its leader's ability to preserve their cherished freedoms and ensure equal treatment under the law, even insurrection seems somehow possible. That is a nightmare no American should have to entertain, but more and more Americans seem to be losing hope in the future of our country. They don't trust elections. Many don't even like the Presidential choices presented to them.

The Founding Fathers valued freedom enough to unleash a revolution against the greatest power at the time. Enough citizens joined them in securing what most at the time believed impossible, independence. Yes, insurrection hatched our beloved America. Belief in equal rights and freedom are powerful forces that have always driven patriotic Americans to action.

Even with our differences, most Americans believe in property rights, voting rights, law enforcement to keep us safe, freedom of speech, and personal responsibility. Unfortunately, more and more Americans feel these values are in question, and they are not sure America can be saved!

Many Americans no longer even believe that elections will produce a lawful winner. They don't trust the voting machines. They want paper ballots that can be counted. They don't believe multiple days are needed. Hasn't one day of voting always been enough? They want required IDs and signed mail-in ballots. They fear ballot harvesting is just another name for 'manufacturing' all the votes you need to ensure a fraudulent victory. Are American fair elections no more!

Many no longer believe that the enforcement of law is fair and sure. While former President Donald Trump has been charged with multiple "crimes," President Joe Biden's similar actions aren't even charged. Hunter Biden's influence peddling with money set aside for the "Big Guy" are not even covered in the mainstream media. The Dept. of Justice is quick to charge Trump, but with the Bidens, we hear nothing but crickets. People who commit crimes are being let go instead of being held accountable. Is American law and order no more!

Under President Trump, our border was finally more under control. Under Biden, his open border has been continually flooding our country with illegals from around the world. They come expecting benefits at the expense of taxpaying citizens. Illegals overwhelm services in our urban areas. Legal immigrants had to wait years to enter and are fuming at this invasion of illegals rushing to the front of the line and expecting to be accepted, supported, and allowed to become citizens. Is America's secure border no more!

We thought in America, your home was your castle. If you work to buy the home of your dreams, you were sure that your property rights were secure in a community that you loved. But today, squatters are taking over vacant homes and fending off owners who want them to leave their property. Illegals are being told to come to America, find an empty home, and move in. In the name of equity, governments are rezoning the suburbs and requiring the building of low-income housing where it is not wanted. Are America's property rights no more!

Do you believe America is lost? Do you believe nothing can reverse this march to chaos? Do you believe that it is time to buy your own guns to protect your family when the government won't? Is a civil war coming? If you answered "yes" to any of these questions, you are in danger of losing the optimistic attitude that has characterized Americans for two centuries. This is our country. This is not the time for surrender. It's time to fight to preserve America the best way you can—vote for candidates who promise to preserve the rights you value most.

Your vote does matter. There are no perfect candidates, but the party positions make a difference in this critical election. If you want law and order, secure borders, fair elections, property rights, and a return to personal responsibility, there is only one party to support. Vote for every GOP candidate you are given the opportunity to support, or it may very well be America no more!

1.4.11 Our Constitution Was Made Only for a Moral and Religious People (2024-04-17 19:24)

"Our Constitution was made only for a moral and religious people. It is wholly inadequate to the government of any other."—John Adams

What did Adams mean and why do Leftists hate him and our Founders so much?

To our Founders, there is only so much "power" in a political system, a true "zero sum" situation. People "power" is called "freedom." Government "power" is called "tyranny." And because only so much power is available, the only place government obtains power is by taking freedoms from the people. The more "power" government has, the less "free" the people are.

As they viewed history, our Founders perceived that the constant, unchanging tendency of governments was to gain more and more power, thus leaving their people less and less free. This was virtually an absolute to them. Remember their own situation. They rebelled against a government they believed was doing just that—growing in tyranny at the expense of its citizens, especially in the American colonies. This was anathema to our Founders. They hated tyranny, and loved freedom. And before someone shouts "Slavery!", never, ever forget it was the principles they established that eventually eradicated slavery in America and around the world. History doesn't happen overnight, but the collapse of slavery, in the 19th century, is one of the most rapid dissolutions of any system in human history. Would that abortion would fall as quickly.

Government exists to protect the property of its citizens—to “secure” the natural rights given to them by God. Thus, “people power” trumps “government power.” Indeed, the only “powers” government has are those the people give it. The citizens do realize that (theoretically) there are a few matters government can handle more effectively than individuals—war, police, a national currency—thus, the people are willing to sacrifice some of their individual rights so that collectively, through government, various matters can be handled more efficiently. But any right the people give the government can be taken back. This is, of course, exactly contrary to modern Leftist dogma which holds that all our rights come from government. Government giveth, and government taketh away. Such is 100 % opposite the thinking of America's Founders and is precisely why Leftists hate them so much.

Because they believed the universal, constant tendency of government was to grow and abuse power, thus becoming tyrannical and enslaving their population, the American Founding Fathers gave very little power to the national government they created. They specified EXACTLY what legislative power that government had (Article 1, Section 8). Laws are what restrict freedom so the Founders were very specific about what the legislative branch could do. Then, the Bill of Rights tells Congress what it CANNOT do. These are the powers the people gave, and forbade, to Congress. By exactly defining the powers of government, the people thus knew exactly what it could and could not do, giving them protection and thus great freedom. Most governmental powers were placed in the hands of the states and local governments, which were closer to the people, and thus (hypothetically) more controllable. Congress had very few, and very defined powers.

Incidentally, have you ever wondered why political parties are not mentioned in the Constitution? Parties are divisive, and it was not the role of the federal government (which was to be totally neutral) to benefit one section of the populace over another. Again, read Article 1, Section 8. Every power given to Congress was to benefit every American equally—the “general welfare.” Political parties thus weren't needed. Tragically, they began almost immediately after the Constitution was ratified when Alexander Hamilton pushed for a national bank which would (Southerners believed) benefit Northern industry over Southern agriculture. This was actually the first step on the road to our “civil war.”

Advertisement

But back to Adams' quote. Because of the nature of humanity, humans must be restrained or many of them will do evil. Thus, some system must be enacted to restrict the wickedness of the uncivilized. Government can do that, of course, but too much government power is called “tyranny.” The Founders wrote a Constitution to limit that very tendency. Thus, in the Founders' system, religion was essential for restricting men. That gives humans as much freedom as possible because they are not being tyrannized by government into moral virtue and civilization, they FREELY choose to do it of their own volition! Government power is limited by the Constitution—the people are protected from government tyranny. Man’s vileness is limited (freely, voluntarily) by religion, thus allowing humans the greatest freedom possible. Our Constitution was indeed made only for a moral and religious people because it severely limited the power government has over its citizens. But, in order to have a civilized society, man’s basest instincts must be restrained—“a moral and religious people” are essential.

I cannot emphasize this strongly enough. The Founders deliberately limited the power the national government had over its citizens by defining precisely what powers the federal government could, and could not, exercise. That left the American people free from (most) government tyranny. But by doing so, it was absolutely imperative to have a “moral and religious people” who would curtail themselves from harming others, be virtuous, industrious, concerned for others, and practice all the enlightened attributes their religion taught them. No one did it perfectly, of course, and murderers and thieves, etc. existed in early America. Government, mainly state and local laws, does play a role here. But very limited.

The system didn’t work as well as the Founders wanted for the very reason they feared—the desire of men for power over others.

But indeed, “that book (the Bible) [was] the rock upon which this republic rests” (Andrew Jackson). Since government tyranny is the goal of the Left, the Bible and the Constitution must be vilified or revised to meet their pleasure. And that is exactly what they are doing today.

1.4.12 Whistleblower Alleges Biden Is Endangering American Forces in Niger (2024-04-17 19:26)

An American serviceman filed a whistleblower report, alleging that Joe Biden is placing American troops in harm’s way by refusing to withdraw from the African nation of Niger. Niger has undergone a seismic change in political leadership, as there was a military coup in 2023. Last month, the new government said that American military presence was illegal and vowed to end all agreements effective immediately. US forces had been conducting counter-terror operations in the region, including drone operations.

The Washington Post [1]obtained a copy of the complaint, in which the Biden State and Defense Department rejected the negligence claims but did not admit that a new agreement could be hashed out with the military government. So, in a way, yes, American troops could be in harm's way since we know how Biden dithers on everything:

The airman, in a private whistleblower complaint to Congress obtained by The Washington Post, accused top officials at the U.S. Embassy in Niger's capital of Niamey of having "intentionally suppressed intelligence" as they seek to maintain the "facade of a great country-to-country relationship." The embassy's actions, the whistleblower wrote, have "potential implications" for U.S. relations with other African nations "and the safety of our personnel in the region."

The State Department and Defense Department rejected the claims of negligence, saying the United States is making a final push to maintain a U.S. military presence in post-coup Niger, though they acknowledge that talks are difficult and may fail to produce an agreement.

"There's a very narrow path here to finding an accommodation that addresses their interests and concerns and our interests and concerns," said a senior State Department official, who like some others spoke on the condition of anonymity to discuss the Biden administration's diplomatic efforts. "It may not work, but the fat lady hasn't sung yet."

The whistleblower's allegations highlight the difficulties for the United States in operating in a region of Africa that is increasingly unstable. In 2017, four American soldiers were killed after being ambushed on a mission in Niger, which military investigators blamed on poor training, planning and other institutional failures.

For years, the Pentagon has deployed a mix of mostly Air Force and Army personnel to Niger to support a mission scrutinizing militant groups in the region. Until the coup, the arrangement included drones flying in counterterrorism operations from a base the United States built and U.S. and Nigerien troops partnering on some patrols.

The Trump-Niger incident, where four green berets were killed in an ambush, is notable since the media tried to make that into the [2]former president's Benghazi, when it clearly wasn't. MSNBC's Rachel Maddow insinuated that the attack was in response to Trump's executive order on immigration, aka the Muslim ban. It was an episode of nutty conspiracy theory nonsense that hasn't changed much. And yes, even The Washington Post [3]torched the MSNBC host for peddling this piece of fear-mongering trash.

1.4.13 More Than 100 Illegal Aliens Cut Through Wire Installed by National Guard to Enter the U.S. (2024-04-17 19:28)

A group of about 100 illegal aliens cut through a wire barrier installed by Texas National Guard and crossed the border into the states on Friday.

The concertina wire was installed by the Texas National Guard, according to [1]KFOX 14, and runs along the Rio Grande River. The area where the illegal immigrants crossed in near a high school in southern Texas.

After the group cut the wire, it caused a chain-link fence to collapse, Border Patrol told the outlet. Reportedly, all the individuals who were a part of the ordeal were taken into custody and processed. They are expected to be placed into removal proceedings.

[2]NBC 15 News reported that the arrested were adult males and females from Venezuela, Guatemala, Ecuador, Colombia, Cuba, Nicaragua, Honduras and El Salvador.

"Individuals and families who attempt to enter the United States without authorization, and who are unable to establish a legal basis to remain in the United States, will be removed and are subject to a minimum five-year bar on reentry as well as potential criminal prosecution for migrants with a criminal history," a statement Border Patrol provided to the outlet read.

Late last month, over 100 illegal immigrants attempted to enter the United States illegally by rushing a border wall and breaking through razor wire, according to the [3]New York Post:

A group of men with hoodies, gloves and winter jackets could be seen pulling fencing away and dashing through the concertina wire, as a group of five guards stood in a defensive formation to fill the gap.

The guardsmen firmly held their rifles and stood their ground in front of the migrants, who heavily outnumbered them.

In the video, some figures raise their hands in surrender, but seconds later, others scramble through, with some coming through the guards' legs and knocking them out of the way.

The group then scrambled to the border gate and started to shout at guardsmen on the other side.

1.4.14 Pro-Hamas Students at CA State Polytechnic University Went January 6 With Police (2024-04-23 09:49)

I'm sure there will be more details about this event later, but what are we doing here? We have footage of pro-Hamas students at California State Polytechnic University in Arcata, who barricaded themselves inside a building, which led to a confrontation with police.

It's one of the many instances of young people causing a stir for all the wrong reasons. The Democratic Party establishment and American Jews had to have received whiplash over the past few weeks, as a growing segment of the base has shown that they're antisemitic, anti-Israel, and have zero qualms about supporting people who would fly buildings into skyscrapers.

It's why the Biden White House is walking a tightrope, albeit very poorly, with these incidents nationwide. Biden condemned the anti-Semitism at Columbia University's terror camp.

"I condemn antisemitic protests...I also condemn those who don't understand what's going on with the Palestinians," said Biden yesterday.

It's the same with Israel herself: Biden says there will be ironclad support for Israel following the Iranian ballistic missile barrage last weekend but also reportedly told Tehran to keep their strikes "within certain limits." He'll bash Israel for its anticipated ground operation into Rafah, the last Hamas bastion in Gaza, but continue to re-arm the Jewish state.

It's this foreign policy see-saw that young voters cannot tolerate—they want to see Israel destroyed. And these people vote, so in a way, Biden must cater to antisemites if he doesn't want to lose critical states, like Michigan, come November.

These students who are duking it out with police in the clips above are the voters Biden's people have to cling to—perhaps that's a sign that your party has gone too insane, no?

1.4.15 Trump Comes to Johnson's Defense (2024-04-23 09:51)

Former President Donald Trump offered his defense of House Speaker Mike Johnson as the Louisiana Republican is coming under fire from conservative Republicans over the foreign aid bill and FISA, among other priorities.

The 45th president said in a radio interview with Chris Stigall that the speaker was in a tough spot due to the GOP's slim majority in the lower chamber.

"Remember, the speakership we're talking about has, you know, we're a majority by one. One vote," Trump said.

“And you can’t really get too tough when — Look, we all want to be tough guys and all, and I have a lot of friends, and frankly I have friends on both sides,” Trump continued. “You know, if you look at the vote, a lot of Republicans, a lot of good Republicans, voted for it. But Mike is in there and he’s trying, and some people were disappointed, and a lot of people were very disappointed that nothing happened with the border. I’ll straighten out the border.”

The former president was referring to the $95 billion foreign aid package that divided Republicans and has some on the right calling for Johnson’s ouster.

Johnson ultimately defied his conservative critics, pushing to the floor a series of four bills providing overseas assistance but detaching those funds from a separate border security bill, which failed on the floor during Saturday’s votes. He framed the aid as a simple but crucial continuation of America’s responsibility to democratic allies facing threats of their own.

The package, which more than 100 House Republicans voted against, included roughly $61 billion for Ukraine, $26 billion for Israel, $8 billion for allies in the Indo-Pacific, and a package of additional national security measures that features a potential ban on the popular TikTok app. The bills must still pass the Senate before going to President Biden’s desk.

Trump hosted Johnson at his Mar-a-Lago residence in Florida earlier this month and offered his support for the embattled Speaker, who is under fire from Rep. Marjorie Taylor Greene (R-Ga.), a staunch ally of the former president. ([1]The Hill)

Last week, Sen. Rand Paul (R-KY) warned Trump that his continued support of such spending may cost him politically.

If Trump supports this monstrous, unpaid for foreign aid debt buster, he will lose the very supporters who comprise his vanguard.

1.4.16 Harvard Takes Action Against Pro-Hamas Student Group (2024-04-23 09:54)

Harvard College suspended the Palestine Solidarity Committee for the remainder of the Spring semester and threatened permanent expulsion if they fail to “cease all organizational activities,” The Harvard Crimson reports.

The move comes as pro-terrorist demonstrations have overtaken parts of campuses at Columbia and Yale Universities.

PSC, which has been on probation since March, was notified via email of the temporary suspension for failing to register a protest and violating use-of-space guidelines.

The PSC was one of several student organizations, including some [1]unrecognized student organizations, to stage [2]a rally in Harvard Yard on Friday in solidarity with student activists at Columbia, more than 100 of whom were arrested on Thursday by the New York City Police Department.

During the rally, attendees marched and chanted outside the offices of administrators in the Yard, concluding on the steps of Widener Library.

The group also found itself at the [3]center of controversy in the immediate aftermath of Hamas’ Oct. 7 attack on Israel, when the PSC [4]published a statement co-signed by more than 30 other student groups that stated it held “the Israeli regime entirely responsible for all unfolding violence” from Hamas’ attack. ([5]The Harvard Crimson)

“The organization will not be recognized and will not have access to university benefits and services during this time, including but not limited to use of campus space and appropriate use of the Harvard name,” the email reads. “If the organization continues to operate and commits additional violations during this suspension, the organization risks permanent expulsion, as provided in the Resource Guide.”

In a statement responding to the temporary suspension on social media, PSC said the movement cannot be stopped.

“For the past 6 months, PSC has faced unprecedented repression — doxxing, racist harassment, and targeted administrative crackdowns — as we’ve protested the ongoing genocide in Gaza,” the PSC post said. “After being placed on an illegitimate and retroactive probation, PSC has been suspended.”

“We call on the Harvard community to fight against repression and join the movement for Palestinian liberation,” the statement continued. “History is watching you.”

1.4.17 Psst...I Think the President Is Totally Senile (2024-04-23 10:05)

ok, I don't want to shock you, but I think that our alleged President is senile. Really. Hear me out. Now look, I understand that the regime media teaches that he is a vigorous go-getter taking the lead on important issues and making America safer, more prosperous, and more equitable, but I'm concerned, folks. Maybe I'm off base, but I'm having doubts. I think the evidence is increasingly clear that he's a senile old pervert who showered with his daughter, as well as a neo-communist serial liar whose inability to tell the truth is matched only by his grubby corruption. Other than that, he's fine.

And I am glad he's the Democrat nominee for President. I believe he's going to hold onto that office with his bony claws right up through election day. And I think he has a substantial chance of losing to Donald Trump. I didn't use to, but I'm happy to say America is waking up. Voters can't ignore Grandpa Badfinger's failures and foolishness any longer.

The people purportedly helping him are actually hurting him, which is great to watch. I particularly loved when he decided to tell the world that cannibals consumed Uncle Bosie. Now, let me say that again because I want to ensure you got it. The alleged President of the United States looked at the camera and told America that cannibals ate his uncle.

Cannibals did not eat his uncle.

And you would think that this bizarre lie about his uncle being an hors d'oeuvre would've been enough, but in the same series of incoherent sentences, he also managed to confuse Pearl Harbor with D-Day, get the day of the week wrong, and draw in Beau Biden's death, which now occurred in action in Iraq, or Afghanistan, or wherever else it is useful for him to claim it happened. At least he left out his classic lie that the other driver in the accident that killed his first wife was drunk. This milking the death of relatives thing has become a habit.

He told this particular set of lies in the course of slandering Trump about the troops. Honest Joe was reviving that old "losers and suckers" lie that all of us veterans recognize as a lie. Joe Biden's not a veteran. That's because of another lie. Whatever happened to that asthma that kept our Commander-in-Crusty out of 'Nam anyway? Was a stammer enough to get a deferment, too?

There I go, picking on him because of his stammer. Oh, and his senility, lies, corruption, and perversion, but yeah, also his stammer.

And then his handlers had him stagger into a gas station to show how Scranton Joe is a real person who knows how to interact with real people. We saw a bunch of citizens who didn't even feel obligated to stand up in the presence of the President. That's the kind of aura of leadership we want – local yokels shrugging at the shuffling zombie coming in for a quick photo op with the swing state rubes before heading back out to the Delaware beach house he bought with Chinese bribes. He didn't bring Hunter with him, which is probably good because somebody might've accidentally got him filching coins out of the take a penny, leave a penny tray. Of course, had that happened, the regime media would not have run it. They did not run the story of Hunter's perversion-ridden, corruption-filled laptop because that was allegedly Russian disinformation. The First Failson's peccadillos, of course, are the fault of Putin for reasons, and shut up because you're a transphobe.

They covered for Joe on Cannibalgate as well. Hilariously, the story about his bizarre [1]I-tied-an-onion-to-my-belt-which-was-the-style-at-the-time ramblings was headlined “[2]Biden is off on details of his uncle's WWII death as he calls Trump unfit to lead the military.” Falsely claiming that your uncle goy tossed into a boiling pot and consumed by local tribesmen is not messing up some minor detail. Saying something happened in the late morning rather than the early afternoon is a minor detail. Asserting that Dahmerrieffic individuals with bones through their noses munched on Uncle Bosie is a major detail. Now, we all appreciate the service of Uncle Bosie, even though he wasn't the super jet pilot war hero Biden pretends he was to burnish Joe's own pathetic reputation, but cannibals didn't eat him, and whatever glory accrues to him does not transfer to his nitwit nephew.

I'm laughing at all the Democrat politicians taking a look at all the polls which show Donald Trump ahead in the battleground states. If you recall, Trump has never been consistently ahead before. He wasn't ahead in 2016 consistently, and he was barely ever even in any poll in 2020. But now he is, consistently, and they've got to be scared. They've got to be especially terrified because of the tendency of people to hide their support for Donald Trump. The silent Trumpers are a real threat. Now, a sane party would somehow get rid of the desiccated zombie they have nominated, but the one smart thing Joe Biden never did was take out the greatest insurance policy any politician ever had – Kamala Harris. She's even more despised than he is, though she's about as coherent.

Much of the talk about how he will be shuffled off stage and somebody else will be slipped in to bring in the big win is all just magical thinking. It's Biden. They bought that ticket to ride and they're riding it to the end of the line.

I did something no one's ever done with Joe Biden, which is underestimate him. I underestimated his amazing power to fail. He has failed at everything. The economy is a disaster. You can't go to McDonald's, order two Big Macs, a large fries, and a small Diet Coke, and walk out without paying 30 bucks. Hell, try and buy a house. America's a foreign policy joke. Biden attacks our allies and defends our enemies. And remember that pier he was going to build to feed the terrorists in Gaza? That doesn't appear likely to happen, not because he suddenly realized how stupid the idea was, but because the Navy ships he sent there either broke down or caught fire.

This guy is a disaster, a catastrophe, a walking, whisper-talking clusterfark, and the Democrats own him. He's all theirs. He's not going anywhere. They nominated him, and now they've got to deal with it. The bogus kangaroo court conviction that Donald Trump is facing in New York is not going to save Biden – can you imagine somebody at this point thinking, “Well, a jury of New York liberals and a judge whose daughter works for the Democrats convicted Trump of something I can't quite explain so I'm going to accept inflation and national humiliation in order to re-elect Joe Biden?” Nope.

This guy is going down, and I don't mean tumbling down the stairs of Air Force One, but you know that's in the cards, too.

1.4.18 Minnesota State Sen. Arrested for Burglary, Raising 'Big Implications' Over Razor-Thin Majority (2024-04-23 10:16)

Early on Monday morning, Nicole Mitchell was arrested at a Detroit Lakes, Minnesota for first degree burglary. She isn't just any suspect, but a Democratic state senator from Woodbury, Minnesota, located over 200 miles about three and a half hours away. Local news outlet KFGO [1]noted that "[t]he county attorney's office is reviewing the report before determining whether Mitchell will be charged."

"Mitchell is a Democratic state senator who was elected in 2022 and former meteorologist for KSTP-TV in Minneapolis. She is currently a Lt. Colonel in the Air Force Reserve, serving as a meteorologist for the Air Force's 'Hurricane Hunters'. She was also an anchor on The Weather Channel from 2004 to 2011," the report also mentioned.

The story also earned national attention, as The New York Post [2]reported that "Becker County Sheriff Todd Glander told The Post that he expected a criminal complaint against the lawmaker to be filed Tuesday."

"A spokesperson for the Minnesota Senate Democratic-Farmer-Labor Party said in a statement the party was "aware of the situation and has no comment pending further information," that report also mentioned.

Minnesota Senate Minority Leader Mark Johnson is quoted as saying "The public expects Legislators to meet a high standard of conduct. As information comes out, we expect the consequences to meet the actions, both in the court of law, and in her role at the legislature."

The Libs of TikTok X account posted about the arrest as well, which include pointing out and poking fun at how Mitchell had, less than a week before, [3]posted about how she had a "[m]eaningful conversation" with the pro-gun control Moms Demand Action, where "community members" had been sent to "advocat[e] for common sense gun reform & safer communities" at the state legislature.

BREAKING: Minnesota State Senator Nicole Mitchell (D) was just arrested for 1st-degree burglary.

It was in 2022 that Democrats gained a trifecta, controlling not only the state Senate, but also the Minnesota House of Representatives, with Democratic Gov. Tim Walz winning reelection. That being said, Democrats only have a one-seat majority in the state Senate, and a six-seat majority in the House.

Andrew Wagner, the executive director for Minnesota House Republicans, reposted the local news coverage, noting "big implications for [6] #mnleg Senate control if DFL State Senator is convicted for 1st Degree Burglary."

While the state Senate is not up for reelection this cycle, the House is, and is considered to be a competitive state for those races.

1.4.19 Former Rolling Stone Editor's Biting Attack on the NYT's 'Adults' Piece About Speaker Johnson (2024-04-23 10:28)

Matt Taibbi once again proves why he needed to go independent regarding his reporting. This article, like most, would never have passed the quasi-politburos that have sprouted up in establishment publications. He zeroed in on The New York Times' 'adults' piece, where Gail Collins and Bret Stephens apparently praised Speaker Mike Johnson for eschewing the "MAGA" factions of the GOP to pass Ukraine aid, FISA renewal, and government funding.

On the conservative side of things, yes, Johnson's actions made the case over the weekend to boot him. The problem is there's no one else who would do better. Who would want the job is another issue. It's one of those situations where I would agree to pull the trigger on this, but it'll devolve into a circus that could hand a Democrat, Hakeem Jeffries, the gavel.

The FISA reversal is one of Johnson's most disappointing developments. He was dead-set against it but got a briefing from the spooks and then reversed course—it doesn't get swampier than that. Taibbi also noted the correlating pieces in The New York Times that backed FISA, juxtaposing that with the "adults" piece, noting that it takes a special entitlement for one to call those with whom one disagrees children. However, one can make the case that Democrats make that argument with their silly positions, but he tied that to what he sees as this absurd notion of being an "adult" in the political world. To Taibbi, the adults in the room aren't revolting à la Johnson to the conservative wing of the GOP base; they're ingraining a new ethos of being against being on the public's side and being woefully unaware that this supposed special club has been at the forefront on truly horrific policy decisions (via [1]Racket News):

We're creating a class of "adults" who believe it's their patriotic duty to be above taking the public's side. A nominal liberal in the Bush or Obama years could feel safe objecting to an intrusive state on behalf of, say, a converted Muslim like Brandon Mayfield. Mayfield was a veteran who'd never been to Spain, but was arrested after a faulty FBI fingerprint match linked him to a Madrid train bombing. Federal snoops used FISA to sneak undetected into Mayfield's house and office repeatedly and take DNA swabs, nail clippings, and cigarette butts, even fiddle with his 12-year-old daughter's computer. "I became very paranoid that someone was going into my room," the girl said.

The concept of “adults in the room” assumed central importance in the Trump years. After his election, citizens were assumed to be incapable of correct choices, so no more looking at things from the vantage point of little girls’ bedrooms. Adults must be allowed to keep us safe. Who are the “adults in the room”? The numbers are probably like Orwell calculated in 1984, with a political establishment led by the 1 % (Orwell had it at 2 %, calling them the Inner Party) and administered by a nomenklatura of educated loyalists comprising a little over 10 % of the population (the “Outer Party”). The Inner and Outer Parties Orwell described as the brain and hands of the state, surrounded by childlike prole-deplorables who make up the remaining 85 % of the populace.

When James Mattis resigned as Trump’s Secretary of Defense six years ago, not-yet-Substacker Matt Yglesias seethed in Vox that this wasn’t the end for “adults in the room,” just the end of the myth that any ever existed. After all, “The only real grown-ups in American politics are in the Resistance,” and “the real grown-ups are the ones who’ve been outside the room trying to get him out of office.”

With Trump out, the dynamic is inverted: the only adults are those on the inside, working to keep the Beast out by any means necessary. The Times, CNN, the Washington Post (which slobbered over Johnson in a piece called “Mike Johnson showed courage and rose to history’s call on Ukraine”) and others just made it crystal clear that this dividing line is about sides and nothing else. While Russell Brand, RFK, Jimmy Dore, Dave Chappelle and countless others are pilloried as right-wing grifters, we’re defining as “adults in the room” everyone from Cheney to Michael Hayden to Bill Kristol to David Frum. The latter ten years ago invoked outrage from self-styled progressives everywhere with his amazing Orwellian defense of FISA...

America’s “adults in the room” have been on a remarkable streak in the last twenty-odd years of not being right about really anything at all, including what policies to avoid (e.g. disastrous Mideast wars or inequality-accelerating bailouts) if you want to keep the public from flocking to someone like Donald Trump. Saying “Transparency is Bad” and “Surveillance is Good” and expecting people to salute your adulthood is a particularly potent formula for losing audience, which these types unfortunately don’t tend to see as a problem...

...Why can't people just agree with us adults? Well, no matter if they don't. If they can get enough people like Johnson to turn, they can make disobedient blocs like the Freedom Caucus "irrelevant to the governance of the House of Representatives," as the Times put it today. That's the dream, isn't it? Making the right voters irrelevant? Isn't that what being "committed to democracy" means?

Forget the next speaker, Mike Johnson sucking, although he is, and the state of the 2024 race; it once again circles back to how there is a political class who hates us. Who has allies deep within the security state to ruin us, which ironically makes the case to produce more Donald Trump-like candidates? Voters, Left and Right, would likely want this system, this swamp, busted up, right? The problem is this side knows they can turn people on a dime and make them proper adults.

Details of the recent limited Israeli retaliatory strike against Iranian anti-aircraft missile batteries at Isfahan are still sketchy. Nonetheless, we can draw some conclusions.

Israel's small volley of missiles hit their intended targets, to the point of zeroing in on the very launchers designed to stop such incoming ordnance.

The target was near the Natanz enrichment facility. That proximity was by design. Israel showed Iran it could take out the very anti-missile battery designed to thwart an attack on its nearby nuclear facility.

The larger message sent to the world was that Israel could send a retaliatory barrage at Iranian nuclear sites with reasonable assurances that the incoming attacks could not be stopped. By comparison, Iran's earlier attack on Israel was much greater and more indiscriminate. It was also a huge flop, with an estimated 99 percent of the more than 320 drones, cruise missiles, and ballistic missiles failing to hit their planned targets.

Moreover, it was reported that more than 50 % of Iran's roughly 115-120 ballistic missiles failed at launch or malfunctioned in flight.

Collate these facts, and it presents a disturbing corrective to Iran's non-stop boasts of soon possessing a nuclear arsenal that will obliterate the Jewish state.

Consider further the following nightmarish scenarios: Were Iranian nuclear-tipped missiles ever launched at Israel, they could pass over, in addition to Syria and Iraq, either Saudi Arabia, Jordan, the West Bank, Gaza, or all four. In the cases of Jordan and Saudi Arabia, such trajectories would constitute an act of war, especially considering that some of Iran's recent aerial barrages were intercepted and destroyed over Arab territory well before they reached Israel.

Iran's strike prompted Arab nations, the U.S., the U.K., and France to work in concert to destroy almost all of Iran's drones. For Iran, that is a premonition of the sort of sophisticated aerial opposition it might face if it ever decided to stage a nuclear version.

Even if half of Iran's ballistic missiles did launch successfully, only a handful apparently neared their intended targets – in sharp contrast to Israel's successful attack on Iranian missile batteries. Is it thus conceivable that any Iranian-nuclear-tipped missile launched toward Israel might pose as great a threat to Iran itself or its neighbors as to Israel?

And even if such missiles made it into the air and even if they successfully traversed Arab airspace, there is still an overwhelming chance they would be neutralized before detonating above Israel.

Any such launch would warrant an immediate Israeli response. And the incoming bombs and missiles would likely have a 100 % certainty of evading Iran's countermeasures and hitting their targets.

Now that the soil of both Iran and Israel is no longer sacred and immune from attack, the mystique of the Iranian nuclear threat has dissipated.

It should be harder for the theocracy to shake down Western governments for hostage bribes, sanctions relief, and Iran-deal giveaways on the implied threat of Iran successfully nuking the Jewish state.

Advertisement

The new reality is that Iran has goaded an Israel that has numerous nuclear weapons and dozens of nuclear-tipped missiles in hardened silos and on submarines. Tehran has zero ability to stop any of these missiles or sophisticated fifth-generation Israeli aircraft armed with nuclear bombs and missiles.

Iran must now fear that if it launched two or three nuclear missiles, there would be overwhelming odds that they would either fail at launch, go awry in the air, implode inside Iran, be taken down over Arab territory by Israel's allies, or be knocked down by the tripartite Israel anti-missile defense system.

Add it all up, and the Iranian attack on Israel seems a historic blunder. It showed the world the impotence of an Iranian aerial assault at the very time it threatens to go nuclear. It revealed that an incompetent Iran may be as much a threat to itself as to its enemies. It opened up a new chapter in which its own soil, thanks to its attack on Israel, is no longer off limits to any Western power.

Its failure to stop a much smaller Israel response, coupled with the overwhelming success of Israel and its allies in stopping a much larger Iranian attack, reminds the Iranian autocracy that its shrill rhetoric is designed to mask its impotence and to hide its own vulnerabilities from its enemies.

Advertisement

And the long-suffering Iranian people?

The truth will come out that its own theocracy hit the Israeli homeland with negligible results and earned a successful, though merely demonstrative, Israeli response in return.

So Iranians will learn their homeland is now vulnerable and, for the future, no longer off limits.

And they will conclude that Israel has more effective allies than Iran and that their own ballistic missiles may be more suicidal than homicidal.

As a result, they may conclude that the real enemies of the Iranian nation are not the Jewish people of Israel after all, but their own unhinged Islamist theocrats.

1.4.21 Why insanity system in Dungeons and Dragons sucks (2024-04-27 23:47)

If a character's Sanity score drops to 0 or lower, she begins the quick slide into permanent insanity. Each round, the character loses another point of Sanity. Once a character's Sanity score is reduced to a point below zero equal to her Wisdom score, she is hopelessly, incurably insane

[1]Mechanics

Let's talk about madness and insanity in role-playing games. This is a pretty controversial topic, and to make sure I get this right, I've been in touch with my friends in the Mental Health field as well as some close friends who live with their own mental health conditions.

Some systems give purely mechanical detriments to make characters "insane." This is how the D &D 5e DMG does it on page 259-260. Congratulations, your character is now blind for 3 hours! However, the D &D system is built on powering up your character. This is epic fantasy. Some people like it when their characters suffer horrible mental trauma, and those people play Call of Cthulhu. So, my first problem with the way mental health conditions are included in the game is that it goes against the basic upwards flow of the system.

Additionally, the PHB and the DMG emphasize that people can play the game and role-play at whatever level they feel comfortable. Just want to hack some orcs? Good for you. Want to write a novella for your backstory? Go for it! But that leads us to another problem: in the DMG, the "indefinite madness" table manifests as a new flaw gained by your character. This means, if your character was just a simple hack-and-slasher, there's no consequence to the roll. This works against the idea that a player should be free to role-play at any level with a given mechanic.

However, I think both of these points are missing a bigger issue.

The symptoms of actual mental health conditions are often portrayed as the problem, but often they are a coping mechanism for a larger problem. The best example is OCD: Obsessive-Compulsive Disorder. It's not just "being a neat freak" or "liking things to be organized." It's because your brain is obsessing over something that makes you anxious and unable to focus on the rest of your life, and you begin to practice a repetitive activity (a compulsion) in order to calm down your brain.

Many mental health conditions are actually the brain doing its best to adapt to unusual situations. Hearing a voice that isn't yours in your head is unusual. Talking to yourself in your own voice and convincing yourself not to listen is the brain's way of adapting.

I do want to note that some people's minds deal with trauma differently, and I think that's beyond the scope of this post. I can't claim that these ideas apply to people with chronic mental health conditions.

So, instead of taking the usual route of "here's how your character is worse now that you're insane", I wanted to give the players an ability they'd want to use: a power of the mind, with a drawback.

Essentially, the character experienced something traumatic, unusual, horrifying, or mind-bending. But that doesn't really change who they are. The brain just has to take the time to adapt back to an understanding of reality. So, each ability listed below has a drawback (how the brain is adapting) and a time limit (how long it takes to heal).

But if we just gave people a drawback and a time limit, that's no different than what the DMG does. We want the player to accept the ability, because the character's brain would want to heal. So every ability has a benefit as well.

As these are temporary benefits, they won't affect the game too much, and the drawbacks are small enough that a character can continue their upwards growth while they work through the problems. This is also useful from a session planning perspective: if you're in a dungeon and you expect to get through about 4-5 hours of in-game time, what about the character who just rolled a long-term madness and is unconscious for 7 hours?

With all of that in mind, here are some of the abilities I've devised for how a PC might adjust their mind after a traumatic event.

Mental Reactions to Trauma

Circumspect:

- For the duration, you can never have disadvantage on an Intelligence-based ability check
- You cannot regain HP on a rest unless you spend at least an hour of the time away from your allies, talking through the events that lead to you gaining this ability. This becomes the only action you can take during a short rest if you are using hit dice to regain HP
- Ends after 30 days

Daydreamer:

- Once per day, you may automatically pass an Intelligence-based skill check
- Ends when you have used the ability 30 times
- For DM: roll 1d10 when the player uses this ability and modify the information they receive accordingly

d10 Roll Information

1-4 False information, that the PC would have no way of knowing

5-7 False information

8-9 Truthful information, that the PC would have no way of knowing

10 Truthful information

Destructive:

- While not in combat, you regain 1 HP whenever you permanently and intentionally destroy an object that is small or larger
- Whenever you regain HP with this ability, all non-hostile creatures within 30 feet (including other members of your party) must succeed on a Wisdom saving throw of 8 + your character level or be frightened for 1 minute. A creature can repeat this saving throw at the end of their turn to end the effect.

- Ends when you have healed 300HP from this ability

Distracted:

- Whenever you are targeted by an attack roll, roll 1d8+12. Treat the number rolled as your AC against that attack
- Ends when you have been hit by 30 attack rolls

Facade:

- For the duration, you have advantage on Charisma ability checks and saving throws made to influence hostile creatures or avoid effects from hostile creatures.
- For the duration, you have disadvantage on Charisma ability checks and saving throws made to influence indifferent or friendly creatures or avoid effects from indifferent or friendly creatures.
- Ends after you have made 10 Charisma saving throws with disadvantage

Hampered:

- For the duration, whenever you take damage, that damage is reduced by half. Any damage prevented this way must be tracked on your character sheet as Delayed Damage.
- At the end of a long rest, you may choose to take all your Delayed Damage as hit point damage. This damage cannot be reduced in any way. If you elect to not take your Delayed Damage, you must instead add an amount of damage to your Delayed Damage equal to your character level.
- If, at any point, your Delayed Damage reaches an amount equal to 10 x your character level, you take the damage immediately. The rules for instant death due to massive damage (PHB pg. 197) do not apply to this damage, and if you are reduced to 0 hit points in this way, you are unconscious but stable.
- Ends when you have taken 200 Delayed Damage.

Heartbroken:

- Choose a PC or NPC related to how you gained this ability.
- Whenever the PC/NPC is within your line of sight, you have disadvantage on all Intelligence, Wisdom, and Charisma ability checks and saving throws.
- Whenever the PC/NPC is out of sight, you have advantage on all Intelligence, Wisdom, and Charisma ability checks and saving throws.
- Ends when you have made 15 Wisdom saving throws with advantage (not necessarily due to this ability)

Hyper-Aware:

- Your passive perception score increases by 10

- Whenever you make an attack roll, whether ranged or melee, choose the target randomly among all available targets within the range of the attack
- Ends when you have made 50 attack rolls

Moody:

- Each day at dawn, roll 1d20:

d20 Roll Outcome

1-10 You gain disadvantage on all rolls made for the next 24 hours

11-20 You gain advantage on all rolls made for the next 24 hours

- Ends when advantage rolls equal disadvantage rolls, with a minimum of 3 days

Nervous:

- At the beginning of combat, make a Wisdom Saving Throw of 15
- On a success, take 20 on initiative
- On a failure, you are surprised for the first round of combat
- Ends after 30 initiative rolls

Obsessive:

- For the duration, you can never have disadvantage on a wisdom-based ability check
- You cannot regain HP on a rest unless you spend at least an hour of the time in quiet, methodical contemplation. This becomes the only action you can take during a short rest if you are using hit dice to regain HP
- Ends after 30 days

Phobic:

- Choose a creature or creature type, preferably one related to how you gained this ability
- Whenever you kill a creature of that type, you may spend hit dice to regain HP as if you had finished a short rest
- You have vulnerability to all damage dealt by those creatures
- Ends when you reach 100 points by the following system:

Creature CRPoints Gained

2 or less 1 point per kill of that creature type
3-8 2 points per kill of that creature type
9-13 5 points per kill of that creature type
14-17 10 points per kill of that creature type
18-23 25 points per kill of that creature type
24+ 50 points per kill of that creature type

Prescient:

- Once per day, you may receive a clue about a future event related to a person, location, or item
- Ends when you have used the ability 30 times
- For DM: roll 1d10 when the player uses this ability and modify the information they receive accordingly

d10 Roll Information

1-4 False clue, the event is against the party's goals
5-7 False clue, the event is beneficial to the party's goals
8-9 Truthful clue, reveal an irrelevant future event about the target
10 Truthful clue about a relevant future event

Rapport:

- As an action while you have this ability, you may touch an ally and heal them for an amount of HP no greater than your maximum HP - 1. When you do so, you take damage equal to the amount healed
- When an ally within 5 feet of you takes damage, make a Wisdom saving throw of 15. On a failure, you take that amount of damage instead
- Ends when you have taken 150 damage due to failing the Wisdom saving throw of this ability

Repressed:

- During a short rest, you may permanently remove a skill, weapon, language, or tool proficiency in order to fully heal your HP.
- Ends when you have used the ability 5 times

Restless:

- Choose a creature or creature type, preferably one related to how you gained this ability
- You have advantage on attack rolls made against those creatures

- If you fight a creature of that type, you cannot gain the benefits of a long rest for 24 hours. If you stop to rest for the night, you will only gain the benefits of a short rest
- Ends when you have missed 15 long rests due to this ability

Rude:

- You have advantage on intimidation and deception checks, but disadvantage on all other charisma checks and saving throws
- Ends when you have made 15 Charisma saving throws

Temperamental:

- When you make a Charisma-based Ability Check or Saving Throw, roll 1d6. On an even roll, treat your Charisma modifier as if it were that number. On an odd roll, treat your Charisma modifier as if it were that number, but negative. Your Proficiency bonus still applies normally to the roll if applicable.
- Ends when you have been forced to make 10 Charisma saving throws

Unease:

- Choose an environment or room type (e.g. arctic, swamp, close quarters, open field, etc), preferably one related to how you gained this ability
- Whenever you finish a combat in that environment and have at least 1 HP remaining, you may spend hit dice to regain HP as if you had finished a short rest
- You have vulnerability to all damage dealt to you in that environment
- Ends when you finish 30 combats in that environment, whether or not you gain the benefit from this ability

Modifying these abilities to fit your game might be necessary. For a game focused on dungeon crawling, 30 days or 15 long rests might be quite a while, whereas a wilderness travel game might find them too short.

I think the sweet spot is to let the player feel the effects of the ability for just a little longer than they might like. Reinforce the idea that this is something they are doing subconsciously, that it ends when it ends, not when they want it to.

I'm looking forward to trying these out in my sessions. Some of them are pretty cool mechanically, and I think my players will really take them to heart. That definitely wouldn't be the case if I was just using the purely negative effects in the DMG.

The museum wants me to play Dungeons and Dragons after I asked staff what they do for hobbies. I said what's better?....Nintendo or DnD or Magic the Gathering or pickups, or campers? Maybe they knew the insanity system in Dnd and commit me to the St. Peter state hospital. I collected the books. I find it weird that Dork Den never buys used DnD books and charges

$50 new on all of them. Then the dork den managers cooks the books on Magic the Gathering packs. I saw a $39 MtG pack off amazon priced at $139 at Dork Den. Lots of magic the gathering packs are over $100 here. At least they play commander compatible with star city games.

1.4.22 Why is anime special? Expert finally at bluray.com forums (2024-04-29 23:25)

Bluray.com forums saved my life. It gave me a purpose in the abyss! I reached 700 posts and am an expert. <https://forum.blu-ray.com/>

Why is anime special?

Part of that, I think, is because you're not watching someone act, so it's easier to identify with the animated character because part of your brain isn't always focused on "Oh, that's [fill in an actor's name here]".

Also, the animation is often more expressive because it uses anime-shorthand. Is a character acting childish? Suddenly they're presented as chibi. Are they steaming over something? Suddenly smoke is pouring out of their heads, or that ominous purple haze. You couldn't get away with this kind of thing in live-action. It would look silly. In anime, it's par-for-the-course.

And animated characters don't age, as humans do. No one is ever going to see Lum or Inuyasha with a bad face-lift, trying to look 25 years younger than they are.

In addition, things can be animated that simply can't be achieved with special effects, no matter how sophisticated they are. In a live-action film, if what we're seeing gets too far away from reality, it gives away the game and you think "oh, it's special effects. Yawn." In anime, nothing is real, so nothing stands out as less real than anything else - ironically, making things easier to accept as a viewer.

You can also portray things in anime that, because we're always aware that it's not real, you couldn't get away with in a live-action film. The scene with Riko's arm in Made In Abyss, for example, would be too intense for live-action - and can you imagine a live action Strike Witches? No, no, no. Don't even try.

Finally, there's the sheer artistry of the images put before us that (when they're at their best) beat anything a live-action film can offer. Just imagine a live-action Monogatari ... I sure can't. The art is an integral part of watching anime, and our appreciation of the artwork is part of the overall aesthetic appeal, quite different than the appreciation of the cinematography of a live-action film.

I feel Anime in the 70's-80's with a 50/50 hit and miss from 90-94ish was special...mostly everything that has been pumped out since sucks...I think the version of Anime they have today along with stuff like Pokemon is more geared towards people who are not that great at drawing so they put out extremely easy to draw art with over simplified structures so that it's more inclusive for a less creatively inclined youth...current anime (at least what i've seen advertised since the late 90's and on) seems extremely sex filled and fetish driven. I personally much prefer Unico, Akira, Blue Force, and Ghost in the Shell style artwork. New stuff like say Avatar (not James Cameron) is excellent so the genre isn't a complete waste but man oh man is the anime landscape a stark desert of craptacular pencil work.

Japan for decades has been showing what animation is truly capable of and how certain things work because they're animated. Interestingly, they did at first view animation similarly to the west where it was seen as something for children, but then things changed (From the booklet included with the first Patlabor movie DVD LE.). Granted, Japanese animation has its own limitations (Ex: Adult casts are rare, high school is a very common setting), but it's not as limited in scope as what is done in the west, especially theatrically (Ex: Kids CGI movies is all you get in theaters most of the time, we lost the option of 2D in the 2000s, which is a shame)

There's also of course the crazy and interesting plots and characters in stuff, the tropes, as well as the infusion of Japanese culture in lots of works.

1.5.1 Another Ivy League Says They're Suspending Pro-Hamas Students (2024-05-01 13:49)

Columbia University [1]threatened and has [2]now gone through with suspending pro-Hamas student agitators setting up encampments on campus. A statement from Cornell University President Martha E. Pollack on Monday signaled that they too will go through with suspending students, [3]as CNN highlighted as part of their live updates.

The statement was merely titled "[4]Update on campus events," and never goes into the specifics of what those "campus events" of pro-Hamas encampments entail. The Israel-Hamas conflict that began after Hamas perpetrated a terrorist attack against our ally in the Middle East is never mentioned at all.

What the statement does mention is how those facing trouble did not have to let the trouble get this far:

It is important that everyone knows the details about what has been happening here at Cornell. Last Thursday, a group of individuals formed an encampment on the Arts Quad. A student group had previously requested permission for an art installation there, consistent with our policies; however, they were dishonest in their request, stating that there would not be tents and that the art installation would be removed by 8 p.m. on Thursday.

Upon learning of the encampment very early Thursday morning, my leadership team immediately offered an alternative location between Day Hall and Sage Chapel, which would have been significantly less disruptive. With an approved permit in hand, the protesters could have remained in the alternative location, per our policies, thereby avoiding disciplinary sanctions. The individuals requested and received multiple opportunities, over a five-hour span, to consider their options, but ultimately decided not to move. They were then reminded several additional times that afternoon and evening that if the tents were not taken down, they would be subject to disciplinary action for violating the university's time, place, and manner rules. With full knowledge of the sanctions to come, they again refused to comply, and we moved forward with a first set of immediate temporary suspensions.

We met with a group of the student participants on Saturday and again on Sunday, discussing the encampment and again offering them the opportunity to move to the alternate location. They declined. Therefore, more temporary suspensions, along with HR referrals for employees engaged with the encampment, are forthcoming.

The terrorist sympathizers could have continued on with their pro-Hamas, anti-Israel demonstrations elsewhere on campus and were given multiple chances to do so. They refused, though.

There was also a statement with such a warning issued on Saturday, from Joel M. Malina, the vice president for university relations, about an "[5]Update on unauthorized encampment on the Arts Quad."

Such a statement began with a focus on free speech. "Free expression is a core value of our university, and the right to peacefully protest on our campus has a deep and respected history," read the first sentence. The statement did close, however, by addressing just what it is that these agitators support:

"We are also deeply distressed by chants made at some of the rallies near the encampment, particularly the phrase, "There is only one solution: Intifada Revolution." The protesting group has repeatedly stated that their protest is political and not antisemitic, but these chants belie that claim. We implore all Cornellians to consider the impact of their words as well as their intentions as we navigate the immense pain and suffering that many are experiencing.

Local news outlet [6]WENY reported that four students were suspended over the encampment on April 26, including PhD student Momodou Taal who has lamented that pro-Hamas agitators on campus have had their visa status threatened. "They have deliberately targeted students with precarious positions such as visa status," he whined, even though he notes he was given "a grace period."

His post also contained telling language about the university, such as how "It is clear that they are more concerned with appeasing their Zionist donors and keeping their hands drenched in blood than over the expressed refusal of their students and workers."

Cornell University has temporary suspended me alongside 3 other students/grad workers. They have deliberately targeted students with precarious positions such as visa status. They have given me a grace period but I am no longer permitted on campus. I know they have done this as a...— Momodou ☐☐ (@MomodouTaal) [7]April 26, 2024

Cornell has recently made headlines in other ways over such concerning protests. Recall that Cornell Professor Russell Rickford [8]shouted over a megaphone that he found the October 7 attack to be "exhilarating" and "energizing." This took place days after that attack resulted in 1,200 Israelis killed through unspeakable means, including babies and Holocaust survivors. Victims were also tortured, raped, and taken hostage, with many still in captivity.

Rickford was placed on leave, but the New York Post [9]reported on Monday that he was back on campus last Thursday to encourage the agitators. "The liberated territory is a concept. The liberated territory is in your head," [10]he was quoted as saying at a rally by the Cornell Daily Sun. "Anytime you are ready, you can become a resident, an inhabitant, a member of the occupied territory, of the forces of liberation."

Advertisement

"The university did not comment further on Rickford's presence on campus or if it violated any rules," the report mentioned.

1.5.2 Joe Biden's Plot to Halt Innovation (2024-05-01 13:50)

America has long been known as the home of innovation. Many of the most successful companies the world has ever seen were born here. In the modern era, the seven largest technology companies in the world were all founded in America. America is a beacon of entrepreneurship – whether the desires of the hopeful entrepreneur are to establish and maintain a profitable small business, or to create a multinational juggernaut, all of this and more is possible in the United States – or at least it used to be.

Joe Biden just declared war on our nation's great entrepreneurial spirit.

His 2025 budget calls for hiking the top capital gains rate from 28 percent to 44.6 percent. As Americans for Tax Reform laid [1]out, "The proposed Biden top capital gains tax rate is more than twice as high as China's rate. China's capital gains tax rate is 20 %." Do we really want to be a nation with a higher capital gains tax rate than China?

Many were left scratching their heads after this proposal was revealed, especially given that research shows that increasing the capital gains tax destroys innovation and the reverse is also true. A 2019 [2]study found that reducing the capital gains tax significantly increased "the amount of investment in start-up firms." Economist Allen Sinai [3]found that "capital gains tax reduction increases savings, capital spending and capital formation, economic growth, jobs, productivity and potential output." If reductions in the capital gains tax rates have proven to increase the growth of the economy, why would Biden seek to do the opposite?

Our economy follows incentive structures. If you disincentivize growth, you can expect a slowdown. If you minimize the taxation penalties for those looking to invest in our economy, you can expect growth as a result.

Capital gains taxes are a form of double taxation (and you could even argue they're a form of triple taxation). You've already paid income tax before you've made your investment. Then there is a built-in inflation tax when you sell your investment off years down the road. Taxing the gains made on an investment creates yet another hurdle that investors have to put up with

Let's say you invested $10,000 in company X in 1994 and you sell your shares for $30,000 today for a return of $20,000. Well, the dollar has sharply depreciated since 1994. In fact, the value of a dollar has halved in the past 30 years.

So, your return is effectively only $10,000, and yet Joe Biden wants to take 44 percent of the $20,000 realized profit. Many are beginning to ask themselves, why should I take the risk to invest in that environment?

A higher capital gains tax will mean fewer investors. Fewer investors will mean less innovation and fewer great American companies.

Biden and his allies justify this tax increase as a way to reduce wealth inequality, but his own administration notes that there is actually a deeper racial motivation to the proposal.

The Biden Treasury Department [4]wrote that the current capital gains tax rate "disproportionately benefit[s] White taxpayers, who receive the overwhelming majority of the benefits of the reduced rates."

Racial resentment as a guiding principle for tax policy is not a recipe for success and utilizing the economy as a weapon to enforce your social goals is a dangerous game.

Given Biden's stated goal is to politicize the tax structure in order to punish those who he believes are a threat to his power, it should come as no surprise that there's an even crazier tax proposal hidden in this budget plan. The Biden administration also [5]wants to tax "unrealized gains." Taxing unrealized capital gains means you penalize individuals for momentarily successful investments regardless of if they'd sold them or not. In other words, Americans would owe taxes on earnings they haven't actually received yet as realized income.

Biden will defend himself by noting that his proposed 25 percent tax on unrealized gains will only be [6]imposed on individuals with more than $100 million in assets, but the problem is

- with policies like these, why would anyone desire to accumulate that level of wealth any longer in this proposed environment?

If Joe Biden's policies are enacted, expect American billionaires to flee and our economy to suffer, as not only will we lose Elon Musk, Jeff Bezos, Mark Zuckerberg, Larry Page, Larry Ellison, and many more, but importantly we'll lose the great entrepreneurs of the future.

Brave business owners risk everything with the hopes that they will be able to reap the rewards of their risk as they increasingly provide value to their customers. Joe Biden wants to eradicate the chances that they'll ever be able to.

As Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan [7] noted in 1997 "while all taxes impede economic growth to one extent or another, the capital gains tax is at the far end of the scale."

A serious nation would promote entrepreneurship, innovation, and growth at all costs. The Biden administration has made it abundantly clear he has no such desire. We as citizens of this great country can only hope that Biden is out of office so his goals are never realized.

1.5.3 The (Communist) Nerds Are the Bad Guys in This Movie (2024-05-05 23:35)

For those of us who came of age in the greatest of decades, the 80s, it's a bitter pill to swallow to realize that we have been sold the lie by movies like "Revenge of the Nerds" that frat boys are the eternal bad guys. On college campuses today, the nerds are the bad guys, a communist collection of weirdos, losers, and mutations of heft who cry about Palestine, whine that the cops are mean to them for breaking the law and scream that they are being literally murdered by people who won't honor their myriad food allergies. The 80s nerds were courageous rebels. Today's nerds are pathetic conformists – they all look the same, they all sound the same, and they all smell the same. They're not amusing nerds like Pointdexter and Booger. They don't [1]rock out like the ROTN nerds. These are garbage nerds, spoiled commies with stupid masks, stupid piercings, and stupid hair.

Today, the heroes fighting back on campuses are labeled frat boys, whether they're in fraternities or not, but what they really are is a bunch of normal dudes. It's obvious at first glance. They are mostly (but not all) straight white males, in shape, well-dressed, and free of stupid masks, stupid piercings, and stupid hair. They guzzle Coors Light instead of gulping SSRIs. They protect the Old Glory and proudly wave it. And they mock the pinko losers.

They don't give a damn about the gentle feelz of the commie nerds. They're rough and insensitive, cruel and hilarious. When a gigantic commie waddled up and waved her chubby finger at them, they chanted "Lizzo" and worse. It was hilarious and cathartic. It was liberating. Sure, some of it was obnoxious. Some of it was in bad taste. Some of it got called racist, but here's the thing – these white boys are going to get called racist no matter what. They have been all their lives, so I doubt they care about one more epithet.

America's normal young men are fed up. They're done. They grew up in educational institutions dominated by communist females who despised them. They were always hated because of the race of the majority of them – this pushback by normal guys is multiethnic – and they were always hated because of their gender and unapologetic devotion to cisgenderism. They are told they are the problem and their oppression the solution. Their mere existence is claimed to be proof of a devotion to "white supremacy." Their heritage is proof of their moral bankruptcy, an original sin that they can never scrub away. They are the oppressors, even though there's no one more oppressed on a college campus than a frat boy, targeted by an administration that hates him, subjected to a double-track justice system that nukes him if he's caught sneaking a Dos Equis, but that kisses the collective booty – the enormous booty – of the communist terror fans who take over chunks of the campuses. The normal guys are the designated villains, by the left and Hollywood too, and the rest of us are supposed to hate them.

But they're not hated now. They're loved. They're loved by normal people everywhere because they're the ones fighting back. They refuse to cede the moral high ground to these pretentious jerks. They have nothing but contempt for the leftist ruling class, and they have nothing to lose. For their entire lives, they've been told that they are the heavies in our cultural script, and they are sick of it. They're done. Finished. This is only the start of the pushback.

The pushback is going to be impolite. It's going to be mean. It's going to lack decorum. But hey, aren't those the new rules, you Hamas-kissing psychopaths? As I've said many times before, be careful about the new rules you enact. The communists wanted to put a new rule into effect that says you can be openly hated because of your race and despised because of your immutable characteristics. They wanted a new rule that allowed the brutal exercise of power against their opponents. Well, welcome to the new rules. I hope they hurt going in hard.

The [2]statistics tell the story – young men are sick of this crap and are turning right. Some of them have checked out of society, retreating into a haze of pot smoke and the glare of video games as an escape from an adulthood where they see the deck stacked against them. If this is privilege, you can have it. The only privilege they have is to pay taxes, die in stupid wars, and take crap from fugly commie mediocrities. But others are fighting back. And it's glorious.

It's toxic masculinity unbound, and the more toxic the better. Women dominate the current Kampus for Krusade Kommunist, as leftist activism is in large part a reaction by unattractive women to the fact normal men don't want them. Their pinko male comrades are pretty much indistinguishable from the female-identifying ones. These campus trolls embody the radical version of the feminist vibe one experiences in most of the institutions in American society. Our educational institutions are feminized from kindergarten to grad school. Boys are wild and rambunctious and have a lot of energy, yet we see teachers suppressing them, shaming them, demanding they sit still, and eliminating recess and PE – things boys need and thrive in. They are bombarded with weird gender creepiness by the lefty wine women teaching them. There are few masculine role models left in the schools. The kind of ex-Marine shop teacher and the PE instructor who stormed ashore at Guadalcanal that we boomer/Gen Xers grew up with are gone. The male instructors today are anything but traditional – again, you've got the stupid masks, stupid piercings, and stupid hair problem. You can't teach boys to be men if you aren't a man yourself. And that's just the ones who aren't outright perverts

No, these boys grew up in a milieu that women created and dominate, and this is an overdue male rebellion. They're saying "No," and they're saying it loudly and laced with profanity. In campus videos of the confrontations, you can see the communists don't know how to react to these young men. They've never had anyone get in their faces before. They've never had anyone tell them that they're useless, that they're trash, that they're worthless – all of which is true. But the frat boys have had that happen to them all their lives – and it was a lie.

They're not the bad guys. The paradigm of the 80s movies has changed. Those nerds were just cool people trying to get along. Today's nerds are trying to help the people who want to kill all the Jews in Israel. That's not cute, and that's not funny. Thank goodness the frat boys know their enemies and thank goodness their masculinity hasn't been so suppressed that they have forgotten their instinctive desire to destroy their foes. That is what men do. The communist trash people better hope that this remains on the level of shouting insults across the lines of cops. The stinky campus commies of 2024 won't stand a chance when today's [3]Ogres sound their war cry, "Nerds!"

1.5.4 Thank God for Straight White Men (2024-05-05 23:39)

That headline is highly unfashionable and will not get me any job offers to be president of any university, but it's true – straight, white men kick ass. It doesn't hurt that I'm one of them, and it is incomplete to think ONLY people like me kick ass, we awesome people come in every flavor. But no group of people has been more demonized by the left than the people who, if we're being honest, have done more for our species than any other.

It's probably a hate crime at any of those “martyrs camps” on campuses to point that out, just as it's probably a hate crime to point out just how much of the good things in life people enjoy – technology, medicine, clothes, various delicious foods – were the fruits of evil whitey's colonization and work. True story, look it up.

That's the reason no one on the left, while screaming bloody murder about some Kardashian sister braiding their hair being “CULTURAL APPROPRIATOR,” never bothers to hate the “colonizers” who invented antibiotics or the awful privileged monsters who created the cell phones they're using to inform the world of just how oppressed they are as they wait in line at Starbucks to pay $10 for a cup of flavored warm water.

If you play stupid games, you win stupid prizes.

Instead, these entitled mutants run around college campuses while personifying the best argument possible for abortion as soon as ultrasound technology can be coupled with the ability to see what their baby will turn out to be. I know, that's a horrible joke, but that's only if you think it's a joke.

Those people are terrible. Anyone removing an American flag to fly that of a terrorist state isn't worthy of American citizenship. If they were born that way there isn't much that can be done, but if they weren't or aren't, measures should be taken to make it clear they are invited to leave.

Our fences and walls are not meant to keep people in, they are meant to keep people out, despite the way our mentally underdeveloped President sees it. Go the f*ck out, you will not be missed.

At this point, I can't imagine how any of their parents would miss them.

Thank God for straight white men. As these idiots parade around the country, claiming to be victims, it was a bunch of fraternity brothers who rallied to protect the flag. First time was a UNC, then it spread like wildfire. Now groups of normal people, men and women of all different configurations, are stepping up to tell these post-digested food exit ports what they can do with their demands and terrorist sympathies.

For many, it's probably the first time they've ever heard anyone tell them "No," or where it is they can go, blow it out, or do before dying. They'll call it "bullying" because they're weak, spoiled little brats, but the average 7-year-old would learn from it that what they're doing isn't good and would investigate as to why.

These demand-heavy boobs, unburdened by intelligence or self-awareness, have likely spent their lives to this point getting what they want (aside from being smart, attractive, fun to be around, not smell like feel or not look like a justification for a burqa and a ball gag). But the pendulum has swung as far to the left as it's going to, now is the time for snap-back.

It's not going to be fun for them, but it will be good, provided they are capable of learning the lessons from it. If they can't, screw them. In fact, if they can't, that's about as close to getting screwed as they're likely to get, which is probably why so many of them are such miserable douches in the first place. The rest just come by their miserable douchiness naturally.

Whatever the case, and should any of them ever pull their lives together and become productive, happy members of society, they will have a whole host of people to thank for it. All those people, and the many more to come, who have and will stand up to them, tell them no, tell them off, and hold up a big, metaphorical mirror to them so one day they might realize what little disgraces to the human species they are. Imagine a few years down the road, once their brains start fully working and they get some actual experience in life – the point after you realize you do not, in fact, know everything – when they realize what they wasted a good chunk of their youth on; what they were actually fighting for and against.

What a horrible moment it will be to realize that you were the Nazi, that you called for the extermination of the Jews simply because some terrorists propagandized you into embracing your stupid; for some likes on social media. How do you live with yourself?

If that ever happens to any of them, they will likely embrace the furniture, the style of government, all the creature comforts afforded them as humans by those evil, colonizing white men they so desperately hated when they were younger. Back when, in the name of enlightenment, they embraced the philosophies and tactics of likes of Hitler, Lenin and Stalin. All white colonizers...

Wait, you mean they're...yep. These people are that stupid.

So, keep defending the flag, straight white men, it has not gone unnoticed or unappreciated. At a certain point, when Democratic Party politicians refuse to do their jobs to restore order, normal people will step up and do it for them, then toss their asses out of office. You guys defending the flag are the tip of that spear. And wouldn't you know it, the spear is another thing [1]invented by evil whitey.

None of this matters, of course, I point it out to illustrate the absurdity of the left. I do, however, hope to at least see videos of these people when they do realize what they were when they were young, and how they wasted much of their lives. Not just to say "I told you so," but to...ok, it's just to say that. Screw them all.

It is no secret that far left Democratic Rep. Adam Schiff uses sleazy tactics to go after his political opponents. While most members of Congress usually skate on ethics charges, or receive light penalties, once in a great while their behavior is so overtly criminal that they end up prosecuted. Although Democrats are far more likely to use lawfare against Republicans than vice versa, when the behavior is so criminal, even Democrats — such as New Jersey Sen. Bob Menendez who is being prosecuted for bribery — can't escape justice.

Schiff is getting dangerously close to this stage. When he became chair of the House Intelligence Committee in 2019, he made it a personal mission to investigate Donald Trump's supposed connections to Russia, completely separate from and in addition to Special Counsel Robert Mueller's investigation.

When Mueller concluded there was no collusion between Trump and Russia, Schiff dismissively blew off the exoneration, hinting that he would continue his own investigation. "[T]here may be, for example, evidence of collusion or conspiracy that is clear and convincing, but not proof beyond a reasonable doubt," he [1]said during an interview in February 2019.

The nine Republican members of the House Intelligence Committee called for Schiff to resign in March 2019 due to his false claims of collusion. The Center for Renewing America sent a [2]letter to the Office of Congressional Ethics in June 2023, outlining Schiff's improper actions, including his attempts to get X to censure unfavorable posts and claiming the Hunter Biden collusion in Ukraine was a product of Russian disinformation. The letter asked for discipline up to expulsion.

That same month, the House of Representatives [3]censured Schiff over the Russia collusion hoax. They listed specific instances of wrongdoing. First, they cited his memo that falsely claimed that the warrant application for the FISA wiretap of Trump associate Carter Page was accurate. The application was "later found by Inspector General Horowitz to have 17 major mistakes and omissions, provoking FISA Court Presiding Judge Rosemary Collyer to state unequivocally that the Federal Bureau of Investigation 'misled the FISC,'" the censure said.

Next, the censure accused Schiff of "publicly, falsely denying that his staff communicated with a whistleblower to launch the first impeachment of President Trump." Finally, the censure stated that "Schiff misled the public by reading a false retelling of a phone call between President Trump and Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelensky."

Now it's come out that Schiff [4]paid the daughter of the judge handling New York DA Alvin Bragg's prosecution of Trump $4 million to push the Russia collusion hoax. Loren Merchan's hatred of Trump is so extreme that she used a photo of Trump [5]behind bars as her profile picture on X. She runs a digital marketing agency that works with Democrats and progressive groups.

Yet New York Judge Juan Merchan's gag order against Trump prohibits him talking about his daughter. Merchan has not slapped a gag order on the prosecution or their witnesses, so Trump's turncoat former attorney Michael Cohen has been blabbing endlessly about him, posting rants about the trial on TikTok every evening.

I would predict that any guilty verdict will be overturned based on this obvious bias by the judge, but after former Trump associate Hope Hicks surprised the politically motivated prosecutors by exonerating Trump last week, there is unlikely to be a conviction. Hicks said the money allegedly paid to porn star and [6]liar Stormy Daniels was to protect Trump's wife Melania, not to protect the campaign. The crux of the case against Trump is that it was an illegal campaign contribution.

An ethics complaint was [7]filed against Schiff recently, alleging election fraud and mortgage fraud. Schiff is running for the U.S. Senate in California, but has been living in Maryland while voting in California. Former Oklahoma Rep. Steve Watkins was [8]prosecuted for allegedly voting in the wrong Topeka City Council race after listing a UPS Store as his voting address.

While running for the U.S. Senate, Schiff has brazenly engaged in sleazy tactics. He spent $10 million promoting his Republican opponent during the primary. Since California uses “top 2” voting, which means the top two vote getters in the primary move on to the general, he wanted to ensure that Republican Steve Garvey ended up with the second most votes instead of his two Democratic challengers. On the campaign trail, Schiff [9]brags about his political persecution of Trump as a campaign platform.

Schiff isn’t a principled leftist. In the late 1990s, he [10]sponsored bills in the California Legislature which would have made it a felony to hire an illegal immigrant, and to allow minors 14 or older accused of serious crimes to be tried as adults.

If the roles were reversed, and Schiff had engaged in this corruption as a Republican, aggressive progressive DAs [11]put in their positions by left-wing billionaire George Soros would have begun multiple prosecutions. His law license is safe, however, since it has been [12]inactive since 2001.

Hinting at guilt, Schiff [13]admitted he feared that a Trump administration might prosecute him. Trump has said that Schiff and other members of the January 6th committee, whom he labeled as corrupt, should face prosecution and imprisonment.

Schiff wants the prosecutions against Trump to occur quickly, obviously in order to influence the voters. He complained about Trump’s immunity claim, “The claim is borderline frivolous ... they’re drawing it out just enough to make it almost infeasible to try [the cases] before the election,” he [14]said. “It’s still possible to get it done. And I think voters deserve to have that information.”

Will anything be done to Schiff other than the House censure, which is meaningless in practical terms? Maybe eventually. He shows no sign of slowing down the corruption. He’s gotten so brazen about it, since no one has intervened to stop him, that he may finally engage in criminal activity so outrageous that even compromised judges draw the line.

1.5.6 wanted to renounce American citizenship and move to British commonwealth (Australia). (2024-05-09 16:10)

Before, I said I wanted to move to a British commonwealth country like New Zealand or Australia or Canada. I am closer to pick Australia, because of Canadian weather. I watched Brisbane, Sydney and Melbourne nightclubs and night life videos on youtube. Then I started watching the Australian Broadcast Channel news on youtube back in Wisconsin and continued in Minnesota. Australian cities don't look like the public domain disasters like Los Angeles, San Francisco, San Diego, and Vancouver (British Columbia), New York City, Chicago, with the druggies and fentanyl, garbage, poop in the streets. Druggies half dressed and bent over walking.

These thoughts started when I played Diablo 2 Lord of Destruction on battlenet in 2001. I noticed my cousin David Hartmon would come over less often. Then in 2004, I was playing Neverwinter Nights and Guild Wars online multiplayer. Those are massive multiplayer role playing games. I had it right in 2001-2004 over 56k. David Hartmon joined the US navy in 2003 and never left. He fixes helicopter engines. I had nobody for pillow forts, no Nickelodeon or Cartoon Network partner. He was also a NES, Genesis, SNES, Nintendo 64, Saturn, Dreamcast, PS2, and Gamecube multiplayer partner. In 2010, I had like Uli Winzer, but he only came over 10 times and we eventually went to Como zoo and Mall of America in the 2010s. In the 2020s neither family members visit. In 2024, I met Mason, but he never visits. Mason is 23. I met Mason at Walgreens. He likes Switch and Xbox One. He played all the first person shooters and horror games. I played Goldeneye and Perfect Dark on N64 and Unreal Tournament, Unreal, Quake 2, Duke Nukem 3D, Doom and Quake 3 on pc with David Hartmon. Latter, it was Unreal Tournament 2004 and Unreal Tournament 3, and Diablo 2 with David Hartmon. Yes, even the Pierce county fair visits with David Hartmon and Uli Winzer.

I would always want a girlfriend in Australia. The women in the current soft guy era in Minnesota and Wisconsin never paid attention to me. In the previous era, I was in the River Falls, Wisconsin bars from the the 2000s and 2010s and nobody invited me to tables or was a true partner. I was in bars with Randy Peterson (boy scout troop 161) in the 2000s and 2010s. Minnesotans are really mean. Minnesota nice doesn't exist. I bet Australians or Canadian are really nice group to know for relationships. Those countries don't have American public debt. 40 trillion and the social chaos on the brink of American Civil War 2. It's gross!

I went to Rasmussen University for a 4 year college degree over 8 years, but no student became my friend. This tutor called Brian Sager at the learning center who also was school staff who sometimes talked to me, but was my closest college friend. I thought I had friends in college, but they all disappeared and apparently not good honest people except Brian Sager is still my facebook friend . Brian likes horror movies and wrestling. Brian Sager said he'd meet me if I trade him Earthbound for super nintendo for money. I brought a generic copy of Earthbound to his meeting place/swap meet, but never could find him there. That's bad and made me mad!

1.5.7 10 Most Common Pro-Hamas Lies About Israel (2024-05-13 17:38)

Scan news accounts of anti-Israel campus and street protesters. Read their demands and manifestos. Collate the confusion from the Biden administration after Hamas' Oct. 7 terrorism in Israel.

Here are 10 of their most common untruths about Oct. 7 and the Israel-Hamas war that followed.

‘Progressive Hamas’

Gay and transgender student protesters in America would be in mortal danger in Gaza under a fascistic Hamas, a terrorist organization that has banned homosexual acts and lifestyles. Anyone protesting publicly against Hamas or its allies would be arrested and severely punished.

Women are segregated in most Hamas-run educational institutions. Under the Hamas charter, women are valued mostly as child-bearers. By design, there are almost no women in high positions in business or in government under Hamas.

‘Colonists and Settlers’

Students scream that Israelis are “settlers” and “colonists” and sometimes yell at Jewish students to “go back to Poland.”

But the Jewish presence in present-day Israel is deeply rooted in ancient tradition. Dating back at least three millennia, the concept of “Israel” as a distinct Jewish state, situated roughly in its current location, is ingrained in history.

By contrast, the much later Arab invasions of the Byzantine-controlled Levant and their arrival in Palestine occurred about 1,800 years after the establishment of a Jewish Israel.

‘Two-State Solution’

When student protesters scream “From the river to the sea,” that is not advocacy for a two-state solution.

It is a call to eliminate the state of Israel—lying between the Jordan River and the Mediterranean Sea—and its 10 million Jewish and Arab citizens. The Hamas charter is a one-state/no-Israel agenda, which we saw attempted on Oct. 7.

‘Occupied Gaza’

The Gaza Strip, adjacent Israel, was autonomous. The Israeli border is closed, but so is the Egyptian border. There have not been any Jews in Gaza for nearly two decades.

So on Oct. 7, Gaza was not occupied by Israel. It was under the control of Hamas, designated by the U.S. government as a terrorist organization.

After being elected to power in 2006, Hamas canceled all subsequent elections and ruled as a dictatorship. Gaza forbids Jews from entering Gaza and has driven out most Christians.

Israel hosts 2 million Arabs, both as Israeli citizens and residents.

‘Netanyahu Is the Problem’

The U.S. and Europe claim that the conservative government of Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu is alone behind Israel’s tough response in Gaza to the Oct. 7 attacks. Thus, both the EU and the U.S. are doing their best to undermine or even overthrow the elected Netanyahu administration.

Yet, most Israelis support Netanyahu’s coalition government’s agenda of destroying Hamas in Gaza.

There is no evidence that any other alternative Israeli government would do anything differently from the present policies toward Hamas.

‘Targeting Civilians’

After murdering nearly 1,200 Israelis on Oct. 7, Hamas scurried back to Gaza and hid in tunnels and bases beneath hospitals, schools, and mosques.

Its preplanned strategy was to survive by ensuring Gaza civilians would be killed. Hamas has indiscriminately launched more than 7,000 rockets at Israel, all designed to kill Jewish civilians.

Outside assessors have concluded that Israel has not inadvertently killed a greater ratio of civilians to terrorists compared to most other urban fighting conflicts elsewhere, and perhaps even fewer than American engagements in Mosul and Fallujah.

‘Protesters Are Pro-Palestine’

Increasingly, protesters make no distinction between supporting “Palestine” and Hamas.

Their chants often echo the original Hamas eliminationist charter and recent genocidal ravings of its leadership.

Some protesters wear Hamas logos and wave the terrorist organization’s flag. Many cheered the Hamas massacre of Oct. 7.

‘Anti-Israel Is Not Antisemitic’

When protesters scream to Jewish students to “go back to Poland” or call for the “Final Solution,” or assault them or bar them from campus facilities, they do not ask the Jewish students whether they are pro-Israel.

For protesters, anyone identifiable as Jewish becomes a target of their antisemitic invective and violence.

‘Genocide’

Israel has not tried to wipe out the Palestinian people in the fashion of Hamas’ one-state solution plan for Jews.

Before Oct. 7, some 20,000 Gazans a day requested to work in Israel—on the correct expectation of much higher wages and humane treatment.

If Hamas had come out of its tunnels, separated from its impressed civilian shields, released its surviving Israeli hostages, and either openly fought the Israel Defense Forces or surrendered the organizers of the Oct. 7 massacre, no Gaza civilians would have died.

According to Hamas’ questionable “genocide” figures, roughly 4 % of the Gazan population died during the Israeli military response to Oct. 7. At least a third to almost half of those deaths, according to various international observers, were Hamas terrorists.

‘Disproportionate Response’

Iran tried to send 320 missiles and rockets into Israel. Israel replied with three.

Hamas launched 7,000 rockets into Israel and slaughtered 1,200 Israelis before the Israel Defense Forces responded in Gaza, often dropping leaflets and sending texts to forewarn citizens.

Israel has been disproportionate only in the effectiveness of its response. Hamas and its Iranian benefactor intended disproportionately to hurt Israel, but utterly failed.

So Israel proved to be competent and Hamas incompetent in their similar efforts to use disproportionate force.

1.5.8 Can the Current Universities Be Saved? Should They Be? (2024-05-13 17:39)

Elite [1]higher education in America—long unquestioned as globally preeminent—is facing a perfect storm.

Fewer applicants, higher costs, impoverished students, collapsing standards, and increasingly politicized and mediocre faculty reflect a collapse of the [2]university system.

The country is waking up to the reality that a bachelor's degree no longer equates with graduates being broadly educated and analytical. Just as often, they are stereotyped as pampered, largely ignorant, and gratuitously opinionated.

No wonder polls show a drastic loss of public respect for higher education and, specifically, a growing lack of confidence in the professoriate.

Each year, there are far fewer students entering college. Despite a U.S. population 40 million larger than 20 years ago, fertility rates have fallen in two decades by some 500,000 births per year.

Meanwhile, from 1980 to 2020, room, board, and tuition increased by 170 %.

Skyrocketing costs cannot be explained by [3]inflation alone, given that campuses have lightened faculty teaching loads while expanding administrative staff. At Stanford, there is nearly one staffer or administrative position for every student on campus.

At the same time, to vie for a shrinking number of [4]students, colleges began offering costly in loco parentis counseling, Club Med-style dorms and accommodations, and extracurricular activities.

As applicants grew scarcer and expenses went up, universities began offering “full service” student-aid packages, heavily reliant on government-subsidized student loans. The collective [5]indebtedness of more than 40 million student borrowers is nearing $2 trillion.

Worse still, an entire new array of therapeutic majors and minors appeared in the social sciences. Most of these gender/race/environmental courses did not emphasize analytical, mathematical, or oral and written skills. Such coursework did not impress employers.

Faculty hiring had become increasingly non-meritocratic based on diversity-equity-inclusion criteria. New faculty hires have sought to institutionalize self-serving DEI and recalibrate higher education to prepare a new generation for self-perpetuating radical ideologies.

At the more elite campuses, racial quotas vastly curtailed the number of Asian and white students. But that racist social engineering project required dropping the SAT requirement and comparative ranking of high school grade-point averages.

As less well-prepared students entered college, faculty either inflated grades (80 % are A/A-now at Yale), watered down their course requirements, or added new softball classes. To do otherwise while attempting to retain old standards earned targeted faculty charges of racism and worse.

Another way to square the circle of rising costs and fewer and poorer students was to attract foreign students. They pay the full costs of college, especially those on generous stipends from the [6]Middle East and [7]China. Nearly a million foreign nationals, the majority from illiberal regimes, are now here on full scholarships.

While here, many see their newfound freedoms as invitations to attack America. Once here, they too often romanticize the very autocratic governments and illiberal values of their homelands that they seemingly sought to escape by coming to America.

Most foreign students assume they are exempt from the consequences of violating campus rules or laws in general. After all, they pay the full cost of their education and thus partially subsidize those who do not.

Almost half of all those enrolled in college never graduate. Those who do, on average, require six years to do so.

All these realities explain why teenagers increasingly opt for trade schools, vocational education, and community colleges. They prefer to enter the workforce largely debt-free and in demand as skilled, sought-after tradespeople.

Most feel that if the old general education curriculum has been destroyed at weaponized universities, then there is no great loss in skipping the traditional bachelor's degree. A far better selection of demanding and well-taught classes can be found online at a lower cost.

The result is a disaster for both higher education and a wake-up call for the country at large.

Entire generations are now suffering from prolonged adolescence as they drag out college to consume their early and mid-20s. The unfortunate result for the country is a radical delay in marriage, childbearing, and homeownership—all the time-honored catalysts for adulthood and the responsibilities that come with it.

Politicized faculty, infantilized students, and mediocre classes have combined to erode the prestige of college degrees, even at once elite colleges. A degree from Columbia no longer guarantees either maturity or preeminent knowledge, but is just as likely a warning to employers of a noisy, poorly educated graduate more eager to complain to Human Resources than to enhance a company's productivity.

Yet it may not be all that unfortunate that much of higher education is going the way of malls, movie theaters, and CDs. The country needs far more skilled physical labor and less prolonged adolescence and debt.

STEM courses, professional schools, and traditional campuses are better insulated from mediocrity and should survive. Otherwise, millions more starting adulthood at 18 debt-free and fewer encumbered, ignorant, and entitled at 25 is not a bad thing for the country.

1.5.9 How Israel May Curb Iran's Nuclear Ambitions (2024-05-13 17:46)

Details of Israel's recent limited retaliatory strike [1]against Iran's antiaircraft missile batteries at Isfahan are still sketchy. But nonetheless, we can draw some conclusions.

[2]Israel's small volley of missiles hit their intended targets, to the point of zeroing in on the very launchers designed to stop such incoming ordnance. The target was near the Natanz enrichment facility. That proximity was by design.

Israel showed Iran it could take out the very antimissile battery designed to thwart an attack on its nearby [3]nuclear facility.

The larger message sent to the world was that Israel could send a retaliatory barrage at Iranian nuclear sites with reasonable assurances that the incoming attacks could not be stopped.

By comparison, Iran's earlier attack on Israel was much greater and more indiscriminate. It was also a huge flop, with an estimated 99 % of the more than 320 drones, cruise missiles, and ballistic missiles failing to hit their planned targets.

Moreover, it was reported that more than 50 % of Iran's roughly 115 to 120 ballistic missiles failed at launch or malfunctioned in flight.

Collate these facts, and it presents a disturbing corrective to Iran's nonstop boasts of soon possessing a nuclear arsenal that will obliterate the Jewish state.

Consider further the following nightmarish scenarios: Were Iranian nuclear-tipped missiles ever launched at Israel, they could pass over, in addition to Syria [4]and Iraq, either Saudi Arabia, Jordan, the West Bank, Gaza, or all four. In the cases of Jordan and Saudi Arabia, such trajectories would constitute an act of war, especially considering that some of Iran's recent aerial barrages were intercepted and destroyed over Arab territory well before they reached Israel.

Iran's strike prompted Arab nations, the U.S., [5]the U.K., and France to work in concert to destroy almost all of Iran's drones. For Iran, that is a premonition of the sort of sophisticated aerial opposition it might face if it ever decided to stage a nuclear version.

Even if half of Iran's ballistic missiles did launch successfully, only a handful apparently neared their intended targets—in sharp contrast to Israel's successful attack on Iranian missile batteries. Is it thus conceivable that any Iranian nuclear-tipped missile launched toward Israel might pose as great a threat to Iran itself or its neighbors as to Israel?

And even if such missiles made it into the air and even if they successfully traversed Arab airspace, there is still an overwhelming chance they would be neutralized before detonating above Israel.

Any such launch would warrant an immediate Israeli response. And the incoming bombs and missiles would likely have a 100 % certainty of evading Iran's countermeasures and hitting their targets.

Now that the soil of both Iran and Israel is no longer sacred and immune from attack, the mystique of the Iranian nuclear threat has dissipated.

It should be harder for the theocracy in Tehran to shake down Western governments for hostage bribes, sanctions relief, and Iran-deal giveaways on the implied threat of Iran's successfully nuking the Jewish state.

The new reality is that Iran has goaded an Israel that has numerous nuclear weapons and dozens of nuclear-tipped missiles in hardened silos and on submarines. Tehran has zero ability to stop any of these missiles or sophisticated fifth-generation Israeli aircraft armed with nuclear bombs and missiles.

Iran must now fear that if it launched two or three nuclear missiles, there would be overwhelming odds that they would either fail at launch, go awry in the air, implode inside Iran, be taken down over Arab territory by Israel's allies, or be knocked down by Israel's tripartite antimissile defense system.

Add it all up and Iran's attack on Israel seems a historic blunder. It showed the world the impotence of an Iranian aerial assault at the very time Iran threatens to go nuclear. It revealed that an incompetent Iran may be as much a threat to itself as to its enemies. It opened up a new chapter in which Iran's own soil, thanks to its attack on Israel, is no longer off limits to any Western power.

Its failure to stop a much smaller Israel response, coupled with the overwhelming success of Israel and its allies in stopping a much larger Iranian attack, reminds the Iranian autocracy that its shrill rhetoric is designed to mask its impotence and to hide its own vulnerabilities from its enemies.

And the long-suffering Iranian people?

The truth will come out that Iran's own theocracy hit the Israeli homeland with negligible results and earned a successful, though merely demonstrative, Israeli response in return.

So Iranians will learn their homeland is now vulnerable and, for the future, no longer off-limits.

And Iranians will conclude that Israel has more effective allies than Iran and that their own ballistic missiles may be more suicidal than homicidal.

As a result, they may conclude that the real enemies of the Iranian nation are not the Jewish people of Israel after all, but their own unhinged Islamist theocrats.

1.5.10 Marxism-Leninism at the Blue Earth County Fair (2024-05-18 15:25)

The Democratic Party has their new Leninist Somali inspired flag flying today at the Blue Earth County Fair while the Republican Party has the old minnesota flag. The Democratic Party has central planning all over 5 year plans all over Minnesota. DFL sounds like the East German Marxist-Leninist Party. Look at the party platform.

I would've alerted the Sheriff about the Communist Control Act and the Smith Act in case its a Stasi problem, but i rather let more people know online. Something is off about the county fair.

It's scary, man

1.5.11 'Diversity' Without Virtue and Shared Values Is Chaos (2024-05-23 08:08)

Kansas City Chiefs kicker Harrison Butker gave a commencement address this month at Benedictine University in Kansas. Butker is a devout Catholic and was speaking at a Catholic institution. As such, many of his observations, such as his expressed preference for the traditional Latin Mass, were intended for a Catholic audience.

But other points Butker made had broader applicability, and quite a few of them provoked blowback, including his reference to the "tyranny of diversity, equity and inclusion." The National Football League distanced itself immediately from Butker's remarks. "[Butker's] views are not those of the NFL as an organization," said Jonathan Beane, NFL's senior vice president and chief diversity and inclusion officer. "The NFL is steadfast in our commitment to inclusion, which only makes our league stronger."

It's worth noting that (a) the NFL is not a Catholic organization, and (b) the league has had its share of players arrested for domestic violence and convicted of wire fraud, forgery, money laundering, counterfeiting, tax evasion, drug trafficking, driving while intoxicated, burglary, armed robbery, aggravated assault, rape, manslaughter and even murder. Perhaps it's a bad look to criticize a player calling for men to be God-fearing, responsible husbands and fathers.

But it's also an opportunity to observe that the terms "diversity" and "inclusion," like "choice" – another contemporary buzzword – have little meaning without context.

For example, to say I'm "pro-choice" explains nothing unless I denote the choices that I'm in favor of someone being able to make. Either the choices themselves have no moral significance ("Burgers or pasta for dinner tonight?"), or else the available choices conform to my own values in some way. Consider: Do I think someone should have the choice to smother Granny with a pillow because she has dementia? I can't say "yes," unless I believe killing someone with dementia is morally good – or at least morally neutral. Saying, "I wouldn't kill my own grandmother, but I think anyone who wants to should be able to" makes the absurdity clearer.

The same is true of "diversity." We hear constantly that "diversity is our strength." But "diversity," without more, is not necessarily a "strength" at all. If I were asked to put together a team to solve a complex problem, and I chose a 6-year-old child, a heroin addict, a comatose patient and a homeless person suffering from severe mental illness, that group would certainly be diverse. But it would not be "strong" – if by that we mean able to solve the problem. Nor would the group be any "stronger" if it consisted of men and women or people of different racial and ethnic backgrounds.

That hypothetical may seem extreme. But less extreme yet equally clear proof is available anywhere we look. In Europe, for example, hundreds of thousands of young men have emigrated from cultures where women are deprived of basic human rights, swathed head to toe in mandated coverings; those who object are targets for sexual assault, arrest and imprisonment. The presence of those men has transformed countries like Sweden, Germany and England; once known for their low crime rates, they now have skyrocketing numbers of rape and other violence.

Similarly, millions of migrants have been encouraged by the Biden administration to enter the United States illegally, despite the importation of drugs killing 100,000-plus Americans a year, or the human trafficking – including the trafficking of children (the government admitted it lost track of 85,000 children who entered the country illegally between 2021 and 2023), or the other crimes committed by illegal immigrants. (The murder of Georgia college student Laken Riley generated national outrage, as did a series of videos created by a Venezuelan migrant explaining how to exploit "squatting" laws to take possession of homes and sell them out from under their rightful owners.)

Thus, immigration per se is not our "strength," any more than "diversity" is. It was, arguably, when we demanded that immigrants assimilate and live by American values. But that would mean defending our culture, which the powerful classes in America are loath to do, preferring instead to condemn it as "patriarchal," "white supremacist" and "systemically racist."

In fact, the attributes which have made the country peaceful and prosperous – initiative, industry, self-reliance, honesty, integrity, personal responsibility, respect for others, for property and the rule of law, protecting families and children – can be and have been the lived experience of people from nearly every race, ethnicity and culture on the planet.

However, the diverse experiences and perspectives that we aspire to bring together for the betterment of all do presuppose not only basic competence but a commitment to virtuous behavior and – more importantly – a set of common values and generalized agreement on what virtuous behavior is.

America was founded on explicitly Judeo-Christian principles and populated by people who believed in and lived by them. Furthermore, the existence of shared values and a common belief in the ultimate source of those values made it possible to appeal to that source when the country's policies fell short of our ideals, as exemplified by calls for the abolition of slavery or the improvement of conditions for factory workers.

But those controlling today's cultural messaging want the definition of "values" to be relative and dismiss "virtue" as antiquated. In place of substantive definitions, we now have empty platitudes like "diversity," "inclusion" and "compassion"; catch-all phrases to be tossed out as accusations whenever anyone points out the painful realities associated with poor choices, or cultural attitudes and behaviors that are antithetical to human flourishing.

Butker dared to say what too few will these days – that the source of America's values and our definition of virtue is the Bible and Christianity. Those are our roots and they are our strength. People of diverse backgrounds who adhere to the principles derived from them do bring depth and richness to the American experience, and we should welcome them.

Conversely, we can already see what is wrought when we abandon those principles: discord, violence, societal breakdown.

1.5.12 Anatomy of a Kangaroo Court (2024-05-23 08:10)

The Donald Trump New York City farce is on the way to being over. The prosecution (at least) rested after what would've been a disastrous performance by Michael Cohen in any other trial, but the standard rules don't apply here because this is not actually a trial. This trial has nothing to do with law. It is a scummy attempt to frame a political opponent of the Democrats to keep him from winning an election against the desiccated old pervert in the White House. Normally, a jury would laugh this case out of court, except that it would never have been in court had the defendant been named Tronald Dump. Everything about it is a lie and a scam, and as soon as you understand that you will understand this disgraceful case.

The Democrats behind this charade are wearing the law like a [1]skinsuit, presenting an exterior that makes this look like a real jury trial when, in fact, it is nothing of the sort. You see the forms and processes performed, but they mean nothing because the fix is already in. Let's talk about what happens now in terms of procedure. In terms of legality, why bother? Again, this isn't a legal matter. This is a joke.

The state must prove each of the elements of the charge beyond a reasonable doubt. Remember, in real trials, criminal charges have elements. For instance, fraud is typically a knowing misrepresentation intended to induce reliance that causes monetary damage to the victim. Each of those requirements is an element. Was there a misrepresentation? Was it knowingly false? Was it intended to induce reliance? Was someone who reasonably relied on it damaged in terms of losing money? Each of those elements must have substantial evidence in support of it. Remember, the state has to prove everything. The defendant can just sit there with his arms crossed like a late-80s rapper and say nothing, and if the state fails to provide evidence beyond a reasonable doubt proving each element, he must be acquitted. Others have discussed how the state has failed to prove any of the elements against Trump here — suffice it to say that, as a legal matter, the state has failed on every one of the elements. But again, this case isn't a legal matter. This is a kangaroo court. We're just talking about how the scam will proceed.

The defense could have chosen not to call any witnesses at all. If you think you're winning because the state has failed to make its case, it's often a good idea to send it to the jury right then. But I agree that Trump was right to try to put on a defense because that helps him in the court of public opinion. There's no helping him with the jury – the jury is biased, and the majority of them will convict him regardless of the evidence or law. Defense is for the benefit of the voters.

The Democrat-donating judge severely limited some of Trump's most important evidence. One witness was a former federal elections commissioner who is an expert on federal elections law and could testify as an expert witness as to how none of these alleged expenditures would violate federal campaign finance laws. Now, the judge excluded that testimony based on what is normally solid ground – an expert witness cannot testify as to what the law is. An expert witness provides factual evidence of matters outside the experience of a jury. But during the trial, the prosecution improperly elicited testimony regarding what is and isn't a federal campaign finance violation from non-expert witnesses – including Michael Cohen. Typical with regard to Trump, there are apparently exceptions to the rules when it involves screwing him over. Allowing this expert witness to testify would be fair, so no surprise it did not happen.

Another witness the defense called was Michael Cohen's former attorney, who you might think could not testify because of attorney-client privilege. Except Michael Cohen went behind his back and began talking about his discussions with his attorney to the Southern District of New York federal prosecutors when he was trying to sell out Trump to save his behind from jail. When you disclose attorney-client confidentialities, you waive your attorney-client privilege. Attorney Robert Costello, a respected criminal defense lawyer in New York, has already testified to a House committee that everything Michael Cohen said on the stand was a lie, not to convince the jurors because there's no convincing the Democrat jurors, but to show America what a fiasco this is. On Monday, the judge blew up at Costello, who was disgusted by how the judge was limiting his testimony by sustaining the DA's ridiculous objections.

As an aside, it is a disgrace that a prosecutor would ever put up on the stand as its key witness a convicted perjurer like Cohen, who has been publicly expressing how he wants to screw over the accused. On Monday, this centipede admitted stealing tens of thousands of dollars from Trump, something the NYDA knew about and failed to charge. I'm glad my mom, who was a judge and a prosecutor before that, doesn't have to see this. Any decent past or present prosecutor with integrity would be appalled. Carefully note those who are not appalled.

Next week, the parties will do closing arguments. Look for the DA to try to convict Trump of "election interference" and "paying hush money," neither of which is a crime. But again, this is not about the law; it is about pulling a jury of Democrat partisans who want to help stop a political opponent.

Then the case goes to the jury. The jury is instructed by the judge on the law to be applied. It'll be interesting to see what jury instructions this judge gives since this completely unprecedented case will require many custom jury instructions. You see, there are standard jury instructions for routine cases. Murder, bank robbery, sex crimes, and the other things that Democratic constituents do all the time have standard jury instructions. Since this is an invented crime that has never been charged against anyone before, the parties will have to make up instructions and the judge will pick the DA's version.

Then the case goes to the jury and the jurors will decide the case solely based on how much they hate Donald Trump. That is not how the law is supposed to work, but this isn't about the law. This is about Democrat voters in Manhattan screwing over a political opponent. If twelve of them agree, they will convict him. If one or more jurors hold out for the truth and do not get kicked off the jury for "refusing to deliberate," the jury will hang. This results in a mistrial, and the DA can retry the case. If twelve jurors reject the trumped-up Trump charges, Trump will be acquitted - but that will never happen because they're Democrats, and it doesn't matter what the facts are or the law is.

If you think I'm cynical, chalk that up to 30 years of experience.

There is a slight chance the jury will acquit Trump on some of the charges, but my guess is you'll see him convicted on everything. Hopefully, at least one juror has the integrity and the guts to withstand the pressure to frame, but hope is not a plan.

Now, if convicted on up to 34 felony charges, a typical defendant would be remanded immediately into custody. Of course, Alvin Bragg's DA office is notoriously easy on actual criminals, but it will certainly demand jail time here. It is quite possible that the judge will hook Trump up and take him into the back in chains. If that happens, a lot of people are going to be really, really sorry down the road. That image would be a devastating blow to our teetering Jenga tower of a country. If they want to throw open the Overton window, they should remember that it is a long way down.

More likely, this Democrat judge will release Trump on bail and set a sentencing date. But who knows? This has been a blatant and unrepentant farce from the beginning, one that at least half of Americans see as an attempt to frame the political opposition with false charges over made-up crimes before a biased judge and jury. If you want to bet, bet that they do the most outrageous thing - and bet that they cry like little girls when they feel the full blowback of their new rules down the road.

Keep your fingers crossed for at least one juror with the integrity to refuse to play his part in this show trial.

1.5.13 Whistleblower Reveals How Far John Kerry Was Willing to Go to Protect the Iran Deal (2024-05-23 08:14)

Everyone knows Obama didn't want to bomb Iran, which was becoming the only option to slow their nuclear weapons program unless a deal was struck. That infamous deal, which became Obama's signature foreign policy achievement, did next to nothing to slow Tehran's ambitions to acquire weapons of mass destruction. Guy wrote extensively about the deal's shortfalls, and now we have a new chapter in the annals of Obama's failed foreign policy: the FBI was muzzled from arresting suspect Iranian agents and terrorists to avoid mucking up the Iran deal negotiations.

Fox News obtained documents showing that in 2015, John Kerry's State Department vigorously stymied the FBI from doing its job regarding arresting individuals who posed a threat to national security. A whistleblower has come forward with these allegations (via [1]Fox News):

Read this letter.

Whistleblowers' emails reveal John Kerry blocked the FBI and DOJ from arresting Iranian terrorists and agents on U.S. soil in order to protect his Iran deal.

He even ran away from a White House meeting to avoid getting confronted by the Attorney General. [2]pic.twitter.com/MuPUqWOA4n— Gabriel Noronha (@GLNoronha) [3]May 22, 2024

The Obama-Biden State Department "actively interfered" to prevent the FBI from executing arrest warrants on individuals illegally in the United States who were allegedly supporting Iranian financial efforts to develop weapons of mass destruction, whistleblowers told Sens. Chuck Grassley and Ron Johnson.

Fox News Digital obtained letters Grassley, R-Iowa, and Johnson, R-Wis., sent to Secretary of State Antony Blinken, FBI Director Christopher Wray, and Attorney General Merrick Garland on the matter.

The Obama-Biden administration began its Joint Plan of Action, which served as the negotiating process for the Joint Comprehensive Plan of Action (JCPOA), also known as the Iran Nuclear Deal, that was signed by then-President Obama in 2015. At the time, Obama said broader sanctions would remain in place, which the administration would "continue to enforce... vigorously."

...Grassley and Johnson received unclassified and legally protected whistleblower disclosures which they say show that "while the Obama-Biden administration publicly committed to 'preventing Iran from acquiring nuclear weapons by raising the cost of Iran's defiance of the international community,' then-Secretary of State John Kerry actively interfered with the Federal Bureau of Investigation executing arrest warrants on individuals in the U.S. illegally supporting Iranian efforts, including financial efforts, to develop weapons of mass destruction and its ballistic missile program."

The records, according to the senators, show that the Justice Department and FBI leadership, including then-Attorney General Loretta Lynch and then-FBI Director James Comey "failed to take the necessary steps to stop Kerry's obstructive efforts against law enforcement."

One email — an unclassified FBI email from August 25, 2017 — detailed at least eight instances connected to the Iran nuclear deal where "the FBI/DOJ/USG could have moved forward with the cases but the State Department chose to block them."

What a mess. To anyone, these instances would be a red flag that maybe we shouldn't be negotiating a nuclear agreement with a nation that's committing such operations on our soil. Democrats have appeased Tehran at every turn, and for what? We sent them pallets of cash, gold, and francs to release hostages in the twilight of his presidency. It was a $400 million ransom, which Iran undoubtedly used to fund terror operations. Joe Biden has taken that a step further, allegedly sending a message to Iran that their retaliation against Israel, who killed a top Iranian Revolutionary Guard Corps general, should be "within certain limits."

Obama-Biden exhibited weakness and failure on the world stage, and it's resurfaced like weeds, though worse since Biden, who lost more than just a step, is riding solo. When the man who helmed a shoddy Iran nuclear deal is telling his former VP he doesn't need to run in 2020 because he's proven to be a screw-up, you know this is a bad situation.

Kerry running interference on FBI investigations and operations to nab terrorists is another instance of this crew doing everything backward and to the detriment of the United States and her security.

1.5.14 Brace Yourselves for a Trump Conviction Because the Judge Just Tilted the Scales (2024-05-29 15:58)

The jury is deliberating, and we should be prepared for a conviction. That's not to say there isn't reasonable doubt all over the hush money trial involving Donald Trump, but this whole trial was a circus from the start so it's unsurprising that its finish was more of a clown show. As Katie wrote this morning, none of this is normal. The judge's instructions to the jury is aberrant, with some folks commenting on social media that these guidelines for the jury wouldn't be legal in Zimbabwe. It will only [1]take four jurors to convict Trump [emphasis mine]:

Judge Merchan just told the jury that they do not need unanimity to convict. 4 could agree on one crime, 4 on a different one, and the other 4 on another. He said he would treat 4-4-4 as a unanimous verdict.— John Roberts (@johnrobertsFox) [2]May 29, 2024

What?? [3]<https://t.co/RaWmh0cAVX>— Guy Benson (@guypbenson) [4]May 29, 2024

That's not even legal in Zimbabwe.— U.S. Ministry of Truth (@USMiniTru) [5]May 29, 2024

This is insane.

New York Judge Merchan just told jurors that they DO NOT have to unanimously agree on what crime Trump is guilty of.

It could be a 4-4-4 split.

[6]pic.twitter.com/IPrWlQYHau— End Wokeness (@EndWokeness) [7]May 29, 2024

...Judge Juan Merchan has given the jury their instructions...the instructions were given verbally and jurors won't receive printed copies, although they can ask questions.

According to legal experts, Merchan's standards for a conviction are abnormal and do not require jurors to reach a unanimous decision on the charges. Further, jurors don't have to determine what crime was committed.

"Judge Merchan has ruled that the jury does not have to agree on what that crime is. The jury could split into three groups of four on which of the three crimes were being concealed and Merchan will still treat it as a unanimous verdict," George Washington University Law Professor Jonathan Turley, who has been inside the courtroom, writes. "The jury has been given little substantive information on these crimes, and Merchan has denied a legal expert who could have shown that there was no federal election violation. This case should have been dismissed for lack of evidence or a cognizable crime."

You read that right: 4-4-4 is a unanimous verdict. The only thing that's criminal in this trial is the trial itself.

We knew this legal affair would go off the rails when [8]jury selection began. The voir dire phase was a shambles, as the entire pool [9]was already tainted. Everyone has a side regarding Donald Trump, which is precisely why political trials shouldn't happen, but that's another matter. The jury alone wasn't a promising side for the Trump team.

Then, as Turley noted, an expert witness, Bradley Smith, the former chairman of the FEC, [10]was denied permission to testify by Merchan, a Democratic Party donor whose daughter is also a liberal political operative, for the defense. Guy has elaborated on this all month. The heart of the charge against Trump is that he essentially committed a campaign finance violation by falsifying business records to cover up this arrangement. Right, because this alleged tryst would've swayed minds; Everyone was decided before Stormy Daniels came onto the scene.

Alas, Smith did take to social media to give his take on the trial, which he called a [11]farce. And I didn't even get into how much of a joke Michael Cohen was being the prosecution's star witness. This serial liar [12]admitted to stealing tens of thousands of dollars from the Trump Organization on the stand and being unrepentant about it.

A trainwreck jury selection, muzzling expert witnesses for the defense, and now lowering the bar on convictions where it only takes four guilty votes. Turley was also stunned that Josh Steinglass, a prosecution member, was permitted to offer "evidence outside the record" during closing arguments yesterday that lasted roughly four hours.

...We are about to restart. I am mystified how the court has allowed Steinglass to effectively give evidence outside of the record. Next break is supposed to be around 5:30 according to the judge.— Jonathan Turley (@JonathanTurley) [13]May 28, 2024

This nonsense is happening right now. The Left is degrading and eroding constitutional norms for political purposes because now Joe Biden is in real danger of losing re-election.

Four votes is a unanimous verdict. That's Biden's America. Greg Price [14]summed up this travesty on Twitter:

- The Soros funded DA elevated a misdemeanor to a felony despite lowering 60 % of all felonies for actual criminals in his jurisdiction
- The lead prosecutor resigned his position as the 3rd highest ranking member of Biden's DOJ to join Alvin Bragg's team going after Trump.
- The judge donated to Joe Biden and has a daughter who raised millions of dollars for Democrats off the Trump prosecutions
- The other lead prosecutor also donated to Joe Biden
- The lead witness that the whole case relies on is a convicted perjurer and serial liar who admitted during the trial to stealing money from the Trump organization

- The judge put a gag order on Donald Trump for pointing out the political conflicts of interest of the people prosecuting him
- The "crime" relies on the idea that Trump paid off Stormy Daniels to conceal another crime, which is not mentioned in the indictment.
- The judge barred Trump's defense from explaining to jury that no campaign finance violation occurred but allowed prosecutors to assert as fact in their closing that there was.
- The judge cleared out the court room when Michael Cohen's former attorney was exonerating Trump but allowed the prosecution to bring in Stormy Daniels to talk about whether or not Trump used a condom.
- The judge barred a former FEC commissioner from testifying that Donald Trump did nothing wrong. The judge is allowing the jury to not have to reach a unanimous verdict on the underlying, unnamed crime Trump committed.

What did I miss?

I'll close with what Guy fears a guilty verdict from a rigged trial could bring for the country:

I am genuinely concerned about a scenario in which a Trump conviction is jerry-rigged by the partisan DA & judge, which then plausibly tips a close election...after which the verdict is (quite likely) overturned on appeal. 1.5.15 What Really Worries Me About a Potential Guilty Verdict (2024-05-29 16:01)

Former President Donald Trump's legal fate is now in the hands of a New York City jury. In my view, he should be acquitted on charges that never should have been brought in the first place. Alternatively, a hung jury would amount to a significant win for Trump. I fear, however, that he will be convicted. These are Manhattanites in that jury room, after all. They inhabit an island that overwhelmingly detests Donald Trump as a political figure. For weeks, they've had prosecutors bombarding them with a blizzard of unseemliness, all linked to a man who most (if not all) of them likely despise. Perhaps some of them they'll have the integrity to ignore all the razzle-dazzle and sleight of hand, focus the mountain of reasonable doubt that has been established, and refuse to convict the defendant. Or perhaps they'll determine that they've seen enough sordid material to conclude Trump must be guilty of something, then rubber-stamp prosecutors' cooked-up charges.

Conservative legal expert and longtime federal prosecutor Andy McCarthy, who has [1]argued persuasively for acquittal, is [2]predicting a conviction. Why? Because the deck has been stacked by the prosecutors, by the Biden donor judge who's aided and abetted the prosecution at nearly every turn, and in some ways, by Trump himself. McCarthy explains how hardcore partisan Alvin Bragg and his fellow Democrat, Judge Merchan, teamed up to rig the game:

Ordinarily, falsifying business records is a misdemeanor under New York penal law. The statute that enhances the offense into a felony requires proof of fraudulent intent to conceal "another crime." ...[The indictment] put the defense on no notice of what "other crime" Trump was alleged to have concealed... Bragg knew it would be controversial to proclaim in clear terms the power and intention to enforce federal law — against a defendant whom the federal agencies with authority to prosecute investigated and as to whom they decided, for sound legal reasons, not to bring charges. The failure to provide a defendant with notice of the charges in the indictment violates the federal Constitution — and it strongly suggests that the grand jury did not find probable cause of the other crimes that Bragg now alleges (there is no “other crime” pled in the indictment).

On this point, Merchan has aided and abetted Bragg, to the point that it was not until summation, after six weeks of trial, that state prosecutors were finally clear and full-throated in urging that Trump should be convicted for violating federal law. That would be astounding in any case but is mind-boggling in the first-ever criminal prosecution of a former American president (who, not coincidentally, is the Republican presidential nominee and thus Bragg’s partisan political adversary). Without being limited to the charges in the indictment, as prosecutors are supposed to be, they presented the case to the jury as if the charge were conspiracy to influence the 2016 election by burying politically damaging information. To say that this conspiracy appears nowhere in the indictment does not explain the half of it. It is not a crime to conspire to influence an election unless one does so by unlawful means (that’s the afore-described New York misdemeanor), and there is nothing unlawful per se about burying politically damaging information.

That last point is where Trump’s role in his own potential conviction comes in. It remains entirely possible that at least some of the jurors will reject this outrageous case. That would be the fair and right outcome, legally speaking, as well as the healthiest outcome for the country, for reasons I’ll mention below. But if they hand down one or more guilty verdicts, [3]McCarthy writes that the politically-motivated handcuffs Trump has placed on his own defense team throughout these proceedings could prove to have played a major role in that outcome:

Strategically speaking, Team Trump has presented one of the most ill-conceived, self-destructive defenses I have ever seen in decades of trying and analyzing criminal cases. The reason for this is clear: Trump insisted that his lawyers subordinate his defense at trial to the political narrative he wants to spin in the 2024 campaign. In this instance, the legal and political strategies cannot be synced. Hence, Trump is helping Bragg get his coveted convictions. Against the weight of evidence and common sense, Trump insists on telling voters that Stormy Daniels and Karen McDougal — respectively, the porn star and Playboy model who quite credibly allege to have had flings with Trump circa 2006 — are lying. But no one with even passing familiarity with Trump's combative and parsimonious nature would believe for a second (a) that he would agree to pay $130,000 to Stormy and $150,000 to McDougal if they were falsely claiming to have had affairs with him, or (b) that Cohen would have paid Stormy, and Trump's pal David Pecker would have paid McDougal, unless Trump had green-lighted the payments and assured them of repayment.

Since Trump knows that, if he acknowledges being complicit in the payment arrangements, voters will conclude his denials of the affairs are lies, Trump has decided he must distance himself from the NDA payments. Politically speaking, this is dumb because voters long ago made up their minds about Trump's extramarital affairs, and if he admitted them at this point, he'd merely be admitting what is notorious and not credibly deniable. Legally speaking, Trump's gambit is disastrous. It makes no sense in a criminal courtroom for a defendant to deny his complicity in legal conduct when there is daunting evidence that he was complicit up to his neck. The prosecutors framed the case to the jury as a criminal conspiracy to bury damaging information. That's not a crime, and NDAs are legal. But rather than go with that, his best defense, Trump has acted guilty: As if a candidate's suppression of negative information, rather than routine, is criminally condemnable, and as if the NDAs are radioactive — the diabolical compacts of Cohen and Pecker from which he must stay a millions miles away (a choice at which the evidence is having a hearty laugh). For Bragg, this is a gift from prosecutorial heaven.

Trump apparently decided that basically conceding that the affair took place, and that the hush money was paid with his knowledge and approval, would be politically damaging, or rob him of some veneer of quasi-plausible deniability with voters and/or his family. So he seems to have insisted that his attorneys maintain the charade. The problematic sex didn't occur. The hush money payments weren't made, then reimbursed, on Trump's orders. Candidly, I'm not sure a single person actually believes that. Yes, that's officially Trump's on-the-record position, but it's not credible. So, as McCarthy points out, Trump is acting guilty by clinging to what nearly all observers — including jurors, I'm confident — see as a lie. But the sex, the payments, and the reimbursements were all legal. They aren't crimes. The straightest line between two points here, in terms of a successful legal defense, would have been for Team Trump to affirm, or at least not contest, the underlying acts (affair, payments), then to argue vociferously, relentlessly, and correctly that none of the acts were illegal. "Since the NDAs were legal, the reimbursement of Cohen was legal; ergo, there was no rational reason, legally speaking, to deny it," McCarthy explains. However, there's this:

Why deny the undeniable? Because Trump knows that admitting the reimbursement is tantamount to admitting the sex with Stormy. Politically, he resists doing that because he has always denied it and can't bring himself to concede error — not in the Trump DNA. But the elevation of his political needs (or, better, his ill-considered conception of them) has utterly undermined his defense...The roads to American prisons are paved with what in the trade we call “false exculpatory statements.” The reason is simple: People suspected of crime don't lie unless they are trying to cover up wrongdoing. By lying about the reimbursement of Cohen, Team Trump gave immense help to the prosecutors' plan to convince the jury that scheming to suppress politically damaging information is a crime. Why, the jury has to be wondering, would Trump lie about something so stupid unless he was worried about being implicated in “the conspiracy”?

Advertisement

It would be darkly ironic if a trial that has been entirely political from the jump ended up going against Trump due to some of his own, self-destructive political calculations. That said, even with Trump's self-serving and ill-advised machinations, he's still not guilty of the alleged 'felonies' charged. The way Alvin Bragg was able to resurrect these lapsed misdemeanors (statutes of limitations expired years ago) and turn them into dozens of 'felonies' was by concocting a conspiracy in which the bookkeeping mischaracterizations (it's not even clear to me who the victim of these supposed misdemeanors was) were undertaken in pursuit of a separate and distinct crime. The Biden donor judge allowed prosecutors to hide the ball on what that separate and distinct crime was. They never fully identified it, and only effectively [4]let the cat out of the bag during closing arguments, leaning hard into the notion that Trump committed campaign finance-related crimes. This was presented to the jury after the defense had rested, with no opportunity for rebuttal:

Astounding. And the Biden donor judge wouldn't let the defense question a top elections law expert regarding the law upon which the prosecution is hanging its case (having declined to specify the critical 'other crime' until closing arguments, with no opportunity for rebuttal): [5]<https://t.co/TEHFQgK6kr> [6]pic.twitter.com/Vn0hbFFPeS— Guy Benson (@guypbenson) [7]May 28, 2024

McCarthy marvels, "the judge and prosecutors have led jurors to believe that the violation of FECA is an established fact in the case." But this is most certainly not an established fact. Indeed, [8]the judge would not allow the defense to effectively question an expert witness who could have offered compelling evidence – based on his former role running the Federal Elections Commission – that Trump’s NDA and hush money gambit was not a campaign finance violation. The so-called ‘second crime,’ which was never fully revealed to the defense or the jury, could very well have imploded right there. But Merchan would not permit that testimony, so a crucial defense witness was never called. Legal experts, including several who are decidedly hostile to Trump, seem to agree that it remains unclear whether the prosecution successfully proved their untested legal theory in a way that was comprehensible, let alone beyond a reasonable doubt:

It seems like he’s convinced that the (long lapsed) bookkeeping misdemeanors have been proven, but is very shaky on how that translates into proven felonies—which is...the entire case here? [9]<https://t.co/qqvHiRaz0P>— Guy Benson (@guypbenson) [10]May 29, 2024

On CNN, anchor Jake Tapper says to legal expert: ‘I don’t know that they [prosecutors] have proved beyond a reasonable doubt...that Donald Trump knew.’ The legal expert responded: “They have not...that is, in fact, reasonable doubt.”— Byron York (@ByronYork) [11]May 28, 2024

CNN analyst on Trump trial: ‘The crime here is not easy to explain or understand.’ MSNBC analyst: ‘It is difficult because it’s a very nuanced argument...It’s never been prosecuted before.’— Byron York (@ByronYork) [12]May 28, 2024

As [13]I said elsewhere, you don’t have to be a MAGA hat wearing Trump fan to believe that if a former president (and current leading candidate) is going to be criminally prosecuted for the first time ever, the alleged crime should be very clear – and the legal theory behind it should have been tried before. In reality, the ‘felonies’ leveled against Trump are complex and difficult to grasp, and the underlying legal theory is totally novel and untested. This would be concerning-to-disturbing in any context. It’s indefensible in a case involving the first-ever criminal prosecution of a former American president, and a man who is one of two people who will be elected in November. The facts here were reviewed by Bragg’s predecessor, and by the Department of Justice, and by the FEC. None of them pursued a prosecution – or even a civil case or fine, in the case of the FEC.

But now a New York City jury could decide to convict Donald Trump after a rabid partisan prosecutor overruled all of those previous prudential judgments and presented a case (not coincidentally, in the middle of an election cycle, years after the ostensible 'crimes') in which the presiding judge – who donated to the political opponent of his defendant, yet didn't recuse himself – permitted prosecutors to basically do whatever they wanted, while severely hemming in the defense. One of the in-court prosecutors handling the case for Bragg, who'd been [14]paid by the DNC for 'political consulting' during Trump's presidency, left the third-ranking post within Biden's Justice Department to help run this circus. The Biden campaign held a bizarre and [15]highly inappropriate event [16]outside the courthouse just yesterday, which they're now [17]trying to pretend doesn't count as a political or campaign event related to the trial.

Legal eagles from across the ideological spectrum seem to agree that there are multiple, serious, glaring grounds for appeal in this case. Imagine a scenario in which a conviction is choreographed by this cabal, temporarily branding Trump a 'convicted felon' – which then arguably costs him a close election, after which the conviction is overturned. I envisioned it on Fox yesterday, and consider it quite ominous:

I am genuinely concerned about a scenario in which a Trump conviction is jerry-rigged by the partisan DA & judge, which then plausibly tips a close election...after which the verdict is (quite likely) overturned on appeal. We are already in a pretty unhealthy place as a country. [18]pic.twitter.com/AbVy7gVrFQ— Guy Benson (@guypbenson) [19]May 29, 2024

I'll leave you with this:

...Merchan just delivered the coup de grace instruction. He said that there is no need to agree on what occurred. They can disagree on what the crime was among the three choices. Thus, this means that they could split 4-4-4 and he will still treat them as unanimous...— Jonathan Turley (@JonathanTurley) [20]May 29, 2024

Outrageous, farcical, inane. Pick your adjective. The judge instructed the jurors that they don't even have to agree upon what the (unproven, unspecified, and even totally unexplored)

'second crime' is - without which the lapsed bookkeeping misdemeanors cannot be bootstrapped into felonies - in order to reach 'unanimity' for a conviction. Surreal.

1.5.16 Legal Experts: The Trump Trial Jury Instructions Are Not Normal (2024-05-29 16:04)

Closing arguments in the trial of former President Donald Trump in New York City, where he is charged with 34 felony counts of falsifying business records, have concluded and Judge Juan Merchan has given the jury their instructions. The instructions were given verbally and jurors won't receive printed copies, although they can ask questions.

According to legal experts, Merchan's standards for a conviction are abnormal and do not require jurors to reach a unanimous decision on the charges. Further, jurors don't have to determine what crime was committed.

"Judge Merchan has ruled that the jury does not have to agree on what that crime is. The jury could split into three groups of four on which of the three crimes were being concealed and Merchan will still treat it as a unanimous verdict," George Washington University Law

Professor Jonathan Turley, who has been inside the courtroom, [1]writes. "The jury has been given little substantive information on these crimes, and Merchan has denied a legal expert who could have shown that there was no federal election violation. This case should have been dismissed for lack of evidence or a cognizable crime."

...The fraud instruction alone is so generalized that it would seem to encompass any claim that the defendant sought to influence the election through his actions. Merchan has done little to tailor standard instructions for this novel and frankly troubling case...— Jonathan Turley (@JonathanTurley) [2]May 28, 2024

...So four can find a state election violation, four can find a federal election violations and four can find tax violations and it will still be treated as a unanimous verdict.— Jonathan Turley (@JonathanTurley) [3]May 28, 2024

The notion that Merchan's jury instructions could somehow fail to specifically instruct jurors about the second substantive "in furtherance of" crime—and its underlying statute, including the requisite mens rea/intent, etc.—is absolutely batshit insane.— Josh Hammer (@josh_hammer) [4]May 28, 2024

This is wrong-jury must be unanimous on every element (it can't be 4 believe one predicate and 8 believe another); judge is wrong [5]pic.twitter.com/E74nbBEmKR— Greta Van Susteren (@greta) [6]May 25, 2024

This is insanity.

I've tried many jury trials in my day. You give jurors paper instructions every time.

How are 12 jurors supposed to remember the elements necessary for each of the 34 felony counts?

This is an illicit, witch-hunt prosecution. [7]<https://t.co/KwoxH655xY>— Attorney General Andrew Bailey (@AGAndrewBailey) [8]May 29, 2024

Otherwise the instructions have been "standard."

1.5.17 Biden Taps U.S. Oil Reserves for Political Reasons...Again (2024-05-29 16:11)

Ahead of the 2024 election and busy summer travel season, President Joe Biden announced over the weekend he will tap the Northeast Gasoline Supply Reserve in an effort to lower gas prices at the pump.

Gas prices are down $1.40 from their peak after Russia's war, but they're still too high.

My Administration is releasing 1 million barrels of gasoline from the Northeast Gasoline Supply Reserve ahead of July 4th, which will lower prices at the pump when folks need it the most.— President Biden (@POTUS) [1]May 28, 2024

White House Press Secretary Karine Jean Pierre touted the move Tuesday afternoon during the daily briefing.

Karine Jean-Pierre brags about "lowering the price of gas" by "selling one million barrels of gasoline from the Northeast Gasoline Supply Reserve."

FACT: The nationwide average for gas remains 50 % higher than the day Biden took office. [2]pic.twitter.com/tikV5PicbT— RNC Research (@RNCResearch) [3]May 28, 2024

The[4] Northeast Gasoline Supply Reserve is supposed to be used in response to natural disasters or other emergencies that disrupt supplies, not to lower prices for political reasons.

In 2012, Superstorm Sandy made landfall in the northeastern United States and caused heavy damage to two refineries and left more than 40 terminals in New York Harbor closed due to water damage and loss of power. This left some New York gas stations without fuel for as long as 30 days. As part of the Obama Administration's ongoing response to the storm, the Department of Energy established the Northeast Gasoline Supply Reserve (NGSR); the first federal, regional, refined petroleum product reserve containing gasoline Creation of the emergency stock of gasoline was authorized by Energy Secretary Ernest Moniz on June 20, 2014. Secretary Moniz directed the Office of Petroleum Reserves to establish a one million barrel gasoline component of the Strategic Petroleum Reserve in the Northeast. The intent was to create a buffer large enough to allow commercial companies to compensate for the initial impacts of interruptions in supply, but not so large as to dissuade the companies from maintaining stock levels sufficient to respond to routine disruptions or to recognize that increasing prices are an indicator that more supply is needed. A one million barrel emergency reserve would give Northeast consumers supplemental supplies for a few days in the event of a hurricane or other disruption, until existing distribution infrastructure could return to full operation.

1.5.18 Another Desperate Attack on SCOTUS Turns Out to Be Complete and Utter Garbage (2024-05-29 16:17)

An important piece of information emerged over the holiday weekend, and it's important that it not get buried. By way of background, the activist Left – very much including a large share of the 'news' media – has been doing its best to fabricate yet another entirely phony "scandal" against a conservative Supreme Court justice. They've been [1]actively pursuing this strategy for years, funded by mountains of the sort of 'dark money' they pretend to abhor, for the purpose of eroding the Court's legitimacy. Let's be [2]explicitly clear: They are not doing so because they are genuinely concerned about "ethics." They are not doing so because there are clear violations or conflicts of interests at play (this cynical brigade has shown zero interest in [3]similar or more flagrant potential issues involving the Court's leftist contingent). They are doing so because the Court's conservative majority is denying them the outcomes they desire. It's that simple. They are laboring to tear down an institution that stands in the way of their extreme ideological project because they view and demand power as their ideological birthright.

Advertisement

This is dangerous, both to "our democracy," about which they purport to care very deeply, and to the targeted justices. We've witnessed the Democrats' Senate leader specifically threaten members of the Court by name, earning [4]a rare rebuke from the Chief Justice. We've seen [5]ugly, menacing protests outside the family homes of various justices. And we've even seen a thwarted assassination attempt against Justice Brett Kavanaugh, which garnered [6]shockingly little coverage. As always, "civility" and "rhetoric" media panics cut in one direction among the progressives who run America's widely-distrusted, 'elite' newsrooms. And it's from those newsrooms that the current, ludicrous controversy has emanated – driven by activists, and picked up by elected Democrats. It's ginned-up nonsense. It's embarrassing. And it's all so transparent. The country is supposed to be scandalized by an upside-down American flag flown outside of Justice Sam Alito's home in early January 2021. The country was then instructed to be further appalled by the discovery of another, 'insurrectionist-linked' flag flying at his vacation home.

Justice Alito [7]has explained the 2021 incident, drawing incredulous heckles from the Left, but it turns out that his account aligns with contemporaneous reporting from the Washington Post. Indeed, back at the time, the Post looked into the matter and found the episode so unremarkable that they didn't even run a story on it. But here we are, years later, and the manufactured outrage machine insists that everyone simply ignore this:

The Washington Post reveals they actually already discovered in Jan 2021 the Alito flag story was fake and chose not report it after they determined it was part of a neighborhood dispute not rooted in politics. It's a good thing we didn't let this all get out of hand! [8]pic.twitter.com/B5i5fBxCUT— Philip Letsou (@philipletsou) [9]May 25, 2024

It getting 'out of hand' was the whole point, of course. But the fact remains that the Post dug into this flap more than three years ago and declined to report on it after concluding that the upside-down flag was hoisted by the justice's wife, over a neighborhood dispute. The dispute, it seems, originated from [10]bouts of profane rudeness from left-wing residents: "Alito said that a neighbor had posted a sign saying 'Fk Trump' near a school bus stop and then a sign attacking his wife, Martha-Ann Alito. On a walk, the justice told Fox, the Alitos got into an argument with the neighbor, who used the term 'ct' at one point. His wife then flew the inverted flag," which is a sign of distress. But the New York Times' breathless reporting in recent days is designed to conjure up the impression that Alito is a pro-Capitol-riot, 'stop the steal' lunatic. Facts that were explored and dismissed at the time have been resurrected and distorted, as part of a shameless political hit job. As for the other 'problematic flag,' what [11]an embarrassing attack:

Rather than retreat in humiliation, the Times doubled down this week with a follow-up report of yet another flag—this one right-side up—spotted at the Alitos' vacation home in New Jersey. The left tells us that the 1775 Pine Tree flag was spotted among Jan. 6 protesters! And moreover, that its catch phrase, "an appeal to heaven," derives from a radical character—John Locke. The Times somehow fails to let readers know that the flag is a longtime symbol of independence; that it was designed by George Washington's secretary; was flown on ships commissioned by Washington; has been honored, commemorated and flown over state capitols; and is the official maritime flag of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. It is currently displayed outside the office of the speaker of the House. Dozens of historic flags were toted to the Capitol on Jan. 6, as were copies of the Constitution and pictures of the American eagle. Are they all now symbols of "insurrection"?

The 'Appeal to Heaven' banner was never controversial or "linked" to January 6th until the journo class [12] abruptly decided that it was, as part of a preposterous pile-on. Beware the Trump insurrectionists who run...San Francisco?

lest you think this was just 2019, the Appeal To Heaven flag was flying outside San Francisco City Hall in 2023 as well — the same time frame as at Alito's beach house

Dastardly insurrectionists everywhere [13]pic.twitter.com/x7oNSx2hct— Logan Dobson (@LoganDobson) [14]May 25, 2024

The lengths to which people will go to re-write history on the fly, in service of craven politics, is creepy and Orwellian:

Wikipedia edits on the Pine Tree Flag page are fascinating.

On Wednesday, it was just a normal flag.

On Friday, it's now a symbol of Christian nationalism and right-wing extremism.

And the Popular Culture section on the HBO miniseries has been completely removed. [15]pic.twitter.com/vladtsCiyZ— Andrew Kerr (@AndrewKerrNC) [16]May 24, 2024

Recall that a well-known dictionary company [17]literally altered the definition of a term overnight, in support of a separate partisan assault against another current member of the Court. Nevertheless, Senate Democrats – including many of the same cretins who seized upon the insane, debunked Julie Swetnick/Michael Avenatti 'serial gang rape parties' smear of Brett Kavanaugh to demand the withdrawal of his nomination – are pouncing on the humiliating, made-up flags 'scandal' to issue new demands. They want Alito to recuse himself from certain cases. They want new rules imposed on the justices. They insist upon 'emergency' meetings to address this garbage (they actually wrote the words "[18]MAGA battle flags" in their idiotic press release). And they're making dark threats like this, via a [19]conspiratorial lunatic and prominent [20]all-white club member:

Raskin: “if and when we win back the House and the Senate and the White House we will look at the Supreme Court and figure out what can be done about that extremely corrupted and contaminated body.” Yes we will, brother. Yes we will.[21]<https://t.co/tqrffjtEnl>— Sheldon Whitehouse (@SenWhitehouse) [22]May 24, 2024

As an aside, Rep. Raskin, last seen [23]cowering and caving to pro-Hamas mobs in Maryland, is quoted here railing against the “extremely corrupted and contaminated” Supreme Court over its, um, [24]unanimous decision against a fringe, anti-democracy left-wing effort to force Donald Trump off of ballots. The ‘corruption and contamination’ runs so deep that they’ve even gotten to Sotomayor, or something. Do these people hear themselves? What’s frightening is seeing them openly broadcast the sorts of power-grabs they would be willing to attempt against the Court if given the opportunity. These sorts of people have contempt for our country and our system, assailing and bullying any check or balance that frustrates their thirst for political supremacy and power:

Nothing says don’t question the legitimacy of elections and “our Democracy” like “stolen seats.” [25]pic.twitter.com/bRxZ8RMrnJ— Randy Barnett (@RandyEBarnett) [26]May 25, 2024

No one should take seriously any lectures about democracy, institutions, or norms from these clowns. And the hackery truly is off the charts. [27]Just look at these Senate Democrats go:

In 2016, Justice Ginsburg—not her spouse—weighed in against Trump’s election, suggested fleeing the country, and made comments about his tax returns.

Why did Senate Democrats not call for her recusal in any Trump case—including one about his taxes? [28]<https://t.co/4b3syltgwV> [29]pic.twitter.com/AMg9HpftuG— John McCormack (@McCormackJohn) [30]May 25, 2024

They never called for RBG to recuse herself (just like they ignored ‘ethical issues,’ under their own, ever-changing, on-the-fly ‘standards’ from Sotomayor and others) because they don’t actually believe any of this rubbish. They don't adhere to consistent principles or standards. They pursue whatever they feel like they must, in any given moment, to achieve political and ideological advantage. That's it. Their pathetic histrionics should be ignored by the Court, but not by Republicans or voters. These are radicals who pose an actual threat to the country's governing institutions and the rule of the law. They are aided and abetted by many in the news media. They must not be entrusted with the power they covet and crave. Speaking of histrionics, I'll leave you with this:

"There are days that I come to my office, close my door, and cry."

[31]pic.twitter.com/hD4F4IM8vO— End Wokeness (@EndWokeness) [32]May 26, 2024

Given the Left's [33]fleeting rules from 2018 – when they claimed Brett Kavanaugh's righteously furious reaction to being baselessly accused of gang rape painted a troubling portrait of his temperament and fitness for the beach – is Sonia Sotomayor emotionally stable enough to remain on the Court? [34]By the way, the Roberts Court is not actually very right-wing, isn't unusually 'activist,' and Sotomayor is quite often in the majority. That little emotive rant seems to be her way of previewing that the leftist screamers are not going to like a number of the rulings that will be announced in the coming weeks. It may be time to further enhance the justices' security details, given the dangerous, unhinged rhetoric and conduct that might once again follow – shamefully stoked by politicians at the highest levels of the inaptly-named Democratic Party.

1.6.3 Biden Is Handing a Taxpayer-Funded Military Installation to the Russians (2024-06-05 14:54)

Lawmakers are ringing the alarm on another Biden foreign policy crisis unfolding in Africa that again has the president in a retreat.

The current administration's foreign policy has been a mess from the start. Crises from Biden's deadly withdrawal from Afghanistan, executive actions to open the U.S.-Mexico border to illegal aliens from all corners of the globe, and weakness in the face of an increasingly concerning unholy alliance made up of Russia, China, Iran, and North Korea have left the U.S. looking weak and off its game on the world stage.

Another less noticed, but still alarming, situation continues to devolve in the West African nation of Niger, where Biden is — despite his tough talk about Putin when discussing Ukraine — staging a U.S. retreat as Russian forces and other American adversaries take control. According to an announcement last month, the Department of Defense will withdraw American forces from Niger by September 15.

The latest developments from this "deteriorating situation" drew the attention of House lawmakers who warn that what's happening in Niger "is impacting thousands of American citizens, servicemembers, and diplomats" whose wellbeing is being jeopardized by the Biden administration's decision to retreat — a move that will create a "void that will be filled by our adversaries and violent extremist organizations."

Expressed in a [1]letter to Secretary of Defense Lloyd Austin and Secretary of State Antony Blinken, these justified concerns were raised by House Foreign Affairs Chairman Michael McCaul (R-TX), Chief Deputy Whip Guy Reschenthaler (R-PA) who are joined by Reps. Robert Aderholt (R-AL), Ben Cline (R-VA), Jeff Duncan (R-SC), Pat Fallon (R-TX), Richard Hudson (R-NC), Dan Meuser (R-PA), John Moolenaar (R-MI), and Austin Scott (R-GA).

CHM [2]@RepMcCaul, Chief Deputy Whip [3]@GReschenthaler, and eight of their House Republican colleagues sent a letter to [4]@SecBlinken and [5]@SecDef on the deteriorating situation in Niger, as the military junta there becomes increasingly friendly with the Putin regime.— House Foreign Affairs Committee Majority (@House-ForeignGOP) [6]May 31, 2024

Specifically, because "the junta in Niger has restricted U.S. presence in the country," there is a "lack of safety for Americans, troop resupplies, and diplomatic overflights," lawmakers wrote. What's more, the letter reminds Secretary Austin that he recently confirmed "the Russian military has gained access to Airbase 101 in Niger, where American forces are currently stationed."

Citing other reports, lawmakers say "Russian forces and their paramilitary partners, equipment, and air defense systems have been installed near U.S. forces" after the U.S. invested millions of dollars in training for Niger's military and invested $100 million to construct a military installation at Airbase 201 in 2023. "Undoubtedly, Russian forces and their paramilitary group will occupy this taxpayer-funded base once we fully withdraw from the country," the letter grimly concludes.

"In Niger, President Biden's weakness has resulted in another chaotic withdrawal to the benefit of Russia, China, and violent extremists aligned with al-Qaeda and the Islamic State," the lawmakers emphasize. "This will certainly be yet another failed chapter of the president's leadership."

Advertisement

Biden's decision to withdraw from Niger is hardly the first time the president's weakness in the face of the unholy alliance's challenge to American power. As the lawmakers note, there have been 11 embassies and consulates evacuated by the Biden administration since the president's disastrous and deadly withdrawal from Afghanistan.

1.6.4 My Top 8 Games of 1994 (2024-06-05 15:16)

Note: For my money, 1994 was the year that truly saw the Super Nintendo come into its own. While Nintendo split their attention between the Super NES and NES to some extent in 1993, 1994 saw the last licensed game released for the NES (Wario's Woods) as Nintendo focused solely on their 16-bit machine. That said, Sega was not exactly sitting quietly on the sidelines, releasing a phenomenal RPG title as well as a title that included technology not seen before.

Honorable Mentions:

- Arcade: Killer Instinct, Primal Rage
- Atari Jaguar: Alien Versus Predator
- PC: Doom II - Hell on Earth
- Sega Genesis: Shining Force II, Streets of Rage 3, Maximum Carnage, Mortal Kombat II

- Gameboy: Bonk's Revenge, Donkey Kong
- NES: Chip 'n Dale - Rescue Rangers 2, Zoda's Revenge - Startropics II
- Super NES: Breath of Fire, Illusion of Gaia, Knights of the Round, R-Type III - The Third Lightning, Maximum Carnage

8. Wario Land: Super Mario Land 3 (Gameboy)(Tie)

After the release of Super Mario Land 2 on the Gameboy, it was only a question of when, not if, a sequel would be coming. What practically no one expected was for the sequel to star Wario, introduced as Mario's nemesis in Super Mario Land 2, as the protagonist. Not a surprise? The quality of the game. Wario Land is an excellent platformer that combines the level design of past Mario titles with an array of new power-ups for Wario (in the form of caps). Playing upon Wario's greed, the goal of the game is to gather as many coins and treasures as possible in order for Wario to build his ultimate castle. The aforementioned treasures are well hidden, though, as are numerous secret levels (similar to Super Mario World). This game may now be thirty years old, but it is so well designed that revisiting it today is just as much fun as playing it upon release.

8. Mega Man 6 (NES)(Tie)

I'm a sucker for the Mega Man series, so there is a bias here. Still, I think it's worth noting that this game, released extremely late in the life of the NES (it came out after Mega Man X for the Super NES), does not simply rest on the popularity of the franchise. While the gameplay is largely unchanged from the previous entries, Capcom did add in some new ideas. Most notably are the Rush adapters. Gone are the Rush Coil, Rush Jet, and Rush Marine, in their place, Mega Man can acquire a Rush Power Adapter which gives him a strong, short range charged shot, as well as a Rush Jet Adapter which equips Mega Man with a jet pack. Again, it would have been easy for Capcom to phone this title in, but instead they delivered a game that is classic Mega Man, but also incorporates enough new ideas to feel unique within the series.

7. Sonic the Hedgehog 3 / Sonic & Knuckles (Sega Genesis)(Tie)

I'm listing these titles together because they feel like two parts of one game (they were being developed as one title, but were ultimately split due to time constraints and expenses). The gameplay and design of these two titles are classic Sonic the Hedgehog, but what makes both so special is the lock-on technology Sega used with the Sonic & Knuckles cartridge. Placing Sonic 3 (or Sonic 2) into the Sonic & Knuckles cart would make Knuckles the playable character of the game. Given Knuckles unique abilities (flying and climbing), playing as him in either title changed the feel of the game drastically. I can still remember when this launched and how groundbreaking it seemed. I'm a bit confused that no other games ever attempted this, but we'll always have Sonic & Knuckles.

7. Phantasy Star IV: The End of the Millennium (Sega Genesis)(Tie)

There are many Sega titles that you can look at as an answer to a Nintendo game, but thinking of Phantasy Star only as an answer to Final Fantasy would be doing Phantasy Star a grave injustice. While I've never completed Phantasy Star IV, I have completed about 50-60 % of it, and it easily stands alongside titles such as Final Fantasy IV, Final Fantasy VI, and Chrono Trigger as a stellar 16-bit RPG title. Phantasy Star IV combines a deep story with RPG staples such as magic attacks (techniques) and a large map to explore. While my previous save file is now gone (RIP my Xbox 360), this is a game I have every intention of picking up again. It is a true gem.

6. Demon's Crest (Super NES)

Of all the side characters to get their own game, the Red Demon from Ghosts 'N Goblins was probably low on most people's list, but after successful games on the Gameboy (Gargoyle's Quest) and NES (Gargoyle's Quest 2), Capcom decided to give Firebrand (the Red Demon) an entry on the Super NES as well. While the previous two entries played like action RPG's with a world map and side-scrolling sections, Demon's Crest features levels that you can visit in any order, and then revisit as you upgrade Firebrand's abilities which allows you to access new areas and obtain new powers. Demon's Crest also features multiple endings, one of which can be achieved without ever seeing the latter few levels of the game (I know this because it took me a couple of playthroughs to find this out). My brother and I picked this game up on clearance for $20.00 at Wal-Mart, and it's still a title I go back to every now and again.

5. Castlevania: Bloodlines (Sega Genesis)

I feel that Castlevania: Bloodlines is often overshadowed by Super Castlevania IV, which is a shame. While Super Castlevania IV edges Bloodlines out by a hair (in my opinion, of course), Bloodlines is still a phenomenal Castlevania title (I have it at #3 on my [1]personal ranking of the console Castlevania titles). While the gameplay is similar to IV and the NES titles, Bloodlines allows you to pick one of two characters to play through the game as, with each having a distinctive playstyle. John Morris, who uses a whip, and Eric Lecarde, who uses a spear. In some levels, the characters will take different paths as Eric can perform a high jump while John can swing across gaps using his whip. This variety, combined with stellar level design, makes this a must play game.

4. Donkey Kong Country (Super NES)

Resurrecting a decade old character as the centerpiece of a new game was an...interesting decision, but what Rare did with Donkey Kong Country was nothing short of amazing. First of all, the game had groundbreaking visuals for the era (and is still striking today). Rare utilized prerendered 3-D graphics for the title which was unlike nearly any other console game at the time. Secondly, the soundtrack was and is fantastic. David Wise was hired to score the game and played the levels to get an idea for the score. Aquatic Ambience never fails to impress me. Finally, the meat of the game, the gameplay and design, are also top-notch. The levels are challenging but never feel unfair. All these years later, and DKC still feels fresh whenever I play it.

3. Mega Man X / Mega Man X2 (Super NES)

As an avid Mega Man fan, when I learned of the existence of Mega Man X, I knew I had to have it (I didn't have a Super NES right away, so it was out for some time before I had the ability to play it). When I finally did so, I was not disappointed. Mega Man X & X2 take the standard Mega Man formula, and essentially speed it up. Mega Man X is given a dash as well as a wall-jump. Both allow you to speed through levels, especially as you get used to the excellent level design. I did not realize that Mega Man X2 came out only about ten months after Mega Man X. It's rather amazing that X2 is practically as great as X given the quick turnaround time. Having both of these games come out in the same year for the Super NES is basically an embarrassment of riches.

2. Final Fantasy III (Super NES)

This was the first Final Fantasy I ever played, and remains my favorite still today. Truly, I can find no negatives in this game. The story is in-depth and a bit of a rollercoaster, with at least a couple of surprising twists as you navigate the game. Final Fantasy III features around 16 playable characters, each with a unique backstory and engaging character arcs (for the most part). As an aside, my personal favorite is probably Gau, who learns enemies' moves by visiting a section of the world called the Veldt. Finally, no mention of this game is complete without acknowledging that Kefka is one of the most devious and malevolent video game villains ever created, and (spoiler alert here) he actually succeeds in his plans.

1. Super Metroid (Super NES)

I know, big surprise here. I love this game. I've written about it a [2]few [3]times now. I'm not sure what else I can say at this point. I love the design of the game, the music, the atmosphere, the fact that it tells a story with minimal to no dialogue. The world is so well constructed that I'm still finding new ways to traverse it. It encourages outside the box thinking, but never demands it, meaning you can play it completely straight or approach it in a way that bucks the intended progression. Super Metroid is not only my favorite game from 1994, but my favorite game ever made. Thirty years old, and this game still gives me chills every single time I play it. Truly a masterpiece.

1.6.5 My Top 8 Games of 1993 (2024-06-05 15:19)

Note: 1993 saw the Super NES continue to receive support from both Nintendo and third parties. That said, the NES was still not quite finished, receiving even more games, including one that would become a classic. Meanwhile, 1993 was an oddly quiet year for Sega when it came to blockbuster titles. The titles that did come to the Genesis were generally high quality entries, they just were not in the same category as some of the titles the Super NES got in 1993. Also, I'm bringing back a few ties for this list. I just can't help myself.

Honorable Mentions:

- NES: Ducktales 2, Ultima V: Warriors of Destiny
- Super NES: Actraiser 2, Goof Troop, Pocky & Rocky, Star Fox, The 7th Saga, Lufia & the Fortress of Doom

- Sega Genesis (CD): Ecco the Dolphin, Gunstar Heroes, Jurassic Park, Shining Force, Splatterhouse 3, Streets of Rage 2, Thunder Force IV
- Super NES / Sega Genesis: Alien 3, Aladdin, Zombies Ate My Neighbors
- TurboGrafx-16: Bomberman 93, Bonk 3
- GameBoy: Adventure Island 3, Final Fantasy Legend III
- Arcade: Mortal Kombat II
- PC: Myst

8. Battle Cars (Super NES)(Tie)

I'm going to say something that is counter-intuitive given that this game is on this list: this is not a great game. I'm 100 % aware of this. It has flaws, it's unfair in many instances, and it doesn't have much variety. All of that said, this game still holds a special place in my heart and I cannot leave it off this list. In Battle Cars, you pick one of a few cars and race on a track in what appears to be a post-apocalyptic world. You can either play solo and race against a boss car or in two player mode. Oh, and I'm using "track" loosely here because I don't think there is a track, just a road. You have a few weapons that you can switch between to destroy other cars and slow the boss car down. As mentioned above, this game is tough. Later boss cars seem almost unbeatable (and, as a matter of fact, I've never beaten this game). So, the reason I still love this game is it's one my brother and I use to rent and play all the time. I still have a ton of nostalgia for this title, and so it simply has to be here.

8. Super Godzilla (Super NES)(Tie)

Not to create a questionable theme here, but this is another game that I understand isn't great, but is a game that I think is very interesting to play. Taking its cues from Godzilla 2: War of the Monsters on the NES, Super Godzilla is a strategy game that has you control the titular monster through various scenarios in what is essentially a strategy game. However, from time to time, you will encounter enemies (UFO's or other monsters from Godzilla's canon) that switch you to a battle scene. In this scene, you need to raise Godzilla's fighting spirit by attacking the opposing monster, then backing up to open attack windows. Once you have an attack, you trigger it, and a cut scene will play showing the attack take place. It's not a title that's easy to learn, but if you give it some time, I think it's a game that will entertain you with its intriguing choices in regards to gameplay.

7. Bubble Bobble 2 (NES)(Tie)

The sequel to Bubble Bobble (obviously), Bubble Bobble 2 is essentially more of the same with just a few tweaks. Boss fights are introduced, as are a few new bubble types. Most noticeably though, is the ability to float upward by inflating Bub/Bob. This replaces the bubble hopping mechanic from the original. Also changed is the ability to play two-player simultaneously.

In Bubble Bobble 2, you alternate levels, which is a bit disappointing. At the end of the day though, Bubble Bobble is a fantastic game, so getting more of a fantastic game is never a bad thing. Unfortunately, getting this game is nearly impossible as it is ridiculously rare.

7. Clayfighter (Super NES)(Tie)

Just in case I haven't mentioned it before, I'm terrible at fighting games. Something about them simply does not click in my head. I lost the tutorial fight on Injustice guys. I'm bad. Clayfighter, though, is a fighter I could get behind. A completely silly take on the fighting genre, Clayfighter sees you fighting as one of a handful of clay figures (Bad Mr. Froster, Ickybod Clay, etc...) complete with special moves and what would be brutal attacks if these weren't clay figures. The game is completely ridiculous, but that was kind of the point, and it works beautifully. If you've never given this title a chance, I strongly recommend it. It has to be played to be fully appreciated.

6. Sonic CD (Sega Genesis / CD)(Tie)

Initially a port of the original Sonic the Hedgehog, Sonic CD became its own title and does the series great justice. Featuring classic Sonic gameplay and level design, Sonic CD also includes a time travel future that sees Sonic travel between the future and the past in an effort to get the “happy” version of the third level in each zone. This requires you to travel to the past in the first two levels of a zone and destroy a robot transporter. I don't have much more to say about Sonic CD, but that's only because Sonic is quite straight forward. And that's not a bad thing.

6. SimCity 2000 (PC)(Tie)

For my money, this is the definitive entry in the SimCity franchise. The gameplay is right there in the title. You take a plot of land and build a city. It's sort of insane that this game can be simultaneously intensely deep and detailed, but very user friendly. I don't know how it works, but it just does. I spent many, many hours with this game and learned, conclusively, that I should never run a city. Even when you're failing as mayor though, this game is just a ton of fun to play.

5. Claymates (Super NES)

I consider this game to be a sibling to Clayfighters. They were developed at the same time and share an art style (I intend to cover this in a future Retrospection post). But while Clayfighters was a fighting game, Claymates is a platformer, and a brilliant platformer at that. Claymates sees you take control of Clayton, the young son of a scientist. Turned into a ball of clay by a witch doctor, Clayton must traverse the world to rescue his father and turn himself back into a human. The key to this game is that Clayton can change into one of five different animals by touching colored balls of clay in level. Each animal has distinct abilities that allow you to tackle each level in the way that best suits you (and what animal transformations are available in each level). The levels are generally quite large and allow for plenty of exploration. The only downside to this title is the lack of a password or save feature, but there are warps in each world that let you jump forwards quickly. Often overlooked, this game is hidden gem in the Super NES library.

4. Kirby's Adventure (NES)

Growing up, I didn't realize that this was the first title that gave Kirby his copy ability. Having missed out on Kirby's Dream Land, I had always assumed that Kirby could always copy enemy abilities. Anyway, Kirby's Adventure on the NES took Kirby from fun little platformer to Nintendo stalwart. The level design is simply stellar, the length of the game is perfect, and the copy ability was a complete gamechanger for the fledgling franchise. More recent entries may be prettier, but this game, released very late in the NES's life, still holds up today as one of Kirby's best entries.

3. The Legend of Zelda: Link's Awakening (GameBoy)

Link's first handheld adventure was a perfect translation of the series from home console to handheld. Link's Awakening sees Link washed up on the beach of Koholint Island, which is apparently only in existence as part of the Windfish's dream, the Windfish being a creature that sits atop a mountain on Koholint. For Link to return to Hyrule, he must wake the Windfish, but doing so could cause Koholint to disappear. The surprisingly deep story is accompanied with same stellar gameplay that graced previous entries in the Zelda franchise along with some new items for Link to use on his adventure. While this was remade for the Switch, the original is still a fantastic title that plays just as well today as it did when it launched.

2. Secret of Mana (Super NES)

The sequel to the Final Fantasy Adventure on GameBoy, Secret of Mana is considered by many to be one of, if not the, best games on the Super NES. An Action RPG, Mana sees you accidentally bring about the return of monsters by pulling the Mana Sword from its resting place. Exiled from your village, you must travel the world and befriend a couple of companions to determine your fate and, ultimately, battle against both the Empire and the Mana Beast. Secret of Mana is a sprawling game that features hours of gameplay and dozens of locales to visit and revisit. The game includes real time weapon attacks along with magical attacks that are gained as you explore the world and restore the Mana Seeds. While I'm not as fond of Secret of Mana as many people (hence it being at #2 on this list), it is still a masterpiece of the game and deserves the accolades it still receives.

1. E.V.O.: Search for Eden (Super NES)

A game published by Enix that far too few people are aware of, EVO is a game about evolution and time. EVO tasks you with guiding a creature through various ages, defeating other creatures for evolution points that can be used to strengthen your creature in a variety of ways. You do this first in the sea, then on land, and then (possibly) in the air. The joy of EVO is that you can play the game a dozen times and have a dozen differing experiences. The possibilities of what you can create feel nearly limitless. Hidden among the evolutions are quasi-secret evolutions, such as a bird, a mermaid, and a human. To this day, I've never played another game like EVO: Search for Eden, and I still enjoy it just as much now as I did the first time I tried it. For those reasons, EVO: Search for Eden is my #1 game of 1993. ([1]Retrospection: E.V.O.: Search for Eden)

Note: In 1992, the console war between the Super Nintendo and Sega Genesis was heating up, though the original NES still saw some true classics released. As far as this ranking goes, I'd be amazed if most anyone reading it didn't take issue with some of my choices, and that's fine, but this is a subjective list. My opinions are the best I can do on these. At least there aren't any ties in this one, so it truly is a Top 8.

Honorable Mention:

- NES: Dragon Quest III & IV, Little Samson, Mega Man 4, TMNT III: The Manhattan Project, Yoshi
- Super NES: Contra III: The Alien Wars, Street Fighter II
- Sega Genesis: Cadash
- GameBoy: Kirby's Dream Land
- Game Gear: Crystal Warriors
- Arcade: Mortal Kombat

8. Thunder Force III (Sega Genesis) / Thunder Spirits (Super NES)

When I first played this as Thunder Spirits, I had no idea that it was a port of Genesis series. All I knew is that I loved the fast paced action, various weapons, and beautiful visuals. For me, R-Type will always be the space shooter standard, and Thunder Force / Thunder Spirits comes the closest to that experience of any space shooter I've ever played. While there are some minor differences in the two versions, they are close enough that I'm fine placing them together here. I'm also reminded that I really, really need to play the other Thunder Force titles.

7. Ecco the Dolphin (Sega Genesis)

Full disclosure, I've never been able to finish this game. It's tough as nails, which is surprising given the style of the game would make a person think it's aimed at younger children. This is not the case. As Ecco, you will explore the vastness of the oceans trying to determine what has become of your pod, all of whom were captured within a storm/water spout. Ecco has a surprisingly deep story involving aliens and time travel. Ecco's controls and visuals were unlike most anything else on the market at the time of release, and both have held up quite well. Given the popularity of this character and game series, it's a bit surprising that Sega has not revisited the series. It feels like the time is right for Ecco to make his return.

6. Adventure Island 3 (NES)

The first of two controversial placements. I'm a [1]sucker for the Adventure Island [2]series, and Adventure Island 3 is the peak of the games. Featuring the same tight platforming of Adventure Island 2 while expanding upon the weapons and dinosaurs you can use, Adventure Island 3 perfectly scratches the itch that this series creates. Sadly, the direct sequel would never see an American release and the Super NES entries either abandoned the advancements of Adventure Island 2 & 3 (Super Adventure Island) or turned the series into an Action RPG (Super Adventure Island 2). While I quite like Super Adventure Island 2, it's a shame that there's never been a title building upon 3 in the way 3 built upon 2.

5. Sonic the Hedgehog 2 (Sega Genesis)

As I've noted previously, I'm not a big Sonic fan, but Sonic the Hedgehog 2 has always struck me as being just a bit different than the other entries. While the speed is definitely there, I've always felt I had more control in Sonic 2 than in the other entries I've played. It helps that Sonic 2 has a stellar soundtrack and one of the best levels of any game I've played in Casino Nights. I wish I liked this franchise more than I do, but I can at least praise Sonic 2.

4. Super Mario Kart (Super NES)

Coming after the fantastic F-Zero, Super Mario Kart used the same Mode 7 graphical set-up as F-Zero, but was otherwise a far different, though not inferior, experience. Taking control of a Mario related character of your choice, you use racing prowess as well as various power-ups to overtake the other characters on tracks themed on levels from the Mario franchise. While I don't know how well Super Mario Kart has aged, it can't be overstated how big this game was when it launched, how fantastic it looked at the time, and how massive the Mario Kart franchise would ultimately become. And while it probably hasn't aged as well as some other 16-bit titles, it is still a ton of fun to sit down and play even today.

3. Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles IV: Turtles in Time (Super NES)

A port of the arcade title of the (somewhat) same name, TMNT IV on the Super NES truly captures the fun of the Turtles cartoon that many of us watched growing up. I feel that the port actually exceeds the arcade original by adding in more TMNT characters as bosses and enemies and sharpening up the graphics a bit (my own opinion on this one). Also, while it's just an additional play mechanic, TMNT IV allowed you to throw enemies towards the screen, which was never not a joy to do. The game then featured a boss that required you to do this to win. The Super NES port of TMNT IV became quite hard to find, so I'm forever grateful to Konami for releasing the Cowabunga Collection and allowing an entirely new generation of gamers to experience this gem.

2. Mega Man 5 (NES)

My second controversial placement. I've written about Mega Man 5 [3] before, so I'm not sure what else to say about it. It's the second Mega Man title I owned behind Mega Man 3, which is my favorite of the Mega Man titles. I've played through it dozens of times, including again earlier this year. There's just something about the game that is so nostalgic for me, but even beyond that, I do believe it's a well designed game that carries on the high expectations of the Mega Man franchise. While you may disagree with a ranking this high, if you've never played this Mega Man entry, I would highly recommend you do so. You will not be disappointed.

1. The Legend of Zelda: A Link to the Past (Super NES)

When I do these lists, I sometimes have an internal debate in regards to my number one. This was not the case for this list. A Link to the Past is not only the best game of 1992, it is one of the best games ever made. It is a story of an adventure over two large world maps, both teeming with secrets and friends and foes. It is a stellar game that plays just as well today as when it launched over thirty years ago. Not all games, even those I love, stand the test of time, but A Link to the Past has certainly done just that. You can feel pieces of this game in practically every Zelda game that has come since, not to mention many other titles otherwise unrelated to A Link to the Past. For these reasons, and many more I haven't gotten to, this game is my number one game of 1992.

1.6.7 My Top 8 Games of 1991 (2024-06-05 15:24)

Note: 1991 saw the introduction of the Super NES in North America, so you can't be angry with me if this list seems a little Super NES heavy. Also, I'm cheating again with a few ties. You'll have to forgive me.

Honorable Mention:

- NES: Adventures of Lolo 3, Battletoads, Bomberman 2, Ninja Gaiden III
- Super NES: Darius Twin, Gradius III, Pilotwings, Super Ghouls'n Ghosts
- Sega Genesis: Alien Storm, Quackshot, Romance of the Three Kingdoms II
- TurboGrafx-16: Bonk's Revenge
- Gameboy: Kid Icarus
- Game Gear: Crystal Warriors
- Arcade: Earth Defense Force, Knights of the Round

8. F-Zero (Super NES)(Tie)

One of (if not the) earliest racing games on the Super NES, F-Zero offered futuristic racing and the simulation of 3-D graphics with the use of Mode 7. Both fun and challenging, F-Zero managed to stay relevant on the console in spite of being released very early in the Super NES' lifespan. I would also be remiss if I didn't mention the absolutely amazing soundtrack which is easily one of the best two or three out of the entire Super NES library.

8. Metroid II: Return of Samus (Gameboy)(Tie)

The follow-up to the NES classic, Metroid II saw bounty hunter Samus Aran take the fight directly to the Metroid home world, SR388. While limited in scope due to being released on the Gameboy, Metroid II introduced new power-ups, some of which still show up in the series, as well as the idea of different variations of the titular Metroid. A remake on the 3DS saw a fuller realization of Metroid II, but for the time and console it was developed for, Metroid II was a very impressive feat.

7. Adventure Island II (NES)(Tie)

I've already opined on Adventure Island II recently, but am always happy to talk it up. While keeping the platforming gameplay of the original, Adventure Island II made improvements in almost every facet of the series. The level design was tighter, as were the controls. The levels featured a higher level of variety in terms of theme. New items and weapons were introduced, most notably, four dinosaur companions that Master Higgins could ride, granting him more maneuverability and/or attacks. My personal favorite of the Adventure Island titles, Adventure Island II is definitely one of the gems of the NES library.

7. Golden Axe II (Sega Genesis)(Tie)

I'm pretty terrible at beat-em-ups, so a title in that genre has to be great to pull me in. Enter Golden Axe II. One of the most renowned titles and series on the Genesis, Golden Axe II continued the excellent gameplay of Golden Axe. Ridable creatures are included as is the ability to pick your character. Golden Axe II is not an easy game (at least, for me), but even when I would die, I would still want to start over, which I believe speaks very highly of the title.

7. Tiny Toon Adventures (NES)(Tie)

There was a time when games based on cartoons or movies were generally quite good. A bad game was essentially the exception. Included in the majority is the platformer Tiny Toon Adventures. Tiny Toon Adventures sees you play as Buster Bunny attempting to rescue Babs from the villainous Montana Max. Along the way, you can choose to be accompanied in each world by Dizzy, Furrball, and Plucky, whom you can change into upon finding a certain item. Each character brings an ability that changes up the gameplay. Tiny Toon Adventures is an excellent platformer that is still held up today as one of the best games on the NES.

6. Final Fantasy Adventure (Gameboy)(Tie)

The first entry in the Seiken Densetsu series, Final Fantasy Adventure is an action RPG that plays much more like a Legend of Zelda title with RPG elements than it does a traditional Final Fantasy title. Your character, the “hero,” can use magic in addition to physical attacks. While a fantastic game in its own right, Final Fantasy Adventure may be best known as the forerunner to Secret of Mana. If you’re a fan of the latter and have never played Final Fantasy Adventure, I would highly suggest doing so as it is easily one of the best titles on Nintendo’s handheld.

6. Neutopia II (TurboGrafx-16)(Tie)

Neutopia II didn't change very much from the original, but in my opinion, it didn't really need to. Neutopia II, like its predecessor, plays very, very much like Legend of Zelda (which was the point), but while it is a Zelda clone, it is a phenomenal clone, and that's all I ask in a title that is imitating another title. I don't have much to add to this. Neutopia was a great game, and Neutopia II is a great game. Both are available on PSN and if you're looking to scratch that retro Zelda itch, you can't do much better than Neutopia.

6. Super R-Type (Super NES)(Tie)

R-Type was a well known and very popular horizontal shooter series before Super R-Type launched, yet Irem managed to outdo themselves even with the previous entries being highly regarded. Super R-Type is tough as nails and yet tons of fun at the same time. Irem truly nailed the delicate balance of difficulty and enjoyment. I'll admit to never being able to beat this game, but the pure joy of playing it brought me back time and time again.

5. Sonic the Hedgehog (Sega Genesis)

I have to make a confession here. I am not a fan of Sonic the Hedgehog. I was a Nintendo kid so I simply never had the chance to play the most well-known entries. Still that said, now that I have been able to play them, I am certain that a younger me with more time would have been obsessed with Sonic. It's also impossible to overstate the effect Sonic the Hedgehog had on the gaming market in 1991. While I find the Mario titles to be the better designed games, Sonic brought a pace and speed to platforming that I'm not sure any other title had previously touched.

4. Actraiser (Super NES)

Actraiser is such a unique title that I'm not sure any other game exists that can be adequately compared to it (save for it's own remake released a couple of years ago). Actraiser is one part platformer, one part city building. In the platforming levels, you are tasked with clearing an area of monsters, culminating in a boss fight, while the city building sections see you control a cherub/angel that allows you to direct your citizens in growing their town. You are also able to use miracles to clear the land and help your people, who respond by locating power-ups that will be offered to you. While the platforming levels never changed (for obvious reasons), the city building allowed the game to have a level of variety that straight platformers couldn't match.

3. Final Fantasy II (Super NES)

It kills me not to write Final Fantasy IV, but here we are. The second Final Fantasy to make it to America's shores, Final Fantasy II is just a tremendous RPG, and truly set the standard for any RPG that would follow it on the Super NES. Aside from the standard RPG elements that we're all familiar with at this point, Final Fantasy II introduced the active time battle system, which meant inputting action commands to your characters in real time as opposed to the true turn-based battles which had previously been utilized. As with most Final Fantasy entries, the story is very prominent and deep. Your primary protagonist is Cecil, a warrior stripped of his status after questioning the king. You'll gather a number of characters, each with their own motives and story, to accompany you on your quest. Final Fantasy II is so well made that it is still playable today, over thirty years after its initial release, and is a must for Final Fantasy and RPG fans.

2. Super Castlevania IV (Super NES)

I adore the Castlevania series, and Super Castlevania IV is a large part of why. A re-telling of the original Castlevania, Castlevania IV is, essentially, a 16-bit version of the NES Castlevania titles, which were just fantastic. There are some quality of life improvements, such as the ability to control your jump and whip in multiple directions, but Konami didn't make drastic changes to the series for the first Super NES entry, and they didn't need to. All Super Castlevania IV had to do was continue the excellence of the series, and it did so in spades.

1. Super Mario World (Super NES)

It's difficult to state how revolutionary Super Mario World felt when it debuted with the Super NES. Mario's world was a massive, interconnected land teeming with secrets, branching levels, hidden worlds, and paths. Riding on Yoshi and learning his abilities added another layer to how you could play the game. And seeing Mario and friends (and enemies) in 16-bit was simply amazing. All these years later, and I'm not sure that Nintendo has yet put out a Mario title that tops the complete excellence of Super Mario World, and that is why it's my #1 game of 1991.

1.6.8 My Top 8 Games of 1990 (2024-06-05 15:27)

Note: This is the toughest list I've done yet. 1990 was an extraordinarily great year in gaming so I am straight-up cheating and having a few "ties" on this list. There are just too many good games.

Honorable Mention:

- NES: 8 Eyes, Adventures of Lolo 2, Batman, Chip'n Dale: Rescue Rangers, Gremlins 2, Little Nemo: The Dream Master, Rygar
- TurboGrafx-16: Bonk's Adventure, Splatterhouse, Super Star Soldier
- Sega Genesis: Ghostbusters, Thunder Force III
- Gameboy: Gargoyle's Quest, Final Fantasy Legend
- Misc: SimEarth (PC), Aliens (Arcade)

8. Ninja Gaiden II: The Dark Sword of Chaos (NES)(Tie)

Ninja Gaiden II had a tough act to follow given the success and popularity of Ninja Gaiden, and it definitely delivered. Bringing back the same stellar level design and gameplay with new power-ups and a couple of quality of life improvements (wall climbing), Ninja Gaiden II cemented the series as a must own for the NES. Ninja Gaiden II is the perfect example of a game that is tough as nails, but never feels very unfair. You always feel like you just need to learn the game a little better to succeed. I've personally never bested this game, yet I still love it and still come back to it in the hopes of one day finally conquering it.

8. Startropics (NES)(Tie)

Startropics is very much a Zelda-esque game, though I don't think it can be called a clone. Your viewpoint is top down and in the caverns your character (Mike) moves through rooms that are square or rectangle. You have to push buttons to solve puzzles and battle bosses with a variety of weapons. Yet, as much as it's similar to Zelda, it has a charm and identity that is entirely its own. The story is very interesting, even including a note with the game that must be dipped in water to obtain a message that allows you to advance in game. The graphics are crisp. And the level design and gameplay is extremely sharp. I can't say enough positive about Startropics and, if you haven't yet, you owe it to yourself to give this game a play.

8. Final Fantasy (NES)(Tie)

The game that launched a franchise that is still considered elite today (I've yet to encounter anyone that hasn't enjoyed Final Fantasy XVI). The very first Final Fantasy seems very basic now, but, along with Dragon Warrior and Phantasy Star, paved the way for RPG's on home consoles. Final Fantasy allowed you to pick your party, meaning each play through could be a unique experience, and could be made more difficult or easier based on your decisions. The world is massive with a variety of enemies and bosses to battle. The story, while basic, is good enough. Further entries in the series would tighten up the gameplay, but there's no denying how important and well-made the original Final Fantasy was.

7. Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles II: The Arcade Game (NES)(Tie)

The original TMNT game on the NES is fine, but it was TMNT II that really made you feel as if you were playing the cartoon series that so many of us loved in our childhood (and possibly adulthood). The characters were all there, both the heroes and enemies, the levels were varied, and the sprites, as noted above, were as close as to the cartoon as you could get on the NES. Most importantly though, the gameplay was stellar. Fighting through waves of footclan soldiers, rock soldiers, and mousers, among others, stayed exciting. And as exciting as the game was alone, it was even more so with a friend or sibling. I can't imagine the number of times my brother and I played through TMNT II, but however many times it was, it never got old, and still hasn't gotten old.

7. Neutopia (TurboGrafx-16)(Tie)

I've written about [5]Neutopia before, but in summary, it's a Zelda clone, and quite possibly the most similar Zelda clone that was developed, but it was a great Zelda clone. You play as the hero, Jazeta, and explore the gameworld, looking for caves, items, and the entries to the crypts, in which lurk bosses guarding medallions you must collect to rescue the princess. No, this game is not original, but that doesn't stop it from being a blast to play. The world is very well designed, with differing regions you must explore. There are tons of secrets to locate, and multiple weapons to complement your always handy sword. I noted this in my previous post on Neutopia, but this is another somewhat obscure game that is now available digitally (via PSN) and is a game I would recommend to anyone.

6. Crystalis (NES)

Changing things up a bit, we come to a title with a top down viewpoint and sees you exploring a world in an effort to stop a powerful evil. Okay, so I clearly have a type of video game I prefer. Still, Crystalis is an absolute gem of a game. You as the hero, awake with no memory and are tasked with stopping the villain, Draygon, from entering a Tower that would allow him to rule the world. Crystalis takes place in a post-apocalyptic world. The story of the game is easy to bypass, but if you explore just a bit, you'll find the narrative to be quite deep. Combat consists of using one of four elemental swords alongside items and magic and is implemented very well. Crystalis still holds up today, and is fortunately available via teh SNK collection or on Nintendo Switch Online.

5. Ducktales (NES)

Capcom and Disney had an incredible relationship in the late 1980's and early 1990's, and no game (IMO) topped Ducktales for the NES. Ducktales put you in control of Scrooge McDuck on a quest to gather treasures from five areas of the world, including the moon, with a little help from the other characters in the show. Much like Mega Man, Ducktales also allowed you to play the stages in any order you wished. Once in the stages, there are multiple paths to explore and multiple hazards designed to stop you in your tracks. Fortunately, Scrooge's cane doubles as a pogo stick with which you can dispatch enemies and hop over hazards with relative ease...sometimes. With stellar gameplay and design, Ducktales was renowned then and remains so today, seeing both a re-release alongside other Disney games from that era and a full remake.

4. Ys I & II (TurboGrafx-16)

As an unabashed Ys fan, you had to know this title would show up on my list. Ys I & II is a very unique title in that it does not include an attack button. Instead, to attack, you run directly into enemies, though you must do it off center or from the side or behind. Mess this up a bit, and you'll find your life decreasing far more quickly than your foes. While this may sound awkward to some people, once you give yourself time to adjust to it, you'll find that it flows extremely well and eventually just becomes second nature. Ys I & II also included FMV on the TG-16, a beautiful game world, well designed sprites, a very deep story littered with lore, and a stellar soundtrack. While Adol Christin has come a long way since this outing, seeing a new entry arriving this year (Ys X: Nordics), this first outing shaped the entire franchise and you can still see it's DNA even in the most recent Ys entries.

3. Castlevania III: Dracula's Curse (NES)

Castlevania III is not only an excellent entry for the franchise on the NES, it is my [10]personal favorite Castlevania title. Castlevania III returned the game to its level based roots after the more open-world Castlevania II (also a stellar game), but introduced branching paths allowing you to choose your next destination. Castlevania III also introduced helper characters. These characters, when found, will offer to accompany you, though you can only have one with you at a time. By pushing select, you will transform into Grant Danasty (pirate), Sypha Belnades (sorceress), or Alucard (Dracula's son, making his first appearance in the franchise). Each has special skills that can make traversing the game a bit easier, or a bit harder depending upon the path you choose. While the original title is rightfully acclaimed, Castlevania III tightens all of the screws of the original, giving us what, in my opinion, is my perfect Castlevania game.

2. Mega Man 3 (NES)

Just like Castlevania III, Mega Man 3 is my personal favorite game in the franchise. Mega Man 3 follows up the extraordinary Mega Man 2 by somehow being just a little bit better. The level and enemy design is fantastic, as expected, but Capcom added a slide move, which adds an entirely new element to the game, while also introducing Mega Man's long-time companion, Rush. Mega Man 3 was also the first to pull the "it's not Dr. Wily this time, oh wait, it totally is Dr. Wily this time" twist. This is a short blurb simply because the best I can do is say that this is an amazing game that, if you've somehow missed, you owe it to yourself to play.

1. Super Mario Brothers 3 (NES)

While Mario and Mario 2 are good games, it is Mario 3 that gave us the Mario we still know and love today. An immense NES game, Super Mario Brothers 3 is eight worlds of pure joy. Expanding upon Mario's power-up inventory, Mario 3 introduced the Frog Suit, the Hammer Brothers Suit, and the Tanooki Suit & Leaf, both of which gave Mario the power of flight for the first time. There's simply no way to convey the pure excitement of taking Mario to the sky for the first time. It was a sense of freedom that was practically unparalleled. Mario 3 also includes quite possibly the tightest level design on the NES. No small feat given the NES library. Mario 3 was such an impactful title that the film The Wizard (I'll defend this movie to the end) was practically a commercial for the game. A very good commercial. It's worth noting as well that Mario 3 has aged extremely well and still shows up on top games lists, despite being over thirty years old. For all these reasons and others too numerous to mention, Super Mario Brothers 3 is my top game of 1990.

1.6.9 My Top 8 Games of 1989 (2024-06-05 15:29)

Honorable Mention: Bomberman, Willow, Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles, Adventures of Lolo, Legacy of the Wizard, Adventures of Dino Riki

8. (Tie) Monster Party (NES)

Monster Party is easily one of the oddest games I've ever had the pleasure of playing. You are Mark, a young boy recruited by a winged monster (Bert) to help him save his realm, the Dark World. Bert fuses himself to you, so that you can transform into Bert upon acquiring a specific power-up, though this is temporary. You then traverse multiple platforming levels, battling incredibly odd bosses while searching for a key to exit the level. Monster Party is very strange, but fun in an off-the-wall way. It's also become known for the fact that Nintendo allowed large amounts of blood and the word "Hell" to remain in the game, in spite of their notorious censorship.

8. (Tie) Adventures of DinoRiki (NES)

On its face, Adventures of DinoRiki would appear to be an overhead adventure title, in the vein of The Legend of Zelda, but upon playing it, it becomes clear that this game is nothing of the like. DinoRiki is best described as a top down shooter, as you navigate DinoRiki through each vertically scrolling stage, shooting numerous enemies and navigating the occasional water and gaps that demand precise jumping. While DinoRiki has a very interesting gameplay style, it's held back a bit by the aforementioned jumping, which feels spotty at times, as well as the high difficulty. Still, look past those flaws and you'll still see a game well worth playing.

7. (Tie) Thunder Force II (Sega Genesis)

Following up the well-made Thunder Force, Thunder Force II improved on the original in numerous ways. Two stage types were included, the overhead view, tasking the player with destroying enemies and bases, and the side-view (which would become the standard for future titles). Thunder Force II also expanded the weapon system and added a pod accessory. Like most games in the shoot-em-up category, Thunder Force II was very difficult, and demanded a certain level of dedication to master. Still, it never feels unfair, and contains enough fun that playing through it multiple times never seems to grow old.

7. (Tie) Ninja Gaiden (NES)

I suspect that this game was responsible for at least a few broken NES controllers, probably due to those $ % & @ $ # birds, but even with all the frustration this game can cause, it is still an excellent title. The level design is just fantastic, and Ryo's ability to climb walls allowed the developers to structure levels differently than most platformers. And while enemy placement was just sadistic, after a few minutes with the game, you come to understand said placement and adjust your playstyle accordingly. While I do think the sequel is a better game overall, there's no denying that Ninja Gaiden is an NES classic.

6. Dragon Warrior (NES)

One of the first RPG's to grace the NES, Dragon Warrior includes many aspects that would become staples of future RPG games for years to come. All of the usual RPG suspects are here, world maps to traverse, random encounters, towns to explore, citizens to speak with, and magic to help your hero in battle. Unlike Final Fantasy, Dragon Warrior puts you in battle in a first person perspective and limits encounters to one enemy at a time. Your goals are also laid out for you, though you will still need to gather information to fully find your way. The first in the series, Dragon Warrior (a/k/a Dragon Quest) is still going strong today, with Dragon Quest XII currently in development.

5. Faxanadu (NES)

A spin-off of Falcom's Dragon Slayer series, Faxanadu combines RPG elements with side-scrolling and platforming elements (it also has a little Metroid DNA in it). You must purchase items in towns you will find to make your character stronger, and battle enemies to gain money and experience. Talking to townspeople is also a must in order to both get information regarding the plot as well as determining your next destination. The game itself is very well made, if a bit difficult, but is held back by an extremely cumbersome password system. Aside from that, the gameplay is solid and holds up just as much today as when the game initially launched.

4. Ducktales (NES)

In the late 1980's and early 1990's Capcom and Disney had a magical relationship, and no game shows that magic more than Ducktales. A platformer that sees you take control of Scrooge McDuck, you start the game by being allowed to pick your first destination, much like the Mega Man series. Once picked, you'll find yourself facing both stage obstacles and enemies. Fortunately, Scrooge's cane acts as a pogo-stick, allowing you to bounce on enemies heads and clear said obstacles, all the while finding as much treasure as possible in route to the level boss. Huey, Dewey, & Louie show up as do Webby, Launchpad, and Gizmoduck. Truly a joy to play, Ducktales would get a sequel as well as a remake in 2013.

3. The Guardian Legend (NES)

I've already [1]written about this game extensively, but it's such a great game, that it deserves additional recognition. Guardian Legend is a game that combines two genres, and pulls both off beautifully. For part of the game, you play from an overhead perspective, exploring rooms screen by screen, much like Zelda. The other portion of the game sees you transform into a spaceship and you enter a corridor that is a vertical shooter. Making this game was a risk given that it crosses genres, yet the finished package remains a great play, and makes it one of the best games on the NES.

2. Wonder Boy III: The Dragon's Trap (Master System)

Taking place immediately after Monster Land, and sees Wonder Boy being cursed and becoming a lizard man at the end of the first level (a simplified version of Monster Land's final level). Once this happens, the game world is opened up and you are free to explore as much as you are able, much like Metroid. Eventually, you will reverse the curse and gain other forms you can transform into, allowing you to access previously inaccessible areas. The game was critically acclaimed and saw release on multiple systems. A remake was released in 2017 and sequels followed in 1994 and 2018.

1. Mega Man 2

At this point, I'm not sure what else can be said about Mega Man 2. Considered by many to be the best in the series, Mega Man 2 took everything done correctly in Mega Man, and made it exponentially better. Featuring excellent level design, excellent enemy design, a high level of difficulty, and a killer soundtrack, Mega Man 2 quickly became a must play title for the NES, and elevated the Mega Man franchise to that of a Castlevania, Metroid, or Mario. Mega Man 2 remains popular today, and has been so revered that when Capcom decided to make a Mega Man 9, it was made to be as much like Mega Man 2 as possible, even removing long-time staples such as the slide and the Mega-Buster. It's because of both the initial success and legacy of this game that it's the best game of 1989.

1.6.10 Top 8 games of 1988 (2024-06-05 15:31)

8. (Tie) Bionic Commando (NES)

Bionic Commando is a very unique platformer from Capcom in that your character can run and gun, but can't jump. Instead, all platforming is done via a bionic arm that acts as a grappling hook. This unique twist on the standard platformer combined with excellent design and challenging bosses would be enough reason to praise Bionic Commando, but the game also features branching paths, meaning that you can experience the game differently from one play to the next. The cherry on top of this game - you get to kill Hitler. It's truly a good time.

8. (Tie) Contra (NES)

Contra is the quintessential run and gun game. Filled to the brim with enemies, bullets, aliens, etc... Contra simply never stops attacking you, and it's truly a joy to experience. Offering a variety of weapons, level designs, and enemies, Contra never ceases to be both exciting and frustrating. That said, it never feels unfair, which is, to me, a sign of a very well designed game. A special shout out here to those of you that have bested this title without using the Konami Code. I certainly have not.

8. (Tie) Golvellius: Valley of Doom (Master System)

Intentionally or not, Golvellius was the Master System's answer to The Legend of Zelda. Utilizing an overhead view, your hero navigates around the overworld one screen at a time, attacking enemies with a sword. It's quite Zelda-esque. Once you begin investigating the multiple caves of the overworld, things change up a bit. In some dungeons, you are shifted to a side-scrolling view and the game becomes something of a platformer. Other dungeons become a play on overhead, auto-scrolling shooters. Golvellius has a few issues to be sure, but it is still a solid game well worth visiting.

7. RC Pro-Am (NES)

You race against the computer over a variety of tracks, picking up or buying power-ups after each race. I honestly don't know what else to say here. It's possibly the most simplistic game style in the world, yet this game by Rare is a ton of fun. I can't describe why I love this game. Maybe it just has to be played to be understood. Whatever it is, it deserves to be on this list.

6. Blaster Master (NES)

Innovation seems to be a theme on this list, and Blaster Master is no exception. The world of Blaster Master is explored in a tank named Sophia the 3rd in a side-scrolling fashion. The world is broken into sections that can't be fully explored, or accessed, until you gain a power-up, very much like Metroid. At certain points, you have to exit Sophia and enter dungeons. These sections are played from an overhead perspective, and are where the bosses in this game are hidden. This could have been a disaster, but thanks to some excellent design work by a development team of around five people, Blaster Master is still held in high regard today.

5. Phantasy Star (Master System)

Phantasy Star is Sega's answer to Final Fantasy, and it is a strong answer (I'll argue that Phantasy Star is better than the original Final Fantasy). Playing much like most RPG's of the era, you explore an overworld, battle in random, turn-based encounters, and level up. Phantasy Star is original in that dungeons are explored in a first person mode, and practically require the drawing of a map to navigate. This may seem cumbersome to some, but for the time, it was hardly unusual, and, for me, holds some charm even today.

4. Ys I: Ancient Ys Vanished (Master System)

The first game in the long-running Ys series, Ys I, like many games on this list, was a very different beast than most games. The game is viewed similarly to Zelda, but your hero, Adol Christin, doesn't attack in the traditional manner. Instead of attacking with the push of a button, you run into your enemies a bit off-center to do damage. This can be frustrating at first, but when it finally clicks, it almost has a rhythm to it, and becomes extremely fun. Ys I also has killer music as well as killer challenge, though not cheap challenge. Definitely one of the best of 1988.

3. Wonder Boy in Monster Land (Master System)

Abandoning the rather barebones approach of the original Wonder Boy (no offense meant, I love Wonder Boy and Adventure Island), Monster Land has many RPG elements. You, as Wonder Boy, explore multiple levels, purchasing stronger equipment as you go, as well as finding or earning items that give you additional powers. Making such drastic changes from one game to the next is a risky move, but in this instance it worked better than I can imagine anyone ever expected. Wonder Boy has kept this style of play, and is still a very relevant franchise today via remakes and sequels.

2. Super Mario Brothers 2 (NES)

At this point, we all know the story. Nintendo of Japan thought American gamers were terrible, so instead of getting the true Mario 2, we got Doki Doki Panic with a Mario facelift. Frankly, it doesn't matter to me. I think this was a positive development as I don't care for Japanese Mario 2. Super Mario Brothers 2 (US) was quite different from its namesake. You pick up enemies instead of jumping on them. You attack by throwing vegetables. Four Mario characters are playable, each with strengths and weaknesses. Bowser is nowhere to be found. For as different as it was, it was still a great game with great design, nice graphics, and interesting worlds. It was even released in Japan as Super Mario Brothers USA. For a title that was only made as a compromise, it has certainly cemented itself as a classic NES title, and is my best of 1988.

1. Zelda II: The Adventure of Link (NES)

Much like Super Mario Brothers 2 deviated from the original (though for vastly different reasons), Nintendo chose to make Zelda II differ from its predecessor. While a top down view was retained for the world map, all action takes place from a side-scrolling perspective. The difficulty of Zelda II was also ramped up, making it a true challenge in latter areas of the game. Finally, Zelda II removed all usable items such as bombs and the boomerang and added magic spells. Zelda II has long been considered a black sheep of the series, but I've always adored this title. It feels like a fuller game than the original, and the discovery of a second entire continent halfway through the game was joyful surprise in my original playthrough. This is a title that I played extensively in my childhood and continue to playthrough today. As a result, it's my #1 game of 1988.

Blogger's Note: I'm doing something here that I don't like. I'm revising and re-posting an old blog post. I prefer to present new content, and that's not happening here (well, at least 50 % isn't new). Now, my reason for doing this is that I wanted to do one of these for each year beginning in 1987. I felt that the best way to kickstart that was to update my original post. Also, I'm starting in 1987 because I researched years prior, and I simply couldn't find enough games I was familiar with or fond of to constitute a list. Please note, this list uses North American release dates as that would be when the game was first available to me.

8. Rygar

Rygar is a game that I'm sad to say I didn't get to fully experience in my childhood. It is one of the first titles to utilize a non-linear gameplay style and was also unique in the use of the Diskarmor as a weapon. Rygar also included sections that were side-scrolling as well as sections that are presented in from an overhead viewpoint. While Rygar only saw one sequel/remake, the title is still held in high regard today, receiving digital releases on the eShop as well as inclusion on Nintendo Switch Online.

7. Kid Icarus

Considering that this game series was dormant for many years, it's quite amazing how popular this title has remained since its release. Built on the Metroid engine, Kid Icarus is primarily a vertical scrolling platformer that puts you in control of Pit. Your weapon is a bow and arrow and you ascend each level, fighting monsters, collecting hearts (currency), and purchasing upgrades and/or supplies. The vertical platforming is interrupted by maze like levels that you traverse one room at a time as you search for the boss. This is a difficult game without a doubt, but was designed well enough that it's still very playable today.

6. Wonder Boy

Re-imagined on the NES as Adventure Island, Wonder Boy is a nifty little platforming game. Instead of a timer, you are forced to constantly pick up fruit as your life meter depletes at a constant rate and fruit increases it. This could be extremely nerve wracking if you missed a few pieces or preferred to take your time in a level. This is also a pretty bare bones game, featuring just a couple of power-ups and none of the more adventure based gameplay that would follow in the sequels, but is still a very fun play.

5. The Goonies II

A sequel to a Japan only game that was based on the movie, The Goonies II is both very fun and very frustrating. A side-scroller, Goonies II allowed you to enter doors and search rooms for items. You could also exit these rooms to find the other side of the map (think of it as a mirror). Hand drawing a map to keep track of your progress was practically a must for this title. Still, in spite of these limitations, I still enjoy playing Goonies II. It has quite a bit of charm and, above exceptions noted, is designed quite well.

4. Castlevania

The roots of one of my favorite series began right here with Castlevania. Taking some lore from Bram Stoker (and, of course, Vlad Tepas), Castlevania put you in the shoes of Simon Belmont and tasked you with taking down the vampire Dracula, as well as a host of other fiends standing between him and you. Castlevania is not without its faults. The difficulty is brutal, as is the realistic but punishing jump mechanic (once you jump, there is no changing direction). Still, the game is extremely well made and while the platforming may be difficult, it doesn't feel impossible or cheap. In addition to the entertaining gameplay, Castlevania boasts one of the best soundtracks of any NES game, including the now classic Bloody Tears track.

3. Mega Man

It's hard to imagine that all of the sequels and spin-offs that were familiar with started because of this one title. Mega Man was revolutionary in a few ways. Choosing your level as opposed to progressing as the game dictates was practically unheard of, as was obtaining a boss's power to use as your own. Mega Man has also endured thanks to excellent gameplay and level design. These staples have endured, resulting in the most recent sequel (11) being the best selling of the entire series.

2. The Legend of Zelda

The grandfather of all adventure games. Much like Metroid, Zelda abandoned most conventions of gaming that existed upon its release and created its own rules. You controlled Link from an overhead perspective and moved one screen at a time. There are dungeon levels, but you are free to attempt them out of order, so long as you have the required items to reach them. The game does give you obscure clues about where to go, but they can be very tricky to figure out. While this can be frustrating at times, once you figure out what to do or where to go, it becomes a very rewarding experience. Legend of Zelda remains one of my top games, not just of 1987, but of all games.

1. Metroid

Metroid broke many conventions upon its release. You were no longer forced to advance from left to right, you explored one large world with no separate stages, and backtracking was a must as your abilities grew. Metroid demanded some expert platforming to traverse the large world and take on the numerous enemies, but it was always well-designed platforming, sparing you from frustration or a sense of being cheated. Metroid also successfully created an atmosphere unlike any seen before. Everything in the game, from the music to the scenery, created an incredible sense of isolation. You were alone in this world and your success or failure was entirely in your hands. No mention of Metroid would be complete without citing the surprise ending, finding out that your adventurer was actually the female bounty hunter, Samus Aran, as opposed to being a man, which is what most players probably assumed. This seems like nothing major now, but in its time, a heroine was almost unheard of, especially one with the toughness of Samus Aran.

1.6.12 Our Brezhnev, our Pravda, our Soviet Union ... (2024-06-08 12:45)

Leonid Brezhnev led the former Soviet Union as general secretary of the Communist Party until 1982. But like most Russian apparatchiks who excessively smoked, drank and gained weight, he aged prematurely. Also like them, his disabilities never led to his abdication.

By Brezhnev's late 60s and early 70s, he was too ill to travel abroad or make public appearances. Indeed, his debility left the Soviet Union without a real leader for the final six or seven years of his tenure.

Brezhnev got away with it because the Soviet state-controlled media doctored photos and videos to attest to his supposedly vigorous health and constant hands-on involvement.

"Journalists" sent out false communiques. They spun narratives that Brezhnev was robust, hale and working long hours on behalf of the Russian people. Any dissenting journalists who sought to report the true, sad state of affairs were in danger of losing their jobs, freedom — or even their lives.

Instead, the "reporters" of Pravda ("Truth"), the official print megaphone of the Central Committee of the Communist Party, wrote lies about Brezhnev's busy workdays. Pravda's handlers spun fables about the respect (and fear) the rest of the world held for such a dynamic leader — even as Brezhnev became an ill virtual recluse.

The cynical Russian people shrugged because they had long been accustomed to their lying media and the falsehoods they peddled. And besides, Brezhnev was a doctrinaire Stalinist communist. So his job was not to rock the boat or upset the Russian communist hierarchy.

Instead, he reigned over the penultimate Soviet "era of stagnation," while an ossified communism increasingly destroyed all incentives and hope, leaving the Russian people poor, cynical and helpless.

Something similar has happened to a calcified America under President Joe Biden. Like the late-stage Brezhnev, Biden is now a president in name only. He has outsourced his administration to a vestigial hard-left apparat from the Obama years.

Now, Biden can no longer even perform his assigned ceremonial tasks of putting a moderate veneer on radical, nihilist agendas that are stagnating the country

Yet our Pravda journalists have sworn to the American people that, in private, the reclusive, three-day-a-week Biden outpaces the energy and drive of those half his age. Obsequious staffers plant stories in the Soviet-like ears of reporters about Biden's singular dynamism.

Any dissenters are publicly demonized as peddlers of "cheap fakes."

When Biden's reclusiveness prompts too much gossip that he is near senile, he is wheeled out for a staged interview that must be edited before release. Or he answers questions secretly shown to him in advance.

On sporadic occasions where the state media and the Biden nomenklatura cannot control events — such as rare presidential debates or international summits — our Pravda media go into overdrive to convince the public that what they see and hear is not real.

In the end, Brezhnev could not even hobble to the May Day dais to celebrate communism's national holiday.

He soon reached the point that his debilities were so manifest that even his hirelings and the media could not hide them. He then vanished from public view, leaving the Russian people with no idea as to who was running their communist nation.

Then one day, Soviet propagandists announced suddenly but matter-of-factly that the dynamic Brezhnev had died and that his successor, Yuri Andropov, was now brilliantly running the Soviet Union.

Biden, too, is at that point of stasis. He cannot do press conferences, town halls, debates or real interviews. To do so would confirm to the public the truth: that Biden is too cognitively challenged to continue his presidency.

And yet the cloistered Biden can no longer hide during a campaign season with his accustomed three-day workweek.

The media have done their best to continue its Orwellian ruse. They claim that Trump interrupted Biden (he did not) in the recent debate and that he lied (if so, not as much as did Biden). Sometimes, the press corps just blurts out that an inert, left-wing Biden is still preferable to a dynamic, conservative Trump.

What is next for our increasingly Soviet state?

We will continue to be lectured on the vigor of Biden — until one day we aren't, when Biden either steps down — or worse.

Then, our Pravda will likely present the new official narrative. They will convince us that his successor, Vice President Kamala Harris, is an underappreciated genius whose past portfolios led to solving the border crisis and renewing American dominance in space.

One day, the same reporters who swore Biden was a virtual Socrates behind closed doors and then suddenly just confessed he was not when their lies were no longer operative will sing the praises of our new comrade leader — the brilliant, accomplished, eloquent and articulate Kamala Harris.

1.6.13 Metroid review (2024-06-09 22:53)

I make it no secret that Metroid is my favorite gaming franchise. While my favorite entries are Super Metroid and Metroid Prime (though I think all of them are excellent...sans Other M, sadly), I started back in the late 1980's with the original on the NES. A few weeks ago, I realized that I hadn't played through the original since that time. I felt that now would be a great time to revisit the title that started this classic Nintendo series.

The Set-up:

You are Samus Aran, possibly the most feared and greatest bounty hunter in the universe. You are tasked by the Galactic Federation to infiltrate the home base of the Space Pirates on planet Zebes with the goal of ending their (the Space Pirates) efforts to replicate and weaponize the parasitic organisms known as Metroids.

Samus is in some serious trouble here

Unlike most games of this era, Metroid drops you into planet Zebes (yes, into) with little to no direction. You are only limited in your exploration by your own abilities, abilities that are upgraded as you explore the planet. As you gain new abilities, you'll find that more of the planet is explorable. While this kind of set-up is fairly standard now, at the time it was practically unheard of, especially in a side scrolling game.

The Story:

As noted above, you, as Samus Aran, have been tasked with stopping the weaponization of Metroids. Native to planet SR388, Metroids can latch onto any living organism and drain that organism's life energy, killing it. The Galactic Federation previously launched their own attack, but were unable to overcome the defenses of the Space Pirates. The federation has turned to Samus as their final hope. Your mission is to infiltrate the planet and destroy the Mother Brain, the biomechanical head of the Space Pirate's operation.

As with many NES games, you won't get most of this story in game (though there is a scroll with information if you wait long enough at the title screen). Most of the information comes from the instruction booklet. Probably an odd opinion here, but I genuinely miss video games coming with instruction booklets.

The Gameplay:

As I previously wrote, the gameplay of Metroid is built around the idea of exploration and upgrading Samus. While Metroid is a platformer like many games before it, there is no level system. Zebes is an open world simply waiting for you to explore it. As you do so, you'll find that there are areas you simply can't reach. Maybe you can't make a particular jump or there's a door that won't open. You turn around and go elsewhere. Eventually, you'll find a high jump or a missile tank or a beam upgrade that opens a new path. It makes exploration a very rewarding experience.

A very interesting aspect of this design is how the designers teach you right away that Metroid is not a standard platformer. By default, most people playing Metroid for the first time would immediately move Samus to the right, which is how practically all platforming games began at the time. In Metroid though, you'll very quickly come up against an wall that has only a small passage at the bottom which you can't pass through. Backtracking, you'll discover your first power-up (the Morph Ball) was lying just to the left of where you started. It's a simple, yet ingenious way to inform the player that they need to think outside the box for Metroid.

The platforming element of Metroid is mostly tight, though it does have moments of feeling at least a little unfair. This is usually due to enemy knockback (not an uncommon feature in NES games) or a jump not executing properly. Specifically regarding this, Samus has two types of jumps. The first sees Samus stay upright and is executed by jumping while not moving. This jump doesn't travel as far as the second type, but does provide a bit more precision (or this has been my experience, you may have differing viewpoint). The second jump is executed by jumping while moving and sees Samus ball up. It's always seemed to me that this jump goes further, but can make landing on a small platform a bit trickier. Again, this could just be how I play the game.

If there's any drawback to Metroid, it is the map system. Or, more specifically, the complete lack of a map system. Zebes is quite large and includes five main areas (linked together by an elevator system), and is very mazelike. The areas do have distinct looks to help you differentiate them from one another, but you need either luck, a photographic memory, or some grid paper to truly explore this game. When I was much younger, I know I used a sketch pad to map out Metroid II, and think I did the same for Metroid, but I'm not 100 % sure. I may have just had patience and luck. For this past playthrough, I used an unmarked map I found online. I don't have the patience or time I once did.

Ten year old me would have found this extremely useful

Now, the mazelike map does have its benefits in that it creates a true sense of isolation and apprehension. I know this is an 8-bit game, but you truly get a sense of being stuck in this strange world. This is aided by an excellent soundtrack that constantly sets the mood for the game. Especially as you go ever deeper into Zebes and encounter stronger and stronger enemies.

Conclusions:

The influence Metroid has had on video games can't be overstated. Very few games have such an impact on video game design that they get an entire genre named after them, but here we are. Metroid was not the first non-linear exploration based game (I think Adventure or Haunted House on the Atari may have that claim), but I think it is safe to say it has been the most impactful. The Metroidvania (Metroid + Castlevania, for anyone that may not know the source) genre is still very healthy today.

Also, no review of Metroid is complete without also noting that, upon completing the game, you discover that Samus Aran is not your typical guy hero, but is instead a woman. Again, this isn't at all odd today (Stellar Blade just launched, after all), but for the time, it was twist worthy of The Sixth Sense.

Whenever I revisit a game such as Metroid or Mega Man or The Legend of Zelda, I always wonder if the developers had any clue just how long lasting their work would become. How influential their decisions would be on the games coming after them. Metroid is 38 years old as of this writing, but the franchise is still quite active. Both Metroid Prime: Remastered and Metroid Dread were extremely successful on the Switch and with Metroid Prime 4 still on the horizon, I think the future of Metroid is as bright as ever.

1.6.14 I'll Be Comfortable Owning My Games (2024-06-09 22:57)

By and large, my blog is focused on retro games. A quick look at past posts will confirm this. Still, I do pay attention to what's happening now, even if I rarely write about it. Today though, today brought a fun piece of news that I feel compelled to discuss.

The below quote come courtesy of one Philippe Tremblay, Ubisoft's Director of Subscriptions:

One of the things we saw is that gamers are used to, a little bit like DVD, having and owning their games. That's the consumer shift that needs to happen. They got comfortable not owning their CD collection or DVD collection. That's a transformation that's been a bit slower to happen [in games]. As gamers grow comfortable in that aspect... you don't lose your progress. If you resume your game at another time, your progress file is still there. That's not been deleted. You don't lose what you've built in the game or your engagement with the game. So it's about feeling comfortable with not owning your game.

Hoo-boy! This went over about as well as you can imagine it did (I used the story at [1]IGN for this post). A quick look at Twitter, sorry, X, or a quick Google search will give you a glimpse at the criticism this received. And, for the record, I think it is valid criticism, but, Mr. Tremblay continued:

I still have two boxes of DVDs. I definitely understand the gamers perspective with that. But as people embrace that model, they will see that these games will exist, the service will continue, and you'll be able to access them when you feel like. That's reassuring.

I disagree with the entire notion of not owning a piece of property, but Mr. Tremblay is not entirely wrong when it comes to movies, music, and even books. There is a large segment of the population that owns digital rights as opposed to physical mediums. My wife relies on Amazon music and rarely buys an album anymore. How many people buy a movie digitally via Amazon, Vudu, etc...? It has to be a decent number of people, right? So, I've a couple of thoughts on this.

First of all, these people are crazy. No, not really. I mean, my wife is crazy, but that's unrelated to her music streaming habits (it's more likely related to being married to me for twenty plus years). Anyway, the most intriguing thing about purchasing digital rights to any medium is that, in many cases, you don't actually "own" anything. I recommend reading [2]this story from the New York Times from 2021 (or [3]this one, pertaining to books, from last year), but to hone in on my point:

What you're purchasing in most cases is a license to watch that video or listen to that song. Effectively that license is good for as long as it really matters.

Exactly. Digital ownership is often a license. Now, I don't think anything that I own digitally is going to disappear anytime soon, but it could happen, and I'd have very little recourse. Beyond the ownership though, is the ability of digital files being edited. There was some furor [4]last year over the editing of books by Roald Dahl, R.L. Stine (shout out to the Goosebumps series), and Agatha Christie. In each case, the digital version of these books received stealth edits that took place even if they digital version had been owned. It's easy to imagine this being applied to movies, music, and video games. You know what wasn't edited? My tote of physical Goosebumps books. Score one for the hoarder.

Welcome to Dead House was always my favorite

Secondly, focusing solely on video games, we've watched in real time, just in the past few years, specific video games become completely unavailable. I've written about this a couple of times now, I think, but quickly, with the closure of the Wii eShop, we lost titles such as Nyxquest, Lost Winds, and the ReBirth series from Konami. They are gone. If you had them and your Wii or WiiU bites the dust, there's no getting them back (Quick correction here, courtesy of [6]QuietJasonLee, you can contact Nintendo and switch your account to a different Wii or WiiU, and those games can be redownloaded.). The same is true with any of the Virtual Console titles. Sony was on the verge of closing their stores for the PS3 and PsVita, but backed off due to fan outcry, thankfully (though I do wish they'd do a sale on there every now and then). Kudos to Microsoft here for vowing to prioritize game preservation even after the closure of the Xbox 360 shop this year.

At the end of the day, I think it's fair to say that Mr. Tremblay was trying to make a point in the worst way possible. He was speaking in regards to Ubisoft's upcoming Ubisoft + subscription services, and essentially fell all over himself. I would have pitched it by saying that Ubisoft is hoping that gamers will see the value in paying a monthly fee for a variety of games being at their disposal versus the price of buying all of said games individually (call me Ubisoft, we can work something out). And in defense of Ubisoft, it's not like they aren't publishing physical games. I have a pre-order in for Prince of Persia: The Lost Crown right now. Still, even giving Mr. Tremblay a ton of benefit of the doubt, I'm still not a fan of what he is trying to sell.

I'm an old school guy, and I'm aware that the world is changing, but I don't know that I'll ever pick digital ownership of anything over holding it in my hand. Knowing that it's real and tangible and never going away. I noted above that my wife utilizes Amazon Streaming Music. I still buy vinyl albums. We went to a thrift store this past weekend and I walked out with two Dean Koontz novels. This was a day after I found a book I'd purchased the last time we'd gone thrifting and forgotten about it. And, when it comes to games, I'm still collecting physical copies. Using some of my Christmas bonus, I finally got a physical copy of Super Metroid (for the Super Famicom, I can't swing the cost of the North American version) after having to sell mine some years ago. I search out the limited physical copies of digital only games that some companies are specializing in now. I'm old and I like owning items I own. The time is coming when, I suspect, digital will be the only choice, and I'll adapt. But for now, I'm extremely comfortable owning my games, and extremely uncomfortable at the idea of not owning them.

1.6.15 The West Is Sick of the New Woke Jihadism (2024-06-13 23:34)

What are the mobs in Washington defiling iconic federal statues with impunity and pelting policemen protesting?

What are the throngs in London brazenly swarming parks and rampaging in the streets angry about?

Occupations?

They could care less that the Islamist Turkish government still stationed 40,000 troops in occupied Cyprus. No one is protesting against the Chinese takeover of a once-independent Tibet or the threatened absorption of an autonomous Taiwan.

Refugees?

None of these mobs are agitating on behalf of the nearly 1 million Jews ethnically cleansed since 1947 from the major capitals of the Middle East. Some 200,000 Cypriots displaced by Turks earn not a murmur. Nor does the ethnic cleansing of 99 % of Nagorno-Karabakh's ancient Armenian population just last year.

Civilian casualties?

The global protestors are not furious over the 1 million Uighurs brutalized by the communist Chinese government. Neither are they concerned about the Turkish government's indiscriminate war against the Kurds or its serial threats to attack Armenians and Greeks.

The new woke jihadist movement is instead focused only on Israel and "Palestine." It is oblivious to the modern gruesome Muslim-on-Muslim exterminations of Bashar al-Assad and Saddam Hussein, the Black September massacres of Palestinians by Jordanian forces, and the 1982 erasure of thousands in Hama, Syria.

So woke jihadism is not an ecumenical concern for the oppressed, the occupied, the collateral damage of war, or the fate of refugees. Instead, it is a romanticized and repackaged anti-Western, anti-Israel, and antisemitic jihadism that supports the murder of civilians, mass rape, torture, and hostage-taking.

But what makes it now so insidious is its new tripartite constituency.

First, the old romantic pro-Palestine cause was rebooted in the West by millions of Arab and Muslim immigrants who have flocked to Europe and the U.S. in the last half-century.

Billions of dollars in oil sheikdom "grant" monies swarmed Western universities to found "Middle Eastern Studies" departments. These are not so much centers for historical or linguistic scholarship as political megaphones focused on "Zionism" and "the Jews."

Moreover, there may be well over a half-million affluent Middle Eastern students in Western universities. Given that they pay full tuition, imbibe ideology from endowed Middle Eastern studies faculty, and are growing in number, they logically feel that they can do anything with impunity on Western streets and campuses.

Second, the Diversity/Equity/Inclusion movement empowers the new woke jihadis. Claiming to be non-white victims of white Jewish colonialism, they pose as natural kindred victims to Blacks, Latinos, and any Westerner now claiming oppressed status.

Black radicalism, from Al Sharpton to Louis Farrakhan to Black Lives Matter, has had a long, documented history of antisemitism. It is no wonder that its elite eagerly embraced the anti-Israeli Palestine movement as fellow travelers.

The third leg of woke jihadism is mostly affluent white leftist students at Western universities. Sensing that their faculties are anti-Israel, their administrations are anti-Israel (although more covertly) and the most politically active among the student body are anti-Israel, European and American students find authenticity in virtue-signaling their solidarity with Hamas, Hezbollah, and radical Islamists in general.

Given the recent abandonment of standardized tests for admission to universities, the watering-down of curricula, and rampant grade inflation, thousands of students at elite campuses feel that they have successfully redefined their universities to suit their own politics, constituencies and demographics.

Insecure about their preparation for college and mostly ignorant of the politics of the Middle East, usefully idiotic students find resonance by screaming antisemitic chants and wearing keffiyehs.

Nurtured in grade school on the Marxist binary of bad, oppressive whites versus good, oppressed nonwhites, they can cheaply shed their boutique guilt by joining the mobs.

The result is a bizarre new antisemitism and overt support for the gruesome terrorists of Hamas by those who usually preach to the middle class about their own exalted morality.

Still, woke jihadism would never have found resonance had Western leaders – vote-conscious heads of state, timid university presidents, and radicalized big-city mayors and police chiefs – not ignored blatant violations of laws against illegal immigration, vandalism, assault, illegal occupation, and rioting.

Finally, woke jihadism is fueling a radical Western turn to the right, partly due to open borders and the huge influx into the West from non-Western illiberal regimes.

Partly the reaction is due to the ingratitude shown their hosts by indulged Middle-Eastern guest students and green card holders.

Partly, the public is sick of the sense of entitlement shown by pampered, sanctimonious protestors.

And partly the revulsion arises against left-wing governments and universities that will not enforce basic criminal and immigration statutes in fear of offending this strange new blend of wokism and jihadism.

Yet the more violent campuses and streets become, the more clueless the mobs seem about the cascading public antipathy to what they do and what they represent.

1.6.16 Pro-Hamas Supporters Seize Building With Cal State University President Inside (2024-06-13 23:38)

Pro-Hamas supporters still aren't quitting their advocacy for terrorists, nor are they ceasing their tactic of staging January 6-like events and seizing buildings on college campuses. The 'Storm the Bastille' protocol was adopted after activists saw that nothing serious happened to the hooligans who stormed and seized a building at Columbia University. These students held the custodial staff hostage. At California State University's Los Angeles campus, these terrorist supporters stormed a building with the university president inside. Signs of vandalism and destruction are apparent (via [1]LA Times):

It goes from bad to worse. The “Free Palestine” mob that has held the University PRESIDENT of Cal State Los Angeles hostage in a campus building is now looting that very building. Scores of protesters occupied and vandalized a Cal State Los Angeles student services building while administrators were inside for hours before leaving Thursday morning, officials said.

The student services building was deemed a crime scene by authorities and multiple windows were defaced with messages in red paint.

Tables, hard-shelled umbrellas and rope still blocked the entrances and exits — though university officials said the building was now vacant.

Police tape marked many of the haphazard blockades put up by the protesters around 4 p.m. Wednesday, and law enforcement officials are actively investigating the area as a crime scene, according to Erik Frost Hollins, a spokesperson for the school.

Most of the group that barricaded the building left voluntarily by 1 a.m. Thursday, Hollins said, and the rest left after police ordered a dispersal shortly after. There were no arrests and Hollins was unaware if there were any injuries.

Hollins said there was “significant damage” on the first four floors of the student services building, including extensive graffiti and paint, as well as damage to equipment, walls and pipes.

This is what happens when you let the animals run wild. It’s not like we don’t know what happens when you stop locking people up. These kids needed to be hosed down, tear-gassed, shot with rubber bullets, and mauled by the police dogs.

We’ve had enough. How is no one being charged for this crime? They took hostages, no?

1.6.17 Trump to Meet With Mitch McConnell for the First Time In Four Years (2024-06-13 23:42)

Former President Donald Trump will meet with the top Republican leader for the first time since he left office in a behind closed-door meeting.

Senate Republican Leader Mitch McConnell (R-KY) confirmed on Wednesday that he will attend a meeting with Trump and other House Republicans during a conference, hosted at the National Republican Senatorial Committee (NRSC).

“I’ll be at the meeting tomorrow,” McConnell told reporters, despite his long-running feud with Trump.

Thursday’s meeting will be the first time the two GOP leaders will meet face to face-since 2020.

Trump has repeatedly called for McConnell to be ousted, dubbing him as an “old crow.”

In 2022, the 45th president [1]demanded the Republican Party to boot McConnell from his position as Senate minority leader for alleged ties to Communist China, calling the GOP senator a “pawn for the Democrats.

A few months later, Trump [2]called out McConnell for not overturning the 2020 presidential election results, calling him the “worst.”

On the other hand, McConnell accused Trump of being “morally responsible” for the Jan. 6, 2021, Capitol Hill protests after recognizing President Joe Biden as the 2020 presidential winner.

However, the two Republicans seemed to have somewhat repaired their broken relationship this year.

McConnell endorsed Trump for president earlier this year after he secured the 2024 GOP nomination.

“It is abundantly clear that former President Trump has earned the requisite support of Republican voters to be our nominee for President of the United States,” McConnell said. “It should come as no surprise that as the nominee, he will have my support.”

The Senator told reporters he would support the GOP presidential candidate regardless of differences— including Trump.

“I support him. He’s earned the nomination by the voters all across the country,” he said.

McConnell also offered Trump support after a Manhattan jury found him guilty of 34 felony counts of falsifying business records last month.

The GOP senator said he expects the conviction to be overturned, adding that the charges should have never been brought against Trump in the first place.

1.6.18 Turley Weighs in on How Pelosi's Admissions Highlight Credibility Issues of J6 Committee (2024-06-13 23:48)

Damning video footage going around of then Speaker Nancy Pelosi's (D-CA) from January 6, 2021 has been going around, as [1]she admitted "I take responsibility" for not being more prepared for the events of that day. As a result, there's been even more scrutiny of the January 6 Select Committee.

Law Professor Jonathan Turley had particularly strong words not merely for Pelosi, but for the members of the Select Committee as well, who failed to publicly disclose such footage. It was only just recently released by the House Administration's Subcommittee on Oversight.

...Had Pelosi and other accepted National Guard support and installed fencing as was done at the White House, it is doubtful that the riot on January 6th would have occurred or any disruption would have been far more limited in scope.— Jonathan Turley (@JonathanTurley) [2]June 11, 2024

As Turley argued in his post, the event of January 6 might not have gotten so out of hand if Pelosi had acted. The members of the Select Committee helped her cover it up:

Had Pelosi and others accepted National Guard support and installed fencing as was done at the White House, it is doubtful that the riot on January 6th would have occurred or any disruption would have been far more limited in scope. The fact that the J6 Committee downplayed this major factor in the riot further undermines how the investigation was framed by the Democratic leadership. Pelosi barred the GOP members selected for the committee, hand picking two anti-Trump Republican members.

The absence of any balance on the committee was evident from the start. There was little effort to present alternative explanations or defenses to critical issues raised in hearings. No opposing witnesses were called who might contradict the narrative put forward by the Committee, including witnesses who would debunk the [3]much-repeated, false claim that Trump wrestled with his driver to gain control of the presidential limo to drive to the Capitol.

With the Speaker admitting on tape that she bore responsibility for the lack of precautions, one would think that the J6 Committee, including then Vice Chair Liz

Cheney, would consider that relevant for the public to understand the underlying facts. Instead, it was buried with much other countervailing evidence.

RecommendAnother key point of Turley's addresses the left's hypocrisy when it comes to the outrage involved. Just months before January 6, Lafayette Square faced out of control protests in the days following George Floyd's death. The National Guard was called in for that situation, with Pete Hegseth detailing the harrowing experience in "The War on Warriors," which [4]we previewed late last month, shortly before the book's release.

Then President Donald Trump had to be taken to safety, for which he received severe mockery for, with the situation also being the source of misinformation. As Turley also noted:

What was so curious about the lack of precautions that morning is that the Capitol had just experienced the violence outside of the White House in the Lafayette Park protests.

To this day, the media and many members continue to repeat false accounts of the Lafayette Park. Many still have stories posted that claim that Lafayette Park was cleared for Trump to hold a photo op in front of a church. I discussed those accounts in [5]testimony before Congress and in [6]columns on the clearing of the Lafayette Park area. NPR still has a story on its website entitled "[7]Peaceful Protesters Tear-Gassed To Clear Way For Trump Church Photo-Op." More officers were injured in the Lafayette Park protests than on January 6th.

As previously discussed in [8]repeated columns, the House Democratic leadership refused to hold a single hearing with key witnesses on what occurred before the riot. After using a [9]"snap impeachment," weeks went by without calling such witnesses before the Trump impeachment trial. Such evidence would have challenged the narrative and raised questions over decisions made by Congress that left the Capitol vulnerable to such an attack.

In the Lafayette Park protests, White House officials feared that the compound could be breached by violent protesters who had injured dozens of officers and engaged in arson and attacks around the White House during that weekend. They decided to clear the area to install fencing (which Congress only ordered after the Jan. 6th riot). They also deployed the National Guard and the "heavier, less lethal weapons" that the Inspector General found were denied to the Capitol Police.

[10]Townhall and our sister site [11]of Twitchy have been covering [12]how Turley has been speaking out about such particularly damning findings from the Subcommittee on Oversight and its chairman, Rep. Barry Loudermilk (R-GA).

Last week, for instance, [13]we learned that the Secret Service tried to offer testimony for months to rebut star witness Cassidy Hutchinson's testimony about Trump, but that they were "rebuffed" until the day before the 2022 midterm elections.

Loudermilk has appeared on "[14]The Mark Levin Show," [15]Just The News, and [16]Fox Business to discuss the latest development.

While on Just the News, he agreed that Pelosi "should take responsibility," but that he still has questions about such failures. "Why did not her Select Committee investigate that failure," Loudermilk specifically wanted to know, "that turned into simply a Committee that tried to tie Trump to all these failures instead of looking at the failures within the Capitol."

"I still have the questions," Loudermilk reiterated, speaking about the National Guard. Although Pelosi may have taken responsibility, Loudermilk still lambasted the Select Committee for how "it spends $18 million trying to say that it was Trump's responsibility that the National Guard wasn't there, and that the Capitol was breached."

He also posted that Pelosi's "admission of responsibility directly contradicts their own narrative," as he also called for " #J6Truth."

"Why were they caught flat-footed?"[17]@RepLoudermilk (R-GA-11) says footage of then-House Speaker Nancy Pelosi declaring "I take responsibility" for failing to have a better security plan for the U.S. Capitol on January 6 raises more questions. Her admission of responsibility directly contradicts their own narrative. [20] #J6Truth [21]pic.twitter.com/xbNrKVopo7— Rep. Barry Loudermilk (@RepLoudermilk) [22]June 10, 2024

Larry also did [23]a deep dive analysis word for word of Pelosi's remarks earlier on Wednesday.

"'I took full responsibility?' She never accepted responsibility," Larry argued about Pelosi. "She deflected it the entire time! In fact, I will argue that the entire January 6 Select Committee was designed to cover this up, to hide the truth, to hide the facts about the most seminal, important aspect of the events of January 6, and that is the lack of security, the lack of coordination, the seemingly inappropriate level of protection for Congress that day."

Rep. Jim Banks (R-IN), one of the Republican members vetoed by Pelosi, reposted such footage, along with a reminder about why he and Rep. Jim Jordan (R-OH) weren't allowed on the Select Committee.

Banks was calling out Pelosi's security failures from the start. In a "Fox News Sunday" appearance from July 2021, which we [24]covered at the time, Banks made clear the blame was with Pelosi, noting she "has more control and authority and responsibly over the leadership of the Capitol Police than anyone else in the United States Capitol." He also offered "she doesn't want us to ask these questions because at the end of the day she is ultimately responsible for the breakdown of security at the Capitol that happened on January 6th."

Advertisement

Had he been able to, Banks wanted to ask about the vulnerability of the Capitol on that day, as he noted how "three weeks before January 6th there were intelligence reports that the leadership of the Capitol Police were aware of."

Banks and other House Republicans, including Jordan, also [25]released a report in December 2022 about security failures.

[26]@Jim_Jordan and I were originally selected to serve on the J6 committee.

But Pelosi removed/replaced us with Liz Cheney and Adam Kinzinger because she knew we wouldn't go along with her lies.

1.6.19 Adventure Island 2 review (2024-06-15 19:20)

Adventure Island II – a classic platform game of the Nintendo. I actually played this game first with my twin brother at King Cone on an arcade machine back in the early 90s. I couldn't get past the few major boss in the first world. Little did I know it also came out for Nintendo – and later that year I received it for Christmas!

In this game you take control of master Higgins on his quest to save his girlfriend Tina from the evil witch doctor who has taken her! You must travel through 8 islands full of levitating fruit, skateboards, and monsters (both friendly and not). The perfect setting for a fun and engaging platform adventure!

You start each stage without the ability to defeat enemies, but as you run and jump your way through the level, you find hatchets, skateboards, and dinosaur friends to help. The addition of these dinosaur friends is the greatest upgrade over the original g game. Each of the four dinosaurs (lava, ice, water, and air-type friends) all have unique abilities that can assist in completing levels! My favourite is the Pterodactyl as you can fly! Master Higgins must be careful though as one hit with either dinosaur friends or skateboard and they disappear.

You are going to want to keep these dinosaur friends (along with hatchets) too as they can be safely stored for later use of you make it out of the level with them still intact! Later levels can be very difficult if you do not have a proper supply of friends for support! Each island has 4-5 stages, across varying settings from beach, forest, caves, and underwater levels. I really enjoyed the variety of these stages – kept the game very fresh from start to finish.

In terms of major design decisions, the developers opted for a “fruit bar” instead of traditional timer! This bar continuously depletes as Master Higgins makes his way through levels, encouraging him to move forward. If the bar fully depletes, Master Higgins dies. The bar can be temporarily replenished however if fruit and meat are found! I really enjoyed this mechanic as it provided a nice sense of tension between moving quickly to get to the end of the level and exploring the level to find secrets like dinosaur friends and one ups that could be used for later use.

In terms of controls, the game feels great. The controls are responsive and quick – and when you die – and you will – it feels like your own fault! Each dinosaur also has a unique feel, and actually improves the controls in certain situations. For instance, if you are running on ice with the blue dinosaur, you don’t slide! Graphics are fantastic and crisp in each of the levels – though I definitely disliked the cave levels the most though as they all looked the same. Master Higgins’ sprite looks good, but I was though he had a bit of a funny overbite. Enemies come in a variety of forms, including cool looking bosses (one for each island)! Sound is also superb, with it having one of the most iconic intro music themes, with the quality continuing throughout the game.

Overall, this is an A+ platform game on the Nintendo. It is fun, challenging, and exciting with nice tension between exploration and progression. The added dinosaurs makes it one of the best in the series. I give this game a 9/10!

1.6.20 Dragon Warrior nes review (2024-06-15 19:21)

Dragon Warrior – the beginning of an epic series now known as Dragon Quest! Over the years, I have really come to enjoy the Dragon Quest games – especially Dragon Quest V – which is one of my favourite games of all time. After playing many of the newer ones, it was fun to finally come back to where it all started!

At its core – this is the quintessential JRPG. There is cool music, dungeons to explore, towns to visit, weapons and armour to buy, and battles, and battles, and battles, and battles, and the occasional level up! You start your quest as a descendent of the great warrior Erdrich, a warrior who sought out and destroyed the dragonlord of the past (specifically the one from Dragon Warrior III)! You must search over the world to collect all of Erdrich’s old armour and weapons, and finally face off against the dragonlord once again and defeat him – simple but effective story!

In terms of gameplay, this game plays like many RPGs – you move around from a topdown perspective and explore the world. What makes this game unique compared to many other RPGs that came after is that the world is very much open-world...kinda like Skyrim in a very basic sense. The further that you get from the main castle, the harder the enemies become – but there is nothing specifically preventing you from exploring apart from difficult enemies. I really enjoyed this because it gave the world a real sense of danger, and made gaining levels and getting new equipment exciting as I was able to go further in the world as my character evolved, helping me to discover that next town or venturing to the lowest level of a dungeon.

Battling enemies is what you will be spending 70 % of the game doing. Battles are random and occur often – lucky they are very quick if the enemies are not too difficult. In this game, you also have no party – it is you versus the enemy. While this 1 vs. 1 battle system is simple, there is still some strategy involved. You have access to your physical attacks, alongside a number of magic abilities. One complaint is that the magic attacks are quite random – sometimes doing low damage while other times doing massive damage. This randomness made of the battles feel more based around luck than strategy. There is also no real sense of customization of your character. Overall though, the battle system was fun and laid a good foundation for future Dragon Quest games.

Another cool aspect of the game was venturing into dark dungeons. Often times, you needed a torch to see anything in the caves, which made finding the treasure hard to locate but rewarding when found! In terms of things I did not like – the menu system has not aged well! I did not like having to open the menu to click on “door,” “stairs,” or “take,” to actually use those items on the overworld map. I also did not appreciate having to go visit the King each and every time that I wanted to save my game. No other towns in the game allowed me to save, which was frustrating because many of them are quite far from the King, who was located right next to the starter town.

In terms of music, this game created some of the timeless classics heard in all other Dragon Quest games – however, they have sounded a lot better in other games! Some of the other tracks and sound effects in general are quite primitive. In terms of graphics, they are simple but effective in conveying a fantasy world. Where the graphics really shine however is in the enemy design – the blue slimes, and many other enemies like the sandman were created here, and they still look great!

Overall, Dragon Warrior is an okay game that has not aged very well, but is still very much playable for diehard JRPG fans who want to know where it all started. When Dragon Warrior first came out, it was groundbreaking and helped lay the foundation for future RPGs including many of the Dragon Quest sequels. With this in mind, I give it a 6/10, but give it a “Historic Videogame” tag indicating how important it is historically to the RPG genre.

1.6.21 CNN Releases New Rules for Trump, Biden Debate (2024-06-15 19:22)

CNN released new rules for the highly anticipated presidential debate between President Joe Biden and former President Donald Trump.

In less than two weeks, the two candidates will go head to head in their first debate this election cycle, hosted by CNN’s Jake Tapper and Dana Bash in Atlanta, Georgia.

The outlet finalized its set of rules which both presidential campaigns agreed upon on.

The 90-minute debate will include two commercial breaks, according to the network, and campaign staff may not interact with their candidate during that time. Both candidates agreed to appear at a uniform podium, and their podium positions will be determined by a coin flip. Microphones will be muted throughout the debate except for the candidate whose turn it is to speak. While no props or pre-written notes will be allowed on the stage, candidates will be given a pen, a pad of paper and a bottle of water. [1]Via CNN.

Contrary to past debates, there will be no audience. However, moderators “will use all tools at their disposal to enforce timing and ensure a civilized discussion.”

To qualify for the debate, the candidates must receive 15 percent support in four separate national polls, and be on the ballot in enough states to reach 270 electoral college votes.

CNN also said it wouldn't be "impossible" for independent candidate Robert F. Kennedy Jr. to appear at the debate. However, it is unlikely any other candidate will meet the requirements to join them on stage.

According to a recent poll by J.L. Partners, 49 percent of voters believe Biden will forget where he is while on stage with Trump, and 41 percent expect him to wander off the stage.

The survey also found that a massive 70 percent of Americans think the 81-year-old president will fumble over his words.

On the other hand, 50 percent of voters—including 13 percent of Democrats— expect Trump to win the debate.

1.6.22 Are the Dark Ages Returning? (2024-06-15 19:23)

81 % of Biden supporters say getting married and having children is not a high priority. That's horrendous, but not terribly surprising. What left me aghast was that 41 % of Trump supporters agreed with them. Only 59 % understand that the family is the most crucial foundation of any civilized society. What do they think—that government is?

A nation in decline has never fully recovered its former glory. Many disappear completely (Babylon, Assyria), and some remain but only as weak shells of their former splendor (Greece, Rome, Britain). America will need a complete moral rejuvenation, a return to God and virtue, to rise again to true greatness, and that revival is nowhere in view at present. The entire world seems to be headed toward another "dark age" for humanity.

The "Dark Ages" followed the decline and fall of the Roman Empire. "Barbarians" immigrated into, and took over Europe. It is impossible to put exact dates on when these "dark ages" began and ended, but the deterioration lasted several centuries. Because worldwide human interaction was very slow and limited at that time, those "dark ages" applied mainly to Europe and didn't overly affect the rest of humanity. If such a period struck again, it would almost surely influence the entire planet, given the current nature of global intercourse.

What caused the “Dark Ages” in Europe? What happened to Rome?

That answer is multi-faceted, and thousands of books and articles have been written about it. But there are certain principles and historical happenings that produced Rome’s “decline and fall” and the subsequent delinquency of Europe.

A few important ones:

1. Incredibly poor leadership. After the “Five Good Emperors” of the 2nd century A.D., Rome had few quality leaders on the “national” level. Indeed, the “barracks emperors”—a series of military rulers—took power, and most didn’t die in their beds. Good, virtuous leadership is essential for the survival of any country/empire, and Rome no longer had it. Rome thus only existed as long as it did because it still had some republican institutions, with power divided among the “national” and “local” levels. It mattered not that most of the emperors were military men; the excellence of the individual, not his position in society, is what is critical in leadership.

With very few exceptions, America has had incredibly poor quality in Washington, D.C., for the past few decades. That’s what Rome suffered. Power-hungry, self-aggrandizing politicians are always destructive.

2. The “bread and circuses.” Rome grew wealthy, and the people grew fat, lazy, and decadent. Too much of the empire’s population was no longer willing to be productive; they were given to hedonistic pleasure. This produced 2 curses:

A. It led to excessive government spending to pay for all the “bread, circuses, gladiatorial games, and lions eating Christians” debauchery. This spurred inflation and drained the wealth of Roman society.

B. Thus, the middle class was squeezed and discouraged, and such drove Rome to near financial oblivion.

3. The feebleness of Roman religion. Paganism has rarely been a strong inducement to moral excellence. Many pagan “gods” were more licentious than humans. And such dominated Roman religion. Christianity was rising, but by the 4th century, was still not strong enough, perhaps not even as strong as its current enfeebled condition in America today; quantifying such is impossible. But regardless, weakened religion produces a less virtuous people. And that always destroys the strength of character necessary to overcome obstacles when they arise.

4. And such “obstacles” arose. The barbarians came. They had no morals, they wanted lands, homes, and conquest. Decadent Roman leadership couldn’t—wouldn’t—stop them. Without virtue, there is no freedom or civilization, only darkness and savagery. Western Civilization descended into hundreds of years of “dark ages” until the barbarians were finally civilized by Christianity, societal stability was produced, and trade and commerce returned and flourished. But it took several centuries.

Do you see any parallels between Rome and America/the current world today?

Barbarianism increasingly dominates the world now. What I mean by “barbarism” is that the moral virtues necessary to produce societal stabilization built upon family, religion, and respect for law and property rights are disappearing. Hedonism respects nothing but its own pleasure. There is, of course, very little virtue left in America, and we are witnessing the results on our streets and college campuses, in our empty churches, in the rot vomited out by Hollywood in movies and television, and in the halls of Congress which has become America’s most degenerate institution.

Other global locations are no better. China is run by selfish mongrels who care absolutely nothing for their people; I lived there for ten years and was repeatedly victimized by it. The Middle East, Israel excluded, overseen by a religion of violence, not love, that hasn’t yet lifted most of its countless adherents out of primitiveness and into an even semi-civilized condition. They’re still in the 7th century. Europe eventually moved out of its “Dark Ages”; the Middle East never has.

Which current “civilization” can prevent the world from descending into another serious period of darkness and brutality?

The Left is destroying the foundations of Western Civilization and replacing it with selfish nihilism. A civilized society cannot be built upon nothingness. Western Civilization, established upon Greco-Roman political ideals and Judeo-Christian moral values, is almost gone.

Advertisement

China doesn’t believe in freedom. They believe in force. They might conquer the world, but if they do, it won’t be by virtue and persuasion, it won’t be by offering the world freedom and moral progress, it will be by death and oppression. That's darkness, that's not light, that's not civilization. The Muslim world offers nothing better. Europe, like America, is tossing its traditions and heritage into the dustbin of history. Who's left? Africa? Russia? Who will be the shining light on the hill to keep the barbarians at bay or civilize them?

From whence will light come?

1.6.23 The Middle Class Built America. They Now Take a Backseat to Illegal Immigrants. (2024-06-15 19:24)

Over the past few years, many middle-class Americans have come to feel as if the rights of law-abiding citizens have taken a back seat to the rights and comfort of illegal aliens.

These Americans go to work, raise their families, follow the law, and pay their taxes, only to see those who do not work, pay taxes, or follow the law prioritized by our state and federal governments for many valuable benefits and services. And more illegals cross our southern border every day. As of December 2023, [1]the number of daily arrivals topped 10,000.

There are several examples of the prioritization of illegal immigrants over American citizens for valuable benefits that citizens pay for with taxes.

First, whether you live in a "sanctuary city" or not, your tax dollars are going to fund the education of illegal immigrants. In 1982 the U.S. Supreme Court decided in Plyler v. Doe that illegal immigrants couldn't be excluded from public schools. The U.S. Department of Education has taken this to unprecedented heights under the Biden Administration by creating The Office of Migrant Education. Many states have opened similar offices. The sole purpose of these offices is to expend an increasing amount of American taxpayer money to ensure that illegal immigrants are properly educated.

As is so often the case, legal doesn't necessarily equal right, and these policies take resources from the education of citizens. In the fall of 2021, just as the human tidal wave was gathering momentum, [2]10.6 % of all students in the U.S. were "English learners," requiring education resources just to become competent in English. Imagine what that percentage is today.

We are starting to see examples of our schools [3]being overrun. This past January, James Madison High School in Brooklyn even shut down for a day and did not permit its students to attend so that it could be used as a staging ground for the welcoming of illegal immigrants. Where does it end?

Second, the U.S. Department of Agriculture recently released a plan to put USDA GusNIP grants [4]toward “produce prescriptions” for illegal immigrants. A “produce prescription” is a taxpayer funded monthly dollar amount given to an illegal immigrant to purchase top of the line fruits and vegetables. With food costs, particularly fresh food costs, this benefit would be welcome to many American citizens who are trying to make ends meet. Too bad.

Third, the state of Michigan recently announced a [5]“newcomer rental subsidy.” The Newcomer Rental Subsidy Program provides refugees and other newcomer population-eligible households with rental assistance up to $500 per month for up to 12 months, with eligibility based on immigration status and household income. This program specifically excludes American citizens. Not only is it likely illegal, but it is disheartening for struggling citizens. Detroit has a poverty rate of 33.8 %. Flint’s poverty rate is 39.6 %. A government that prioritizes housing illegal immigrants over providing additional assistance to its own hardworking citizens has lost its way.

Finally, New York City recently [6]announced a program to give free debit cards worth $350 per week to illegal immigrant families. Of course, there are plenty of families of legal residents throughout New York City that could use an extra $1,400 per month tax free to purchase groceries. They are not eligible. The only qualification for this program is that you must be an illegal immigrant. Law-abiding New York City residents need not apply. This is a slap in the face to the many New Yorkers who are struggling.

The American middle class has been betrayed by the American political class. And it’s hardly surprising. The same people who have waived United States sovereignty to flood the nation with illegals are only too happy to take from hardworking citizens to maintain the millions they let in.

The political class does not care about you. They don’t care about the people who donate to their local churches, run toy drives, food drives, and who don’t think twice to help any family in need. The people who spend time cleaning up their block and take pride in their neighborhood. To the cashiers, Soldiers, waitresses, nurses, school bus drivers, police officers, firefighters, teachers, these elitists are clear - they don’t care about you. They don’t care about your family. They don’t care about how hard you work to provide for them. They are not trying to hide it.

The American middle class built this country. They deserve the support of the government they have elected.

1.6.24 How to Spot Fake Pokémon Nintendo DS Games! (2024-06-16 22:37)

I was playing my [1]Nintendo DS, and the Pokémon game cartridge I was using wouldn't load. I thought that was strange, the pin on the game looked clean. My Nintendo DS played every other game cartridge I inserted. Furthermore, I tried the Pokémon game on a different DS, the game started up, but would then freeze.

This got me thinking that something must be wrong with this game. Then I compared the Pokémon game, with a few other [2]Nintendo DS games. I noticed some big differences that lead me to determine I had some bootleg video games.

So let's discuss the differences I found with the fake game

And how you can avoid buying counterfeit versions, of Pokémon Nintendo DS games. If you want to view larger images, you can see them on pinterest @ [3]TheOSGVault

Step 1: The Serial Code / Region Code Must Match

The biggest factor I found to determine counterfeit cartridges is the serial number. If you look on the bottom of the front label you will see some numbers such as [NTR-IPKE-USA]. The middle group of numbers [IPKE] needs to be a part of the serial number on the back of the cartridge. As you can see from the photo, this group of lettering is not a part of the serial numbers.

Upon inspecting approximately 12 other games

Each game had the second group of lettering, clearly part of the serial number, on the backside. This is by far the quickest and easiest way to identifying fake cartridges.

Step 2: The Font

The main noticeable difference is the font on the back of the cartridge. The Nintendo on the back of the cartridge is in a larger font than a "genuine Nintendo DS game". Then if you look at the font for the model number & the [Pat. Pend.], it is the same similar larger font as the "Nintendo Lettering". Refer to the photo below.

The font above the letter "E" on the front of the cartridge

When compared to an authentic game. The wording “everyone” is much more legible on an authentic game. This also goes for the basic font on the front of the label. On the Legitimate game the font is much clearer and pronounced as you can see in the photo.

Step 2b: The Cartridge Color

Step 3: The Front Label

When you examine counterfeit copies & genuine games like the two games in the photo above. You can see that the bottom left corner of Soul Silver has a very distinct angle to it. When you examine reproduction copies like the Pokémon HeartGold Version. You can see the bottom left corner of the label is rounded.

As I continue to do some research about the fake Pokémon Nintendo DS games.

I thought the game label would stand out, much like a counterfeit GBA game would. This doesn't seem to be the case. The label on the front of the Pokémon game appears to have all the similar markings as a genuine Nintendo DS game. Except for the rounded bottom left corner on the Pokémon Heart Gold Version shown above.

1.6.25 How to tell if SNES Game is Authentic or a Bootleg Game Cartridge (2024-06-16 22:39)

Recently we obtained a handful of games. These were some really rare Super Nintendo titles, that someone was trying to sell to me as legit copies. At first glance, it was pretty obvious to tell none of these were an authentic game.

Below are points about how to spot counterfeit cartridges for the Super Nintendo.

The games are also commonly referred to as "fake", "reproduction" or "bootleg video games".

We also have a [1]YouTube video if you'd rather watch than read about the topic. The game titles in reference are: Chrono Trigger, Earthbound, and The Legend of Zelda etc. For larger images, you can refer to the [2]pinterest page.

Now keep in mind, I'm writing this article because someone is trying to sell me bootleg cartridges as the real thing. I have no problem if you buy reproduction games for your collection, but selling bootlegs as the real thing is where I draw the line. So just make sure if you are a collector of classic games, make sure you buy from a super-reputable store.

First Impression is Key: The Condition of the SNES Cart looks New & Cheap

- I was just amazed at how clean the games look.
- The front & back labels look pretty new for the 25-year-old game.
- The cart color looked practically brand new as well.
- The Screws, were not the typical gold screws used to keep the game shut. These screws had an odd shape, and were not perfectly circular like an actual screw would be. The screws used were jagged and appeared to be just cut from a manufactured sheet of screws.

Step 1: Observe The Back Label

When analyzing the back of the cartridge, look at the cartridge label. You are looking to see if the label has a number imprinted into the label, like "00 or 40" for example. All [3]Nintendo cartridge games from Super Nintendo, Nintendo NES, and Nintendo 64 will have a number imprinted on the back label. This does not apply to handheld game boy games, as they don't have back labels.

Step 2: Open Up the Game Cartridge & look at the board

- The easiest and most sure fire way to spot counterfeit Super Nintendo games. Is to open up the game cartridges to examine the internal circuit board. Like I've mentioned in previous articles, you need to buy yourself a 3.8 mm size game bit opener.

— Just look at the difference in the above board photo The game boards in comparison are that of Chrono Trigger - You can certainly see the difference between the legit chrono trigger board vs the fake board.

— Now observe the game cartridge board size - You'll notice the fake cart has a tiny game board compared to authentic copies of the game.

— The legit game board will have a year and Nintendo imprinted on the board. - like the Chrono Trigger board in the photo, says 1993 Nintendo on the board.

Step 3: Check for a Product Number Code

— If you look inside, right above and below where the game pin connector is located. On a legit version, you'll see an alphanumeric product code stamped into the shell. As the Top Shell has a four digit stamp of (F(A)- 55) and the bottom shell has a similar three digit stamp of B - 32.

— None of the bootleg video games had any product number markings of any kind.

— This tip is also an easy identifier for to spot counterfeit versions of NES carts, and bootleg N64 cartridges.

Step 4: Analyze The End / Game Title

— "In the Video" The writing is not clear on the "Chrono Trigger" game, and it was hard to Read" due to the blurry image. As you can see by the Earthbound Photo below, the fake Earthbound game has the font & color all wrong on the end label. Really, if you take the time to actually look at a game label, you'll pick up on the flaws.

— Most of the font's on the fake games were wrong, the print wasn't clear and at times the end label was just hard to read.

X

Step 5: Analyze The Front Label & Tell-Tale Signs

The same thing applies to the front labels as did the end labels. Really, if you just look at the details of the label, the vast majority can spot the imperfections pretty easily. Just keep in mind that the graphics used on the counterfeits I have here, are really just poor images.

— You'll notice front labels are out of focus, the print is not clear.

— The game rating box was smaller on the counterfeit games.

— The Player's Choice Logo on the Legend of Zelda game in the video was Tiny.

1.6.26 How to tell if N64 game is Authentic or a Bootleg Video Game (2024-06-16 22:41)

With retro video game cartridges, selling at an all-time high.

People are going to make bootlegs and try and sell them as the real thing. With an expensive game selling for 1400 dollars. Like the Nintendo 64 repro cart shown in the images, of Clay fighter Sculptors Cut.

It shouldn't surprise anyone that dishonest people are trying to replicate this cartridge and make an easy buck.

Our stance on this topic. We have no problem if you want to buy reproduction carts for yourself. Our problem is when people are trying to sell a fake game as the real thing. So this article is like a Nintendo 64 cartridge [1]buying guide, it's a great reference on how to tell if a n64 game is real or fake.

So let's begin, if you're not into reading, then here is a [2]YouTube video covering the topic. One quick thing to point out is, you'll notice most bootleg video games look very cheap and can be pretty easy to identify. So let's further discuss how to spot these fake N64 games. Also, we've written other popular articles about similar topics right here on our site.

- [3]How to spot Fake Pokémon GBA Games
- [4]How to spot bootleg SNES Games
- [5]How to spot Fake Pokemon DS games
- [6]How to Spot Counterfeit Switch Games

First impressions are key, Bootlegs look cheap

- A fake n64 game is much lighter than the original carts, the fake labels always seem to look off or have noticeable imperfections.
- The fake cartridge shell is much lighter than a real game, generally, the plastic on a counterfeit game looks a slightly different shade of gray.
- I always seem to notice the screws used, as they just look like there were cut from a machine.
- Look at the spelling of “Seal of Quality” on the front of the Nintendo 64 game. Most counterfeit games capitalize the “O”.
- The Best Way is opening up the game and taking a look!

Tools of Recommendation:

If you are any type of Nintendo retro game enthusiast, you are going to need a game bit opener. I'd highly recommend buying game bit opener. The small 3.88 mm size which is universal for all [7]Nintendo Cartridge Based Games, like the Nintendo NES, Super Nintendo, Nintendo 64, Original Game Boy and Game Boy Color games. You need a separate "Y" shaped screwdriver to open Game Boy Advance games.

Step #1: The Rear Label

When analyzing the back of the cartridge, look at the cartridge label. You are looking to see if the label has a number imprinted into the label, like "00 or 41" for example. Authentic labels are going to have a number imprinted into them. This is the easiest and fastest way for checking authenticity of the majority of games we get in. You can use this method on other classic game consoles, like the Nintendo NES, and Super Nintendo. All Game Boy games will have a small number imprinted on the front label. Keep in mind that a repro label will look real glossy and almost look too new to be on a 25-year-old game cartridge.

Step #2: The Font & Cart Screws

Now look at the spelling of "Nintendo" on the back of the fake cart in the photo. If you look closely at "Nintendo" imprint on the cartridge shell, the dot on the "i" in Nintendo is a circle in the photo. I understand It's kinda hard to see, but up close you can tell. Authentic N64 games, the dot on the "i" would be a square and not a circle.

I didn't show any cart screws here in the photos, but the screws used here are some cheap over manufactured screw. You can really tell if you compared screws side by side from a bootleg game to a genuine cart. It's just like everything else when dealing with a fake Nintendo 64 game, everything looks cheap.

Step #3: Inside the Cartridge Shell

Another sure fire way to quickly identify fake n64 cartridges is to look for some number or letter imprints. When you flip the game upside down, and you are looking in towards the cartridge pin. Just like the photo shows, there should be numbered or lettered imprints where the circles are in the photo.

On authentic Nintendo 64 games, if you look in the grooves, you should see some numbering in the slots. This is really useful and easy way to spot counterfeit games.

Step #4: The internal circuit board

The game board can be a dead giveaway, "this is where the game bit opener helps". You notice the words "Nintendo" are not stamped into the fake board anywhere. All genuine Nintendo 64 circuit boards, would say Nintendo somewhere. Notice all the chips on the board, which are in Japanese. Authentic game chips, most, have "MX" stamped on the chips.

The Conclusion

1.6.27 15 of the Best PS2 RPGs Ranked - The Old School Game Vault (2024-06-16 22:55)

Putting together a list of “the best PS2 RPGs” is both easy and difficult. It’s easy in the sense that there’s no dearth of role-playing games—the system has [1]more RPG titles than some short-lived consoles, like the TurboGrafx-16, has of any kind at all. The difficult part involves separating the wheat from the chaff.

The good news is that it can be done, and the below entries make up our 15 RPGs for PS2 (ranked from 15 to 1). These amazing titles are sure to please any role playing enthusiast. Some of these options, dare we say, rise to the level of modern classics. You can also find lots of [2]PS2 on sale right here on our website!

15. Kingdom Hearts II

✖ The first “Kingdom Hearts” entry initially confused many gamers and reviewers by throwing Disney Characters into a “Final Fantasy” world. Kingdom Hearts II sticks with the same basic premise of the previous game, but improves on almost everything else its predecessor did.

The camera is better, the gameplay mechanics are better, and the gummi-ship sections have been overhauled to deliver high-octane action. But where this game really shines is in the presentation. Even by today’s standards, it’s a great looking game, and the lush coloring and animations in the world all but beg you to enjoy this epic adventure.

14. Star Ocean: Till the End of Time

✖ To say that some people love this most notorious entry in the “Star Ocean” series, while others hate it, is an understatement. TTEOT is the third in the series, and it does depart noticeably from the second. In this entry, the onus is more on the sci-fi aspects of the story, which features a protagonist named Fayt Leingod being kidnapped by aliens and dumped on a remote planet.

Whether you like the game depends on your tastes. Will you find the story to be solid or unsound? Will the plot-twist at the halfway point induce you to throw in the towel, or does it enhance the game? Does the inventory system cause you to lose your mind? These are things you'll only find out by playing the game.

13. Steambot Chronicles

✖ What's not to love about this game, it's a little nugget of gold. It has never been that popular of a title, but that's okay. For those of use who have played the game, I love the Mech Combat Mechanics mixed with RPG elements.

The majority of the game is spent playing side missions, some many find the story a little boring and basic, but for me this was my last PS2 game I thoroughly enjoyed.

12. Suikoden III

✖ One RPG series that enjoys a true cult following is "Suikoden." Many gamers enjoy the third entry the most because it almost acts as a stand-alone game. What truly broke the mold is that in "Suikoden III," the story is told through three different protagonists.

That means gamers will play as a mercenary, a knight and the son of a chieftain. So it's a great game for those with short attention spans.

11. Rogue Galaxy

✖ There isn't much of a rift when it comes to this title—gamers tend to love it unreservedly. In "Rogue Galaxy" you play as Jaster Rogue, a hunter who finds himself on a space pirate ship going on quests with a few unique sidekicks like a dog-headed warrior and a tribeswoman.

The game is a slow burn, but the plot kicks into gear about the midway point, and the story is off and running. Also, the fighting system does a nice job of managing real-time combat with the more traditionally RPG item menu.

10. Shadow Hearts: Covenant

✖ Best PS2 RPG game ever made for the system? Maybe. Most inviting cover-art for any PS2 game ever? Probably. The game takes place in an alternate WWI-era setting that is rife with fantasy elements, and it has a rich cast of characters including vampires, wolves, military officers and... a puppeteer.

The battle system is unique in that it features a “judgment ring,” which acts as a timer to deliver crucial hits. Overall, a game that will leave a lasting legacy.

9. Radiata Stories

✖ Radiata Stores had a huge anticipation with Japanese gamers, unfortunately that same enthusiasm didn’t carry over to the states. Radiata Stories went on to win game of the month after release and was nominated as one of the top PS2 RPGS video game back in 2005.

The game is classified as an action role-playing game, and has all the dragon slaying and dungeon exploring one can handle.

8. Baldur’s Gate Dark Alliance

✖ This maybe one of the best RPS’s ever made! I’m a huge fan of the hack and slash/ role playing elements in the game. Dark Alliance was awarded Role Playing Game of the Year back in 2001.

And has been released on just about every major consoles since its release. The gameplay is really what set this game apart 20+ years ago. Not to mention the dungeon & dragons elements the game includes, and the slew of famous voice actors.

7. Final Fantasy X

✖ Blitzball, Spyra, Wakka—mention these names to any hardcore RPG fan, and they'll know exactly what you're talking about. "Final Fantasy X" is beloved for its solid story, richly layered with some of gaming's favorite characters, and ahead-of-its time animation. Those who don't know it need to know it about this classic style RPG.

6. Grandia II

✖ Grandia II, which was originally released in the [3]Sega DreamCast library, which became an instant turn based RPG classic. So much so that Ubisoft got the rights to release a port of the game to the PlayStation 2 back in 2000.

The game is a solid RPG in the grandia series, even if the depth and story isn't as deep as the original.

5. Shin Megami Tensei: Persona 4

✖ The "Shin Megami Tensei" series earned rave reviews for its willingness to break with RPG convention. This was especially true of the third installment, which features a dark plot and overt sexuality. "Persona 4" improves on the previous entries by delivering better animation and mechanics.

The plot centers on another high-school protagonist who must overcome spirits, murders and killer fog. Persona-3's "one more" fighting system is back, and gamers who haven't, yet it, experienced the group brawling would do well to give it a go. And by all means read why we think [4]persona games are so damn good.

4. Final Fantasy XII

✖ Despite the occasional departure, Square always maintained the high standards of for any Final Fantasy Game. Final Fantasy XII was the first entry in a few years, but it lived up to expectations.

This story takes place in the familiar world of Ivalice, and it does a good job of melding a “Star Wars” spirit with an Anime execution. The game has it all, political intrigue and rebellion, aerial dogfighting, sleek spacecraft, and an eclectic cast of characters.

3. Wild Arms 3

✖ Wild arms 3, which is a sequel to the two earlier games Wild Arms & Wild Arms 2 Second Ignition. The game was a vast improvement over the first two titles in the series, as it was really created to use the fully technological power of the PlayStation 2 Console.

Wild Arms 3 is a classic turn base RPG game, which was hugely creative. Especially with the ways you would interact with the in game character traits. Which make this a must-play title in the series

2. Dark Cloud 2

✖ You really got a love when a company looks at a successful first game, in the series. Then they ask themselves, how can we make a sequel better than the first game. Boy did Sony deliver, with a remarkable masterpiece with eye-popping graphics.

Then Sony mixes in some "Zelda ish" mechanics into the gameplay. The gameplay is just as polished as the visual presentation, with super enjoyable characters and environments to experience, which make dark cloud 2 one of the best PlayStation 2 RPGs.

1. Dragon Quest VIII Journey of the Cursed King

There's something to be said for packaging. While substance of storytelling and good mechanics are a must for any game, how it looks also plays a crucial role. This is the first "Dragon Quest" iteration that utilizes 3D graphics, which is a great presentation method for Akira Toriyama's artwork.

As for the gameplay, this story of evil wizards and heroes is a throwback to the days of simpler RPGs—classic battle scenes, solid boss fights, traditional menu screens, etc.

These are the best RPGs on PS2, you need to play now. So find that old PlayStation 2 console and fire it up. Head over to our shop, and browse through hundreds of PS2 for sale at great prices. I promise you, you'll be glad you did.

1.6.28 Super Nintendo vs Nintendo 64: Who has the Best RPG Games (2024-06-16 22:58)

With hits like Mario 64, Super Smash Bros, and The Legend of Zelda: Ocarina of Time, the N64 was one of the most popular and successful consoles ever. But why didn't we ever see Final Fantasy 64, Chrono Trigger 64, or even Earthbound 64? Where are all the N64 RPG games?

For that matter, when you compare RPGs from Super Nintendo vs Nintendo 64, it looks downright ridiculous. Case in point: SNES gave us two of the best RPGs ever made, Chrono Trigger and Earthbound, plus hundreds of other RPG hits.

In contrast, Nintendo 64 gave us the infamous RPG dud, Quest 64. That's about it.

What happened? Who's to blame?

Also, are there any Nintendo 64 RPGs worth playing? Find out below.

Nintendo 64: The Pinnacle of Nintendo

As far as console gaming history is concerned, the Nintendo 64 is significant for a lot of reasons. As mentioned, it was extremely popular 🌪️ when it was released. Nintendo produced a veritable torrent of hit N64 games to flood the gaming market.

To be clear, the console had some of the best first-party exclusive games of all time—many that still remain classics to this day. In case you're unaware, "first-party" refers to games that are made by the same company that makes the console on which the games are played.

Nintendo 64: The Decline of Nintendo

But, unfortunately for Nintendo, it wasn't enough. The problem was that they lost almost all of their third-party game developers to the PlayStation and other consoles.

These developers didn't like the fact that the N64 uses cartridges instead of discs, which were the new standard format. Namely, the N64 cartridges have far less storage space than CD-ROMs.

Game developers were so limited by the cartridge format that they left Nintendo for consoles like PlayStation, which allowed them more freedom. Thus, the N64's release also marked the moment when Nintendo started to lose its grip on the video game industry it once dominated.

The Glory Days of Nintendo RPGs (SNES)

Previously, the Nintendo Entertainment System and its successor, the Super Nintendo, essentially annihilated all competition. Though the Sega Genesis certainly put up a fight, it couldn't compete with the wide variety of first and third-party games that Nintendo made available to consumers.

More to the point, the [1]Super Nintendo had established a long history of quality [2]RPGs. This included some of the biggest games, such as the first few Final Fantasy games and the incredible classic Chrono Trigger. Other notable titles include hybrid RPGs like Super Mario RPG: Legend of the Seven Stars and Earthbound.

Additionally, due to heavy third-party support, lesser-known SNES RPGs abound by the hundreds. This includes Secret of Evermore, Illusion of Gaia, Star Ocean, and Ogre Battle: The March of the Black Queen.

The Suddenly Enormous Competition

Although this genre has always been fairly popular with hardcore gamers, one title in particular caused it to explode during the mid-1990s. Released for the Sony PlayStation in 1997, Final FantasyVII made the role-playing game genre popular with a more casual 🎮 gaming audience as well.

Before this, most Japanese RPGs were deemed too obscure or complicated for North American audiences. Now, gamers in the United States were begging Japan for more RPGs.

All at once, the Sony PlayStation was overflowing with [3]RPGs of varying qualities. And since compact discs held a dramatically larger amount of information than cartridges, the games could be much longer and more detailed.

Longer & More Complex Games

RPG games of this era took dozens of hours to complete, which made them an incredible value compared to the games of previous generations. Even a game as expansive as Super Mario Bros. 3 for the Nintendo NES can be beaten in only a few hours.

Final Fantasy VII, on the other hand, takes anywhere from 30 to 60 hours to complete. That's only if you don't spend too much time on the dozens of side quests and mini-games that are included.

Better Stories

Another reason why these amazing games became so popular was that they told such deep and dramatic stories. Prior to this, gamers didn't expect a lot of plots, nor did they receive it. Now, gamers looked forward to intricate character details and gripping storylines.

Where Are All the N64 RPG Games?

Meanwhile, at the very moment when gamers were desperately seeking their next RPG fix, they realized that [4]Nintendo 64 was experiencing an RPG drought. It certainly didn't have any titles that matched the massive popularity and incredibly high quality of Square's [5]Final Fantasy VII.

Now, you'd think that Nintendo would try to make up for the lack of third-party RPGs by making some of their own. But, strangely, they made almost no effort to do this at all. Instead, they doubled down on their efforts to produce loads of action/adventure games and, for some reason, racing games.

Don't get us wrong, most of these games are excellent. Still, the list of N64 RPGs is so short it's legitimately shocking.

There are literally only 3 true RPG games released on N64 in North America: Quest 64, Aidyn Chronicles: The First Mage, and Paper Mario.

Aside from these, there are a few games that have RPG elements but don't actually qualify as RPGs. These include Atari's Gauntlet Legends, Shadowgate 64, and Konami's Hybrid Heaven.

Are These N64 RPGs Any Good?

Of the 3 RPGs on N64, only one is worth playing. Namely, Paper Mario, the sequel to Super Mario RPG, is just as excellent as its SNES predecessor. The other two RPGs are generally considered slow, shallow, and boring.

What's the Bottom Line?

While the N64 has won a lot of popularity contests, "Best Console For RPGs" is not one of them. Because of the physical and storage limitations of cartridges, Nintendo had to concede the RPG genre to Sony for an entire generation. Nor could the limited list of N64 RPG games live up to the expectations of long-time SNES RPG fans.

So, if you want to play the best RPGs ever made, check out our SNES and PlayStation games for sale. Or, forget RPGs and check out awesome N64 titles like The Legend of Zelda: Ocarina of Time.

1.6.29 10 Facts about the Nintendo GameCube & its Best Games (2024-06-16 23:00)

The GameCube hit shelves in 2001 and was the first console to use optical discs instead of cartridges. It was also the first console to introduce wireless controllers, and it incorporated LAN play by connecting multiple GameCube consoles.

This console had a broadband adapter that allowed players to connect to the internet and play online games. The addition of the Game Boy Advance game adapter made it easy to connect with innovative additional gameplay or multiplayer options.

Why purchase a Nintendo GameCube

Even though its successor, the Nintendo Wii, is backward compatible, GameCube games can't be played on the Wii U. GameCube games are valued by collectors for their rarity and gameplay experience. The console was released in four different colors, Indigo "Purple", Platinum "Silver", Orange, and black.

It also had a variety of different colored controllers to choose from. The console was released back in the early 2000s as a rival to Sony's PlayStation 2 and Microsoft's Xbox. Initially the Gamecube wasn't nearly as popular as the PS2 & the Xbox, many thought it was due to Nintendo's lack of innovation. What I mean is the [1]GameCube was a video game console, but the PS2 & Xbox were multimedia video game consoles.

Accessories

Our favorite accessory is the Nintendo Gameboy player, which is an excellent accessory. With the gameboy player, you had to have a base which attached to the bottom of your console, then you would insert a gameboy player disc. Once both of those items are up and running, you can insert  Gameboy Advance games in the bottom of the player and play GBA games on your big screen TV. The gameboy players can be a bit pricey, but they are well worth it.

Another accessory, I own, is the Nintendo Wave Bird controller. Which is a wireless controller made by Nintendo, but it fits nicely in your hand and pretty much stays connected without any issues during game play. The controller comes in two colors, Platinum & a Gray variant.

Memory Cards

You need a memory card to do anything with the system. Memory cards are required for any game you wish to save. Nintendo released three different memory cards for the system, 59 blocks, 251 blocks, and a huge 1019 block memory cards. Games like Pokémon Colosseum or Animal Crossing with take a huge amount of blocks. I'd recommend at least 251 blocks.

If you're looking for a GameCube, you can find one easily online or at a local retro game shop. However, it's important to know which games to buy. Here is a list of our top GameCube games for beginners:

Super Smash Bros. Melee

[2]Super Smash[3] Bros Melee is a game that has been captivating audiences since its release in 2001. The combat is intense, and the characters are beloved by gamers all over the world.

While there have been other games in the Super Smash Bros. series, Melee has remained the most popular. There are many reasons for this - the gameplay is exceptional, the controls are tight, and the character roster is incredibly diverse. Not to mention, the game is just plain fun!

Whether you're playing against friends or AI opponents, Melee offers an engaging experience that can be enjoyed time and again. If you're looking for a feisty fighting game with plenty of action, Super Smash Bros. Melee is definitely worth checking out!

Mario Kart: Double Dash

Mario Kart: Double Dash is a racing game that was released for the Nintendo GameCube in 2003. The game features two players per kart, with one player driving and the other managing items. The game also introduced special items that can be used to give players an advantage on the track.

Mario Kart: Double Dash received critical acclaim upon release, with praise directed at its graphics, gameplay, and multiplayer features.

Some reviewers criticized the short length of the single-player mode. However, the game went on to become one of the [4]best-selling games on GameCube.

The Legend of Zelda: The Wind Waker

The Legend of Zelda: [5]The Wind Waker is an action-adventure video game developed and published by Nintendo for the GameCube home console. It is the tenth installment in The Legend of Zelda series.

The Wind Waker follows the adventures of Link, a young boy sailing through a world inhabited by mythical creatures called the "Wind Wakers". Using wind magic to sail across the seas, Link must rescue his kidnapped sister and save his world from a long-dormant evil. Critics praised it for its unique graphics style and gameplay.

The game was re-released on Wii U in 2013 as part of The Legend of Zelda: The Wind Waker HD, which features enhanced graphics and Miiverse support.

Luigi's Mansion

Luigi's Mansion for GameCube is one of the best games in the series. It's a perfect blend of spooky and cute, with some absolutely fantastic level design.

The controls are tight and responsive, and the graphics still hold up today. If you're looking for a challenge, you can try to collect all the ghosts at each level. Otherwise, just enjoy Luigi's adventure as he explores this creepy old mansion!

Pikmin

Pikmin is a video game developed and published by Nintendo for the GameCube console. The player controls Captain Olimar, a space traveler whose ship has been damaged in an asteroid collision and must salvage its parts by exploring the planet on which he crash-lands. To do this, he uses creatures called Pikmin to explore the environment and fight enemies.

The game was generally well-received by critics, who praised its graphics and unique game-play elements. Some criticisms were directed at the length of the game's story mode, which could be completed in about five hours.

Overall, Pikmin sold over 1 million copies worldwide. A sequel, Pikmin 2, was released in 2004.

Metroid Prime

Metroid Prime is a classic GameCube title that many gamers consider to be one of the best games ever made. The game follows the story of Samus Aran, a bounty hunter who must stop the Space Pirates from using an alien artifact to create an army of Metroids.

The game's graphics and gameplay are top-notch, and it's no wonder that it won numerous awards following its release. If you're a fan of first-person shooters or action games, then Metroid Prime is definitely worth checking out.

Born to Play

✖ These are just a few of the [6]GameCube games that are worth checking out. If you're looking for a console that offers a wide variety of great used video games that hold their value, then the GameCube is well worth considering. These are a great choice if you are selling games online.

There are many other great titles available for the GameCube, so be sure to do your research before making a purchase. When you're ready to improve your [7]retro game collection.

1.6.30 Retro Console Wars - The Sega Saturn vs DreamCast? (2024-06-16 23:04)

Console Wars: The Sega Saturn and the Sega Dreamcast were two machines that enjoyed as many similarities as they did stark differences. One system marked the end of the 90s gaming era, and the other ushered in the much-heralded 6th-generation of consoles that defined the new millennium.

And while both were manufactured by Sega, both were also responsible for hastening that company's [1]demise. But despite being regarded as failures at the time, their reputations have only improved in the intervening years. A [2]Reddit thread on the subject of the Sega Dreamcast was a veritable love-in, and some Sega [3]Saturn games, like "Panzer Dragoon Saga," are so in-demand that they [4]fetch hundreds of dollars on the retro game market.

This all begs the question, which is the better machine? Like anything, much of it depends on personal preference. But here's how the two systems stack up according to certain criteria important to gamers young and old.

The Games: Dreamcast vs Sega Saturn

Both consoles score highly among fans when ranked solely by their respective games' library. Each had their own strengths: the Saturn had some iconic and fun arcade ports like "Virtua Fighter 2", "King of Fighters", "Sega Rally", and "Street Fighter," to name a few.

While the Sega Dreamcast had its own excellent titles like "Power Stone", "Shenmue", "Jet Set Radio" and "Soul Calibur" as well as wildly popular exclusive titles like "Crazy Taxi." How can I forget playing Marvel vs Capcom 2 on the dreamcast, which is a great fighting game and probably the best arcade port of the game.

The Shmups / Shooters:

✖ While both consoles featured rail shooters, like The House of the Dead, which first came out on the Sega Saturn and The House of the Dead 2 on the Sega DreamCast. Both consoles featured some real good shmups, the Saturn had a few that really stick out like Radiant Silvergun, Battle Garegga, Dodonpachi, and the list goes on. Sure, the DreamCast had some cool shmups that come to mind: Bangai-O, GunBird 2 the GigaWing Series.

The Sonic the Hedgehog Series:

When one thinks of sega, generally the first title that comes to mind is Sonic the Hedgehog. Both consoles had their fair share of Sonic Titles, as you'd imagine, but the saturn didn't really bring any huge improvement to the series. Sonic 3D Blast & Sonic R are similar to games from the sega genesis and the sega game gear libraries. The dreamcast however had two new additions into the series with Sonic Adventure & Sonic Adventure II. The sonic team also created a Mario party clone in sonic shuffle. Which is a very similar board game style game.

The RPGs:

That said, the [5]Saturn's library of games has earned an almost mythic status in the retro market due to its abundance of RPGs like Dragon Force, Shining Force III, Albert Odyssey, Guardian Heroes, Panzer Dragoon Saga and one of my favorite games Magic Knight Rayearth. The first Skies of Arcadia was a great RPG on the dreamcast, The Shenmue series is fantastic, Grandia II, and Elemental Gimmick Gear come to mind.

Sports Games:

I do want to mention sports games, because the dreamcast really had some decent games. 2K really created some solid basketball games. I know sports games are a dime a dozen, but when you do them right, you should be recognized.

So while many Saturn titles have become nostalgic favorites among hardcore gamers, the Dreamcast games continue to offer playable fun to this day. However, the total number of games for the Sega Dreamcast stands at just over 600 compared to over 1100 for the Sega Saturn. When I look at both libraries, to me the dreamcast is the more complete library. The dreamcast has a bit of everything in its library: from some great Arcade Games, Flight Games, 2D Fighting Games, and so on. While both consoles featured some excellent 3d fighters, but I have to go with the dreamcast on this one!

Winner: DreamCast

The hardware: Dreamcast vs Sega Saturn

No surprise here that the Dreamcast offered more powerful overall specs than its predecessor. While the two systems claimed both 3D platform games and nice 2D platformers. However, it was the Dreamcast's 128-bit processor that left the Saturn's 32-bit capabilities in the dust. Add to that the fact the Dreamcast was designed with 3D gaming in mind, and you had a console that delivered very well on this front. Still, anyone who has played a few of the Saturn's 2D gaming titles, like "Street Fighter Alpha" and "X-Men," can make a strong argument that this machine's 2D library was superior. What tips the balance one way or the other is the fact that the Dreamcast utilized Hitachi's SH4 processor, a PC-powerful chip that hummed along at 200 MHz. The Saturn's dual VDP chips, on the other hand, simply couldn't compete.

Winner: Dreamcast

The sound

Right from the get-go, the Sega Saturn was praised for its Yamaha YMF292 dedicated sound card. This custom processor featured a 32-slot sound generator and a 128-step digital signal processor that allowed it, among other things, to create sound mixes and generate digital sound effects. The Dreamcast, by virtue of the fact it was the first of the sixth-gen consoles, had solid sound too, but it didn't stand out the way the Saturn's did. The winner here is obvious.

Edge: Saturn

The controller

The controllers for both the Dreamcast and the Saturn play to those consoles' strengths. Those  who reveled in mashing circular buttons in the arcade found much to love in the Saturn's understated 6-button controller. It was perfect for 2D gaming. If the Saturn analogue controller wasn't your cup of tee, Hori made some awesome arcade sticks that really are great for that arcade experience. You can still find these today on sites like eBay.

Both consoles had different controller peripherals for each console. Like flight sticks, driving wheels, and light gun blasters. The light gun on the Saturn was big and bulky, I was always a fan of the more compact light gun for the dreamcast. Sega did make a unique 3d controller just for Nights into Dreams, which had pretty great 3D graphics on the Sega Saturn.

Dreamcast fans, on the other hand, had a modern controller that played to the system's 3D prowess by offering an analogue controller as well as the standard buttons. The addition of memory card slots allowed Dreamcast gamers to save their progress more efficiently than the Saturn's internal memory did, or messing with a ram cartridge. For this reason, the Dreamcast has to come out ahead.

Edge: Dreamcast

The console sales Saturn Vs DreamCast

High sales don't always translate to quality. However, there are some passionate forum debates out there weighing the merits of these two systems based on their respective sales figures. Online numbers tend to vary, but official estimates tend to place lifetime sales of the Saturn in the 9.26 million range, while the Dreamcast sold around 9.13 million. But there are ancillary factors to consider as well, such as the fact that the Saturn had a slightly longer shelf life (released in North America in 1995 and discontinued in 1998) than the Dreamcast did (released in 1999 in North America and discontinued in 2001.)

Those who judge these consoles solely based on sales can come to one of two conclusions: that the Dreamcast did better because it virtually tied the Saturn in sales in a slightly shorter timeframe; or the Saturn wins because it (barely) edged out the Dreamcast in overall sales. Since the opportunities to nitpick here are almost endless, we absolve ourselves of any further headaches by simply calling it a push.

Edge: tie

Even while trying to remain impartial, it's hard to make a fully subjective choice between these two [6]consoles. Much of the choice does come down to personal preference (for games, hardware, controller, etc.), so a truly official winner may never be crowned. This reality seems to have been borne out by the above list, which takes into account a number of criteria yet makes it clear the sleek and powerful Sega Dreamcast matches up equally with the sturdy and game-rich Sega Saturn.

1.6.31 Console Wars - SNES vs PlayStation RPGs - Which is Better? (2024-06-17 00:05)

Classic RPG fans, prepare your arguments. We're about to settle one of the longest-standing console war showdowns of all time: SNES vs PS1 RPGs.

It's quite a bold claim, we know. Both consoles produced numerous titles that are still considered the best RPGs ever made.

SNES gave us Earthbound, Final Fantasy II and III (IV and VI in Japan), and Chrono Trigger. PS1 gave us Final Fantasy VII-IX, Final Fantasy Tactics, Legend of Dragoon, Parasite Eve, and more.

At this moment, you may find yourself involuntarily screaming at your screen, audibly (and angrily) naming the obvious winner of this showdown. We understand.

Some will tell us that Final Fantasy VII is the game that changed the world of RPG gaming forever. If that's you, you're right.

Alternatively, you may argue that Chrono Trigger and Final Fantasy III changed RPG gaming first. You're right, too.

But which console truly reigns supreme in the RPG genre? Find out below.

What's So Great About SNES RPGs?

Before we talk about SNES RPGs, let's back up and talk about the NES. The NES  was a huge success in every genre (except for [1]video games based on movies). Plus, at that time, RPGs were already one of the most popular game genres in Japan.

So, naturally, there were [2]several great RPGs for the 8-bit system, like Zelda II and the original Final Fantasy. Unfortunately, aside from these two titles, the genre never really caught on with American audiences during the 8-bit era.

RPGs Become Truly Amazing For the First Time

Thus, SNES RPGs caused a radical change in the landscape of American gaming. For starters, these games were enormous compared to 8-bit titles, with beautifully detailed sound and graphics. The lush worlds and sleek visuals  grabbed the attention of American gamers and didn't let go.

Gamers who had never even heard of RPGs were instantly enamored with titles like [3]Chrono Trigger[4] and [5]Earthbound. These games were so entertaining, so enjoyable, and so addicting that we couldn't get enough. They started our desperate hunger for RPGs that we still experience to this day.

SNES RPGs Push the Known Boundaries of Console Gaming

If anyone in the 8-bit era thought about RPGs, they'd envision plain graphics and very basic settings. Think blue sky, some green trees, and castles made out of that same 8-bit brick pattern you see in every NES game. Based on screenshots, you couldn't really tell one NES RPG from another.

But, thanks to a more powerful processor, SNES RPGs have far more distinction, detail, and depth. Suddenly, game creators could give each series and each game a unique art style and sound profile. And the cinematic drama/action scenes of games like Final Fantasy II and III were the best we'd ever seen in console games.

Stories That Rival the Best Hollywood Action Fantasy Epics

Aside from the look and sound of these games, they differed in tone as well. ✖ Final Fantasy II (IV) is a dramatic, medieval epic that feels like a tale from the legends of King Arthur. In contrast, Final Fantasy III (VI) is a futuristic, post-apocalyptic, operatic love story that blends sci-fi and fantasy in a beautiful steampunk fairy tale.

Furthermore, not all SNES RPGs took themselves so seriously. For instance, Super Mario RPG is no more serious than you'd expect from this familiar franchise.

Earthbound is relentlessly quirky and hilarious from start to finish. Chrono Trigger gives us a mix of lighthearted humor and apocalypse-level tragedy, plus time travel!

These stories were deeper than any that gamers had experienced before. And they still rival some of today's Hollywood epics like Avatar, Mortal Engines, and other boring crap.

Many SNES RPGs Are Still Considered the All-Time Best

Don't take our word for it. Go ahead and look it up for yourself.

If you research “[6]best RPGs of all time” you will always see Chrono Trigger, Super Mario RPG, and Earthbound. Seriously, these are on every list, every time.

What's So Great About PS1 RPGs?

✖ That said, there are several PS1 games that always make the “best of” lists, too. In fact, it can definitely be argued that PS1 RPGs are inherently better than those of the SNES.

After all, this was the console that continued the successful Final Fantasy series, among other SNES RPG franchises. And this time, the games are 32-bit with FMV (Full Motion Video) cutscenes and 3D graphics.

3D RPGs Are Born

That's right. For the first time in console gaming history, RPGs came to life in glorious 3D on the PlayStation. Those that weren't 3D still had amazing, sprite-based graphics that blew our minds.

Bigger, Longer, More Detailed Epics

Aside from graphics and sound, PS1 games had an even bigger advantage over SNES games. And we mean that literally.

To illustrate, think about how much data you can cram into an SNES game cartridge. The answer is, “some.”

But, since the PS1 uses discs instead of cartridges, there are virtually no limits on how big or long a game can be. Each disc has more than enough space to contain a huge, playable game world with lots of characters and events.

And if that one disc still isn’t enough, game creators can continue the game on additional discs. Thus, games like Final Fantasy VIII and IX span 4 discs.

The lack of space limitations also allows for video files. Thus, cutscenes can include live action, hand-drawn anime, top-of-the-line CG, or any other recorded video. Unfortunately, though, the video resolution is often quite poor.

PS1: The True Successor to SNES?

One must also consider the matter of succession. For example, when the NES was succeeded by the SNES, a new and massively better era of RPGs began.

However, when the SNES was succeeded by the N64, the era of Nintendo-sponsored RPGs entirely [7]ceased to exist. There are approximately 5 N64 titles that potentially count as RPG games.

Apparently, Nintendo’s choice to use cartridges instead of discs didn’t go over well with third-party game developers. Consequently, most of the companies that made awesome RPGs for the SNES abandoned Nintendo in favor of Sony’s PS1.

Thus, the PlayStation is (unofficially) the true successor of the SNES as far as RPGs are concerned. In fact, some of the most popular SNES RPGs (namely Chrono Trigger and Final Fantasy IV-VI) were re-released on PS1 with FMV cutscenes and other bonus content.

So, one could argue that [8]Playstation RPGs are superior to SNES RPGs just as the SNES is superior to its predecessor. Really, though, this is a matter of opinion, which we'll get too momentarily.

Many PS1 RPGs Are Still Considered the All-Time Best

Ultimately, this point is where the real showdown between PS1 and SNES RPGs is determined. As with SNES, there are [9]several PS1 RPGs on every RPG "best of" list. These include Suikoden II, Legend of Dragoon, and Final Fantasy VII-IX.

More Games

More importantly, the PS1 has literally 4 times as many RPGs as the SNES. So, if you think Final Fantasy VII is way overrated, no problem. Try Parasite Eve, Xenogears, Mega Man Legends, Castlevania: Symphony of the Night, Breath of Fire III, Lunar: Silver Star Story Complete, etc.

SNES vs PS1 RPGs: Which Are Best?

It's a tie—sort of. Just kidding (kind of).

Okay, yes, we did say that we'd settle this dispute once and for all. So here's the  thing.

The PS1 is unarguably superior to the SNES in all respects, period. So yes, PS1 RPGs are better in terms of graphics, sound, game length, and sheer number of titles. If you love RPGs, you will definitely find some of your favorite games ever on the PS1.

But that's the other thing. You will also definitely find some of your favorite RPGs on the SNES.

SNES hits like Chrono Trigger and Earthbound are unique, unequalled RPG adventures. In fact, these two titles might be the best video games ever made.

Is Final Fantasy VII better than Earthbound? Of course, it isn't. Nor is Earthbound necessarily better than Final Fantasy VII.

Furthermore, Nintendo's Earthbound and Super Mario RPG will never be legitimately available on any PlayStation console until Hell freezes over. Nintendo will likely hold onto these bragging rights until the end of the world.

Here's the bottom line. PS1 is better for those who want to explore literally hundreds of great RPG titles, including some of the best ever made. But the SNES still has many exclusive RPG hits, some of which are arguably better than any PS1 game ever released.

PS1 vs SNES RPGs: Get What You Need Right Here

Obviously, we can't tell you which games you'll like better. You'll have to decide that for yourself. But we can definitely help you with that.

Lastly, we'd love to see your opinions about SNES vs PS1 RPGs. Express your thoughts in the Comments section below.

1.6.32 The Defense Department Lost Track of Millions Sent to Chinese Labs (2024-06-23 16:15)

The Department of Defense Inspector General is out with a [1]new report detailing how the Pentagon sent millions of dollars in American taxpayer funding to a number of research labs in China and then lost track of how it was being used.

The audit was conducted in compliance with the National Defense Authorization Act and looked at where funds were sent, in addition to whether they were used in ways that could spark a pandemic. Investigators probed whether money was sent to the Chinese Communist Party, the Wuhan Institute of Virology and much more.

(U) Management Advisory: Review of DoD Funds Provided to the People's Republic of China and Associated Affiliates for Research Activities or Any Foreign Countries for the Enhancement of Pathogens of Pandemic Potential (Report No. DODIG-2024-099)

The purpose of this management advisory is to inform Congress and DoD leadership of the results of our review required in response to Public Law 118-31, "National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2024," section 252, "Audit to Identify Diversion of Department of Defense Funding to China's Research Labs. Section 252 requires our office to identify and report to Congressional Defense Committees:

The amount of Federal funds awarded by the Department of Defense(whether directly or indirectly) through grants, contracts, subgrants, subcontracts, or any other type of agreement or collaboration, during the10-year period immediately preceding such date of enactment, that—(U) (1) was provided, whether purposely or inadvertently, to

(U) (A) the People's Republic of China;

(U) (B) the Communist Party of China;

(U) (C) the Wuhan Institute of Virology or any other organization administered by the Chinese Academy of Sciences;

(U) (D) EcoHealth Alliance, Inc. for work performed in China on research supported by the Government of China, including any subsidiaries and related organizations that are directly controlled by EcoHealth Alliance, Inc.;

(U) (E) the Academy of Military Medical Sciences or any of its research institutes, including the Beijing Institute of Microbiology and Epidemiology;

(U) (F) any other lab, agency, organization, individual, or instrumentality that is owned, controlled (directly or indirectly), or overseen (officially or unofficially) by any of the entities listed in subparagraphs (A) through (E); or

(U) (2) was used to fund research or experiments that could have reasonably resulted in the enhancement of any coronavirus, influenza, Nipah, Ebola, or other pathogen of pandemic potential or chimeric versions of such a virus or pathogen in the People's Republic of China or any other foreign country.

The report states that due to a lack of proper oversight and tracking, much of the funding was lost and where it went or how it was used is unaccounted for.

"The full extent of DoD funds provided to Chinese research laboratories or other foreign countries for research related to enhancement of pathogens of pandemic potential is unknown," the report found. "The DoD did not track funding at the level of detail necessary to enable us to completely and accurately determine if the DoD provided funding to Chinese research laboratories or other foreign countries for research related to the enhancement of pathogens of pandemic potential. For example, when the DoD awards funds to an entity, the entity often provides some of those funds to other organizations for subawards or contracted services. DoD officials stated that during the initial grant application process, they have visibility over who the subaward recipients are intended to be. However, we found that DoD organizations lacked visibility of subaward information over the life of contracts and grants."

Due to limitations in the DoD's tracking systems, the full extent of DoD funds provided to Chinese research laboratories for research related to enhancement of pathogens of pandemic potential is unknown. Read our new report now: [2]<https://t.co/Ts7V7C15V9>— DoD Office of Inspector General (@DoD_IG) [3]June 20, 2024

"We found significant limitations with the adequacy of data, similar to the observations the GAO found in its reports. Specifically, the DoD did not track funding at the level of detail necessary to determine whether the DoD provided funding to Chinese research laboratories or other foreign countries for research related to enhancement of pathogens of pandemic potential," the report concludes. "In addition, DoD organizations did not have visibility of subaward information throughout the life of contracts and grants. In addition, except for the CDMRP electronic grants system, DoD organizations could not effectively search award systems to identify all contracts, subcontracts, grants, and subgrants that may have been related to pathogen research performed by China and other foreign countries. As a result, DoD organizations could not produce a complete population of pathogen research grants and subawards necessary for us to conclude on the use of DoD funds provided for pathogen research."

Oddly, the page about Chinese entities is redacted.

1.6.33 Looks Like Trump May Have Minnesota In the Bag (2024-06-23 16:24)

Former President Donald Trump may have a big chance to turn this blue state, red.

According to new polls, Trump is in the lead to secure Minnesota, resulting in the Biden campaign panicking over the president's diminishing chances to win in November.

An Emerson College Polling/The Hill state [1]poll found that Trump holds a slight advantage over President Joe Biden in six swing states and tied in Minnesota— at 45 percent each.

"In our first polling in several key swing states since Trump's conviction last month, there has been little movement," Spencer Kimball, the executive director of Emerson College Polling said.

A recent memo from the Trump campaign revealed that it is expanding ground to Minnesota after it signed eight leases for "Trump Force 47" offices in Minnesota. 47 signifies the number of the next president should Trump win.

"The addition of Minnesota and Virginia to the electoral map opens up at least 12 additional pathways to 270," the memo said, the number of electoral votes needed to win.

If Trump takes home the gold in Minnesota, he would be the first Republican to win the state since Richard Nixon in 1972.

In 2016, the former president came close to securing the state but lost it to his Democrat challenger Hillary Clinton.

Pollster Frank Luntz said that media undermining Trump's triumph in Minnesota shows that the media doesn't understand what is happening in the political landscape regarding polls.

"I don't think the media understands exactly what's going on right now," Luntz said. "Yes, Trump dropped a few points after being found guilty on 34 felony accounts. But remember this: that would have destroyed any candidate as recently as 10 years ago. And the fact that Donald Trump is still even with, or in some cases, leading Joe Biden after being found guilty of 34 felonies?"

Despite the Democratic National Committee (DNC) investing more than $500,000 in Minnesota for staff, technology, outreach efforts, email fundraising, data, and operations infrastructure ahead of the election, Biden's chances in the Gopher state still look weak.

1.6.34 Gaza War Ignites a Civil War Within the LGBT Community (2024-06-23 16:30)

Pride month is almost over, but it seemed like barely anything happened. There were parades, but it wasn't as 'in your face' as in other years. Maybe it's because different things are going on, maybe it's because it's an election year, or perhaps it's because the war in Gaza has fractured the LGBT community in ways that are baffling.

I will never step in to stop liberals from cannibalizing each other, and this is no exception. It's a bit entertaining: some are openly pro-Hamas, while others rightfully point out how nonsensical that position is in this situation. The New York Times wrote about this civil war within the gay community and how it's set Fire Island ablaze (via [1]NYT):

The dispute on Fire Island, just off Long Island, was just one expression of the tensions over the Gaza war that have wracked American public life. But within New York's L.G.B.T.Q. community, whose members hail from every ethnic and social background and tend to be highly attuned to issues of social justice, the war has touched off some especially raw conflicts.

The fight over how the community should respond to the war in Gaza has played out in fiery online comments and false accusations of pro-Hamas activity. On Fire Island, the flag conflict has pitted Mr. Torres and local homeowners, including Mr. Lucas, against the very activists honored at the park. Elsewhere in New York, similar, if lower profile, disputes have shaken gay bars, L.G.B.T.Q. fund-raising dinners and Pride festivities.

"I think queer people are mostly on one side of the debate," said Afeef Nessouli, a journalist and activist who has been highlighting the stories of L.G.B.T.Q. people in Gaza on his popular social media channels since the war began. "It feels like queer people are coming out for Palestine in a really large way."

Indeed, members of the L.G.B.T.Q. community overwhelmingly self-identify as politically liberal or moderate, according to polls. A majority of Democrats have disapproved of Israel's actions since at least last November, one month after the war began, according to Gallup surveys.

...supporters of Israel, including some vocal L.G.B.T.Q. people, often argue that the community should support the country because, while it lags behind Western countries on some gay rights issues, it is more tolerant than other places in the Middle East.

In Gaza, like in many places in the Arab world, homosexuality remains taboo and gay life happens largely behind closed doors. Government persecution is not uncommon, and in one high-profile case Hamas killed a prominent commander after accusing him of embezzlement and homosexuality.

Rec“Taboo” and “largely being closed doors” are descriptors that are awfully anti-progressive with this lot. Also, it’s not true: we know what radical Islamists do to gays when found. It’s death. ISIS hurled these people off rooftops. The Times doesn’t want to highlight the silliness here, which is that some in the LGBT community are siding with people who would kill them if they had the chance. Say what you want, but, in general, siding with a group of people who want you dead seems illogical.

Yet, this is where intersectionality and other left-wing inanity reign. We saw the vestiges of this when a lesbian [2]was booted from Chicago’s ‘Dyke March’ in 2017; she had a rainbow Star of David flag. Also, have liberal Americans forgotten when a local council in Michigan became all-Muslim, they banned Pride flags?

Let them eat their own. I’ll be watching game seven of the Stanley Cup Final.

1.6.35 Trump Has Picked His VP (2024-06-23 16:33)

Former President Donald Trump has picked his 2024 running mate.

On Saturday, Trump announced that he has decided who will be his vice president, but hasn’t told anyone who he or she might be yet.

Advertisement

“In my mind, yeah,” Trump told reporters at a Philadelphia rally when asked if he’s decided on his trusty sidekick.

“No, nobody knows,” the former president said when asked if anyone knew. However, Trump confirmed they will be at the first 2024 televised debate between him and President Joe Biden.

Last month, I [1]reported that Trump’s VP shortlist had been narrowed down to just a handful of potential choices including Gov. Doug Burgum (R-ND), Sen. Marco Rubio (R-FL), Sen. J.D. Vance (R-OH), Sen. Tim Scott (R-SC), Sen. Tom Cotton (R-AR), and Rep. Elise Stefanik (N.Y.).

Potential choices received vetting materials from the Trump campaign in recent weeks as he prepares to make a final decision.

NEW: Trump tells me and [2]@DashaBurns just now:

- He’s picked his VP
- He hasn’t told them yet
- They’ll be at the debate [3]pic.twitter.com/xL3qV98PFL— Jake Traylor (@jake _traylor) [4]June 22, 2024

A source close to the 2024 hopeful told the New York Post that Trump is looking for three things in regards to a running mate.

“He’s looking for who can raise money, he’s looking for who is an effective surrogate on TV with adversarial media, and he’s looking at who will do the best job debating Kamala Harris,” the source said.

As the country has anticipated the announcement of Trump’s VP pick for some time, the former president has downplayed the impact of a running mate on how the election will turn out.

Trump’s senior adviser Brian Hughes said the former president’s top concern when choosing a VP “is a strong leader who will make a great President for eight years after his next four-year term concludes.”

1.6.36 These Three Ideas Will Win 2024 (2024-06-23 16:35)

That makes this week’s debate more meaningful than others in the cycle’s past.

This week’s debate reveals—in many ways—the blueprint for the election of 2024. Every candidate for federal office will be viewed as an extension of the Presidential nominee representing them this week.

The major reason this is the case is because both men have had the reigns of government, both have a record in office, and the people will choose on those records.

From a purely policy perspective that indicates the most lopsided loss in history should be expected for the incumbent. But with the malcontent in office, his corrupt influence with the media, and whatever gamesmanship they may have planned for shenanigans the Trump team has zero room to relax or take a breath.

By extension, it also means that the rest of the ticket must play it equally tough. It is not time for the U.S. Senate candidate for a state or a House candidate for a district to wander off message. Incumbent Democrats are chained to Biden’s failures and his attack on Americans Yesterday in the Bronx at a rally for electeds Jamal Bowman and Alexandria Ocasio Cortez, in a borough where Trump just weeks ago drew twelve times the turnout (on a weeknight,) the pair from “The Squad” went profane, angry and unhinged.

They did so because that's all the top of their ticket has left them with.

Did I also mention that a poll this week has New York State within 1 % between Trump vs Biden?

Speaking of deep blue strongholds President Trump held a rally in deeply blue Philadelphia, largely attended by Hispanics and African Americans, and not only packed out the Temple University venue, but like the Bronx rally even more people lined up outside and around the block.

The reason he is getting this seismic response may twist the brains of Jake Tapper and Rachel Maddow but it shouldn't surprise just about anyone and everyone else. He's talking about three things that every voter cares about.

Trump promises to protect the American people from the wanton dangers of crime and to keep them safe. Biden's plan of flooding our nation with illegal aliens and the Democratic push to defund police have put every American in jeopardy. Trump's message: close the border, deport the criminals, and back the blue. Simple. It resonates with Obama's largest fundraiser from 2008, who announced she's now Team Trump, and it will work for Senate and House nominees. It will work, that is if you make it your core policy point on the trail. If one gets distracted by other frivolous or even just less important talking points—then it takes the voter's eye off the biggest issue on the radar.

Trump is promising to protect the American people's hard-earned money. It's not the government's money, it's the people's money. Through deregulation, you unleash the economy again. Through the extension of the Trump tax cuts before they expire—including the child tax credit—you create financial improvement for every poor and middle-class family and child in America. And by reversing Biden's war on energy and letting Americans domestic energy flow we will reverse the regressive tax of 20 % increase of costs on goods that Biden has gleefully overseen. Side benefit: Getting American energy-producing again also bankrupts Russia and Iran which will curtail their ability to make war. If Russia is poor they can't invade their neighbors. If Iran is poor they can't pay proxies like Hamas, Hezbollah, and the Houthies.

Lastly, Trump is promising to protect American children. Parents have a right to know what their schools are teaching. They have a right to determine the curriculum. They have the right to believe that boys and girls will be respected for their distinction. And they have the right to expect their girls will be kept safe by not having to allow men into their locker rooms, showers, and fields of play. Biden believes America's children belong to the state. Americans believe they belong to their parents. This isn't controversial. So say it over and over: "We are fighting to protect your children!"

If Republicans down the ticket want to win—parrot what Trump is promising. Protect Americans' safety, money, and children.

Every American cares deeply—in their heart of hearts—about these three things. Biden has attacked them on all three fronts. And a united Republican ticket championing these simple three ideas will landslide the competition.

Now get to it!

1.6.37 Why mankind's greatest threat is mankind (2024-06-23 22:03)

Recently, some Russian political leaders and generals, an occasional Chinese Communist Party insider, Turkish President Recep Erdoğan, unhinged North Korean Kim Jong-un and, of course, the Iranian theocracy, have threatened to annihilate their enemies.

Sometimes the saber-rattlers boast of using nuclear weapons, surprise invasions, or rocket barrages, such as we saw against Israel last month.

Or as Erdoğan recently warned Greece of Turkey's new missile arsenal, "We can come down suddenly one night when the time comes."

Taiwan is told it will be absorbed.

North Korea warned recently it would "annihilate" South Korea.

When we dismiss these lunatic threats, are we really assured they're truly crazy?

[1]

The aim of wars, of course, is to defeat the enemy.

But usually in history the victors do not annihilate the losers — wiping out their people, civilization, language and physical space.

Even the devastated powers of World War II, Germany, Japan and Italy, survived and rebooted their nations into responsible democracies.

Modern democratic Israel is a testament to the courage and resilience of the postwar Jewish people.

Yet occasionally in the past war became existential and final, erasing permanently the defeated civilization, and under a variety of gruesome circumstances that offer important warnings today.

Alexander the Great in 335 B.C. besieged and wiped out the 1,000-year-old iconic city of Thebes.

He slaughtered the adult males, enslaved the women and children and razed the fabled Greek city-state to the ground.

In just one day, Alexander finished off the mythical home of Cadmus, Oedipus and Antigone, and the great democratic liberator Epameinondas.

The empire of the North African city of Carthage once was larger than Rome.

But after defeats in two Punic Wars, Carthage over a century was reduced to a coastal corridor in modern-day Tunisia.

Yet by 149 B.C., the city was again thriving.

It wished peace with Rome — at least until a huge Roman fleet unexpectedly arrived on African shores determined to obliterate their once powerful rival.

Cato the Elder, the aged archenemy of Carthage, finished each of his Roman senate harangues with “Carthago delenda est: Carthage must be destroyed!”

That proved not just rhetoric.

[3]6 “The End of Everything” is written by Victor D. Hanson.

Without cause, Rome prompted the Third Punic War (149-6 B.C.), more a siege than a real war.

The Romans finally annihilated the city of 500,000, killed all but an enslaved 50,000, and left the majestic metropolis a junk heap.

In 1453, the Ottomans finally overran the 1,100 year-old city of Constantinople, the hub of Hellenism, Christianity and the Byzantine Empire for over a millennium.

They killed, enslaved, or relegated to inferior status the entire population, and turned the majestic Hagia Sophia cathedral into the mosque that it remains today.

The conquerors appropriated the shell of the once greatest city in Christendom as their new capital of an Islamic Ottoman Empire.

So ended the ancient Christian Hellenic civilization of Asia.

[4]6 Nuclear weapons remains a particularly potent tool of human destruction decades after their use in Hiroshima and Nagasaki. AFP/Getty Images

In 1520, Hernán Cortés led a tiny army of about 1,500 conquistadors to attack the Aztec capital of Tenochtitlán.

In less than two years, the Spanish destroyed the four-million-person Aztec empire with the help of indigenous allies who hated the mass sacrifices of the Aztecs.

What do these examples of annihilation have in common?

The doomed are never really aware of the fate that awaits them.

Often their glorious past deludes them into assuming that their once formidable defenses — the seven gates of Thebes, the massive fortifications of Carthage, the 35-foot-high Theodosian walls of Constantinople, and the vast lake surrounding Tenochtitlán — would ensure their safety.

False hopes always arose that help was on the way. Surely allies — like the Athenians — will save Thebes.

Or the enemies of Rome would rescue Carthage in its eleventh-hour.

[5]6 Although the world has yet to see a major incident of cyber-warfare, all of the elements are in place for such a conflict to break out. Artem - stock.adobe.com

Would not the Western Europeans sail up the Dardanelles in time to break the Ottoman siege of Constantinople?

Would not the subjects of the Aztec Empire finally turn on the Spaniards?

As for the destroyers of entire civilizations, they prove not always just the stereotypical mass murderers of history like Attila the Hun, Tamerlane or Genghis Khan.

Often the annihilators were the well-educated, such as Alexander the Great, student of Aristotle, and companion of philosophers.

The annihilator of Carthage, Scipio Aemilianus, was an intellectual who befriended the brilliant historian Polybius and was a patron of literature.

Mehmet II, who wiped away Christian Constantinople, was proud of his enormous library.

[6]6 Bio-warfare is also a real threat today, as evidenced by the fall-out from the recent Covid-19 pandemic. CNS/AFP via Getty Images

And the more such conquerors feigned no intention of erasing their enemies, the more they methodically did so — and in the aftermath shed crocodile tears over the extinction.

We live today with far easier tools of civilizational destruction nuclear, bioweaponry, cyberwar and perhaps soon artificial intelligence.

And from Israel to Greece to Taiwan, there are plenty of vulnerable peoples and nations threatened by their historically hostile neighbors.

1.6.38 When killers like Putin and Xi hint at nuclear annihilation, take heed (2024-06-23 22:04)

After a recent summit between new partners China and Russia, General Secretary Xi Jinping and Russian Federation President Vladimir Putin issued an odd one-sentence communique:

“There can be no winners in a nuclear war and it should never be fought.”

No one would disagree, even though several officials of both hypocritical governments have previously threatened their neighbors with nuclear attacks.

But still, why did the two feel the need to issue such a terse statement — and why now?

General Secretary Xi Jinping and Russian Federation President Vladimir Putin issued an odd one-sentence communique: “There can be no winners in a nuclear war and it should never be fought.” via REUTERS

Rarely has the global rhetoric of mass annihilation reached such a crescendo as the present, as existential wars rage in Ukraine and Gaza.

In particular, Putin at least believes that he is finally winning the Ukraine conflict. Xi seems to assume that conventional ascendant Chinese military power in the South China Sea has finally made the absorption of Taiwan practicable.

They both believe that the only impediment to their victories would be an intervention from the US and the NATO alliance, a conflict that could descend into mutual threats to resort to nuclear weapons.

Thus the recent warnings of Xi and Putin.

Almost monthly, North Korean dictator Kim Jong Un continues his weary threats to use his nuclear arsenal to destroy South Korea or Japan.

Kim Jong Un has repeatedly threatened South Korea with attacks AP

A similarly monotonous pro-Hamas Turkish President Recep Erdogan regularly threatens Armenians with crazy talk of repeating the “mission of our grandfathers.” And he occasionally warns Israelis and Greeks that they may one day wake up to Turkish missiles raining down upon their cities.

More concretely, for the first time in history, Iran attacked the homeland of Israel. It launched the largest wartime array of cruise missiles, ballistic missiles and drones in modern history — over 320 projectiles.

Iran's theocrats simultaneously claim they are about ready to produce nuclear weapons. And, of course, since 1979, Iran has periodically promised to wipe Israel off the map and half the world's Jews with it.

Most ignore these crazy threats and write them off as the braggadocio of dictators. But as we saw on Oct. 7, the barbarity of human nature has not changed much from the pre-modern world, whether defined by savage beheading, mutilations, murdering, mass rape, torture and hostage taking of Israeli elderly, women and children.

But what has radically transformed are the delivery systems of mass death — nuclear weapons, chemical gasses, biological agents and artificial-intelligence-driven delivery systems.

Oddly, the global reaction to the promise of Armageddon remains one of nonchalance. Most feel that such strongmen rant wildly but would never unleash weapons of civilizational destruction.

Consider that there are as many autocratic nuclear nations (e.g., Russia, China, Pakistan, North Korea and perhaps Iran) as democratic ones (US, Britain, France, Israel and India). Only Israel has an effective anti-ballistic missile dome. And the more the conventional power of the West declines, the more in extremis it will have to rely on a nuclear deterrent — at a time when it has no effective missile defense of its homelands

In a just-released book, "The End of Everything," I wrote about four examples of annihilation — the classical city-state of Thebes, ancient Carthage, Byzantine Constantinople and Aztec Tenochtitlan — in which the unimaginable became all too real.

In all these erasures, the targeted, naive states believed that their illustrious pasts, rather than a realistic appraisal of their present inadequate defenses, would ensure their survival.

All hoped that their allies — the Spartans, the anti-Roman Macedonians, the Christian nations of Western Europe and the subject cities of the Aztecs — would appear at the eleventh hour to stave off their defeat.

Additionally, these targeted states had little understanding of the agendas and capabilities of the brilliantly methodic killers outside their walls — the ruthless wannabe philosopher Alexander the Great, the literary patron Scipio Aemilianus, the self-described intellectual Mehmet II and the widely read Hernan Cortes — who all sought to destroy utterly rather than merely defeat their enemies.

These doomed cities and nations were reduced to rubble or absorbed by the conquerors. Their populations were wiped out or enslaved, and their once-hallowed cultures, customs and traditions lost to history. The last words of the conquered were usually variations of, “It can’t happen here.”

If the past is any guide to the present, we should take heed that what almost never happens in war can certainly still occur.

When killers issue wild, even lunatic, threats, we should nonetheless take them seriously.

We should not count on friends or neutrals to save our civilization. Instead, Americans should build defense systems over the skies of our homeland, secure our borders, ensure our military operates on meritocracy, cease wild deficit spending and borrowing and rebuild both our conventional and nuclear forces.

Otherwise, we will naively — and fatally — believe that we are magically exempt when the inconceivable becomes all too real.

1.6.39 Dems, media fool no one: White House is knee-deep in Trump prosecutions (2024-06-23 22:05)

The five criminal and civil prosecutions of former President Donald Trump all prompt heated denials from Democrats that President Joe Biden and Democrat operatives had a role in any of them.

But Biden has long let it be known that he was frustrated with his own Justice Department's federal prosecutors for their tardiness in indicting Trump.

Biden was upset because any delay might mean that his rival Trump would not be in federal court during the 2024 election cycle.

And that would mean he could not be tagged as a "convicted felon" by the November election while being kept off the campaign trail.

Politico has long prided itself on its supposed insider knowledge of the workings of the Biden administration: Note that it reported this February that a frustrated Joe Biden "has grumbled to aides and advisers that had [Attorney General Merrick] Garland moved sooner in his investigation into former President Donald Trump's election interference, a trial may already be underway or even have concluded."

If there was any doubt about the Biden administration's effort to force Trump into court before November, Politico further dispelled it — even as it blamed Trump for Biden's anger at Garland: "That trial still could take place before the election and much of the delay is owed not to Garland but to deliberate resistance put up by the former president and his team."

Note in passing how a presidential candidate's legal right to oppose a politicized indictment months before an election by his opponent's federal attorneys is smeared by Politico as "deliberate resistance."

Given Politico was publicly reporting six months ago about Biden's anger at the pace of his DOJ's prosecution of Trump, does anyone believe his special counsel, Jack Smith, was not aware of such presidential displeasure and pressure?

Note Smith had petitioned and was denied an unusual request to the court to speed up the course of his Trump indictment.

And why would Biden's own attorney general, Garland, select such an obvious partisan as Smith?

Remember, in his last tenure as special counsel, Smith had gone after popular Republican and conservative Virginia Gov. Bob MacDonald.

Yet Smith's politicized persecution of the innocent McDonnell was reversed by a unanimous verdict of the US Supreme Court.

That rare court unanimity normally should have raised a red flag to the Biden DOJ about both Smith's partiality and his incompetence.

But then again, Smith's wife had donated to the 2020 Biden campaign fund.

And she was previously known for producing a hagiographic 2020 documentary ("Becoming") about Michelle Obama.

Selecting a special counsel with a successful record of prior nonpartisan convictions was clearly not why the DOJ appointed Smith.

The White House's involvement is not limited to the Smith federal indictments.

Fulton County District Attorney Fani Willis' paramour and erstwhile lead prosecutor in her indictment of Trump, Nathan Wade, met twice with the White House counsel's office.

On one occasion, Wade met inside the Biden White House.

Subpoenaed records reveal that the brazen Wade actually billed the federal government for his time spent with the White House counsel's staff — although so far no one has disclosed under oath the nature of such meetings.

Of the tens of thousands of local prosecutions each year, in how many instances does a county prosecutor consult with the White House counsel's office — and then bill it for his knowledge?

Manhattan District Attorney Alvin Bragg's just-completed felony convictions of Trump were spearheaded by former prominent federal prosecutor Matthew Colangelo.

He is not just a well-known Democratic partisan who served as a political consultant to the Democratic National Committee: Colangelo had also just left his position in the Biden Justice Department — reputedly as Garland's third-ranking prosecutor — to join the local Bragg team.

Again, among all the multitudes of annual municipal indictments nationwide, how many local prosecutors manage to enlist one of the nation's three top federal attorneys to head their case?

So, apparently, it was not enough for the shameless Bragg to campaign flagrantly on promises to go after Trump.

In addition, Bragg brashly drafted a top Democratic operative and political appointee from inside Joe Biden's DOJ to head his prosecution.

Not surprisingly, it took only a few hours after the Colangelo-Bragg conviction of Trump for Biden on spec to start blasting his rival as a "convicted felon."

Biden is delighted that his own former prosecutor, a left-wing judge and a Manhattan jury may well keep Trump off the campaign trail.

So, it is past time for the media and Democrats to drop this ridiculous ruse of Biden's White House "neutrality."

Instead, they should admit that they are terrified of the will of the people in November and so are conniving to silence them.

1.6.40 Our revolutionary times (2024-06-23 22:06)

Events like the destruction of the southern border over the last three years, the Oct. 7 massacre and ensuing Gaza war, the campus protests, the COVID-19 epidemic and lockdown, and the systematic efforts to weaponize our bureaucracies and courts have all led to radical reappraisals of American culture and civilization.

Since the 1960s, universities have always been hotbeds of left-wing protests, sometimes violently so.

But the post-Oct. 7 campus eruptions marked a watershed difference.

Masked left-wing protesters were unashamedly and virulently antisemitic. Students on elite campuses especially showed contempt for both middle-class police officers tasked with preventing their violence and vandalism as well as the maintenance workers who had to clean up their garbage.

Mobs took over buildings, assaulted Jewish students, called for the destruction of Israel, and defaced American monuments and commentaries.

When pressed by journalists to explain their protests, most students knew nothing of the politics or geography of Palestine, for which they were protesting.

The public concluded that the more elite the campus, the more ignorant, arrogant, and hateful the students seemed.

The Biden administration destroyed the southern border. Ten million illegal aliens swarmed into the U.S. without audit. Almost daily, news accounts detail violent acts committed by illegal aliens or their surreal demands for more free lodging and support.

Simultaneously, thousands of Middle Eastern students, invited by universities on student visas, block traffic, occupy bridges, disrupt graduations, and generally show contempt for the laws of their American hosts.icle continues below.

The net result is that Americans are reappraising their entire attitude toward immigration. Expect the border to be closed soon and immigration to become mostly meritocratic, smaller, and legal, with zero tolerance for immigrants and resident visitors who break the laws of their hosts.

Americans are also reappraising their attitudes toward time-honoured bureaucracies, the courts, and government agencies.

The public still cannot digest the truth that the once respected FBI partnered with social media to suppress news stories, to surveil parents at school board meetings, and to conduct performance art SWAT raids on the homes of supposed political opponents.

After the attempts of the Department of Justice to go easy on the miscreant Hunter Biden but to hound ex-president Donald Trump for supposedly removing files illegally in the same fashion as current President Joe Biden, the public lost confidence not just in Attorney General Merrick Garland but in American justice.

The shenanigans of prosecutors like Fani Willis, Letitia James, and Alvin Bragg, along with overtly biased judges like Juan Merchant and Arthur Engoron, only reinforced the reality that the American legal system has descended into third-world-like tit-for-tat vendettas.

The same politicization has nearly discredited the Pentagon. Its investigations of “white” rage and white supremacy found no such organized cabals in the ranks. But these unicorn hunts likely helped cause a 45,000-recruitment shortfall among precisely the demographic that died at twice their numbers in the general population in Iraq and Afghanistan.

Add in the humiliating flight from Kabul, the abandonment of $50 billion in weapons to the Taliban terrorists, the recent embarrassment of the failed Gaza pier, and the litany of political invective from retired generals and admirals. The result is that the armed forces have an enormous task to restore public faith.

They will have to return to meritocracy and emphasize battle efficacy, enforce the uniform code of military justice, and start either winning wars or avoiding those that cannot be won.

Finally, we are witnessing a radical inversion in our two political parties. The old populist Democratic Party that championed lunch-bucket workers has turned into a shrill union of the very rich and subsidized poor. Its support of open borders, illegal immigration, the war on fossil fuels, transgenderism, critical legal and race theories, and the woke agenda are causing the party to lose support.

The Republican Party is likewise rebranding itself from a once-stereotyped brand of aristocratic and corporate grandees to one anchored in the middle class.

Even more radically, the new populist Republicans are beginning to appeal to voters on shared class and cultural concerns rather than on racial and tribal interests.

The results of all these revolutions will shake up the U.S. for decades to come.

Soon we may see a Georgia Tech or Purdue degree as far better proof of an educated and civic-minded citizen than a Harvard or Stanford brand.

We will likely jettison the failed salad bowl approach to immigration and return to the melting pot as immigration becomes exclusively legal, meritocratic, and manageable.

To avoid further loss of public confidence, institutions like the FBI, the CIA, the Pentagon, and the DOJ will have to re-earn rather than just assume the public's confidence.

And we may soon accept the reality that Democrats reflect the values of Silicon Valley plutocrats, university presidents, and blue-city mayors, while Republicans become the home of an ecumenical black, Hispanic, Asian, and white middle

1.6.41 How to tell that the West's 'pro-Palestinian' protesters really only care about bashing Israel (2024-06-23 22:07)

What are the mobs in Washington [1]defiling iconic federal statues with impunity and pelting policemen really protesting?

What are the [2]throngs in London brazenly swarming parks and rampaging in the streets really angry about?

Occupations?

They could care less that the Islamist Turkish government still stations 40,000 troops in occupied Cyprus.

No one is protesting against the Chinese takeover of a once-independent Tibet or the threatened absorption of an autonomous Taiwan.

Refugees?

None of these mobs are agitating on behalf of the nearly one million Jews ethnically cleansed since 1947 from the major capitals of the Middle East.

Some 200,000 Cypriots displaced by Turks earn not a murmur, nor does the ethnic cleansing of 99 % of Nagorno-Karabakh's ancient Armenian population just last year.

Civilian casualties?

The global protesters are not furious over the one million Uighurs brutalized by the communist Chinese government.

Neither are they concerned about the Turkish government's indiscriminate war against the Kurds or its serial threats to attack Armenians and Greeks.

The new woke jihadist movement is instead focused only on Israel and "Palestine."

It is oblivious to the modern gruesome Muslim-on-Muslim exterminations of Bashar al-Assad and Saddam Hussein, the Black September massacres of Palestinians by Jordanian forces and the 1982 erasure of thousands in Hama, Syria.

So woke jihadism is not an ecumenical concern for the oppressed, the occupied, the collateral damage of war or the fate of refugees.

Instead, it is a romanticized and repackaged anti-Western, anti-Israel and antisemitic jihadism that supports the murder of civilians, mass rape, torture and hostage-taking.

But what makes it now so insidious is its new tripartite constituency.

First, the old romantic pro-Palestine cause was rebooted in the West by millions of Arab and Muslim immigrants who have flocked to Europe and the US in the last half-century.

Billions of dollars in oil sheikdom “grant” monies swarmed Western universities to found “Middle Eastern Studies” departments.

These are not so much centers for historical or linguistic scholarship as political megaphones focused on “Zionism” and “the Jews.”

Moreover, there may be well over a half-million affluent Middle Eastern students in Western universities.

Given that they pay full tuition, imbibe ideology from endowed Middle Eastern studies faculty and are growing in number, they logically feel that they can do anything with impunity on Western streets and campuses.

Second, the DEI movement empowers the new woke jihadis.

Claiming to be non-white victims of white Jewish colonialism, they pose as natural kindred victims to Blacks, Latinos and any Westerner now claiming oppressed status.

Black radicalism, from Al Sharpton to Louis Farrakhan to Black Lives Matter, has had a long, documented history of antisemitism.

It is no wonder that its elite eagerly embraced the anti-Israel Palestine movement as fellow travelers.

The third leg of woke jihadism is mostly affluent white leftist students at Western universities.

Sensing that their faculties are anti-Israel, their administrations are anti-Israel (although more covertly) and the most politically active among the student body are anti-Israel, European and American students find authenticity in [3]virtue-signaling their solidarity with Hamas, Hezbollah and radical Islamists in general.

Given the recent abandonment of standardized tests for admission to universities, the watering-down of curricula and rampant grade inflation, thousands of students at elite campuses feel that they have successfully redefined their universities to suit their own politics, constituencies and demographics.

Insecure about their preparation for college and mostly ignorant of the politics of the Middle East, usefully idiotic students find resonance by screaming antisemitic chants and wearing keffiyehs.

Nurtured in grade school on the Marxist binary of bad, oppressive whites versus good, oppressed nonwhites, they can cheaply shed their boutique guilt by joining the mobs.

The result is a bizarre new antisemitism and overt support for the gruesome terrorists of Hamas by those who usually preach to the middle class about their own exalted morality.

Still, woke jihadism would never have found resonance had Western leaders — vote-conscious heads of state, timid university presidents and radicalized big-city mayors and police chiefs — not ignored blatant violations of laws against illegal immigration, vandalism, assault, illegal occupation and rioting.

Finally, woke jihadism is fueling a radical Western turn to the right, partly due to open borders and the huge influx into the West from non-Western illiberal regimes.

Partly the reaction is due to the ingratitude shown their hosts by indulged Middle Eastern guest students and green-card holders.

Partly, the public is sick of the sense of entitlement shown by pampered, sanctimonious protesters.

And partly the revulsion arises against left-wing governments and universities that will not enforce basic criminal and immigration statutes in fear of offending this strange new blend of wokism and jihadism.

Yet the more violent campuses and streets become, the more clueless the mobs seem about the cascading public antipathy to what they do and what they represent.

1.6.42 Paradise to purgatory: Gavin Newsom and California's self-destruction (2024-06-23 22:08)

California has become a test case of the suicide of the West.

Never before has such a state, so rich in natural resources and endowed with such a bountiful human inheritance, self-destructed so rapidly.

How and why did California so utterly consume its unmatched natural and ancestral inheritance and end up as a warning to Western civilization of what might be in store for anyone who followed its nihilism?

[1]

Californians have been enduring a series of economic and social obstacles. AFP via Getty Images

The symptoms of the state's suicide are indisputable.

Gov. Gavin Newsom enjoyed a recent $98 billion budget surplus — gifted from multibillion-dollar federal COVID-19 subsidies, the highest income and gas taxes in the nation, and among the country's steepest sales and property taxes.

Yet in a year, he turned it into a growing $45 billion budget deficit.

At a time of an over-regulated, overtaxed and sputtering economy, Newsom spent lavishly on new entitlements, illegal immigrants and untried and inefficient green projects.

Newsom was endowed with two of the wettest years in recent California history.

Yet he and radical environmentalists squandered the water bounty — as snowmelts and runoff long designated for agricultural irrigation were drained from aqueducts and reservoirs to flow out to sea.

Newsom transferred millions of dollars designated by a voter referendum to build dams and aqueducts for water storage and instead blew up four historic dams on the Klamath River.

Critics of Gavin Newsom cite his handling of water sources in California. AP

For decades, these now-destroyed scenic lakes provided clean, green hydroelectric power, irrigation storage, flood control and recreation.

California hosts one-third of the nation's welfare recipients.

Over a fifth of the population lives below the poverty line.

Nearly half the nation's homeless sleep on the streets of its major cities.

California is known for its large homeless population. David Buchan/New York Post

The state's downtowns are dirty, dangerous and increasingly abandoned by businesses — most recently Google — that cannot rely on a defunded and shackled police.

Newsom's California has spent billions on homeless relief and subsidizing millions of new illegal migrant arrivals across the state's porous southern border.

The result was predictably even more homeless and more illegal immigrants, all front-loaded onto the state's already overtaxed and broken health-care, housing and welfare entitlements.

Newsom raised the minimum wage for fast-food workers to $20 an hour.

The result was wage inflation rippling out to all service areas, unaffordable food for the poor, and massive shut-downs and bankruptcies of fast food outlets.

Twenty-seven percent of Californians were born outside of the United States: It is a minority-majority state.

Yet California has long dropped unifying civic education, while the bankrupt state funds exploratory commissions to consider divisive racial reparations.

California's universities are hotbeds of ethnic, religious, and racial chauvinism and infighting.

State officials, however, did little as its campuses were plagued for months by rampant and violent antisemitism.

Almost nightly, the nation watches mass smash-and-grab attacks on California retail stores.

Carjackers and thieves own the night.

They are rarely caught, even more rarely arrested — and almost never convicted.

Currently, Newsom is fighting in the courts to stop the people's constitutional right to place on the ballot initiatives to restore penalties for violent crime and theft.

Gas prices are the highest in the continental United States, given green mandate formulas and the nation's highest, and still rising, gasoline taxes — and are scheduled to go well over $6 a gallon.

Yet its ossified roads and highways are among the nation's most dangerous, as vast sums of transportation funding were siphoned off to the multibillion-dollar high-speed-rail boondoggle.

The state imports almost all the costly vitals of modern life, mostly because it prohibits using California's own vast petroleum, natural gas, timber and mineral resources.

As California implodes, its embarrassed government turns to the irrelevant, if not ludicrous.

It now outlaws natural gas stoves in new homes.

It is adding new income-based surcharges for those who dutifully pay their power bills — to help subsidize the 2.5 million Californians who simply default on their energy bills with impunity.

What happened to the once-beautiful California paradise?

Millions of productive but frustrated, over-taxed and under-served middle-class residents have fled to low-crime, low-tax and well-served red states in disgust.

In turn, millions of illegal migrants have swarmed the state, given its sanctuary-city policies, refusal to enforce the law and generous entitlements.

Meanwhile, a tiny coastal elite, empowered by $9 trillion in Silicon Valley market capitalization, fiddled while their state burned.

California became a medieval society of plutocratic barons, subsidized peasants and a shrinking and fleeing middle class.

It is now home to a few rich estates, subsidized apartments and unaffordable middle-class houses.

California suffers from poorly ranked public schools — but brags about its prestigious private academies.

Its highways are lethal — but it hosts the most private jets in the nation.

What do you think? [9]Be the first to comment.

The fantasies of a protected enclave of Gavin Newsom, Nancy Pelosi and the masters of the Silicon Valley universe have become the abject nightmares of everyone else.

In sum, a privileged Bay Area elite inherited a California paradise and turned it into purgatory.

1.6.43 A dangerous world will become more disorderly and we will not have the means to straighten it out. (2024-06-23 22:09)

"The stupidest f—ing guy on the planet" is how General Tommy Franks, the head of U.S. Central Command, summed up Douglas Feith, Under Secretary of Defense for Policy in the Pentagon from July 2001 until his resignation in August 2005. Franks was cruder than most, but Feith was under almost continuously hostile scrutiny and controversy throughout his tenure. As the third-highest ranking civilian official in Donald Rumsfeld's wartime Pentagon, he oversaw the Defense Department's relations with foreign governments at a time of unprecedented anti-Americanism abroad. More important, he headed both the Office of Special Plans, charged with analyzing prewar intelligence reports on the threat posed by Saddam Hussein, and, subsequently, the Pentagon groups that would eventually coalesce into the Office of Reconstruction and Humanitarian Assistance, which oversaw much of the early rebuilding of postwar Iraq.

Of course, many other policy-makers in the Bush administration came in for their share of contumely after the lightning-fast victory of April 2003 turned into the long slog of the occupation and the rise of the Iraqi insurgency. But no one was quite so vilified as the Harvard- and Georgetown-educated Feith. He was variously charged with advocating torture, undermining the Geneva Convention, fronting for Israel's Likud party, and sexing up the intelligence to exaggerate Saddam Hussein's links with al Qaeda—not to mention sheer incompetence in failing to foresee the problems of the occupation.

Since 2005, journalists including Rajiv Chandrasekaran, Michael Gordon, George Packer, Thomas Ricks, Bernard Trainor, and Bob Woodward have published scathing accounts of administration policy. According to much of their common narrative, neoconservatives like Feith distorted prewar intelligence, brainwashing or tricking others into undertaking a unilateral, preemptive, and unnecessary war. They then subverted the postwar occupation by disbanding the Iraqi army, sending too few American troops, and ignoring the principled warnings of patriots like Secretary of State Colin Powell and Deputy Secretary Richard Armitage, Generals Eric Shinseki and Anthony Zinni, and a host of former advisers to George Bush, Sr. The result was the loss of thousands of lives and a trillion dollars in a struggle that has left us less safe and the Iraqis worse off, and whose only solution is summary withdrawal.

Agreeing with a great deal of this critique, army officers like Franks, and civilian officials such as CIA director George Tenet and Paul Bremer, the head of the Coalition Provisional Authority, have claimed that others, not they, were the real culprits for the botched operations and occupation. And once again at the center of the indictments has been Feith, the bespectacled neocon who is said to have imperiously nitpicked, second-guessed, and hobbled the more experienced men of action.

In War and Decision, Feith offers a dispassionate counterresponse—the first, one can only hope, of others to follow from Donald Rumsfeld, Paul Wolfowitz, and George W. Bush. Feith is not interested in getting even, but rather in systematically exploring the accuracy of the entire pessimistic narrative that has grown up about Iraq. Although he does not question every detail, he subjects enough of the narrative to cross-examination to show that it is largely a myth. His tools are understated irony and extensive documentation—some 600 footnotes and dozens of reprinted documents. These bring forcefully to view what the Bush administration was actually thinking in the days, weeks, and months after 9/11.

As the record adduced by Feith clearly demonstrates, neither he nor Rumsfeld advocated a preemptive war for democracy. Feith was more interested in simply removing dictators like the Taliban and Saddam Hussein from power before they or their surrogates could trump the horrors of 9/11, while Rumsfeld was almost obsessive in his anxiety over mounting costs, unforeseen battlefield complications, and occupations with no predetermined end. Far from wanting an imperial American presence in Iraq, Pentagon officials wished to transfer sovereignty to the Iraqis as quickly as possible—unlike their counterparts in the State Department, and unlike Paul Bremer, whose quest for the perfect constitutional government got in the way of implementing an interim governing body that would have been good enough.

Powell and Armitage—as the record also demonstrates—were neither critics nor supporters of the war, but had carefully situated themselves to be for it if it worked, and against it if it did not. Their studied triangulation meant that when things went well they were never enthusiastic advocates of the policies they were charged with overseeing, while when things turned bad they were ready to provide off-the-record quotes and background information to the growing chorus of antiwar critics.

As for the intelligence about Saddam's possession of weapons of mass destruction, that came from the CIA, and it happened to coincide with the assessment of every pertinent foreign intelligence agency as well, including that of France. (This, quite apart from the fact that the CIA was a hotbed of political and ideological partisans with little sympathy for the Bush administration and less for its decision to go to war.) Arguments over proper troop levels were left largely to top generals. Franks adjudicated the size of the invading forces. He never requested additional troops, and summarily quit his command six weeks after the victory, just as the insurgency began.

What then were the administration's mistakes? Feith lists several. In his view, it was wrong to make Saddam's arsenals into the main casus belli, especially since Congress had listed several other justifications for war that could have easily been given pride of place. Although there was prewar planning aplenty, in the euphoria that followed the three-week walkover of Saddam it was either poorly implemented—too many diverse agencies—or hijacked by the State Department and the often maverick Bremer. Among particular lapses, Feith lists Bremer's failure to turn control over to Iraqi officials early enough and waiting too long to create an Iraqi security force.

It was Defense Department personnel who, Feith writes, had been largely responsible for the inspired American efforts against the Taliban and Saddam Hussein. Had they been listened to, they might have mitigated at least some of the unfolding difficulties in Iraq. Richard Meyers, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, was hardly the weak facilitator he was sometimes portrayed as being. Donald Rumsfeld pressed his underlings too hard, but not as hard as he worked himself. His tragedy lay not in any failure to anticipate the mess of 2004-06—in fact, he uncannily forecast almost every mishap of the “long hard slog”—but his inability to convince the President or the State Department of the mounting dangers and his crippling worry that committing more troops would stretch U.S. forces too thinly elsewhere.

There is much to be said about each of these points, and others one might name (like the debate over incorporating anti-Baathist “externals”—i.e., Iraqis who had fled Saddam's regime—into the postwar government). Perhaps the first thing to be noted in assessing Feith's version, however, is that even today we still do not have the final verdict on Iraq. The costly occupation/reconstruction seems one endless and bitter disappointment when set against the brilliant three-week removal of Saddam; but, on a longer-term view, if we defeat and humiliate al Qaeda in Iraq and ensure the stability of a constitutional government, even this will appear in retrospect to have been not so disastrous after all.

Similarly, it is worth bearing in mind that the choices facing Feith and others were usually of the bad-vs.-worse variety; there were no good ones. Should we cleanse the Iraqi government of Baathists who had blood on their hands, or retain valuable civil servants no matter their previous record or potential security risk? Such choices were predicated ultimately on the military situation: had we crushed the insurgency in its first few weeks, going with the worse of two bad alternatives would probably not have proved so catastrophic.

In any case, what is refreshingly and almost startlingly different about Feith's account, in contrast to others, is that it provides a basis for disagreement. Feith does not rely on quotations from anonymous sources. Instead of the usual ploy of advancing pseudo-citations from "a senior Pentagon official" or "a high-ranking officer," his footnotes refer to what actual people have said and have put their names to. Critics can fault his interpretation of the evidence, but at least they have a body of evidence over which to argue. In addition, Feith has provided a website ([1]www.waranddecision.com) where readers can check his sources and ascertain for themselves the degree to which he has quoted fairly and argued honestly. All this is a huge vote in his favor.

In light of this book's virtues, it is somewhat regrettable that Feith does not address in detail the failure of the administration to apprise the American people adequately as to the difficulty of the task ahead or to counter the often untrue but sensational accusations of critics. That multi-agency failure constantly to set the record straight did terrible damage to the once-strong public support for the war. Administration officials might have explained over and over again what exactly were our choices after 9/11, what our aims were in Iraq, how the unexpected dilemmas of this war were materially no different from those of past wars, and how, even so, our blunders in Iraq nowhere approximated the scale of earlier disasters in Korea, in World War II, in World War I, or in the Civil War.

Early on, as Feith points out, administration officials stopped emphasizing the benefits—to the Iraqis, to us, to the world—of having Saddam gone from the scene, concentrating instead on the future advantages that would accrue from Iraqi democracy. This mixed message came at precisely the moment when the insurgency was growing, and when security, not idealism, was the chief concern of the American people. The result was that our successful effort to remove a genocidal dictator in the heart of the ancient caliphate—followed by the establishment of a constitutional government where none had previously existed in the Arab world, by the routing of al Qaeda, and by the recruiting and training of thousands of Iraqi fighters, all at the cost of fewer lives than most single battles of World War II—could be written off as the worst blunder in our nation's history. It would be useful to have had not just Feith's general views of this matter but an anatomy of who in the administration was responsible for the lapse and why and how it was never rectified.

I have mentioned the campaign of near-character assassination waged against Douglas Feith. The supposedly unpardonable sins of which he has been accused—they amount to his being an unapologetic policy intellectual who could be haughty to his subordinates and colleagues and obsequious to his superiors—do nothing to obscure the fact that he served his country honorably in wartime and has written a candid and invaluable account of that service.

To no avail, it would seem. Recently, Georgetown University released Feith from teaching a class at its school of foreign service. A student paper at the university ran an editorial about his impending departure: “Feith can take his salary,” it thundered, “and the further thousands he will no doubt earn from his memoir, and try to justify his failures somewhere else.”

Here, however, is the final paragraph of the appendix to War and Decision:

With appreciation of the valor and sacrifice of the men and women of the U.S. armed forces, I have donated all of my revenues from this book to a charitable foundation that will use the funds exclusively for the benefit of veterans and their families.

This, too, needs to be entered into the record, and gratefully acknowledged.

1.7.1 Clarence Thomas Raises Another Reason Jack Smith’s Case Against Trump May Be Unconstitutional (2024-07-01 22:53)

In a concurring opinion in Trump v. United States, Supreme Court Justice Clarence Thomas highlighted “another way in which this prosecution” — led by Special Counsel Jack Smith — “may violate our constitutional structure.” Specifically, Thomas writes that “the Attorney General purported to appoint a private citizen as Special Counsel to prosecute a former President on behalf of the United States" but he's "not sure that any office for the Special Counsel has been 'established by Law,' as the Constitution requires."

"Few things would threaten our constitutional order more than criminally prosecuting a former President for his official acts," Thomas explains in his concurring opinion. "Fortunately, the Constitution does not permit us to chart such a dangerous course."

Thomas explains that the Constitution requires Congress to create any federal offices "by law" as an "important check against the President" who "cannot create offices at his pleasure." As such, if "there is now law establishing the office that the Special Counsel occupies, then he cannot proceed with this prosecution" because a "private citizen cannot criminally prosecute anyone, let alone a former president."

Noting that "[n]o former President has faced criminal prosecution for his acts while in office in the more than 200 years since the founding of our country...despite numerous past president taking actions that many would argue constitute crimes," Thomas warns that if Special Counsel Smith's "unprecedented prosecution is to proceed, it must be conducted by someone duly authorized to do so by the American people."

Outlining the process by which presidents can appoint individuals as officers of the United States via nominations for someone who must then be confirmed by the U.S. Senate, with limited exceptions for inferior officers authorized by some heads of federal departments. "As relevant here, a 'Head of Department' — such as the Attorney General — is one such actor that Congress may authorize 'by law' to appoint inferior officers without senatorial confirmation," Thomas explains.

However, "[b]efore the President or a Department Head can appoint any officer...the Constitution requires that the underlying office be 'established by Law,'" continues Thomas. "Although the Constitution contemplates that there will be 'other Officers of the United States, whose Appointments are not herein otherwise provided for,' it clearly requires that those offices 'shall be established by Law,'" meaning "an office that Congress creates 'by statute.'"

This check on presidential power, like many others enshrined in the Constitution, comes from abuses of power of the King of England. A brief history lesson from Thomas explains that our "Founders broke from the monarchical model by giving the President the power to fill offices (with the Senate's approval), but not the power to create offices...by 'imposing the constitutional requirement that new officer positions be 'established by Law' rather than through a King-like custom of the head magistrate unilaterally creating new offices.'"

In the past, the federal government has adhered to this constitutional principle, such as when "Congress created an office for a 'special counsel' to investigate the Teapot Dome Scandal and pursue prosecutions," Thomas reminds. "We cannot ignore the importance that the Constitution places on who creates a federal office," he further cautions.

"To guard against tyranny, the Founders required that a federal office be 'established by Law,'" says Thomas. "As James Madison cautioned, '[i]f there is any point in which the separation of the Legislative and Executive powers ought to be maintained with greater caution, it is that which relates to officers and offices.'"

Put succinctly by Thomas: "If Congress has not reached a consensus that a particular office should exist, the Executive lacks the power to create and fill an office of his own accord."

When Attorney General Merrick Garland named Jack Smith as Special Counsel, "he did not identify any statute that clearly creates such an office...[n]or did he rely on a statute granting him the authority to appoint officers as he deems fit, as the heads of some other agencies have," writes Thomas. "Instead, the Attorney General relied upon several statutes of a general nature," none of which "appears to create an office for the Special Counsel, and especially not with the clarity typical of past statutes used for that purpose."

More from Thomas on his questions about the special counsel's legality:

Even if the Special Counsel has a valid office, questions remain as to whether the Attorney General filled that office in compliance with the Appointments Clause. For example, it must be determined whether the Special Counsel is a principal or inferior officer. If the former, his appointment is invalid because the Special Counsel was not nominated by the President and confirmed by the Senate, as principal officers must be... Even if he is an inferior officer, the Attorney General could appoint him without Presidential nomination and senatorial confirmation only if "Congress...by law vest[ed] the Appointment" in the Attorney General as a "Hea[d] of Department." ... So, the Special Counsel's appointment is invalid unless a statute created the Special Counsel's office and gave the Attorney General the power to fill it "by Law."

The concern about whether the Special Counsel's office was lawfully established "is not a trifling technicality," Thomas writes. "If Congress has not reached a consensus that a particular office should exist, the Executive lacks the power to unilaterally create and then fill that office. Given that the Special Counsel purports to wield the Executive Branch's power to prosecute, the consequences are weighty," he notes.

"Our Constitution's separation of powers, including its separation of the powers to create and fill offices, is 'the absolutely central guarantee of a just Government' and the liberty that it secures for us all," Thomas emphasizes. "There is no prosecution that can justify imperiling it."

Quoting from a Scalia dissent in Morrison v. Olson, Thomas says that while "the separation of powers may prevent us from righting every wrong, it does so in order to ensure that we do not lose liberty."

1.7.2 Rachel Levine Asked Experts to Remove Age Limits on Trans 'Care.' Here's How the White House Responded. (2024-07-01 23:02)

Late last week, the Biden administration came out with a statement claiming that it does not support so-called gender-affirming" surgery for minors. The statement came in response to an article from The New York Times in response to an article reporting that Biden administration staff pressured a transgender health organization to remove age restrictions for sex reassignment surgery from its treatment guidelines for minors.

The pressure to remove age minimums for surgery was spearheaded by U.S. [1]Adm. Rachel Levine, who is transgender, and his staff. Emails showing this were shared by the Times. Here's what the Biden administration said in response (via [2]NYT):

"Adm. Levine shared her view with her staff that publishing the proposed lower ages for gender transition surgeries was not supported by science or research, and could lead to an onslaught of attacks on the transgender community," an H.H.S. spokesman said in a statement on Friday evening. Federal officials did not elaborate further on the administration's position regarding the scientific research or on Adm. Levine's role in having the age minimums removed. The administration, which has been supportive of gender-affirming care for transgender youth, expressed opposition only to surgeries for minors, not other treatments.

Levine's pressured the World Professional Association for Transgender Health to remove age limits for so-called "gender-affirming" surgeries for transgender minors. The New York Times reported that the Biden administration believed that age minimums on this kind of treatment could "fuel growing political opposition to such treatment. One email excerpt from an unnamed member of the WPATH guideline development group recalled that they had a conversation with Levine's chief of staff, Sarah Boateng. They wrote, "She is confident, based on the rhetoric she is hearing in D.C., and from what we have already seen, that these specific listings of ages, under 18, will result in devastating legislation for trans care. She wonders if the specific ages can be taken out.”Another email claimed that Levine “was very concerned that having ages (mainly for surgery) will affect access to care for trans youth and maybe adults, too.

Apparently the situation in the U.S.A. is terrible and she and the Biden administration worried that having ages in the document will make matters worse. She asked us to remove them.”A fact sheet from the White House on “Transgender Day of Visibility” in 2022 showed that the Biden administration was committed to “advancing equality” for transgender Americans, including children. One way this was done was by “providing resources for transgender kids and their families” through tax dollars. According to the fact sheet, tax dollars are used to provide mental health resources to help “trans” children, expand training at schools to “support transgender and nonbinary students,” and to confirm “positive impact of gender affirming care on youth mental health,” which includes sex change surgeries (via [3]The White House)

The National Child Traumatic Stress Network NCTSN), which is administered by the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration, is releasing new [4]information for providers confirming that providing gender-affirming care is neither child maltreatment nor malpractice.[...]The Office of the Assistant Secretary for Health has developed a [5]resource to inform parents and guardians, educators, and other persons supporting children and adolescents with information on what is gender-affirming care and why it is important to transgender, nonbinary, and other gender expansive young people’s well-being.

1.7.3 4th of July 2024 (2024-07-04 00:57)

Recently, I’ve been enjoying the emulated versions of Super Nintendo on my RG35xx GH handheld. I bought some Wario Ware games for Wii, Switch and 3DS in July. I only had Wario Land games so far. Its makes me feel good. I have like 8 emulation devices and four rom hard drives. It’s really enjoyable. I play 8 hours a week and I’m 40.

This 4th of July, I had no Sparklers to light unlike 2021. I was watching Battle of Britain with my parents. I had cheese burgers and potato salad. Most of the roads are closed from Rapidan Dam being partially failed. I went to Rapidan Dam Park in 2020 and 2022 and have pictures of the Dam Store that is dismantled, because the owners thought they could save what's inside the house. Another house floated down the blue earth river. In the 1990s, I used to go to Aunt Judy's house or Uncle Leroy's farm and the entire family reunion fully recorded and existed on my Youtube (under uncle leroy).

I remember when I had played Super Mario Bros. 1, 2, 3 and Mega Man 2 and Spy Hunter in my Wisconsin basement on a CRT tv in 1995. Alone, struggling to beat it. Then I remember in 1997 when I had Super Mario 64, Star Wars Shadows of the Empire, Goldeneye 007 and Star Fox 64 with David Hartmon. In 1998, I have memories of Turok 2 Seeds Evil, Crusin USA, Mario Kart 64 and Simcity 2000. Likewise I appreciate the RG3500 GH while I volunteer at a museum. The bluray of Nintendo Quest (2015) comes out on July 31, 2024 similar to how I remember game stores. I own the x264 file, because yeah I owned 1300 videogames and game stores were from 1995-2019 for me.

So I surfed bluray.com and I found a lot less I needed then in the past. Recently, I've bought Musketeers (imdb 7.8) from 2014-2016 by BBC Studios and Bullett (imdb 8.2) starring Steve McQueen. I think I'm just over stimulated with the movie collection.

1.7.4 The United States Has Become an Irresponsible, Debt-Addicted Nation (2024-07-08 19:49)

Throughout history, debt-ridden nations have not fared well. It's quite easy to understand why debt-addled nations inevitably collapse under the sheer weight of their outstanding obligations because eventually servicing debt payments on such a large sum eats up a significant portion of national spending, making the situation progressively worse.

It is also true that as interest payments on the national debt become a greater percentage of annual spending, borrowing more money and kicking can down the road becomes an enticing proposition for politicians who are less concerned with creating an environment for future prosperity than they are with extracting as much as they can from a sinking ship.

Sadly, the United States, the greatest nation on earth, is teetering on the brink of national insolvency. Although pundits have been ringing the alarm bell on the state of the nation's indebtedness for years, we are truly approaching the point of no return.

Consider.

Very soon, the [1]U.S. national debt will surpass $35 trillion. As of now, each U.S. taxpayer would have to fork over nearly $267,000 to pay down the national debt.

However, this amount continues to increase every second of every day because the federal government continues to run enormous deficits on an annual basis. So far, in 2024, the federal deficit is approaching $1.9 trillion.

Unfortunately, according to the [2]Congressional Budget Office (CBO), $2 trillion annual deficits are the new normal. In fact, by 2034, CBO estimates the annual deficit will reach $2.8 trillion. Keep in mind, this is if Congress initiates no new spending measures over the next decade, which is about as likely as me fulfilling my dream of joining the PGA Tour.

In 1980, the U.S. debt to GDP ratio stood at a healthy 34 percent. Today, it has ballooned to 123 percent. According to the Penn Wharton Budget Model (PWBM), “U.S. debt held by the public cannot exceed about 200 percent of GDP even under today’s generally favorable market conditions.”

Moreover, PWBM notes, “the United States has about 20 years for corrective action after which no amount of future tax increases or spending cuts could avoid the government defaulting on its debt whether explicitly or implicitly.”

Now, for the really bad news.

The total amount of U.S. debt, which takes into account federal government debt, household and business debt, as well as debt held by local and state governments, rings in at an inconceivable $101 trillion. As of this writing, this colossal figure includes $25 trillion in total personal debt and $1.3 trillion in credit card debt.

And then there are the unfunded liabilities. As of now, the federal government has an absolutely mind-boggling $217 trillion in total unfunded liabilities on the books. The top two unfunded liabilities are Social Security’s $27 trillion and Medicare’s $41 trillion. Because Americans are living longer and therefore will be on these programs even longer than actuaries initially estimated, both of these programs are likely to become even more insolvent as time goes on.

Advertisement

At this point, you may be wondering how the United States has not gone bankrupt already. The simple answer is the government has accelerated money printing like never before in our nation's history.

In 2000, the M2 money supply, which measures the total number of dollars in circulation, was $4.8 trillion. Today, it has exploded to $20.8 trillion. No wonder inflation is so persistent; the U.S. government has resorted to borrowing and printing more dollars to cover its mountain of debt.

Now, for the really, really bad news.

In four years, the [3]national debt will balloon to more than $46 trillion. The debt to GDP ratio will soar to 148 percent. Annual interest payments on the debt will exceed $3.9 trillion. Total unfunded liabilities will reach $295 trillion. And, for the cherry on top, Americans will be carrying more than $28 trillion in personal debt.

Don't forget, these figures are accurate only if Congress authorizes no new spending programs over the next four years. It is almost assured that these numbers will grow worse as Congress increases spending over the interim.

So, is there any room for optimism? Can the situation be reversed? Or, is it too late?

Fortunately, it is not too late. There still is ample time to turn the situation around. First and foremost, we must demand that Congress rights the ship and balances the budget in the short-term. Second, we must demand that Congress develop a long-term plan to begin paying down the debt. Third, we the people must learn to live within our means, as well.

Although this sounds like a Herculean lift, it need not be. If [4]we were to cut spending back to 2008 levels, we could solve the situation in a timely manner. The only question is: Do the American people have the temerity and the tenacity to do so?

1.7.5 Democrats Can't Admit Biden Is Too Old, Their Whole Leadership Is Too Old (2024-07-10 19:47)

Nancy Pelosi supports Joe Biden. That's not a shocking statement, Pelosi has always put party over country. But this time, she's also defending herself. If Biden, 81, is too old to serve, what does that say about Pelosi, 84? Democrats have to cover for Joe Biden because to admit he's too old to do the job would be to admit their whole leadership is too old to do the job.

I realize Democrats in the House of Representatives have "new" leadership, with Hakeem Jeffries being the new Minority Leader and...can you name any of the others? Honestly, can you?

If I'd said Pelosi was still the leader of the Democratic Caucus in the House would you have noticed that isn't technically true? I'd bet not.

It's true, however, that on paper, anyway, Jeffries and not Pelosi is the Minority Leader. You'd never know it by the amount of attention from the media one gets over the other. And you'd never know Katherine Clark of Massachusetts is the number 2 Democrat, their "whip," because both Clark and Jeffries are non-entities, tokens the old guard has pretended to pass the torch to in order to give the impression that new blood is now running the show.

Jeffries is 53, Clark 60, the "former" No. 2 Democrat, Steny Hoyer, is 85, and James Clyburn, the "former" No. 3 is 83. Both Hoyer and Clyburn, like Pelosi, are running again this year. It seems that maybe that torch has grown into their hands the way a morbidly obese grows into a couch, making it impossible to pass.

How can people older than Joe Biden publicly call for someone younger than them to step aside, or down, because he's too old? They could - it's politics, the only industry outside of media where hypocrisy is its lifeblood and currency - but they won't because they'd be afraid someone would notice.

As a kid, my bedtime was 9 p.m. It sucked. I was the youngest of 5, which meant my bedtime was before everyone else, with the exception of my sister just older than me. One day, my sister and I were sitting behind my dad's recliner watching TV hoping to sneakily stay up past our bedtime (we tried all the time). One day it worked. When 9:30 p.m. came around, we were sent to bed, but we'd snuck an extra half hour, or we thought.

Turns out, it was just that one day – the family watched whatever sitcom it was that started at 9 p.m. and they let us join in only on that day. We thought we'd gotten away with it, but they'd really just changed the rules they set, which is what parents do.

Democrats are trying to reset the rules for everyone, in real time, with very little justification or sense to be made out of how they're changing them.

It's hard to set and hold someone to standards you know it's unlikely you yourself may be able to obtain. The people who hold the key to Joe Biden's remaining president are older than he is, with the exception of Chuck Schumer, a relative newborn at 73.

But to get rid of Biden they have to do it under the banner of "It's unfortunate, but he's just too old. This is a young person's game," or some such line of BS. They have to do it that way because the alternative is to admit there is something wrong with the President of the United States, and they, and everyone close to them, knows it and knew it for a long time.

Biden's breakdown wasn't overnight – it wasn't a thrown rod or seal that gave way, it was a long process visible by casual observers. There is no excuse, and no lie, that will absolve the people closest to him, who all swore otherwise very, very recently, to explain away how they "missed" it. Anyone who pointed it out was immediately chastised as either wrong (if they were of the left) or a complete liar (if they were on the right).

Advertisement

You can't gloss over that.

Democratic Party leaders are too old to play the "Biden is too old" card, and complicit in the fraud perpetrated on the country to be able to tell the public the truth now. They're stuck, and deserve to be. They did this to us, it's only fair they do something almost as destructive to themselves.

1.7.7 No Longer a Conspiracy: There Is a Dem 'Committee to Unelect the President' (2024-07-13 22:14)

It knew megadonors and Hill Democrats wanted Joe Biden gone. That alone is enough to cause a lot of friction and heartburn among the ranks. It could also make things very bloody for Democrats, especially if Democratic governors were on the other end of this fight over the viability of Joe Biden's candidacy, which was hurled into doubt after his abysmal debate with Donald Trump.

Now, Hollywood liberals have decided to jump ship, with added whispers of former President Barack Obama working loosely behind the scenes to nudge his former vice president into bowing out for the good of the party and country. Obama supposedly knew the damning op-ed penned by George Clooney, which called on Biden to exit the race, was coming. He didn't encourage it but didn't try to stop the actor from slamming Biden. There are many forces at work trying to do something to get Biden off the ticket, though every development has only led to the president, and by that, I mean Jill, to dig in further. Axios has been prolific in documenting the chaos in the White House, the mental breakdowns on the campaign team, and [1]now the forces working to dump the president. It's ironic, but there is a vast left-wing conspiracy to remove Biden:

The NYT this morning accused the right of pushing a "conspiracy theory" that Dems are secretly plotting to replace Biden at the top of the ticket...

Meanwhile, Axios is reporting this morning how Dems are secretly plotting to replace Biden at the top of the ticket.

Unreal. [2]pic.twitter.com/MPhKFHtvS— Joseph A. Wulfsohn (@JosephWulfsohn)
[3]July 12, 2024

The committee includes:

Former Obama aides: The strained relationship between Obama and Biden extends to their former aides, including David Axelrod (Obama's ruthlessly pragmatic chief strategist) and the influential "Pod Save America" guys. Biden has reportedly called Axelrod a "prick," and threw shade at him — "Oh! You're kidding" — during Monday's call-in on "Morning Joe." The pod guys — Obama alumni Jon Favreau, Jon Lovett, Tommy Vietor and Dan Pfeiffer — have irritated Biden's camp by arguing for a new candidate. Lovett writes that it's "hard to deny that in the two weeks since the debate, it's the arrogant and small Joe Biden we've seen most."

Former Clinton advisers: Carville, appearing all over the cable dial, says unsparingly that a new candidate is inevitable, whether the president admits it or not. Keeping him would be "an idiotic choice for the future of this country," Carville told Anderson Cooper on CNN.

Elected Dems: Massive pressure is building from rank-and-file members of the Democratic caucus. One Democratic senator (Peter Welch of Vermont) and 17 House Democrats have publicly called for Biden to drop out. Scores more are furious at the White House for pushing them to support a president they view as unelectable.

Swing-seat Dems: This is the group that really matters. Vulnerable Democrats have a clear-eyed view of the president's prospects. These Dems will abandon him — some already have — if they sense their seats are in jeopardy.

The donor class: George Clooney, who headlined the largest fundraiser in Democratic Party history last month, is the leading voice of a growing number of Hollywood types who want Biden to end his candidacy. The group includes Netflix co-founder Reed Hastings and Endeavor CEO Ari Emanuel (Rahm's brother).

Late-night liberals: Stephen Colbert — who moderated a major Biden fundraiser at Radio City in March — strongly suggested the president should step aside: "I think that Biden debated as well as Abraham Lincoln, if you dug him up right now." Jon Stewart has escalated pleas for the nominee to be someone else. He hosted Favreau and Vietor on his podcast yesterday.

N.Y. Times Opinion: Debate-night columns by Tom Friedman and Nick Kristoff gave way to full-throated editorials — all saying Biden must go.

Biden aides busily leaking: "Some longtime aides and advisers to President Biden," the N.Y. Times reports, "have become increasingly convinced that he will have to step aside from the campaign, and in recent days they have been trying to come up with ways to persuade him that he should."

Between the lines: Two prominent ex-Biden aides — former White House communications director Kate Bedingfield and press secretary Jen Psaki — have suggested Harris as a promising alternative.

At a glance, one would think these factions would provide enough firepower to dislodge Biden, at least make him reconsider. Yet, the president has retreated into the bunker, where his inner circle is comprised of family members and 'yes' men. They have established an SS-Gestapo-like police state within 1600 Penn., warning that any staffer who goes against the 'Biden is totally healthy' narrative would be beaten. Any criticism is considered a sign of disloyalty.

It also comes to show you how powerful this institution is despite it being managed by a man who's in the throes of a severe mental decline. The bully pulpit is supreme here. But there was also the added factor that no one on this 'committee' really pushed hard, either in public or behind the scenes. It was very much paralysis by analysis, with no one wanting to make the first move.

1.7.8 Assassination porn and the sickness on the left (2024-07-14 12:46)

If we were leftists and we were to use leftist tropes to editorialize the recent attempt on Trump's life, then we would frame the assassination attempt in the following way:

We have witnessed for years blatant exceptions to the once-common custom that we don't normalize the imagined killing of any president or presidential candidate and thus lower the bar of violence.

Subscribe to The JNS Daily Syndicate by email and never miss our top stories

By signing up, you agree to receive emails from JNS and allied pro-Israel organizations.

But the left constantly makes Trump an exception. Now, it is as if the imagined killing of Trump had been mainstreamed and become acceptable in a way inconceivable of other presidents.

(Do we remember the rodeo clown who merely wore an Obama mask during a bull riding contest and was punished by being permanently banned by the Missouri State Fair authorities?)

So, since at least 2016, there has been a parlor game among leftist celebrities and entertainers joking (one hopes), dreaming, imagining and just talking about the various and graphic ways they would like to assassinate or seriously injure Trump:

By slugging his face (Robert De Niro), by decapitation (Kathy Griffin, Marilyn Manson), by stabbing (Shakespeare in the Park), by clubbing (Mickey Rourke), by shooting (Snoop Dogg), by poisoning (Anthony Bourdain), by bounty killing (George Lopez), by carrion-eating his corpse (Pearl Jam), by suffocating (Larry Wilmore), by blowing him up (Madonna, Moby), by throwing him over a cliff (Rosie O'Donnell), just by generic "killing" him (Johnny Depp, Big Sean) or by martyring him (Reid Hoffman: "Yeah, I wish I had made him an actual martyr.").

Or should we deplore the use of telescopic scope imagery, given that the left blamed Sarah Palin for once using bullseye spots on an election map of opposition congressional districts, claiming that such usage had incited the mass shooting by Jared Lee Loughner?

Yet recently, POTUS Joe Biden was a little bit more graphic and a lot more literal.

In a widely reported call to hundreds of donors last week, Biden boasted: "I have one job, and that's to beat Donald Trump. I'm absolutely certain I'm the best person to be able to do that. So, we're done talking about the debate, it's time to put Trump in a bullseye."

“In a bullseye”?

At least Biden did not go back to the full Biden beat-up porn of the past (e.g., “If we were in high school, I’d take him behind the gym and beat the hell out of him.” “The press always asks me, ‘Don’t I wish I were debating him?’ No, I wish we were in high school—I could take him behind the gym. That’s what I wish.”).

Then there is the question of the Secret Service and one’s political opponents. Given the tragic history of the Kennedys, why in the world did the Biden administration not insist that independent candidate Robert F. Kennedy Jr. be accorded Secret Service protection? Because his candidacy was felt to be disadvantageous to Biden?

And why just this April would the former head of the January 6th Committee and 2004 election obstructionist Rep. Bennie Thompson (D-Miss.) introduce legislation ridiculously entitled “Denying Infinite Security and Government Resources Allocated toward Convicted and Extremely Dishonorable (DISGRACED) Former Protectees Act” to strip Secret Service protection for former President Trump, who by this April was the leading presidential candidate?

Had Thompson’s bill passed, would that not have been confirmation for a potential shooter to feel his task was just made much easier?

But in a wider sense, if the common referent day after day on the left is that Trump is another Hitler (cf. a recent New Republic cover on which Trump is literally Photoshopped as Hitler), then it seems reckless not to imagine an unhinged or young shootist believing that by taking out someone identical to one of the greatest mass murderers in history, he would be applauded for his violence?

So, is their logic: shoot Trump and save six million from the gas chambers?

After all, The New Republic defiantly explained their Hitler-Trump cover photo this way: “Today, we at The New Republic think we can spend this election year in one of two ways. We can spend it debating whether Trump meets the nine or 17 points that define fascism. Or we can spend it saying, ‘He’s damn close enough, and we’d better fight.’”

Well, New Republic, recently someone took you up on your argument that Trump was “damn close enough” to Hitler and so he likewise chose to “fight”—albeit with a semi-automatic rifle.

If, ad nauseam, a Joy Reid is screaming about Trump as a Hitlerian dictator (“Then let me know who I got to vote for to keep Hitler out of the White House”) or Rachel Maddow is bloviating about studying Hitler to understand Trump, then finally the message sinks in that a mass murderer is about to take power—unless...

Finally, the idea, if true, that bystanders spotted a 20-year-old on a nearby roof with a gun, a mere 130 yards from Trump, and in vain warned police of his presence, is surreal.

Is it all that hard for the Secret Service to post a few agents on the tops of a few surrounding buildings closest to the dais, or at least coordinate with local law enforcement to do the same?

That is a no-brainer. Whoever made the decisions concerning the proper Secret Service security details for presidential events should be immediately fired.

1.7.9 About Those Female Secret Service Agents Protecting Trump (2024-07-14 19:48)

During all the insanity that happened on Saturday involving the attempted assassination of Donald Trump, there was a moment that stood out to many, and it involved the conduct of the female Secret Service agents. As one clip showed, the women protecting Trump looked jittery and slightly unsure of themselves. One of them tried to holster her side arm but kept missing the holster, eventually just placing it close to her until it was easier to do so. This resulted in many people questioning why there were female Secret Service agents in the first place.

To be clear, I also spoke out about this, but I wanted to add something very specific that I think is important. It’s my honest belief that women can, in fact, be Secret Service agents, however, I think there are specific places for them in any given detail, I just don’t think they should be responsible for the immediate handling of the president.

Women should not be SS agents, at least when it comes to this specific kind of detail. She can’t holster her weapon and they look jittery and disorganized.
[1]pic.twitter.com/WBkyoYTlrQ— Brandon Morse (@TheBrandonMorse) [2]July 14, 2024

The knee-jerk reaction from this for some will be to assume I'm being sexist, but let's look at this logically.

Men are larger than women in general, they're stronger than women in general, and they're quicker than women in general. When a threat approaches, you want the largest mass possible to shield the president. If a threat tries to come at the president directly, you want the strongest and fastest fighter you can get to take the threat down. If, for any reason, the threat needs to be pinned or the president needs to be lifted bodily to safety, you want people with solid muscle mass to be able to handle the weight. Men's lung capacity is also larger, as well is their ability to pump blood through the body faster, making them tire less easily, at least in terms of short-term action.

Women are generally smaller than men, have less muscle mass, aren't as fast, and can be physically overpowered far more easily as a general rule.

Advertisement

When we're dealing with the leader of the free world, or even the once and likely future leader, the question about who should be at his immediate side isn't a question. It should be men strictly due to the biological advantages given to them by nature when it comes to physicality.

This doesn't mean women can't be undercover in the crowd, or among the agents around the area keeping watch. Women are very good shots so, with their eye for detail and natural slow twitch muscle fiber making them less likely to jitter or jerk while aiming, they could be very good at overwatch, just to give you one example. They could blend in with the crowd as undercover agents, as women are less likely to be suspected of being agents giving them the advantage of surprise when a suspect lets their guard down thinking they aren't a threat.

But when it comes to directly protecting the president, the male body is just better built for that specific job.

Let's put it this way. Would it be sexist of me to say that there should be women on a team's offensive line in the NFL? No, of course not. They put heavy, burly guys in that position because that specific job requires a specific body type. If you were to put a woman on the O-line and put her against a male form you'd typically see opposite her, she would be overrun very easily and possibly injured severely.

The O-line's job is to help protect one man, the quarterback so that he can enact plays necessary to move the team forward. If we're willing to understand that a specific type of body is needed in this situation to protect a man so that a sports team can win a game, then this same logic needs to be put forward when we're talking about the leader of the free world. A person so important and powerful that their death could trigger events that could literally change the world for the worse and throw it into chaos.

This isn't sexism. This isn't looking down on women. This is just a logical take given the biological facts.

Women are fully capable of doing a myriad of jobs and by all means, they should have them if they want them, but there are certain jobs where their inclusion isn't wise or logical. This specific detail of being the closest to the president when the worst goes down, is neither wise nor logical.

1.7.10 Does Boebert Really Want This Cabinet Position in a Possible Trump Administration? (2024-07-21 23:21)

Republican Rep. Lauren Boebert of Colorado jokingly said she has her eye on a cabinet position should former President Donald Trump win the 2024 election.

As the Colorado Republican passed by Native Voice One on the third day of the Republican National Convention, the hosts asked who she thought should be Secretary of the Interior in a possible Trump administration.

"I think Lauren Boebert needs to be the secretary of Interior," she said with a laugh. "President Trump, I would like to be secretary of Interior."

She explained her reasoning.

"I think this is actually one of the most important agencies within the federal government," Boebert said. "Public lands are something that are very dear to me and I've spent a lot of time on our tribal lands with our chairman and our councilmembers with the Mountain Utes and the Southern Utes."

The hosts, who were holding a live show as they asked Boebert, wondered if she thought the federal government should disperse Bureau of Land Management offices across the country.

"I fought to keep that as the Bureau of Land Management regional Western headquarters and save 46 jobs so we could have boots on the ground," said Boebert, referring to how under Trump, BLM headquarters moved to Grand Junction, but came back to D.C. in 2021 under Interior Secretary Deb Haaland.

Westerners deserve a voice in decisions affecting their daily lives, and it would be wrong to move the Bureau back to a faceless building in D.C. since 99 % of its lands are in the West.

1.7.11 'Democracy' Democrats Destroyed For Staging a Coup Against Biden (2024-07-21 23:24)

President Joe Biden dropped out of the 2024 race for the White House Sunday afternoon after pressure from Democrats reached a fever pitch over the weekend.

1.7.12 DEI Cronyism and Woke Grifters (2024-07-22 22:50)

When ideology replaces meritocracy or provides immunity from the consequences of illegal behavior, systemic mediocrity follows.

Under toxic National Socialism, Stalinism, and Maoism, millions of cronies and grifters mouthed party lines in hopes that their approved ideology would allow them to advance their careers and excuse their lawbreaking.

The same thing has happened with the woke movement and the now-huge Diversity/Equity/Inclusion conglomerate.

Grifters and opportunists mask their selfish agendas under the cloak of neo-Marxist care for the underprivileged or victimized minorities. Meanwhile, they seek to profit illegally as if they were old-fashioned crony capitalists.

During the disastrous COVID-19 lockdown, California governor Gavin Newsom pontificated about leveraging the quarantine to ensure greater equality: “There is opportunity for reimagining a [more] progressive era as it [relates] to capitalism...We see this as an opportunity to reshape the way we do business and how we govern.”

Meanwhile, Newsom did not seem very “progressive” when he was caught in one of California’s most expensive restaurants dining with sidekick lobbyists while violating the very mask and social distancing rules he had mandated for 40 million others.

Newsom also bragged about social equity when he signed a new California law mandating $20 an hour for fast-food workers—while many of his own employees at his various company-controlled eateries made only $16 an hour.

And he allegedly gave a unique exemption from his wage law to one particular bakery/restaurant chain, Panera, whose owner is an old friend and major campaign contributor.

Newsom apparently feels that the more progressively he postures, the less he’ll be called out for his own hypocrisy and self-interested agendas.

In another egregious case, the now-imprisoned felon, Sam Bankman-Fried, may have been the greatest con artist in American history. He siphoned billions of dollars from his cryptocurrency company, destroying the fortunes of thousands when his multi-billion-dollar Ponzi empire collapsed.

How did Sam and his two Stanford law-professor parents manage to accumulate millions of dollars in resort properties and perks without getting caught until after their empire collapsed?

Answer: Sam showered millions of dollars on left-wing politicians to advance their progressive crusades. His parents justified this family giving as a form of “effective altruism.”

That catchy phrase masked the reality that his crusade for social justice was just an incredibly effective get-rich-quick scheme.

The Bankman-Fried family apparently reasoned that their devotion to this woke form of “altruism” would translate into riches for themselves, albeit bankruptcies for investors.

Another example: in Georgia’s Fulton County, District Attorney Fani Willis ran for office, promising to indict supposed right-wing monster Donald Trump.

She raised campaign money on her woke credentials. Often, when challenged, she played the race victim card.

Meanwhile, Willis hired as a special prosecutor her secret paramour, the incompetent Nathan Wade, although he had never tried a single felony or even criminal case.

She and Wade then went on expensive junkets. She claimed that she reimbursed him with cash that was, of course, unverifiable.

Given their woke ideology, both assumed they were entitled to splurge at taxpayers’ expense, offer likely-false testimony under oath, and violate canons of professional behavior for lawyers.

She wasn’t alone in her corruption. After the death of George Floyd, the founders of the left-wing Black Lives Matter movement went on a house-buying rampage. The more corporations filled their coffers with millions, either from guilt or as protection money, the more new homes the directors purchased.

One co-founder, Patrisse Khan-Cullors, a self-described Marxist, splurged by spending $3.2 million in BLM money to buy herself four upscale residences.

And the most radical Democratic members of Congress—the so-called Squad—apparently feel that the more they level accusations of racism, the more they can profit without fearing any consequences for their wrongdoing.

One squad member, Rep. Ilhan Omar, redirected $2.8 million of her office’s allotted government money to her husband’s political consulting company.

Still another member, the radical leftist Rep. Cori Bush, often harangued the country to defund the police. Now the FBI is investigating her for stealthily paying tens of thousands of campaign dollars to her own husband for “security.”

Woke and DEI activists may not necessarily be any more innately mediocre, corrupt, or conniving than other politicians and activists.

But they seem so, because they loudly broadcast that they are for “diversity,” “equity,” and “inclusion”—and thus assume themselves to be exempt from all scrutiny and free to profit in any way they please.

The woke/DEI project is enticing thousands of shysters, careerists, and mediocrities, all keen to enrich themselves on the premise that they are noble fighters for social justice who deserve immunity from any scrutiny.

How odd it is that America is wasting billions of dollars hiring DEI czars and electing woke politicians who so often accuse others of a multitude of sins, largely as a way of enriching themselves, hiding their own culpability, and making a mockery of the law.

1.7.13 Can we let the voters decide - Not the FBI, CIA, DOJ, lawyers, prosecutors, and judges? (2024-07-22 22:51)

When Donald Trump seemed to have a lock on the 2016 Republican primary, the Democratic Party concluded that the people could not be counted on to do the “right thing” of electing the Democratic candidate in waiting Hillary Clinton.

What followed were eight long years of extralegal efforts to neuter candidate, then President, then ex-President, and then candidate again, Donald Trump.

The nonstop efforts were all justified as “saving democracy” — albeit by nearly destroying it.

In 2015-2016, the Hillary Clinton campaign fueled the lie that discredited ex-British spy Christopher Steele had discovered Trump to be a veritable Russian agent.

Hillary did not disclose that she had paid Steele — with checks hidden through three paywalls. The FBI, under Director James Comey, also hired the fraudster.

Yet almost nothing in his "Steele dossier" was true.

The FBI doctored evidence submitted to a FISA court. Comey leaked to the press confidential documents about his private conversations with President Trump.

Comey's successor, Acting FBI Director Andrew McCabe, lied on numerous occasions to federal investigators.

Both former CIA Director John Brennan and former Director of National Intelligence James Clapper repeatedly lied to the nation, saying that Trump was de facto working with the Russians.

The result? Trump lost the 2016 popular vote but still won the Electoral College.

Next, celebrities and well-funded liberals waged a media campaign to convince the electors to become "faithless." Left-wing elites begged them to renounce their constitutional duties and instead throw the election to Hillary Clinton.

Once Trump was elected, "Russian collusion" was fired up again in hysterical fashion.

A special counsel, Robert Mueller, consumed 22 months of the Trump presidency. His investigation team constantly leaked falsehoods about the "walls closing in on" Trump.

After nearly two years, Mueller announced there was no evidence of a Trump effort to collude with Russia.

Next was the first impeachment of Trump — nearly the moment he lost the House in 2018.

Supposedly, Trump had leveraged Ukraine to investigate a corrupt Hunter Biden by delaying foreign aid.

Trump was impeached on a strictly partisan vote.

But later, no one denied that the drug-addled Hunter Biden had indeed gotten rich from Ukraine, or that Joe Biden had fired a Ukrainian prosecutor looking into his son's misadventures while still vice president, or that Trump released all the military assistance designated by Congress, or that he included offensive weapons formerly denied Ukraine by the Obama-Biden administration.

Next, in 2020, when Hunter's laptop turned up abandoned at a repair shop and full of incriminating evidence of more Biden family skullduggery, the left struck again.

It rounded up "51 former intelligence authorities" to mislead the American people on the eve of the vote that the laptop was likely a fake — once again cooked up by Russian disinformation experts to aid Trump.

And once more, that was another complete falsehood. But the lie proved useful to Joe Biden in the debates and campaign. And he won the election.

Next, the learn-nothing, forget-nothing left turned to the 2023-2024 campaign.

This time, their next extra-legal efforts were twofold.

One, they unsuccessfully sought to remove Trump from some 15 state ballots.

Two, local, state, and federal courts began to wage lawfare to convict and jail candidate Trump, or at least bankrupt him and keep him off the campaign trail.

Three county and state prosecutors campaigned on getting Trump on charges never filed before against a presidential candidate — and rarely against anyone else as well.

The Fani Willis Georgia lead prosecutor met secretly with the Biden White House counsel.

Alvin Bragg's Manhattan team hired the third-ranking federal prosecutor in the Biden Justice Department.

Special counsel Jack Smith was found by a court to have been illegally appointed and much of his case was dismissed.

On July 14, a shooter nearly killed candidate Trump, nicking his ear after somehow firing a rifle from a rooftop a mere 140 yards away — while undetected by law enforcement inside the very same building below.

Prior to the shooting, Joe Biden had boasted to donors that "it's time to put Trump in a bullseye."

Biden had railed nearly nonstop that a Trump victory would spell the end of democracy — a theme the left had fueled by comparing ad nauseam Trump to Adolf Hitler.

Yet here we are in mid-July 2024 and Trump, the Republican candidate, is alive and leads incumbent Biden — either because of, or despite, the crude efforts to destroy him.

After nearly a decade of utter madness, can we finally order the FBI, DOJ, and CIA to butt out of our elections?

Can a bankrupt media cease whipping up hysteria about a supposed Nazi-like takeover?

Can the left stop relying on washed-up British spies, corrupt ex-spooks, and teams of clownish partisan prosecutors?

Instead, why not, at last, just let the people choose their own president?

1.7.14 Why it's too late to stop World War 3 - according to one of Britain's greatest military historians (2024-07-22 22:52)

Imagine, for a moment, that the Iranian government announces it has developed a [1]nuclear bomb and threatens to use it on Israel. The United States reacts with the threat of military intervention, as it did in 1991 and 2003 in Iraq. Iran signals that it will not tolerate a third Gulf war and looks for allies. American forces mass to enter Iran, which orders national mobilisation. Russia, China and North Korea express their support for Iran, and Washington expands its intervention force, bringing in a [2]British contingent. Russia enters the game, raising the stakes in the expectation that the West will back down. A nuclear standoff follows, but with tense and itchy fingers on both sides, as leaders gamble on the risk of not striking first, it all ends in disaster. The [3]Third World War begins with an exchange of nuclear fire, and the rest, as they say, is history.

Or picture this: Chinese frustration over the status of Taiwan prompts a build-up of invasion forces. The United States is preoccupied with its own domestic political crisis. Japan anxiously watches the exchange of harsh words between China and Taiwan, wondering whether to intervene. The United Nations condemns Chinese actions, and China repudiates the censure and orders invasion, confident that a quick victory will prevent others from intervening, as Hitler hoped when he invaded Poland in 1939. The United States now activates contingency plans to save Taiwan, and each side uses tactical nuclear weapons against the other's armed forces. North Korea and Russia side with China. There is no general nuclear strike, but Russia warns Europe to keep out, dividing American strategy between the two theatres, as it was in the Second World War. The conflict continues to escalate.

Now let's consider a totally different kind of global conflict. The growing division between the democratic West and the arc of authoritarian states across Eurasia has entered a dangerous new chapter. Neither side wants to risk outright war, but there is a possibility that destroying satellite communications will undermine the military and economic capability of the other side. Without warning, the West's satellite communication system is attacked and massive damage is done to its commercial and military electronic networks.

No one claims to have launched the missiles, but, in the chaos that follows, blame is quickly directed at anti-Western states. Retaliation is difficult to mount with the collapse of communications. Uncertain what to do, military mobilisation is ordered across the Western world, but Russia and China demand that it cease. As in 1914, the wheels, once set in motion, are hard to stop, and the crisis grows. Welcome to the First Space War.

These three scenarios are possible, though not one of them, I should make clear, is probable. Predicting – more accurately, imagining – the wars of the future can produce dangerous fantasies that promote anxiety over future security. It is likely that even the most plausible prognosis will be wrong. The development of nuclear weapons has substantially changed the terms of any future global conflict. There are no doubt contingency plans prepared by armed forces everywhere to meet a range of possibilities that might otherwise be regarded as fanciful in the real world. And while history may help us to think about the shape of a future war, the lessons of history are seldom learnt.

Yet the question of how a third world war might erupt haunts us today more than at any time since the end of the last world war. The very act of guessing is proof of our expectation that warfare of some kind remains a fact in a world of multiple insecurities. Conflicts in Ukraine, Gaza, Myanmar and Sudan are a reminder of that ever-present reality. And regular threats from Russia about using nuclear weapons suggest that our fantasies may not be so wide of the mark after all.

Perhaps, in attempting to forecast the outbreak of a future war, we should ask another question: Why do we make war at all? War has been a characteristic of almost the whole of recorded history, and warlike violence preceded the establishment of the first states. Why human beings have developed belligerency alongside their capacity for social cooperation remains a fundamental question.

It is a puzzle with which the human sciences have wrestled for much of the 20th and 21st centuries. For evolutionary biologists and psychologists, warfare was a means for early man to ensure survival, protect kin and cope with ecological crisis. No human biologist now argues that violence is in our genes, but early hominins, organised in small bands of hunter-gatherers or fishers, almost certainly used violence to protect against intruders, secure resources and food, and on occasion to act as predators on neighbouring communities. The resort to violence as one of the elements in the survival kit of early man became psychologically normative, as well as biologically useful. On this reading, belligerence is something deeply embedded in human development.

Yet this view is challenged by the other sciences, which see warfare as a phenomenon associated with the development of settled cultures and political systems, whether tribe, proto-state or state. By 10,000 years ago, there is no doubt that something resembling warfare emerged worldwide, evidenced in the archaeological record of weapons, iconography and fortifications.

Warfare was not like modern war, organised in mass armies and supplied by military industries, but took a variety of forms: a deadly raid, a ritual encounter, or a massacre, such as the Nataruk killings, dating to the 9th century BC: the remains of men, women (one of them pregnant) and children unearthed from this site near Kenya's Lake Turkana show the victims were clubbed and stabbed to death.

It was evidently not necessary to have a state to engage in violence, as the tribal warfare observed in the past few hundred years has demonstrated, but war did mean the emergence of a warrior elite and a culture in which warfare was valorised and endorsed: the Spartans, the Vikings, the Aztecs. There have been very few cultures in which warfare has not played a part, usually a central part, in the life of the community. In the historic period of states, from about 5,000 years ago, there are no examples where warfare was not accepted practice.

This says little about why wars are waged in the archaic past or the present. Wars are always waged for something, whether it is pleasing the gods by seizing captives to execute or sacrifice, or coveting resources, or wars for belief, or extending power over others, or in the search for heightened security, or simply a war of defence against a predator. This mix of motives has remained remarkably constant.

The seizure of resources is an obvious motivation for war, an explanation that extends from the ancient Romans as they destroyed enemy cities and grabbed slaves and treasure and exacted tribute, to the Japanese forces in 1942 when they captured the oil and raw materials of South-east Asia needed for waging further war. Wars for belief also span millennia, from the Muslim conquests of the Middle East and North Africa in the early Middle Ages, and the age of Christian crusades that followed, to the current jihad campaigns of militant Islam.

Security, as Thomas Hobbes famously recognised in his Leviathan of 1651, is always at risk in an anarchic world where there is no single common power to enforce it. Frontiers are a touchstone of security fears and lack of trust, as the wars in Ukraine and Gaza illustrate today. But the long Chinese frontier with the steppe nomads and the vast frontier of the late Roman empire were also sites of constant encroachments, defensive battles and punitive expeditions.

Pursuit of power is perhaps the most common explanation for war – particularly popular with political and social scientists. Power Transition Theory, pioneered at the height of the Cold War, sees a constant race between major hegemonic powers as one tries to exceed the power of the other. The race, so it is argued, might end in war as a declining power seeks to protect its position, or a rising power seeks to replace it. At one time, the theory was applied to the United States and the Soviet Union, but they never went to war against each other; now it is applied to possible war between the United States and China, which has become a favourite scenario for those predicting 21st-century conflict. Yet it is a theory that works poorly. The two world wars began with a major power picking on a lesser one – Serbia in 1914, Poland in 1939 – and then dragging other powers into the maelstrom. That might indeed happen with Taiwan, as it is already happening with Ukraine.

Power works best as an explanation when history turns to the individuals who drove themselves to become the great conquerors, men whose raw ambition mobilised support from their people for unlimited conquest – Alexander the Great, Genghis Khan, Napoleon, Hitler. This is hubristic power based on arrogant self-belief and it usually evaporates with the death or defeat of the leader. But so long as they lead, and there are people willing to follow, war is unlimited and destructive on a vast scale. This is the most dangerous and unpredictable explanation for the persistence of warfare and it covers the whole historical record. It is one of the surest indications that war still has a future as well as a long past.

The wars of the future draw on a grim heritage. The fact that peace would seem to be the rational option for most humans has never been able to stifle the urge to fight when it seems necessary, or lucrative, or an obligation. And that heritage is the chief reason it is possible to imagine a future war. After the end of the Cold War, there was once a fashion for saying that war was obsolete – if only that were so, we might now live in a world without weapons and fear. While few would actively seek the Third World War, few envisaged or wanted the other two. The sad reality is that our understanding of why wars occur has so far contributed little to setting warfare aside as an enduring element in human affairs.

1.7.15 Biden is losing World War III (2024-07-22 22:53)

President [1]Joe Biden has become the James Buchanan of the 21st century.

Buchanan, the nation's 15th president, [2]widely considered history's worst, sought to mollify everyone, yet in the end pleased no one. Under his rule, the nation drifted ever-closer to secession and Civil War.

More than a century and a half later, the world is devolving into a global ideological World War III. Russia, China and their proxies are actively attacking U.S. interests.

Yet Biden's [3]National Security Strategy remains rooted in fighting "something less than two simultaneous or overlapping major conflicts," according to a January Congressional Research Service report entitled "[4]Great Power Competition: Implications for Defense."

The report notes that, in 2018, the Trump administration was confronted with an Obama-era decision of "building a force not around the demands of two regional conflicts with rogue states, but around the requirements of winning a high-intensity conflict with a single, top-tier competitor — a war with China over Taiwan, for instance, or a clash with Russia in the Baltic region."

But in reality, our nation is being confronted with three wars: the war in Ukraine, the war in the Middle East, and the looming war over Taiwan and the South China Sea.

Actually, make that three and a half wars, if you include the [5]war of influence we are losing in the Sahel region of Africa as U.S. forces abandon bases in Niger.

Biden, seemingly caught in the vice grip of November electoral calculus, is refusing even to acknowledge that we are already in World War III, let alone take the necessary measures to win it. As a result, our nation's military, weapons and munitions production capacity, and its ability to engage with the cyberwarfare and disinformation emanating from Moscow and Beijing, are all woefully lacking. All require an immediate remedy.

Biden, like Buchanan, is facing a Fort Sumter moment in history.

In 1860, Buchanan, fearing escalation, refused to sufficiently reinforce the strategic fort guarding the entrance to Charleston Harbor. Although such a move likely would not have changed the trajectory of the war, it would have drawn a much-needed red line for the Southern secessionists.

Instead, Buchanan did the bare minimum, just as the Biden administration is now doing in Ukraine, the Indo-Pacific and in the Middle East. Defending U.S. allies is not enough, just as minimally defending Fort Sumter proved futile.

"Defending" must no longer be the watchword of the day in Biden's White House, but "winning." Winning this increasingly kinetic global ideological war is our only way forward if liberal democracy is to prevail against Russian President [6]Vladimir Putin and Chinese President [7]Xi Jinping's shared vision of a so-called multipolar world, militarily and economically dominated by Russia and China and anchored by BRICS.

Biden's escalation fears must also end. As evidenced by Oct 7., Bakhmut, Avdiivka, Iran's April 13 attacks on Israel and now the [8]Bastogne-like battle for the Kharkiv Oblast, fears of escalation have only led to vacuums being filled by our nation's enemies — and the enemies of our allies in Eastern Europe and the Mideast.

Simply put, the more Jake Sullivan, Biden's national security advisor, argues for de-escalation, the more our enemies use those windows to escalate.

Israel is a case study in the madness of Biden's Buchanan-like approach to handling the nation's foreign policy. Initially, Biden was strongly supportive of Jerusalem's right to put an end to Hamas as a military threat to Israel. In the wake of anti-Israel Palestinian protests on U.S. campuses throughout the country and in particular in New York City, Biden's resolve dissipated. The unity coalition government of Israel, in an existential war with Hamas, Hezbollah and Iran, soon found itself under friendly fire originating from Washington, D.C.

Defending Michigan's 15 electoral votes seemingly became more important than safeguarding Israel, destroying Hamas, or alone extricating the eight American hostages still held by Hamas's military chief, Yahya Sinwar, in Gaza. Lest we forget, [9]45 American citizens were brutally slaughtered by Hamas on Oct. 7.

On Monday, Biden's abyss deepened. The United Nations admitted it had [10]overestimated the number of women and children killed in Gaza by nearly 100 percent, implying that Israel has achieved a lower civilian casualty rate than the U.S. did during the Iraq War. Even so, Karim Khan, the chief prosecutor for the International Criminal Court, announced he was seeking [11]arrest warrants for alleged war crimes in Gaza by Netanyahu and Israeli Defense Minister Yoav Gallant.

There was no mention whatsoever of Hamas's continued use of Palestinian civilians as human shields, nor any of their Russian and Iranian sponsors, including Supreme Leader Ayatollah Ali Khamenei.

[12]Ebrahim Raisi, the Iranian president killed in a helicopter crash, was never indicted by the ICC, despite being known as the "Butcher of Tehran" for ordering the deaths of tens of thousands of Iranians.

Biden has lost the plot — or maybe he is incapable of grasping it. Russia and China are destroying the post-World War II global order and the institutions that once safeguarded it — including the UN Security Council and now, indirectly, the ICC.

Instead of rallying the nation to fight and win this ever-widening global concerted assault on liberty, Biden and his politicians are sacrificing American national security in an attempt to win in November.

World War III is upon us, and our nation is exposed. Fort Sumter stands symbolically empty. The country's armed forces are overtaxed, facing potentially three wars at once and preparing for only one.

Instead of channeling Abraham Lincoln and his resolve to win, Biden is imitating Buchanan, derelict in his duty as leader of the free world.

1.7.16 Will There Be a World War 3? (2024-07-22 22:55)

- [1]

In 2024, the world is experiencing heightened geopolitical tensions driven by a myriad of economic, political, and environmental factors. Increased conflict in key regions such as Eastern Europe, the Middle East, and East Asia are becoming significant points of concern for policymakers across the globe, prompting many to wonder: will there be World War 3?

The ongoing war in Ukraine continues to strain relations between NATO allies and Russia. Significant economic sanctions and military support from the West have done little more than exacerbate the situation in Eastern Europe.

In the Middle East, Iran's nuclear ambitions, their increasingly close relationship with Russia and China, and their backing of the Hamas-led attacks on Israel have raised significant alarm amongst the international community. The Iranian-backed Houthi attacks on commercial shipping activities in the Red Sea have also disrupted shipping routes.

In East Asia, China's aggressive show of military force in the Indo-Pacific region and fierce opposition to recognizing Taiwan as an independent state have led to escalating tensions between the US and China. Additionally, North Korea continues to advance its nuclear and missile testing, further contributing to instability in the region.

Could we be on the precipice of a third World War? What could eventually cause a global war? Let's explore some potential scenarios that could lead to World War III.

Historical Context: Wars Have Kicked Off Over Much Less

Historically speaking, few wars have been the result of one major event. Rather, they result from relatively minor events that end up being the tipping point during ongoing heightened tensions. Take, for example, the events that led to World War I.

In the early 20th century, Europe was experiencing fast economic growth leading to a subsequent powerplay for dominance in the region between Germany, Russia, France, Austria-Hungary, and Great Britain. Additionally, we witnessed the rise of imperialism and nationalism among two key states — Russia and Germany respectively.

With political tensions at an all-time high, Archduke Franz Ferdinand of Austria-Hungary was assassinated by a Serbian nationalist in June 1914. Austria-Hungary backed by Germany declared war on Serbia which, in turn, was backed by Russia. Great Britain and France joined the war against Germany after it invaded Belgium.

Come 1918, Germany was suffering from military exhaustion and internal unrest, leading to its ultimate defeat and the signing of the Armistice on November 11, 1918. The war officially ended with the signing of the Treaty of Versailles on June 28, 1919.

Although well-intentioned, the Treaty of Versailles had adverse effects that led to extensive economic hardship and resentment within Germany.

Three decades later, in 1939, Hitler Hitler invaded Poland to expand the Third Reich, gain territory, and unite all ethnic Germans. As a result, Great Britain and France once again declared war on Germany.

By 1941, the United States had entered the war after the attack on Pearl Harbor, which played a crucial role in turning the tide. Four years later, the Axis powers of Germany and Japan had surrendered. It's said that the conflict resulted in the loss of 75 million lives.

However, another conflict was just around the corner. The creation of Israel in 1948 led to the mass immigration of Holocaust survivors. This, in turn, led to the first Arab-Israeli war, which was a result of political tension, military conflict, and other disputes between various Arab countries and Israel.

Millions died due to a lack of equipment and preparedness. Back then, soldiers didn't have proper body armor as they do now, like the [2]MIRA Safety Body Armor. This no doubt contributed heavily to the astronomical death toll.

World War II also saw a rise in chemical warfare. Limitations in technology at the time meant nerve agents could cause devastating effects. While nerve agents and chemical warfare are still deadly, soldiers now have gas masks and respirators to protect themselves, such as the [3]CM-6M Tactical Gas Mask.

As we've seen time and again, tiny flashpoints end up creating massive conflicts. The aftermath of 9/11 demonstrated how a devastating act of terrorism could trigger a series of responses that lead to prolonged military engagements, such as the wars in Afghanistan and Iraq.

Who Are the Players in WWII?

Should the world enter into a World War Three scenario, we can expect the dominant players to be Russia, China, and Iran on one side versus the US, Europe, and Great Britain. The NATO states play a pivotal role as their expansion east is the main driver behind Russia's aggression. North Korea would also surely play a role.

It is easy to visualize the players of World War III as "East versus West," but with outlying Eastern countries such as South Korea, Japan, New Zealand, and Australia aligning themselves with the US and Europe, the equation isn't as simple as it looks.

The Russian-Chinese relationship is further fortified by their involvement in the BRICS group. BRICS is a group of countries with economic, security, and political ties that include countries such as Brazil, India, and South Africa.

These are three dominant countries in their respective regions with significant mineral and defense resources. In early 2024, the BRICS group welcomed six new member states; Egypt, Iran, the UAE, Saudi Arabia, and Ethiopia.

BRICS was introduced as an alternative to the dollar payment system used by the G7, and it's likely to face opposition as it continues to grow. Many of the BRICS countries enjoy a balanced relationship with both Russia and the US, though in time of war, things tend to change quickly.

While the BRICS nations enjoy close political, economic, and security ties, it's unlikely that they'd immediately side with Russia or China. . The US, on the other hand, maintains close mutual defense treaties with countries such as Canada, the Philippines, Japan, Thailand, and South Korea — all of whom would definitively side with the US.

Potential Scenarios Leading to WWII:

Iran vs. Israel

Iran and Israel play an important role in Middle Eastern geopolitics. Iran has long opposed the existence of Israel, supporting groups such as Hezbollah and Hamas to foster skirmishes.

In April 2024, hostilities intensified in response to Israel's counterattacks, leading to the war in Gaza in the wake of the October 7, Hamas-led attack on Israel. Iranian-backed militant groups launched rockets and drone strikes from Lebanon and Gaza, targeting Israeli cities and military installations. While the vast majority of the ballistic missile strikes were intercepted, there was minor infrastructural damage in some areas.

Iran maintains the attack was in retaliation for a suspected Israeli strike on a consulate in Damascus which killed an Iranian military commander. Post-retaliation strike, Iran officials consider the matter concluded but have expressed that they would consider a more severe response should Israel launch any further attacks.

A US official from President Biden's administration said Israel was not seeking to escalate the situation further, although Israeli officials have emphasized that they would prepare for further attacks should Iran strike again.

Poland's Posture Change

From 2015 to 2023, the ruling party in Poland was the Law and Justice party (PiS). The PiS government found itself on the receiving end of many legal actions brought against it by the European Commission for breaching core European Union (EU) values. Critics of the PiS complained that the party was illiberal and authoritarian, undermining the country's core democracy.

The 2023 Polish election results were a critical turning point for Eastern European politics. The new government seeks to more closely align Poland with the EU and play a more active role within the NATO states.

This change of sentiment has angered Russia and Belarus who seek to undermine EU influence and expansion in the region. Poland remains critical of both Russia and Belarus who they see as a direct threat to regional security.

Invasion of Ukraine 2022

While Ukrainian president Volodymyr Zelensky claims that Vladimir Putin has greater aspirations than just overtaking Kyiv, Putin hasn't really countered that claim either. Those claims have become a reality considering the bombardment on the capitol as of June 2024. These attacks have led Biden to take a much more serious tone against Russia. With sanctions towards Belarus, we could see increased aggression between surrounding nations and Poland (Not to mention the fact that Poland is the gateway of NATO weapons into Ukraine).

If Russia would aspire for such access, this stream of resources needs to be cut off. With that said, doing so would incur serious consequences, as attacking Poland directly would of course constitute an "attack on all" in NATO terms.

Turkey Gets Involved

Turkey enjoys a complex and multifaceted relationship with both the US and Russia. While Turkey and Russia have successfully collaborated on strategic energy projects and in managing the Syrian conflict, it was the purchase of the Russian S-400 missile system that strained Turkey's relationships with NATO and the US.

Additionally, there are ancient religious and historical ties between Turkey and Russia. The Byzantine Empire, centered in its capital city Constantinople (modern Istanbul), profoundly influenced Eastern Orthodox Christianity, which is central to Russian religious identity.

After the fall of Constantinople to the Ottoman Turks in 1453, Russia viewed itself as the protector of Orthodox Christianity, which continues to influence contemporary relations between the two nations today.

Turkey, however, remains a staunch ally of NATO and is committed to its cooperative efforts with the US on security in the region. That being said, the recent escalation of conflict between Israel and Gaza has somewhat soured the once impenetrable relationship. Turkey remains firm in its opposition to Israel's policies towards Palestinians and fiercely condemns military action in Gaza.

China Makes a Move on Taiwan

China has been adamant in its resolve to reunify Taiwan with the mainland. Increased military activity in the South China Sea aimed at demonstrating China's capabilities have concerned nearby nations such as Japan, India and Australia who all maintain strategic military locations in the region.

Additionally, the US remains a close ally of Taiwan and has reinforced its commitment to supporting an independent state. Should China act on its warnings, the implications would be far-reaching, especially when you consider that Taiwan remains the hub of semiconductor manufacturing globally.

Such an assault would trigger international sanctions, however, considering China's economic position, this is unlikely to deter a fiercely resolute China.

Economically, sanctions would disrupt global supply chains, particularly in the technology and manufacturing sectors, leading to significant market instability. The other scenario is that an assault would lead to a conflict that would not only destabilize the Indo-Pacific region but could challenge the global order as we know it.

There are Consequences of Global War

While the modern world has already experienced two World Wars, the threat of World War 3 is made even more concerning due to modern technology. Nuclear weapons, advances in chemical and biological warfare, and the threat of cyber-attacks and sabotage make the last two great wars seem like child's play.

Physical confrontation on US soil is unlikely at this point (the US often prefers proxy wars), but if we are to learn lessons from Pearl Harbour and September 11, 2001, one should "never say never."

It is, however, expected that cyber-attacks will sabotage infrastructure leading to blackouts, breakdown in communication channels, and the disruption of basic services like clean drinking water.

Fortunately, there are many safety and survival solutions on the market for such scenarios. Learning how to protect yourself, and investing in protective gear, is one of the best things that you can do. For instance, the [4]CM-7M Gas Mask from MIRA Safety is one of the most versatile masks designed with tactical capability in mind, and offers maximum protection against harmful gases.

Should tensions escalate to on-the-ground conflict in the US as they have in Israel and Gaza and Ukraine and Russia, protective body armor such as the[5] MT-LVL4 Body Armor offers superior protection against everything from small handguns to battle rifles and common platform rifles.

Additionally, the use of nerve agents, exposure to radiation and nuclear emergencies are all potential evils that we could face. Also, keeping safety items, such as [6] CWD-3 Nerve Agent Detection Strips,[7] MIRA Safety Potassium Iodide Tablets for radiation exposure, and[8] Thyrosafe Potassium Iodide for nuclear emergencies are all essentials that you should have at home.

Final Thoughts on the Possibility of World War 3

It would be a grave miscalculation to say that we are categorically entering into a Third World War. Russia's invasion of Ukraine, Iran's attacks on Israel, and China's posturing in the South China Sea are all separate conflict zones that are only marginally connected.

Each key player knows the importance of economic development in a time of global economic turmoil. While Russia remains an aggressor in Eastern Europe, Putin has said that there is no alliance with China when it comes to the idea that we are heading for world war.

That being said, coolerheads need to prevail if we are to avoid nuclear war. Much also depends on the next US Presidential Election. Despite the end of the cold war, it seems that we are again heading towards a clash that may see the US pitted against Russia if things don't change.

One thing is certain, we are in tumultuous times and it will take effective diplomatic conversation and strong international cooperation to steer us away from a path that may lead to another global conflict.

Frequently Asked Questions

What is the world doing to prevent World War III?

The powerful G7 Club of wealthy nations, Australia, and the EU have implemented heavy economic sanctions to stem the Russian advancement. In the South China Sea, both the US and China are hesitant to disrupt the $5.3 trillion trade shipping routes in the region. Both nations are proactively participating in multilateral forums and discussions to avoid conflict.

Concerning the Israel conflict in Gaza, Qatar and Egypt are mediating peace talks while the UN and other humanitarian organizations are actively working on both sides to de-escalate tensions in the area.

Would nuclear weapons be used in World War III?

Yes, nuclear weapons would be used in World War III. While treaties exist outlawing the use of nuclear weapons, it is unlikely that countries such as Russia, China, and Iran will abide by these treaties. Russia, China, and Iran are some of the most nuclear weaponized countries. In the last few years, nuclear armament has only increased in each of the three countries.

How would World War III affect the global economy?

World War III would decimate the global economy. It is likely that digital infrastructure would collapse, international trade would all but cease to exist and oil and gas prices would skyrocket. Debt accumulation, unemployment, and rampant inflation would add significant additional challenges to the global economic fallout.

A full-scale world war would smash trade and consumption, blow the roof off oil prices, and, overall, be a terrible outcome for the global economy.

1.7.17 Kamala Harris Changes Course on Fracking (2024-07-28 22:12)

Former Vice President Kamala Harris changed her course on a significant issue that she touted in 2019.

On Friday, Harris said that she no longer supports a ban on fracking—a stark difference from her stance in 2019, when she told CNN, “There’s no question I’m in favor of banning fracking.”

“And starting with what we can do on Day One around public lands, right?” Harris said. “And then there has to be legislation, but, yes, and this is something I’ve taken on in California. I have a history of working on this issue and to your point, we have to just acknowledge that the residual impact of fracking is enormous in terms of the health and safety of communities.”

However, she changed her view on the matter after joining the Biden Administration, which supported a ban on fracking.

Fracking has been a significant issue for presidential candidates, especially in Pennsylvania—a critical swing state and a major gas producer.

Former President Donald Trump criticized Harris, declaring her to be the “ultra-liberal driving force behind every single Biden catastrophe.”

"She is a radical left lunatic who will destroy our country if she ever gets the chance to get into office," Trump said. "She wants no fracking. You're going to be paying a lot of money. You're going to be paying so much. You're going to say, 'Bring back Trump.'"

Pushing back on Trump's comments, the vice president's campaign claimed that the "Biden-Harris Administration passed the largest ever climate change legislation and under their leadership, America now has the highest ever domestic energy production."

However, then-Senator Harris endorsed the Green New Deal, including a fracking ban.

"Trump's false claims about fracking bans are an obvious attempt to distract from his own plans to enrich oil and gas executives at the expense of the middle class," the Harris campaign said, adding that Trump's "Administration created 300,000 energy jobs, while Trump lost nearly a million."

1.7.18 Georgia Swing Voter Had Some Damning Remarks About Kamala Harris' Character (2024-07-28 22:13)

I'll have more on this later, but some swing voters have been saying the same thing about Kamala Harris: Can we trust her? In Georgia and Wisconsin, voters are wondering what else she is hiding and what she will hide should she win the upcoming election. This Georgia voter is concerned that Harris might have been part of a White House cover-up.

"I worry about [Kamala's] character. We had somebody that was the right hand of somebody who was not healthy — who was silent about it! And that concerns me," said Margarita Eberline on CNN. She's a Hispanic woman who downplayed Harris' ascension, adding that this doesn't mean automatic support from her.

GEORGIA SWING VOTER: "I worry about [Kamala's] character. We had somebody that was the right hand of somebody who was not healthy — who was silent about it! And that concerns me." [1]pic.twitter.com/acp87hGgcN— RNC Research (@RNCResearch) [2]July 27, 2024

With Joe Biden exiting the 2024 race, voters aren't stupid even if the White House denies it: the president dropped out due to health issues. Everyone saw it when Biden got demolished by Donald Trump in the June 27 debate, an election-killing event that sparked panic and rebellion among the rank-and-file.

Hill Democrats, donors, and even media members pressured Biden to drop out after that disastrous debate performance. On July 21, they succeeded in toppling the president. Yet, the fallout was about how much of a cover-up there was. The president didn't just suffer a mental breakdown in the weeks before this debate. It's been an ongoing occurrence for months. The media got raked over the coals for their less-than-aggressive attitude in covering this topic out of fear of losing access or hurting a Democratic president—all of which was inexcusable. Kamala Harris was with Biden daily reportedly and had to have seen the mental decline. Other officials did, including those of our European allies.

The Biden camp pathetically tried to pass off Biden's 59-minute pre-scripted presser after the NATO Summit in Washington as proof of his fitness for office. Press conferences like this are expected of the president, and he or she is expected to hold multiple ones during their time in office.

Harris' record is also a landmine field of political opportunism and outright bad policy. There is nothing this woman won't say to gain more power. She also co-owns the failed Biden agenda, and her roadmap for the country is left-wing extremism run amok.

1.7.19 Potential Harris VP Pick Has Ties to Chinese Spy Balloon Company (2024-07-28 22:14)

A potential pick for Kamala Harris' vice president has ties to a Chinese spy balloon company, putting him in the spotlight for possible ties to the Communist Party.

Democrat Sen. Mark Kelly (D-AZ) co-founded a company that manufactures spy balloons, much like the one that was [1]floating across the United States last year.

Kelly's Tucson-based company, World View, was funded by Tencent, a venture capitalist closely linked to the CCP. World View specializes in space tourism using spy balloons, which received funding from Tencent in 2013 and again in 2016.

In 2020, World View president and CEO Ryan Hartman told The Arizona Republic that the venture capitalist has "zero access, zero input, and zero control" over the company.

Tencent and World View reportedly have an agreement with the U.S. government to provide aerial surveillance using their balloons.

According to Vision Times, Tencent established its first CCP branch five years after the company was founded. It holds "Party Member Day every year when CCP members working at the company's offices "celebrate the achievements of the communist party."

Taiwan News claims that Tencent follows a "party members first" rule when hiring new employees.

The CCP-based company collects data from its mobile app, WeChat, a well-known social media platform in China. WeChat is used as a surveillance tool for the Chinese government, which regulates Tencent and reportedly suppresses opposing views.

However, the current leadership of Tencent said it was a mistake for the company to accept a Chinese investment.

"When new leadership arrived in 2019 and learned of that investment, they swiftly moved to ensure World View was protected from any and all involvement from representatives of Chinese investors," a spokesperson said.

In 2019, Kelly left the company to focus on his political career. The spokesperson said that any leftover financial interest the senator has in the company is securely stored away in a blind trust. They also confirmed that Kelly surrendered his assets and control of the company before leaving.

1.7.20 Coup upon coup upon coup (2024-07-28 22:15)

In March 2020, all the major Democratic primary candidates abruptly, mysteriously, and in near unison withdrew from the presidential race, ceding the nomination to Joe Biden.

Yet Biden had lost the first three races in Iowa, New Hampshire and Nevada — and won his first victory only in South Carolina.

Suddenly, on the eve of the Super Tuesday mega-primaries, the candidacies of front-runner Bernie Sanders, Pete Buttigieg, Elizabeth Warren and others simply evaporated.

The fear of a socialist, front-runner Sanders, winning the nomination — and thus an inevitable landslide loss to incumbent Donald Trump in the general election — had prompted the donor class and shadowy political insiders to act.

And they did so by choosing a perceived moderate, old Joe Biden from Scranton. That required the coerced departures of all his far-left rivals, who had hitherto performed much better than Biden in the primaries.

Now front-runner Biden still displayed obvious symptoms of serious cognitive decline that had seemed only to mount through the 2020 campaign. And his dementia continued to accelerate during his first three years as president.

Biden had deceitfully promised to conduct a healing campaign and a unifying presidency. But once in the White House, his extreme agendas proved the most divisive and far-left in nearly a century.

Rumors of that prior March 2020 Faustian bargain emerged. The Bidens got to serve as useful moderate veneers. So they enjoyed the ceremonial functions of the presidency while outsourcing the real operations to former Obama officials, consultants and advisors.

Indeed, Obama did not, as most ex-presidents do, exit Washington upon leaving the White House. Instead, he bought a mansion and stayed close by.

Democrats demonized anyone critical of Biden's obvious mental decline. Their smearing crested during Biden's now-aborted 2024 re-election bid, even as Biden could no longer display even a veneer of mental and physical engagement.

Polls revealed an impending Trump landslide victory in November — and a massive Democratic loss of Congress.

So suddenly on July 21 — just days left before state ballots were formalized with the names of the parties' official nominees, and on the eve of the Democratic convention — party bosses, mega-donors and Obama puppeteers went into action for yet a third time.

They reportedly threatened candidate Biden with a complete loss of any further campaign funding and raised the specter of invoking the 25th Amendment to end his presidency — should he not suddenly withdraw from the race and endorse Vice President Kamala Harris as his surrogate on the ticket.

In one moment, the choices of nearly 15 million Biden primary voters were vitiated. No delegates were consulted. No other alternative Democrat candidates were even considered.

Biden was dethroned; Harris was coronated — without much public input or even knowledge of how or why. Democrat grandees stopped smearing Biden's conservative critics, who had worried over his dementia. Instead, they now trumped opposition criticism of Biden's decline.

Yet Biden most certainly did not resign his presidency. Instead, he promised to serve out his remaining six months in office.

So Democrat insiders not only removed their leading candidate, who for the prior six months had won all the 2024 primaries and almost all the delegates, but insisted that Biden keep Democrats and himself in power — but only if he agreed to quit the race.

In sum, at the eleventh hour of a two-year re-election effort, a cabal arbitrarily decided Joe Biden might well lose the Democrats the White House and the Congress. So they reversed course, now claiming his dementia was so acute as to destroy their November prospects. But mysteriously, his decline was not severe enough to imperil the American people, whom Biden must continue to lead until Jan. 20.

Furthermore, the bosses' replacement choice, Harris, had entered no primary. She never won a single delegate. Harris also never captured a single delegate in her first and only presidential run back in 2020. She then dropped out of the race even before the first Iowa and New Hampshire balloting.

We have now witnessed three left-wing veritable coups.

In 2020, covert actors decided to ossify the Democratic primary races. Next, they conferred the nomination on a clearly cognitively challenged Joe Biden. He was now tasked with serving as a useful moderate vessel for a virtual, even more radical, Obama third term.

The same operators next assumed virtual control of Biden's presidential agenda, given his accelerating cognitive decline. When that charade could no longer be sustained, for a third time, they circumvented the normal transparent democratic process.

So, they removed the once useful but now a liability Biden — while insisting that he was still fit enough to keep the left in power — until the anticipated Harris victory in November.

And all of this was the shadow work of those who sanctimoniously lectured America that “democracy dies in darkness.”

1.7.21 Local SWAT Team Dropped a Damning Update on the Trump Assassination Attempt (2024-07-28 22:16)

The official House investigation into the assassination attempt against Donald Trump hasn't even started, and we can tell there's going to be damning and inexcusable flaws in the findings. The first one is obvious: a rooftop with a clear vantage point to the stage during Trump's rally in Butler, Pennsylvania, was left unprotected, allowing shooter Thomas Matthew Crooks to shoot the former president—a fatal headshot missed the former president by millimeters.

There's been a trove of updates, all of them bad, in the wake of this assassination attempt. The latest from ABC News points to a local SWAT team that claims there was zero contact between them and the Secret Service. It was only until after the shots were fired and the mayhem assessed. This team reportedly took photos, had a description, and did everything possible to alert support teams that a suspicious person was nearby. None of this information made it to the officials running point on security that day. The team also took responsibility for failing to protect the former president, which also led to three others being shot, one fatally. Firefighter Corey Comperatore died shielding his family from the gunfire:

ABC NEWS: Trump rally SWAT team "found that there were no patrol officers around the area to try and intercept the suspect."

What is going on?![1]pic.twitter.com/XOCUeIrEkO— Breaking911 (@Breaking911) [2]July 28, 2024

Another alarming security failure.

A local SWAT officer in PA told ABC his team had no contact with Secret Service at the rally until after the assassination attempt on President Trump.

Our House Task Force will find the answers the American people deserve. [3]pic.twitter.com/RojvR4YfDb— Speaker Mike Johnson (@SpeakerJohnson) [4]July 28, 2024

The Secret Service is under siege for its incompetence. Why were communications such a shamble on this day? Who ran point? Has anyone been disciplined for this attempt on Trump's life? It's a circus, and while Kimberley Cheatle resigned as director, albeit not willingly, some other heads need to roll. The agency also got busted for lying: they finally admitted that requests for additional security for Trump were denied.

The rooftop will remain a focal point, however, especially since there were police officers in the adjacent building. The agency knew there was a threat against the former president ten minutes before the rally began but allowed Trump to take the stage anyway. Secret Service snipers did have eyes on Crooks two minutes before he opened fire. The whole thing was a total disaster, and the lack of answers to simple questions about the obvious flaws only fueled conspiracy talks.

1.8.1 My Retail history (2024-08-01 09:34)

When I was 10 years old, I went into Mall of America a lot and that was Barnes and Noble, Funcoland, The Gap, Camp Snoopy mainly as elementary school field trips, and trips with David Hartmon, my cousin. So I found some old Widows 95 and MS-DOS disks at Walmart and Target. I used to buy Kings Quest, Simcity 2000, Monkey Island. I rented some VHS from Mr. Movies in Hudson, Wisconsin and the local VHS renter in Roberts, Wisconsin. I had Pizza at Carbones pizza in Hudson. I used to go to the Toys R US in Woodbury. I biked around the block to the Holiday gas station (before Circle K) that was my first job. I always cooked food at home from County Market grocery store.

Then I found some Super Nintendo games at Toys R US. I was into Super Nintendo, Sega Saturn, Dreamcast, Sega Genesis. I also went to Funcoland and just bought lots of Japanese videogames, because thats what was displayed on the shelves and on posters or advertisements. I bought a lot of used games, because it was cheaper. I remember Nintendo 64 games costing $70 at Walmart. I used to eat at Applebees.

Then Mr. Movies closed in the 2000s. I didn't go to Blockbuster. Later, it had DVDs, but I used to go there for VHS more. I bought all the DVDs at Best Buy, Walmart and Target. I didn't ask the customer service. The insane thing is the manager of Best buy wanted to look at my stuff. Marxist-Leninist managers look at our stuff. The managers pick on us people with receipts and bags, not the gangster. Anyhow, Best Buy and Walmart is corrupted as all fuck now. Artificial intelligence scanning faces.

I used to go to the Gamestop and toyriffic and give them JPEG dvds, but nobody gave a damn about me and my hobbies. I had my cousin penny since 2014, but no girlfriends for 30 years. I was going to stores alone for 38 years. No phone numbers.

I used the SEO on websites, because nobody gave a damn about me for 10 years into adult hood, because of course they didn't. At one time, I had X-Fire messenger before it went bankrupt for online multiplayer and chat. X-Fire messenger went bankrupt, and then there was outrageous fees attached to online multiplayer since 2012. I used it for Diablo 2, Guild Wars, Dungeon Siege, Neverwinter Nights, Unreal Tournament, Return to Castle Wolfenstein, Quake 3 Arena, Far Cry, Unreal Tournament 2004,

So in 2024, there was no girlfriends for 40 years and the stores cameras scan your face and its like communism when you're trying to meet people (you can't) This Wisconsin and Minnesota sucks for people disabled. Every store has a security camera with audio. I was at the dork den, and there was no fucking way I could get friends there. No fucking way. The store was a money grab 100 % probably for its entire existence. Same with the comic book store, had security camera with audio, money grab, no friends, no snapchat. No instagram. Insane social polices. And the Democratic Party wants to be voted in as a Marxist-Leninist party so I have no fucking life what so ever or what's left of my life. Motherfucker politicians..

1.8.2 Harris Is Recycling the 2020 Democrat Campaign (2024-08-02 22:02)

Joe Biden won the 2020 presidential election through a successful tripartite subterfuge.

One, Biden never really campaigned. His handlers rightly assumed that the more the public and the media saw a debilitated Biden in the flesh, the less they would want him as president.

So, the Biden campaign used the COVID lockdowns to ensure that Biden stayed safe in his basement office.

Biden strategically distanced himself from disinterested journalists, using COVID as an excuse to avoid public appearances. It allowed him to run a 19th-century, front-porch sort of virtual campaign.

In his place, the liberal media, Democratic grandees, and the billionaire donor class served as Biden campaign surrogates—vastly outspending, out-advertising, and out-lawyering the underfunded incumbent Trump.

Second, again using COVID as a pretext, well-funded Democratic legal teams altered the voting laws during early 2020 in key swing states to encourage non-Election Day voting.

For the first time, majorities in many key states voted by mail-in/absentee ballots and during weeks of early voting.

We now know why the left was so motivated to push through radical balloting changes that were otherwise impossible prior to 2020 but have been mostly institutionalized since.

Non-Election Day ballots outnumbered Election Day ballots. They were far more likely to be cast by Democrats. And as the number of such ballots soared, the traditional rejection rate of non-Election Day ballots prior to 2020 fell—even as registrars were swamped.

Once obscure terms such as ballot harvesting and ballot curing became mainstream.

Ballot deadlines were extended. There was lax enforcement of incorrect ballot names and addresses or auditing the registrars' rolls.

Rich liberal entities, such as Mark Zuckerberg and his $419 million in 2020 cash infusions, sought to absorb the work of state registrars. His aim was to “improve” voter turnout through partisan “assistance”—from funding drop boxes to monitoring non-Election Day ballots.

Three, in 2020, the enervated left-wing Joe Biden was reconstructed as a vigorous moderate “ol’ Joe Biden from Scranton.”

Biden’s stealth script was to provide a temperate veneer to the new hard-left Democratic Party.

His 2020 campaign claimed Joe was for “unity” and “moderation”—even as it camouflaged an otherwise extremist neo-socialist agenda to be implemented after November.

Can the Democrats repeat that winning formula for Kamala Harris in 2024?

Only partly.

Even without the excuse of COVID, Harris certainly will not agree to unscripted, ad hoc interviews with non-partisan journalists.

She is unable to speak extemporaneously and off the teleprompter without appearing childish.

Her handlers will ensure few opportunities for Harris to burst into cackling or to stream her puerile musings about yellow school buses or kindergarten geography.

Yet the third element of Biden's 2020 strategy will be difficult to replicate.

The Bay Area leftist Harris—unlike the Biden of the 1980s and 1990s—never had any reputation, feigned or not, of being a “centrist” or “moderate.”

Her entire political career was one of pandering either to leftist Democrat voters in 2020 or ultra-liberal Californians in her statewide races.

She is on record of opposing fracking and off-shore drilling, private health care, border enforcement, and the traditional close U.S. relationship with Israel.

She proudly promoted the radical new green deal, defunding police forces, mandatory buy-backs of private guns, and mass amnesties.

She gratuitously championed the swindler Jussie Smollett and his fraudulent claims of being a victim of systemic racism.

During the horrendous riots of 2020, she sought to raise bail for violent rioters and looters that had been arrested.

On CBS, she egged on the 2020 protests that had already turned violent with deaths, law enforcement injuries, arson, and mass looting—despite the pathetic efforts of partisan fact-checkers to claim otherwise.

Harris gushed of the turmoil: “They’re not going to stop. This is a movement, I’m telling you. They’re not going to stop, and everyone beware, because they’re not going to stop. They’re not going to stop before Election Day in November and they’re not going to stop after Election Day. They’re not going to let up and they should not, and we should not.”

What did Harris mean by “beware?”

Was the BLM- and Antifa-led mayhem really just a “movement?”

Why boast that the turmoil might be endless—both before and after Election Day?

And why connect the massive disruptions to the upcoming Election Day—unless she believes that unrest in the streets could weaken the election chances of the then incumbent president?

In sum, Harris, like Biden, is certainly capable of running a remote stealth campaign.

She will surely take advantage of 2020's revolution in non-Election Day balloting.

Yet, unlike Biden, Harris has no credible moderate veneer—only an unapologetic radical past and a corpus of hard-left boasts.

So, 2024 will hinge on whether Republicans will expose Harris's lifelong, hard-left ideology and extremist agendas.

She is a poor substitute for the successful bait-and-switch 2020 con of "ol' Joe Biden," the fake moderate "uniter" from Scranton.

1.8.3 JD Vances Destroys Liberal Reporter Who Tried to Race-Bait About Kamala Harris (2024-08-02 22:14)

Vice Presidential candidate Sen. JD Vance (R-OH) obliterated a CNN reporter who tried to race-bait Vice President Kamala Harris as critics point out she isn't entirely black despite campaigning hard on the claim.

During a visit to the southern border to demonstrate Harris' border czar failures, CNN correspondent Steve Contorno grilled Vance on whether former President Donald Trump's remarks questioning Harris' race make him hesitate to run as the Republican's VP pick.

"He [Trump] said that Vice President Harris is 'all the sudden Black.' As a father of three biracial children, do those comments give you pause at all?" Contorno asked.

Vance shot back, calling Harris a “chameleon” with a “fake southern accent.”

“They don’t give me pause at all,” Vance pushed back. “Look, all he said is that Kamala Harris is a chameleon. She goes to Georgia two days ago, she was raised in Canada, she puts on a fake southern accent. She is everything to everybody and she pretends to be somebody different depending on which audience she is in front of.”

Earlier this week, Trump was hit with criticism after he said that Harris had become a black person despite identifying as an Indian for the past years at the National Association of Black Journalists (NABJ).

Vance took the opportunity to point out several instances where Harris has flip-flopped on hard-hitting issues.

“I think it’s totally reasonable for the [former] president to call that out,” Vance said. “And that’s all he did. Look, she’s running as a tough-on-crime prosecutor even though she has implemented open border policies. She’s saying that she wants to support the police, yet she wanted to defund the police just three years ago. It’s totally reasonable to call out the fact that she pretends to be somebody different depending on the audience she’s talking to.”

JD Vance obliterates CNN reporter trying to race-bait about Kamala Harris:
[1]pic.twitter.com/HTHorM4zrj— End Wokeness (@EndWokeness) [2]August 1, 2024

Vance shares three biracial children with his wife, Usha Vance, who is the daughter of Indian immigrants.

The Ohio senator was in Arizona to assess the southern border that has been overrun by illegal immigrants thanks to President Joe Biden and Harris’ reckless policies.

Vance stood in front of an uncompleted border wall, which was halted on day one of Biden’s Administration through an executive border.

“We see the border wall sitting here, waiting to be completed behind us,” he said, calling for the reinstatement of the Trump-era Remain in Mexico policy and an end to the “catch and release” of illegal aliens.

1.8.4 Tim Walz Are Americans being Sovietized? Yes. He’s the Evil Man (2024-08-06 14:44)

https://upload.wikimedia.org/wikipedia/en/d/d6/Statue_of_Lenin_Seattle.jpg

What ultimately ended the nihilist Soviet system?

Was it not that Russians finally tired of the Kremlin’s lies and hypocrisies that permeated every facet of their falsified lives?

Here are 10 symptoms of Sovietism. Ask yourself whether we are headed down this same road to perdition.

1. There was no escape from ideological indoctrination — anywhere. A job in the bureaucracy or a military assignment hinged not so much on merit, expertise or past achievement. What mattered was loud enthusiasm for the Soviet system.

Wokeness is becoming our new Soviet-like state religion. Careerists assert that America was always and still is a systemically racist country, without ever producing proof or a sustained argument.

2. The Soviets fused their press with the government. Pravda, or “Truth,” was the official megaphone of state-sanctioned lies. Journalists simply regurgitated the talking points of their Communist Party partners.

In 2017, a Harvard study found that over 90 % of the major TV news networks’ coverage of the Trump administration’s first 100 days was negative.

3. The Soviet surveillance state enlisted apparatchiks and lackeys to ferret out ideological dissidents.

Recently, we learned that the Department of Defense is reviewing its rosters to spot extremist sentiments. The U.S. Postal Service recently admitted it uses tracking programs to monitor the social media postings of Americans.

CNN recently alleged that the Biden administration’s Department of Homeland Security is considering partnering with private surveillance firms to get around government prohibitions on scrutinizing Americans’ online activity.

4. The Soviet educational system sought not to enlighten but to indoctrinate young minds in proper government-approved thought.

Currently, cash-strapped universities nationwide are hiring thousands of diversity, equity and inclusion staffers and administrators. Their chief task is to scan the admissions, hiring, curriculum and administration at universities. Like good commissars, our diversity czars oversee compliance with the official narrative that a flawed America must confess, apologize for and renounce its evil foundations.

5. The Soviet Union was run by a pampered elite, exempt from the ramifications of their own radical ideologies.

Now, woke Silicon Valley billionaires talk socialistically but live royally. Coke and Delta Airlines CEOs who hector Americans about their illiberality make millions of dollars a year.

What unites current woke activists such as Oprah Winfrey, LeBron James Mark Zuckerberg and the Obamas are their huge estates and their multimillion-dollar wealth. Just as the select few of the old Soviet nomenklatura had their Black Sea dachas, America's loudest top-down revolutionaries prefer living in Martha's Vineyard, Beverly Hills, Montecito and Malibu.

6. The Soviets mastered Trotskyization, or the rewriting and airbrushing away of history to fabricate present reality.

Are Americans any different when they indulge in a frenzy of name-changing, statue-toppling, monument-defacing, book-banning and cancel-culturing?

7. The Soviets created a climate of fear and rewarded stool pigeons for rooting out all potential enemies of the people.

Since when did Americans encourage co-workers to turn in others for an ill-considered word in a private conversation? Why do thousands now scour the internet to find any past incorrect expression of a rival? Why are there now new thought criminals supposedly guilty of climate racism, immigration racism or vaccination racism?

8. Soviet prosecutors and courts were weaponized according to ideology.

In America, where and for what reason you riot determines whether you face any legal consequences. Politically correct sanctuary cities defy the law with impunity. Jury members are terrified of being doxxed and hunted down for an incorrect verdict. The CIA and FBI are becoming as ideological as the old KGB.

9. The Soviets doled out prizes on the basis of correct Soviet thought.

In modern America, the Pulitzer Prizes and the Emmys, Grammys, Tonys and Oscars don't necessarily reflect the year's best work, but often the most politically correct work from the most woke.

10. The Soviets offered no apologies for extinguishing freedom. Instead, they boasted that they were advocates for equity, champions of the underclass, enemies of privilege — and therefore could terminate anyone or anything they pleased.

Our wokists are similarly defending their thought-control efforts, forced re-education sessions, scripted confessionals, mandatory apologies and cancel culture on the pretense that we need long-overdue “fundamental transformation.”

So if they destroy people in the name of equity, their nihilism is justified.

1.8.5 The Harris Flop Would Be Scarier Than Her Flip (2024-08-15 14:36)

President [1]Joe Biden won in 2020 on the premise that until the November election, he would pose as good ol’ Joe from Scranton and not scare voters.

So Biden talked about “unity” and “competency.” He erased his prior wild primary pandering to left-wing voters about shutting down fracking and opening the border.

But as soon as he was elected in 2020, Biden became the leftist veneer for a hyper-radical Obama third term.

Fooled and naive voters were shocked that their supposedly moderate candidate turned into a veritable neo-socialist president.

In general, the left acknowledges that its spread-the-wealth, high taxes, big government, open borders, soft on crime, and woke DEI agendas don’t appeal to 51 % of the people.

That reality requires disinformation for leftist policies to be implemented.

No one voted for the Biden-Harris ticket to borrow trillions sparking hyperinflation, to wage war on fossil fuels, to go woke, to welcome in 10 million [2]illegal aliens, to abandon $50 billion in weapons to the terrorist Taliban, and to find America facing existential wars in Ukraine and the Middle East and soon perhaps over Taiwan.

But getting leftists elected requires fooling the American people into thinking their “moderate” campaign veneers will continue into their presidencies—even though they never do.

So, for now, [3]Harris and her new vice-presidential candidate, Tim Walz, will smother all their cherished left-wing positions—at least until November.

The two left-wing chameleons will assume the temporary identities and policies of “moderates.” That is a de facto admission that they know that the public does not want any of their true agendas.

The temporary metamorphosis means that the leftist nominees superficially feign agreement with what most Americans support—energy independence, low taxes, limited government, strong defense, deterrent foreign policy, secure borders, legal-only immigration, and assimilation rather than woke/DEI tribalism.

Kamala Harris and Tim Walz are the most brazen and extreme examples of left-wing flip-flopers in memory.

But for both, the cartwheeling will still be difficult.

Harris is utterly incapable of articulating a coherent thought without a teleprompter or a staged interview. Walz is a buffoon who, in his first speech as the nominee, screamed out the “couch” lie about JD Vance and then stupidly bragged of his falsehood.

Harris, until recently, was proud that she had been one of the most radical California politicians in memory. She ran such a hard-left, polarizing presidential bid against Biden in 2020 that she could not capture even a single [4]Democrat delegate.

Now she has selected as her vice president pick the most left-wing governor in the nation. Walz, during the long 2020 summer of rioting, allowed Black Lives Matter and Antifa to run amuck in Minnesota while his new partner Harris raised bail for those jailed for violence.

Walz, like Harris, has done his best to stop pipelines and curtail fossil fuels.

He once boasted that “Democrats go into depression” when they see electoral maps shaded in red, “but it’s mostly rocks and cows that are in that red area.”

Apparently, his advice for Democrats was just to win urban areas and not sweat alienating greater rural Minnesota regions where fewer voters live—a blueprint for their 2024 campaign.

That snark was an expansion of Barack Obama's dismissal of rural Pennsylvanians as "clingers" and Hillary Clinton's trashing of the rural working class as "deplorables."

By selecting the hard-left Walz, Harris reminds the nation who runs the Democratic Party. It is preparing for a hard-left neo-socialist administration—while it seeks to deceive the public for the next 90 days that Harris-Walz are temporary moderates.

Like the cognitively challenged Joe Biden in 2020, word-salad Harris won't be let out to campaign much by her wary handlers.

Instead, she will out-raise Trump, count on non-Election Day balloting, pose as a centrist, and let her surrogates, like the blowhard Walz, brand Trump as a criminal extremist.

But if the current initial Harris-Walz flipping is embarrassing, their eventual post-November flopping back to the left will be shameless—and dangerous for the nation.

In 2025, under a Harris-Walz presidency, borders would again magically evaporate. Millions more illegal aliens would regroup and flood into the U.S.

Printing more trillions of dollars would spike more hyperinflation. Cutting defense would further encourage even more wars in Asia, Europe, and the Middle East.

More woke and[5] DEI mandates would ensure more tribal disunity.

Harris-Walz would try fulfilling earlier promises to ban fracking and horizontal drilling, render the U.S. vulnerable to hostile foreign oil producers, distance the U.S. from Israel, and out-appease Biden's coddling of Iran.

They would continue the crazy left-wing war on the Supreme Court and implement Biden's plan to neuter it.

But for now?

The Harris-Walz message is clear: "In order to run your country for the next four years, we must lie and deceive you for the next three months."

1.8.6 Is Subway Getting Ready to Go Under? (2024-08-15 14:50)

Something is up at Subway, referring to the sandwich shop franchise and not your local public transportation system. Whatever is going on certainly doesn't sound good at first glance. The company sent out a notice last week announcing a hastily called online conference with all of its 19,000 North American affiliates. The meeting [1] was called with almost no notice. The company isn't referring to it as "an emergency meeting," but that's what many of the franchise owners are calling it. The stated purpose of the meeting is to "discuss plans to improve traffic and win back market share." The word "back" in that description is probably somewhat revealing. Many franchise owners are reporting significant declines in both sales and profits amid a flurry of "crazy coupons" that are making the rounds. (NY Post)

Subway has called a hasty meeting with franchisees of its 19,000 North American sandwich shops as they grapple with faltering sales and profits, The Post has learned.

The fast food giant — which [2] sold itself in April for $9 billion to Roark Capital, owner of Dunkin', Arby's and Cheesecake Factory — told franchisees it will reveal plans to improve traffic and win back market share at the Thursday meeting.

"This conference is essential," Subway said in the invite. "Join us ... to discuss the state of the industry and an update on our business."

The confab — which one franchisee called an "emergency" meeting, noting that the invite was only mailed out last week — will include a recap of promotional offers that are currently being tested in restaurants.

This looks like more than some sort of temporary blip in sales. One franchisee with 20 stores told reporters that he recorded profits between five and ten percent lower than the same period last year. A regional manager for an area with roughly 1,000 stores said that during the period of June 25 and July 16 (covering the crucial 4th of July holiday week) sales fell by nearly nine percent as compared to the same time in 2023. Others reported similar results.

Also at issue is the fact that the home office has already been sending out promotional offers around the country, including the "crazy coupons" mentioned above. Customers are showing up with coupons promising $6.99 for any sub when the same sandwich sells for $11.00 on the menu. Another offers three subs for $17.99. The franchisees never signed on for this and insist that they can barely turn a profit at their normal prices.

Part of the issue being observed may indeed be a lack of communication between the national chain and the individual franchises. They are putting the individual stores in an untenable position. But there is clearly more going on than just that. While Subway wants to talk about "winning back market share," the problem isn't that their stores are being massively outsold by local competitors. All of these eateries are feeling the downstream effects of Bidenomics (soon to be Kamalanomics if we manage to blow this election) and the effects of persistent inflation amidst stagnant wage growth.

Working-class people are less and less able to afford the "luxury" of going out and ordering lunch or dinner at a place like Subway. So when they see an amazing coupon showing up slashing the price of a meal in half, of course they're going to jump at the chance. Traditionally, the concept of offering discount coupons by mail was intended to draw new customers to the shop. If they tried the product and enjoyed it, the hope was that they would continue patronizing the eatery at regular prices. But if nearly everyone starts showing up with these coupons and the only time they show up is when they have one, profits quickly vanish.

That's what appears to be happening to Subway. It's a respectable chain and I've enjoyed their offerings many times myself. But nobody is skating away from the current economic disaster without taking some damage. This clearly applies to fast-food franchises ever bit as much as blue-collar families. Some big changes in government policy will be required to right this ship.

1.8.7 Georgia Grants Officials Special Powers to Investigate Election Results (2024-08-15 14:51)

When the ballots are counted in Georgia this year, officials will have new powers regarding verifying the tabulated results. The media fears it could delay or “derail” certification efforts since “reasonable inquiry” isn’t defined in the new ordinance. Trump has described the members of the Georgia Election Board, which is Republican-controlled, as “pit bulls for honesty” (via [1]NBC News):

Advertisement

Georgia gave local officials significant new powers over the certification of elections results Tuesday, a move that could delay or derail future postelection certification processes.

In a 3-2 vote, the Republican-controlled State Election Board voted to define the certification of election results as “attest[ing], after reasonable inquiry, that the tabulation and canvassing of the election are complete and accurate and that the election results are a true and accurate accounting of all votes cast in that election.”

The rule does not define “reasonable inquiry,” which means that different counties will most likely interpret the rule differently. It’s expected to allow county election boards to request information and potentially delay or block certification of results if they see fit. And the resulting delays could block the timely reporting of election results to state and federal authorities.

Local certification of election results was once a routine ministerial process. But after the 2020 vote, President Donald Trump and his allies sought to block the process, arguing that officials have discretion to delay or block certification and hoping to use state and county officials to overturn the results.

With this framing, you can see the foundations of 'election denialism' being formed. Yet, Republican Gov. Brian Kemp has decided to brush off Trump's mean tweet about him a few days ago, vowing to use the full force of his political machine to ensure Trump takes the state this time. We must hope that nothing happens on election night. Forget about potential Democratic Party shenanigans; [2]hackers[3] found vulnerabilities in our system that can't be fixed until after the election. I'm sure this will lead to liberals forming conspiracy theories and baseless accusations of fraud against the GOP, though we're not the ones who allegedly engaged in funny business last time.

Reactions to this news haven't sent liberals into full meltdown mode yet, but if something happens, you bet the rancor will be deafening.

1.8.8 Is This Harris' Most Shameless Flip-Flop Yet? (2024-08-15 14:54)

While she continues to avoid the media, whose "journalists" are happily debasing themselves with glowing profiles and water carrying, Vice President Kamala Harris is reportedly planning to break away from her role in the Biden administration.

Ahead of the Democratic National Convention in Chicago next week, Harris is trying to rebrand and strike out on her own by scrubbing her far left record.

□□ Harris won't say it this bluntly in public, but her advisers do so privately: She wants to break with Biden. First up: rising prices. This is part of a highly choreographed effort to redefine herself. [1]<https://t.co/RRJBz3zvso>— Jim VandeHei (@JimVandeHei) [2]August 14, 2024

But there's one major problem. Harris was the defining vote on the "Inflation Reduction Act," which contrary to the name of the legislation, fueled inflation and made costs skyrocket on items Americans need to survive.

On this day, 2 years ago, Kamala Harris cast a tie-breaking vote in the senate for the "inflation reduction act".

We are now over $35 Trillion in debt and inflation has reached all time highs. [3]pic.twitter.com/XaBUdb3vsR— Rep. Wesley Hunt Press Office (@RepWPH) [4]August 7, 2024

Who was that person who cast that tie-breaking vote that brought us 40-year high inflation - the highest prices in 40 years for which so many people suffer today?

That person was Vice President Kamala Harris. [5]pic.twitter.com/x0brTM3Qfh— Sen. John Barrasso (@SenJohnBarrasso) [6]August 14, 2024

Meanwhile, over at the White House they've changed their narrative from "inflation is transitory" to "prices are still too high."

1.8.9 New Details: Walz Also Blatantly Lied About His DUI (2024-08-15 15:30)

Minnesota Gov. Tim Walz, Kamala Harris' running mate, hasn't taken any questions since being tapped for the ticket more than a week ago. Harris hasn't answered any substantive questions either, of course, having ducked any interviews for nearly a month. The campaign is instead communicating through pre-written speeches at rallies, paid advertisements, 'influencer' endorsements (allegedly including paid endorsements), and a deluge of glowing press coverage - including [1]puff pieces they aren't participating in, or commenting for. In one of Walz's recent speeches, he indignantly asserted that he's "damn proud" of his military service, then thanked JD Vance for his own service to the country. This is apparently supposed to sound tough, but also magnanimous:

Let me be clear: I am damn proud of my service to this country.
[2]pic.twitter.com/9a9rJSQurQ— Tim Walz (@Tim_Walz) [3]August 13, 2024

When you can't respond to a good argument, respond to bad argument that no one is making [4]<https://t.co/2X2KfvDS7B>— Will Chamberlain (@willchamberlain) [5]August 13, 2024

Of course, Walz should be proud of his honorable service, which is not the issue. The issue is that he repeatedly [6]embellished, exaggerated, and lied about his service, including his final rank. He also [7]bailed on a deployment to Iraq, choosing to retire before his unit was sent to that combat zone (he'd never served in a combat zone, hence the problem with his false pro-gun control claim that he'd 'carried' weapons 'in war'). He knew the deployment was likely, [8]acknowledged as much, then left to pursue a political career. Many of his men [9]felt betrayed and abandoned:

Tonight's [10]@thelauracoates interview with Walz' direct enlisted superior [retired CSM] Doug Julin is pretty damning- Julin says sr leaders learned abt deployment in fall 2004 and Walz initially was going to stay and deploy before changing his mind. (1/2)[11]pic.twitter.com/ayz7ESBAzA [12]<https://t.co/8a3K5eW7DI>— Peter Meijer (@RepMeijer) [13]August 10, 2024

Some of them Walz served with, including his second in command, have been calling him out on these falsehoods and misrepresentations for years. (His commanding officer also added a [14]scathing assessment last week). He has [15]ignored and belittled them, knowingly carrying on with his deceptions. He's had many opportunities to correct the record, and he's chosen not to:

Hi, [16]@Tim_Walz and [17]@KamalaHarris—
Just wondering, did you also “misprint” your rank as Command Sergeant Major on your Congressional Challenge Coin?

Bree A Dail (@breeadail) [21]August 11, 2024

This is the most egregious video I've seen so far- and it's on a 40min C-SPAN segment! That's the easiest of settings to correct the interviewer's intro that said he deployed to Afghanistan. Unless there are any instances of Walz correcting, this is a real pattern.

(I looked for... [22]<https://t.co/UoZZxDn7XM>— Peter Meijer (@RepMeijer) [23]August 10, 2024

Welp. Wonder how she and so many others got that false impression?
[24]<https://t.co/ao8obaAqvs>— Guy Benson (@guypbenson) [25]August 9, 2024

That is the problem. Indeed, JD Vance should be thanked for his service. He also has never lied about it, which is why this sort of trolling bravado is particularly unbecoming:

Vance shows up for a tough challenge & doesn't lie about it. Walz is the one doesn't always follow suit, as we've learned. [26]<https://t.co/l1rXjElmUA>— Guy Benson (@guypbenson) [27]August 14, 2024

Vance has, of course, accepted the debate (October 1 on CBS). Meanwhile, it looks like honesty is a serious weakness for Walz. I suppose that if a man is willing to fudge, obscure, and distort the truth about his own military service – even after private and public exposures of his inaccuracies – aggressively lying about a politically-inconvenient (and extremely dangerous) DUI would come rather easily. Kudos to this CNN reporter for [28]uncovering what happened:

NEW: During his 2006 congressional run, Tim Walz's campaign falsely claimed he wasn't drinking during his 1995 arrest and the DUI charge was dismissed. They even said he drove to the station.

Court records show the truth.

He was drunk, driving 96 mph.[29]<https://t.co/V36D4vzxhc>— Andy Kaczynski (@KFILE) [30]August 15, 2024

According to court and police records connected to the incident, Walz admitted in court that he had been drinking when he was pulled over for driving 96 mph in a 55 mph zone in Nebraska. Walz was then transported by a state trooper to a local hospital for a blood test, showing he had a blood alcohol level of .128, well above the state's legal limit of 0.1at the time. But in 2006, his campaign repeatedly told the press that he had not been drinking that night, claiming that his failed field sobriety test was due to a misunderstanding related to hearing loss from his time in the National Guard. The campaign also claimed that Walz was allowed to drive himself to jail that night...None of that was true. A CNN KFile review of statements made by the Walz campaign at the time reveals numerous discrepancies between how the campaign described the events and the facts of what actually took place that night.

“The DUI charge was dropped for a Reason: it wasn't true,” Walz's then-campaign communications directortold local newsin 2006. “The trooper had him drive to the station and then leave on his own after being at the station. Tim feels bad about speeding and has paid the ticket and apologized to his family at the time it happened.” In fact, the incident's police report clearly states that Walz was transported by police to a local hospital for blood alcohol testing after being arrested. And this week, Nebraska state police confirmed to CNN that Walz was taken by a state trooper to jail...On Tuesday, the Daily Beast published an interview with the state trooper who arrested Walz. He disputed claims that Walz had not been drinking and noted that sobriety test had nothing to do with hearing. The Harris-Walz campaign declined to comment for this story.

Advertisement

Using 'deafness' from his National Guard service as a baseless excuse while lying about the facts of this incident is quite a touch, and very on-brand, it seems. Driving 96mph while drunk is exceptionally reckless. Lying about all of it, for political gain, appears to be reflective of this man's character. I'll leave you [31]with this: Does Tim Walz ever tell the truth about anything?

EXCLUSIVE: Tim Walz—in footage unearthed by [32]@dcexaminer—called Hitler-promoting imam Asad Zaman a “master teacher” who offered Walz lessons over the time they “spent together”

The footage further contradicts the Harris campaign's claim Walz has no personal relationship w/ Zaman [33]pic.twitter.com/F1IKcjyzl1— Gabe Kaminsky (@gekaminsky) [34]August 13, 2024

1.8.11 Kamala Harris Hands the Trump Campaign a Major Argument (2024-08-16 22:27)

Speaking during a campaign event in North Carolina Friday, Vice President Kamala Harris outlined her economic plans for the United States if she were to be elected president in November.

During her remarks, Harris admitted inflation is destroying the budgets of American families and detailed just how high costs have increased under the Bidenomics – which she has enthusiastically endorsed time and time again.

We couldn't have said it better ourselves. [1]pic.twitter.com/W9H1CSDZIA— Trump War Room (@TrumpWarRoom) [2]August 16, 2024

Ahead of Harris' remarks, the Trump campaign took to X to highlight her failures on the economy.

To afford a median-priced home of $402,343, Americans would need an annual income of $110,871, a nearly 50 % increase over the last four years.— Team Trump (Text TRUMP to 88022) (@TeamTrump) [3]August 16, 2024

[4]pic.twitter.com/1134fuiOdT— Team Trump (Text TRUMP to 88022) (@TeamTrump) [5]August 16, 2024

Harris also officially introduced a promise to implement a federal ban on price increases for food, a disastrous and communist policy that leads to economic ruin.

As President, I'll work to pass the first-ever federal ban on price gouging on food.

My plan will include new penalties for companies that exploit crises and break the rules.

And we will support smaller food businesses that are trying to play by the rules and get ahead.— Kamala Harris (@KamalaHarris) [6]August 16, 2024

1.8.12 White House Quickly Walks Back What Biden Said About Elections in Venezuela (2024-08-16 22:29)

The White House quickly walked back President Biden's comment saying he supports Venezuela holding new elections.

"The president was speaking to the absurdity of Maduro and his representatives not coming clean about the July 28 elections," the National Security Council said in a statement, according to Politico. "It is abundantly clear to the majority of the Venezuelan people, the United States and a growing number of countries that Edmundo González Urrutia won the most votes on July 28."

When a reporter asked if he thought Venezuela should hold another election, Biden replied, "I do."

The United States wants “the will of the Venezuelan people to be respected and for discussions to begin on a transition back to democratic norms,” the NSC statement added.

Maduro & his representatives must come clean about Venezuela’s July 28 elections. It is abundantly clear that Edmundo Gonzalez Urrutia won the most votes. We call for the will of the people to be respected & for discussions to begin on a transition back to democratic norms.— Sean Savett (@NSC_Spox) [1]August 15, 2024

Brazilian President Luiz Inácio Lula da Silva and Colombian President Gustavo Petro called on Caracas today to hold new elections that are fair and consistent with international standards. Both countries are regional interlocutors the administration has seen as critical in the effort to get Maduro to accept results that show he did not win the election.

Other countries in the region have gone further. Argentina has called González Venezuela’s president-elect and urged Maduro to step aside. The U.S. has not called González the outright winner nor referred to him as president-elect.

But the calls for new elections are the most dramatic show of regional force from the U.S. and partners in the region, as they seek to resolve a weeks-long stalemate in the South American country between the country’s socialist ruling party and an energized opposition movement.

The Venezuelan government proclaimed Maduro as the winner of the country’s July 28 elections the next day, publishing national-level results that claimed that Maduro eked out a narrow victory over González. But the Venezuelan opposition dismissed those results, arguing that precinct-level results, known as “actas,” that they collected from most of the country’s polling places showed that González had defeated Maduro by a two-to-one margin.

The opposition published their own version of the results online, [2]which outlets including The Washington Post have verified are accurate. ([3]Politico)

Critics said it's clear Biden needs to resign.

Biden needs to resign.

He created an entire news cycle this morning based on being confused and saying he supports new elections for Venezuela. A position that makes no sense and the WH has already walked back. [4]<https://t.co/70bcLeYOHw>— AG (@AGHamilton29) [5]August 15, 2024

1.8.13 New Details: Walz Also Blatantly Lied About His DUI (2024-08-16 22:30)

Minnesota Gov. Tim Walz, Kamala Harris' running mate, hasn't taken any questions since being tapped for the ticket more than a week ago. Harris hasn't answered any substantive questions either, of course, having ducked any interviews for nearly a month. The campaign is instead communicating through pre-written speeches at rallies, paid advertisements, 'influencer' endorsements (allegedly including paid endorsements), and a deluge of glowing press coverage — including [1]puff pieces they aren't participating in, or commenting for. In one of Walz's recent speeches, he indignantly asserted that he's "damn proud" of his military service, then thanked JD Vance for his own service to the country. This is apparently supposed to sound tough, but also magnanimous:

Let me be clear: I am damn proud of my service to this country.
[2]pic.twitter.com/9a9rJSQurQ— Tim Walz (@Tim_Walz) [3]August 13, 2024

When you can't respond to a good argument, respond to bad argument that no one is making [4]<https://t.co/2X2KfvDS7B>— Will Chamberlain (@willchamberlain) [5]August 13, 2024

Of course, Walz should be proud of his honorable service, which is not the issue. The issue is that he repeatedly [6]embellished, exaggerated, and lied about his service, including his final rank. He also [7]bailed on a deployment to Iraq, choosing to retire before his unit was sent to that combat zone (he'd never served in a combat zone, hence the problem with his false pro-gun control claim that he'd 'carried' weapons 'in war'). He knew the deployment was likely, [8]acknowledged as much, then left to pursue a political career. Many of his men [9]felt betrayed and abandoned:

Tonight's [10]@thelauracoates interview with Walz' direct enlisted superior [retired CSM] Doug Julin is pretty damning- Julin says sr leaders learned abt deployment in fall 2004 and Walz initially was going to stay and deploy before changing his mind. (1/2)[11]pic.twitter.com/ayz7ESBAzA [12]<https://t.co/8a3K5eW7DI>— Peter Meijer (@RepMeijer) [13]August 10, 2024

Some of them Walz served with, including his second in command, have been calling him out on these falsehoods and misrepresentations for years. (His commanding officer also added a [14]scathing assessment last week). He has [15]ignored and belittled them, knowingly carrying on with his deceptions. He's had many opportunities to correct the record, and he's chosen not to:

Hi, [16]@Tim_Walz and [17]@KamalaHarris—
Just wondering, did you also “misprint” your rank as Command Sergeant Major on your Congressional Challenge Coin?

This is the most egregious video I've seen so far- and it's on a 40min C-SPAN segment! That's the easiest of settings to correct the interviewer's intro that said he deployed to Afghanistan. Unless there are any instances of Walz correcting, this is a real pattern.

(I looked for... [22]<https://t.co/UoZZxDn7XM>— Peter Meijer (@RepMeijer) [23]August 10, 2024

Welp. Wonder how she and so many others got that false impression?
[24]<https://t.co/ao8obaAqvs>— Guy Benson (@guypbenson) [25]August 9, 2024

That is the problem. Indeed, JD Vance should be thanked for his service. He also has never lied about it, which is why this sort of trolling bravado is particularly unbecoming:

Vance shows up for a tough challenge & doesn't lie about it. Walz is the one doesn't always follow suit, as we've learned. [26]<https://t.co/l1rXjElmUA>— Guy Benson (@guypbenson) [27]August 14, 2024

Vance has, of course, accepted the debate (October 1 on CBS). Meanwhile, it looks like honesty is a serious weakness for Walz. I suppose that if a man is willing to fudge, obscure, and distort the truth about his own military service — even after private and public exposures of his inaccuracies — aggressively lying about a politically-inconvenient (and extremely dangerous) DUI would come rather easily. Kudos to this CNN reporter for [28]uncovering what happened:

NEW: During his 2006 congressional run, Tim Walz’s campaign falsely claimed he wasn’t drinking during his 1995 arrest and the DUI charge was dismissed. They even said he drove to the station.

Court records show the truth.

He was drunk, driving 96 mph.[29]<https://t.co/V36D4vzxhc>— Andy Kaczynski (@KFILE) [30]August 15, 2024

According to court and police records connected to the incident, Walz admitted in court that he had been drinking when he was pulled over for driving 96 mph in a 55 mph zone in Nebraska. Walz was then transported by a state trooper to a local hospital for a blood test, showing he had a blood alcohol level of .128, well above the state’s legal limit of 0.1at the time. But in 2006, his campaign repeatedly told the press that he had not been drinking that night, claiming that his failed field sobriety test was due to a misunderstanding related to hearing loss from his time in the National Guard. The campaign also claimed that Walz was allowed to drive himself to jail that night...None of that was true. A CNN KFile review of statements made by the Walz campaign at the time reveals numerous discrepancies between how the campaign described the events and the facts of what actually took place that night.

“The DUI charge was dropped for a Reason: it wasn’t true,” Walz’s then-campaign communications directortold local newsin 2006. “The trooper had him drive to the station and then leave on his own after being at the station. Tim feels bad about speeding and has paid the ticket and apologized to his family at the time it happened.” In fact, the incident’s police report clearly states that Walz was transported by police to a local hospital for blood alcohol testing after being arrested. And this week, Nebraska state police confirmed to CNN that Walz was taken by a state trooper to jail...On Tuesday, the Daily Beast published an interview with the state trooper who arrested Walz. He disputed claims that Walz had not been drinking and noted that sobriety test had nothing to do with hearing. The Harris-Walz campaign declined to comment for this story.

Using ‘deafness’ from his National Guard service as a baseless excuse while lying about the facts of this incident is quite a touch, and very on-brand, it seems. Driving 96mph while drunk is exceptionally reckless. Lying about all of it, for political gain, appears to be reflective of this man’s character. I’ll leave you [31]with this: Does Tim Walz ever tell the truth about anything?

EXCLUSIVE: Tim Walz—in footage unearthed by [32]@dcexaminer—called Hitler-promoting imam Asad Zaman a “master teacher” who offered Walz lessons over the time they “spent together”

The footage further contradicts the Harris campaign’s claim Walz has no personal relationship w/ Zaman [33]pic.twitter.com/F1lKcJyzl1— Gabe Kaminsky (@gekaminsky) [34]August 13, 2024

WHERE THE MONEY GOES: Gov. Tim Walz’s administration gave over $100,000 to the Muslim American Society of Minnesota, which is run by Imam Asad Zaman, who has used his Facebook page to share official Hamas press releases. 1.8.16 The myth that Biden had nothing to do with the prosecutions of Trump (2024-08-25 21:37)

The five criminal and civil prosecutions of former President Donald Trump all prompt heated denials from Democrats that President Joe Biden and Democrat operatives had a role in any of them.

But Biden has long let it be known that he was frustrated with his own Department of Justice's federal prosecutors for their tardiness in indicting Trump.

Biden was upset because any delay might mean that his rival Trump would not be in federal court during the 2024 election cycle. And that would mean he could not be tagged as a "convicted felon" by the November election while being kept off the campaign trail.

Politico has long prided itself on its supposed insider knowledge of the workings of the Biden administration. Note that it was [1]reported earlier this February that a frustrated Joe Biden "has grumbled to aides and advisers that had (Attorney General Merrick) Garland moved sooner in his investigation into former President Donald Trump's election interference, a trial may already be underway or even have concluded..."

If there was any doubt about the Biden administration's effort to force Trump into court before November, Politico further dispelled it — even as it blamed Trump for Biden's anger at Garland: "That trial still could take place before the election and much of the delay is owed not to Garland but to deliberate resistance put up by the former president and his team."

Note in passing how a presidential candidate's legal right to oppose a politicized indictment months before an election by his opponent's federal attorneys is smeared by Politico as "deliberate resistance."

Given Politico was publicly reporting six months ago about Biden's anger at the pace of his DOJ's prosecution of Trump, does anyone believe his special counsel, Jack Smith, was not aware of such presidential displeasure and pressure?

Note Smith had petitioned and was denied an unusual request to the court to speed up the course of his Trump indictment.

And why would Biden's own Attorney General, Garland, select such an obvious partisan as Smith? Remember, in his last tenure as special counsel, Smith had previously gone after popular Republican and conservative Virginia governor Bob MacDonald.

Yet Smith's politicized persecution of the innocent McDonnell was reversed by a unanimous verdict of the U.S. Supreme Court. That rare court unanimity normally should have raised a red flag to the Biden DOJ about both Smith's partiality and his incompetence.

But then again, Smith's wife had donated to the 2020 Biden campaign fund. And she was previously known for producing a hagiographic 2020 documentary ("Becoming") about Michelle Obama.

Selecting a special counsel with a successful record of prior nonpartisan convictions was clearly not why the DOJ appointed Smith.

The White House's involvement is not limited to the Smith federal indictments.

Fulton County district attorney Fani Willis's paramour and erstwhile lead prosecutor in her indictment of Trump, Nathan Wade, met twice with the White House counsel's office. On one occasion, Wade met inside the Biden White House.

Subpoenaed records reveal that the brazen Wade actually billed the federal government for his time spent with the White House counsel's staff — although so far no one has disclosed under oath the nature of such meetings.

Of the tens of thousands of local prosecutions each year, in how many instances does a county prosecutor consult with the White House counsel's office — and then bill it for his knowledge?

Manhattan District Attorney Alvin Bragg's just-completed felony convictions of Trump were spearheaded by former prominent federal prosecutor Matthew Colangelo. He is not just a well-known Democratic partisan who served as a political consultant to the Democratic National Committee.

Colangelo had also just left his prior position in the Biden Justice Department — reputedly as Garland's third-ranking prosecutor — to join the local Bragg team.

Again, among all the multitudes of annual municipal indictments nationwide, how many local prosecutors manage to enlist one of the nation's three top federal attorneys to head their case?

So, apparently, it was not enough for the shameless Bragg to campaign flagrantly on promises to go after Trump. In addition, Bragg brashly drafted a top Democratic operative and political appointee from inside Joe Biden's DOJ to head his prosecution.

Not surprisingly, it took only a few hours after the Colangelo-Bragg conviction of Trump for Biden on spec to start blasting his rival as a "convicted felon." Biden is delighted that his own former prosecutor, a left-wing judge, and a Manhattan jury may well keep Trump off the campaign trail.

So, it is past time for the media and Democrats to drop this ridiculous ruse of Biden's White House "neutrality." Instead, they should admit that they are terrified of the will of the people in November and so are conniving to silence them.

1.8.17 Who Is 'Destroying Democracy in Darkness?' (2024-08-25 21:38)

The 2023-2024 campaign season is not just the strangest on record, it's also arguably the most anti-democratic.

Ostensibly, the Democratic Party has claimed over the last decade that Donald Trump posed a continued and existential threat to the republic.

That allegation subsequently justified a variety of anti-democratic means to neuter his first two presidential candidacies, his presidency, and now his third and final run for the White House.

A near decade ago, we witnessed the 2015-2016 Hillary Clinton/Democratic National Committee/FBI-assisted effort to plant the false accusation of Trump-Russian collusion to warp the 2016 election.

That gambit centered around the fraudulent Steele dossier and nearly fatally crippled the Trump 2016 campaign. That hoax would later sidetrack 22 months of his presidency before being proven a fantasy.

On the eve of the 2020 election, the left next birthed the Russian laptop disinformation campaign.

That hoax also warped a presidential debate with false charges that Hunter Biden's own incriminating laptop was once again the work of Russians seeking to conspire with Trump.

Those unusual efforts continued during the Biden administration.

For the first time in election history, the allies of one campaign sought to persuade some 16 states to try to remove a major party's likely nominee from their primary and general election ballots.

The plan was to smother a Trump third presidential bid in its infancy, and thus once again not allow the people to accept or reject his candidacy.

Nearly simultaneously, four federal, state, and local prosecutors filed dozens of felony charges against Trump.

They all shared some strange similarities.

These indictments would likely not have been filed, had Trump not run for office. Nor would any of them have proceeded had Trump not been a controversial conservative Republican seeking reelection.

Almost all the charges had not been filed against any other prior candidate and rarely a private citizen.

Some of them could just as easily have been lodged against Joe Biden and his son.

Some indictments and convictions may still achieve their objectives of bankrupting, jailing, or keeping Trump inert during the final weeks of the campaign.

One of the Georgia prosecutors had undisclosed meetings with the Biden White House counsel.

President Biden himself, on the eve of the federal prosecutor Jack Smith's indictment, all but declared his campaign rival Trump guilty.

Biden's own chief of the White House had also met privately and secretly with Smith.

In an unprecedented fashion, Smith rushed his prosecution to ensure it synchronized with the 2024 campaign.

Similar federal charges could just as easily have led to the indictment of President Joe Biden—if the special counsel in that case had not claimed that he could not convince a jury to convict a culpable but cognitively challenged Biden.

Another Biden prosecutor mysteriously left his top position at the Justice Department to join the Alvin Bragg Manhattan prosecutorial staff.

Nonetheless, Trump had survived collusion, disinformation, de-balloting, lawfare, and a subsequent assassination attempt to surge far ahead of Biden in the June presidential polls.

Biden's poll collapse prompted Democratic donors and high-ranking politicians to force a stress-test presidential debate before either candidate was even nominated at their respective conventions.

When Biden imploded in the debate, a supposedly once-fit president was suddenly declared impaired. And a previously uninspiring Vice President Kamala Harris was abruptly transmogrified into a superb replacement candidate.

Biden was forced to resign his candidacy to save his last five months in office from a Democrat threatened removal via the 25th Amendment.

The primary votes of nearly 15 million voters were abruptly nullified.

Harris who had neither won a primary nor a single delegate through an election was suddenly coronated as the new Biden-replacement candidate—and without an open convention contest or vote.

The donor-politico class further decided that, like a challenged Biden in 2024, Harris could not be allowed to hold press conferences. She would do few if any live interviews, unscripted town halls or any other venue given fears her visible liabilities might endanger her candidacy.

So, the Party that had proclaimed democracy dies in darkness now favors the shadows as the preferable means to obtain and retain power—whether by ignoring primary voters, open conventions, or transparent venues with the voters.

Add up the last decade's purchased collusion caper, unprecedented two impeachments, orchestrated disinformation hoax, efforts to de-ballot Trump, warping of the legal system to jail him and destroy his candidacy, forced removal of an unpopular but unwilling President Biden from the Democrat ticket, virtual anointing of Harris by fiat in his place, and the current collusion with a compliant media to avoid public scrutiny and cross-examination of Harris.

And the conclusion?

Have those who lectured us about democracy in danger now decided to save it by destroying it?

1.8.18 Democrat Suggests He Would Join GOP Administration: 'We Failed A Lot of People' (2024-08-25 21:39)

Months ago, Democrat Rep. Dean Phillips (D-Minn.) said what every other Democrat wouldn't dare say out loud: President Joe Biden was too old to serve in office, making the United States vulnerable to another Trump term.

Before dropping out of the 2024 race, Phillips challenged Biden in the primary, targeting his old age and mental decline. The three-term congressman received backlash and mockery from his party mates, who called him a “total joke” after he spoke out against Biden’s inability to run for reelection.

However, he was right. A few months later, the 81-year-old president withdrew from the race and endorsed Vice President Kamala Harris.

“I will say that my mission has been vindicated,” Phillips said then. “To see and feel and sense this room over the last few days made this journey all worthwhile.”

Now, Phillips is suggesting he would accept an invitation to serve in both a Democratic and a Republican administration.

“I didn’t want to run this cycle. I spent two years trying to call attention to something I was seeing clearly with my own eyes,” Phillips told Fox News Digital. “I remember my Republican buddies excoriating Donald Trump quietly behind closed doors and then praising him in front of cameras. I saw my Democratic colleagues doing the same thing about Joe Biden, who we knew was in decline, probably going to lose.”

The Democrat admitted that the United States is facing an unprecedented border crisis and a struggling economy, acknowledging that “We failed a lot of people.”

As it relates to policy, yeah, we have a border crisis. I’ve seen it twice with my own eyes. We also have to be a welcoming country, as Ronald Reagan would say,” Phillips added. “We have to be a country that has an economy that works for people. Sixty percent of people are living paycheck to paycheck.”

1.8.19 Watch Tucker Carlson Destroy Kamala Harris’ Credibility In Seconds (2024-08-25 21:40)

Vice President Kamala Harris is officially the 2024 Democratic presidential nominee despite not doing anything in the Biden Administration nor winning a single primary vote.

She continually calls for change in the United States yet fails to acknowledge that her own administration is the sole reason the nation is in absolute turmoil. Instead of taking responsibility for the country's downward spiral, Harris (and the rest of the Democratic Party) blamed former President Donald Trump.

After her Democrat National Convention (DNC) speech on Thursday, conservative firebrand Tucker Carlson picked apart everything Harris' said, calling her a "very scary person."

"She's much more skillful than I have ever seen. She's a liar on the deepest level," Carlson said. "The things she is saying right now are not just untrue - they're the opposite of the truth, which is the hallmark of evil."

"She's an extremist, she'll say anything," Carlson continued, comparing Harris to Democrat Gov. Gavin Newsom (D-CA).

Carlson shredded Harris' claims, in which she lied about the tens of millions of illegal immigrants entering the U.S. through the southern border and that protestors during the January 2021 Capitol Hill riots were armed. The former Fox News host pointed out that everything Democrats accuse Republicans of doing, they are.

For example, Harris said former President Donald Trump "tried to throw away [Americans'] vote." However, the Democratic Party is guilty of throwing away all of the votes cast for President Joe Biden and giving Harris the nominee without winning a primary.

"What she's saying is the mirror image of the truth: she doesn't care," Carlson added. "She's gonna reference point the truth 'cause she's an extremist."

Tucker at his best. He picks apart Kamala word by word.

She's a very scary person.

She can win.

According to a FiveThirtyEight [3]poll, 49.2 percent of voters disapprove of Harris as the potential president, while only 41.1 percent approve of her. A Gallup survey also found that nearly half of Americans view the vice president negatively.

1.8.20 RFK Jr. Addresses Family Criticism of His Decision to Endorse Trump (2024-08-25 21:41)

On Sunday, Robert F. Kennedy Jr., a third-party 2024 presidential candidate, revealed that other Democrats plan to follow in his footsteps and endorse former President Donald Trump.

During an interview, RFK Jr. told anchor Shannon Bream on Fox News Sunday that Trump will soon make several announcements involving politicians from the Democratic Party.

RFK Jr tells Shannon Bream that President Trump is preparing to make a series of announcements that other Democrats are about to join his campaign. The Unity Party to defeat the Democrat oligarchs is underway. [1]pic.twitter.com/xmJx6aazB2— Charlie Kirk (@charliekirk11) [2]August 25, 2024

RFK Jr. announced earlier this week that he was suspending his campaign and endorsing Trump in the race to the White House. He criticized his former party, calling the Democratic Party a party of “corruption, big tech, big donors, big Pharma, and big money.”

He also spoke out about his family, who expressed frustration and disappointment with Kennedy following his announcement. In a social media post, his sister, Kerry Kennedy, condemned and accused him of betraying the family and everything they stand for.

Kennedy downplayed the tensions between him and his family members, saying it was OK for them to disagree on issues and still love each other.

“You know, my family is at the center of the Democratic Party. I have members of my family that are working for the Biden administration. Biden has a bust of my father behind him at the Oval Office, and he’s been a family friend for many years,” he said. “My family is – I understand that they’re troubled by my decisions. I love my family. I feel like we were raised in a milieu where we were encouraged to debate each other and debate ferociously and passionately about things and still love each other. They’re free to take their positions on these issues. There are many, many members of my family working at my campaign and who are supporting me.”

The Independent candidate said he will be “actively campaigning” for Trump with the message of “Mak[ing] America Healthy Again.”

“I talked specifically with President Trump about that issue, and he said that he wanted to leave as his legacy of healthy children,” Kennedy said.

1.9.1 New Rules for Radicals—How to Reinvent Kamala Harris (2024-09-01 17:02)

How do accomplished radicals elect a mediocre far-left presidential candidate?

The task might at first seem impossible.

[1]Kamala Harris is currently a radical incumbent vice president. For more than three years, she was second in command to an unprecedentedly unliked Democrat president, his failed policies, and his unpopular record.

Harris herself had compiled a hard-left trail over her own entire career while loudly boasting indiscreetly to leftist audiences of being proudly “woke” and “radical.”

Most challenging for a Harris candidacy makeover was the long, entrenched Democratic Party's reluctance to remove a debilitated President Joe Biden from the Democratic ticket.

Why?

Because Harris was deemed such a liability that she had become a Spiro Agnew-like insurance policy for [2]a failing Biden.

Until just recently, Democrats had considered an unpopular and enfeebled Biden nonetheless far preferable to an incoherent, lightweight, and widely ridiculed potential replacement Vice President Harris.

After all, she had never before entered a presidential primary. She never won a single delegate by voting. She failed miserably as a candidate in 2020.

And she co-owns the unpopular record of an even more unpopular president.

The complete Harris makeover requires 15 radical rules followed to the letter:

1. Remake Harris as an entirely fresh happy face. She's about joy and vibe—which trumps position papers and policy statements. Banish all thoughts that she is an incumbent vice president and co-owns the last four years of the Biden administration.
2. Ignore/deny that Harris as vice president could have long ago enacted her new makeover proposal—or could do so right now in the remaining five months of her administration's tenure. She was the last person out of the room when Biden made those awful decisions.
3. For the next 70 days, reinvent Harris as a moderate. Xerox much of [3]Donald Trump's current more popular agenda. Have Harris claim it as her own. Reboot her as a border hawk, a China hawk, a defense hawk, a budget hawk, and a law-and-order hawk.
4. The word-salad Harris must not do a single unscripted media interview, live town hall, extemporaneous chat, ambush hot mic, or lecture without a teleprompter.

5. Harris must not offer any policy proposals such as her harebrained price controls that deviate from her 70-day new centrist image and teleprompted scripts.
6. Do not mention Biden at all. Harris is not to be seen with him in photos or at events. Create a vaguely joyful but completely imaginary, “Harris record.” Separate it from the miserable Biden-Harris administration. Leak that she was unhappy with Biden.
7. Call Trump a mobster, criminal, insurrectionist, and dictator nonstop. Never provide any evidence to support such charges. When challenged, double down and let loose with worse invective.
8. Talk about abortion nonstop. But never dare mention the word. [4]Relabel abortion “reproductive rights.” Falsely reinvent Trump as a radical anti-abortionist who wants a federal ban.
9. Follow the 2020 successful Biden “basement” strategy: keep out of the public eye, silent on the issues, reliant on 70 percent of the ballots not being cast on Election Day, and outsourcing the campaign to the fusion media and billionaire class.
10. Harangue about race and gender nonstop. Define the election as a stark binary between a “young” oppressed but dynamic black woman and an old oppressor racist white guy.
11. Reinvent the “journey” and life “story” of Harris—the child of two PhDs—into a hardscrabble, lifelong struggle against poverty, systemic racism, and greedy “billionaires” like Trump. She is always to be from Oakland—never Berkeley.
12. Talk about transparency nonstop. Feign a willingness to have three or four debates. But agree to hold only one—and only on a left-wing network. Promise interviews and town halls endlessly. Enter into discussions about them. But always delay, stonewall, and evade for the next 10 weeks.
13. Meet privately and endlessly with the megarich donor class that helped to remove Biden. Assure Wall Street, Hollywood, and Silicon Valley grandees that banter about wealth taxes, taxes on unearned income, and higher corporate taxes are mere campaign posturing. Then outraise Trump again 3-1.

14. Privately assure leftist activists and [5]Democrat politicians that any backslidings from supporting lifelong left-wing advocacies are temporary and necessary 70-day pretexts. Instead look at what Harris actually does after Nov. 5, not anything she must say before then.

15. Control and modulate the street. Anti-Trump protests are a legitimate “movement” that are “not going to let up. And they should not.” Any violent anti-Trump demonstrator should be bailed out immediately.

All anti-Democrat, anti-Harris demonstrations should be deterred. A large police presence must be proactive with as many arrests as possible, with barriers, and plenty of backup. Protest leaders should be given private concessions and incentives to tone down their people.

1.9.2 The Electoral College is So [not] Stupid (2024-09-01 17:03)

There can be many different ways of choosing a country’s chief executive. America’s Founders created a historically unique one called the “Electoral College.” It is debatable whether it is the best system, but it has worked well enough in American history. The Left hates it because it elected Donald Trump in 2016, even though Hillary Clinton received the most “popular votes.” However, if the situation had been reversed—Clinton won the EC and Trump the popular vote—I doubt you would hear a peep out of the Left about it.

As noted in several previous articles, our Founding Fathers were not believers in democracy. “Democracy is the vile form of government,” wrote James Madison, the man given most credit for producing our Constitution. Yet, a legitimate government must come from “the consent of the governed” because “all men are created equal.” That doesn’t imply democracy is the best form of government, but it does indicate the people should have some say in how they are governed. The Founders gave a share of government to democracy at the local, state, and national levels.

Political theorists in Western Civilization have largely recognized three “forms” of government—monarchy (from the Greek “rule by one”), aristocracy (“rule by the few”), and democracy ("rule by the many," or people). There are offshoots of those forms (e.g., oligarchy, timocracy), but the basic structure of monarchy, aristocracy, and democracy exists. In America, the Presidency represents the "monarchical" form of government; the House represents "democracy," and the Senate the "aristocracy." Don't give any one form of government total power, or tyranny will result. A monarchy will degenerate into a dictatorship, an aristocracy will become an oligarchy (ruled by the rich), and democracy will devolve into cruel, uncontrollable mob rule, the worst of all. Thus, the Founders set up a system with all three forms of government included as part of the "checks and balances" they created.

Since it was designed to select the President (the "monarch"), the Electoral College has elements of the other two forms—democracy (the people vote) and aristocracy (the state representation numbers limit pure mob rule). In American history, the "majority" of the people have usually voted for the man who won the Presidency. Still, there have been cases when the candidate who received the most popular votes ("democracy") didn't win the Electoral College majority. That happened, as noted, in 2016, and the Left is scared to death it will happen this year. And it might. But that was the Founders' idea—protect against democracy, the "form" of government they despised the most.

It's not that "democracy," as an ideal, is any worse than monarchy or aristocracy. The problem is that the more stupid, decadent people who are allowed to vote, the greater the possibility they will create chaos. "We may appeal to every page of history...for proofs irrefragable, that the people, when they have been unchecked, have been as unjust, tyrannical, brutal, barbarous, and cruel as any king or senate possessed by an uncontrollable power. The majority has eternally, and without any one exception, usurped over the rights of the minority" (John Adams). Mr. Adams further wrote: "The proposition that the people are the best keepers of their own liberties is not true. They are the worst conceivable, not keepers at all: they can neither judge, act, think, or will as a political body. Individuals have conquered themselves; nations and large bodies never." It is, historically, impossible to refute what he said.

"Democracy is 51 % of the people taking away the rights of the other 49 %" (Thomas Jefferson). This, of course, has happened frequently in American history, nationally and on the state level. But it is also why the Founders delegated most government power into the hands of the states. If a state becomes tyrannical (California), you have 49 other states to choose from—which many Californians are now doing. If the national government becomes tyrannical, where do you go? Thailand?

What is fascinating is that one of the major goals of the Constitution, in the eyes of the Founders, was to protect against democracy: "the purpose of the Constitution is to restrict the majority's [democracy's] ability to harm a minority" (Madison). The Electoral College was a major part of that plan.

"Democracy was the right of the people to choose their own tyrant" (Madison). "Democracies have ever been spectacles of turbulence and contention; have ever been found incompatible with personal security or the rights of property; and have in general been as short in their lives as they have been violent in their deaths” (Madison). “Remember, democracy never lasts long. It soon wastes, exhausts, and murders itself. There was never a democracy yet that did not commit suicide” (John Adams). Do you get the point? Our Founders did not establish a democracy, and it was deliberate.

But, besides checks and balances, what can be done? I talked about their solution in a couple of recent articles (here and here): “The cornerstone of democracy rests on the foundation of an educated electorate” (Jefferson). “A well-informed citizenry is the best defense against tyranny” (Jefferson). “The advancement and diffusion of knowledge is the only guardian of true liberty” (Madison). People must be educated in virtue and self-government. The more people who aren’t—and democracy runs the greatest risk of this—the more probable bad government and tyranny will arise. Patriotic Americans must retake the educational system if the country is going to survive itself.

Our Founding Fathers would agree 100 % with the following assessment and, indeed, say, “we warned you”: “In the U.S., [just over a century] of full-blown democracy has resulted in steadily increasing moral degeneration, family and social disintegration, and cultural decay in the form of continually rising rates of divorce, illegitimacy, abortion, and crime.” (Hans-Hermann Hoppe). Chaos leads to tyranny—exactly what the Left wants.

1.9.3 Kamala Harris and Tim Walz Hate You (2024-09-01 17:04)

Imagine running for President of the United States and not speaking with anyone. Not “to,” you have to do lots of “speaking to” people, but “with,” as in having a conversation, an exchange. Kamala Harris and Tim Walz have been trying that for the past month and a half but finally caved to the reality that they would have to speak with someone and choose the softest target they could find that the public would accept. And the whole thing went about as well as you’d expect when the candidates hold the public in complete contempt.

Yes, that’s right: Kamala Harris, Tim Walz, and the entire left-wing establishment hold you, the American people, in contempt. They treat you with a twist on the old saying about children – you are to be preached to, not heard. You don’t treat people you respect like they are unworthy of addressing you, having their questions answered, or talking at them like a condescending kindergarten teacher.

Yet, that's what these people do.

When they finally sat down for an interview, it was with CNN because going to MSNBC would have been dismissed as the partisan hackery it clearly would have been. Since NBC News has literally no one who could pass for a journalist, the campaign chose Dana Bash because she's on the team but can still ask a semi-serious question. However, questions to politicians are only as good as the willingness of the person asking them to follow up and insist on an actual answer. The person asking them has to know or have a rough approximation of the answer to hold them to account.

But for any of that to happen, you must be interested in getting an answer, not simply getting through it. Bash was not.

Her time was limited—just 20 minutes was allotted. Imagine a campaign holding the American public in such contempt that they would only allow 2 minutes shy of a sit-com, which is 22 minutes long, for anyone to question their candidates. Bash ended up getting 27 because no campaign in their right mind would stop the tongue bath Harris and Walz were receiving, but if it had been serious, staff would have stepped in.

They went as far as they felt comfortable – dumb people and frauds can only hold it together for so long, even during a massage session where the interviewer asks leading softball questions without threat of follow-up.

What did we get? Not much. Kamala still couldn't articulate a single priority for "day one," even though that question was so obvious Stevie Wonder could've seen it coming. There is no pressing on any of her egregious flip-flops on fracking, the border wall, socialized medicine, etc. Bash simply lumped them all together into a question that any strip mall lawyer would have objected to as "leading the witness."

Bash asked, "Generally speaking, how should voters look at some of the changes you've made that you explain in your policy? Is it because you have more experience and have learned more about the information? Is it because you were running for president in a Democratic primary? And should they feel comfortable and confident that what you're saying now will be your policy moving forward?"

Pathetic, but not surprising.

The whole thing went like that with Kamala. She still offers up meaningless word salads like, "I am so proud to have served as vice president to Joe Biden and to I'm so proud to be running with Tim Walz for president of the United States and to bring America what I believe the American people deserve, which is a new way forward, and turn the page on the last decade of what I believe has been, contrary to where the spirit of our country really lies.”

Advertisement

Considering Democrats controlled the White House for 6 of the last 10 years, that’s quite a slam on what Barack Obama clearly started, isn’t it?

Tim Walz, the coked-out college mascot, wasn’t any better. He was, in fact, worse. Fraudie Murphy got one question tangentially related to his decades of stolen valor, but it was couched in the friendliest terms possible, of course.

He asked about his “weapons of war I carried on war” lie, and he brushed it off as bad grammar. Is it bad grammar that only one of the people he served with in the National Guard for over 24 years came forward to speak favorably about his character? ONE! Dozens have gone the other way, and the silence of the rest speaks volumes.

But Bash didn’t bring it up. She just let him adopt the cowardly Hamas tactic of hiding behind children. Fraudie said, “I said we were talking about, in this case, this was after school shooting, the idea of carrying these weapons of war. My wife, the English teacher who taught me grammar, is not always correct. But again, if it’s not this, it’s an attack on my children for showing love for me, or it’s an attack on my dog. I’m not going to do that. And the one thing I’ll never do is I’ll never demean another member’s service in any way. I never have, and I never will.”

He can’t demean another person’s service because, unless they abandoned their men right before a deployment, lied about their rank for 20 years, and pretended to be a combat veteran, there’s no way they are even as bad as, let alone worse than Tim Walz is.

Advertisement

What do his kids have to do with anything? Like all sewer water, he seeks the path of least resistance and kids offer that. No one attacked his kids, they simply pointed out how his son appeared to have lost control of his entire body at the convention, screaming, “That’s my dad!” I’ve heard his son is autistic and non-verbal, which seems odd since he was screaming that, but whatever – he’s not the awful candidate; his father is, so I don’t care either way. But that’s hardly an “attack on his children.”

They're both frauds; they're both awful. The idea that Kamala is simply rushed in her candidacy is undercut by the fact that she's plotted for this moment most of her adult life, and definitely the last 5 years. And she's been Vice-President – "ready on day one" to be president, just not ready on day 39 to answer questions about, apparently.

Walz is just a liar about everything. He tries to "awe-shucks" his way through his public appearances, bouncing around the stage like a coked-out college mascot for a team that sucks – prancing and dancing, pointing and clapping, desperate to get the wave started in a stadium out 20 percent full. You almost feel badly for him until you realize he's a bad person.

The final question – and imagine having what may well be the only chance to ask someone running for president questions, and you waste time on something like this (have you ever heard a softball question remotely close to this asked of Trump or Vance? No.) – was, "And last question, Madam Vice President, the photograph that has gone viral, you were speaking one of your grand nieces that you were just talking about was watching you accept the nomination. You didn't explicitly talk about gender or race in your speech, but it obviously means a lot to a lot of people. And that viral picture really says it. What does it mean to you?"

First, there's no such thing as "grand nieces." There are nieces and great-nieces. Kamala is not a grandmother, nor is she a mother. She is childless by choice (you can decide if you think she's had abortions or how many, but you can't deny she sure loves them) and only became a stepmother when her husband's kids were in their late teens. How much time do you think California's Attorney General spent "mothering" teenagers who mostly lived with their real mothers? None? Less than none?

Second, what a stupid question. What should the audience get from any answer that could be offered in response to it? Is some pointless rambling about "historic" or whatever doing to serve as a 25 percent off coupon at the grocery store or gas station? Do you get a discount on your rent, mortgage, or electric bill if you sit through it? No. Are you even remotely more informed about what Kamala Harris would do as president? You are not.

It was just a final example of how to waste an opportunity. The whole "interview" seemed to be conducted to get more future access by being nice to them. Journalists should conduct every interview with a politician like it's the last time they will ever be allowed to speak with them, so they'd better ask tough questions.

I know the mentality; I've dealt with many people who do it on both sides. They suck up to the people they like hoping to get them back later. They all insist they're tough, that they're not friends with these people, but love telling their audience how close they are to them. And you come away with nothing as an audience except the inflated sense of self-importance from the questioner.

Dana Bash didn't give her audience anything of use Thursday night, but she also didn't allow Kamala Harris and Tim Walz to hurt themselves, which was more important to the left. The public knows nothing more about either of them or what they'd do in office other than they want to make things better. If the truth were on the side of Democrats, they'd be eager to tell it to anyone willing to listen. That they hide tells you all you need to know.

Democrats view the public as a feckless mass of humanity in desperate need of leadership in every aspect of your life. They hold you in contempt. Return the favor.

1.9.4 Bill Maher: You Should Have the Right to Say That the Election Was Stolen (2024-09-01 17:05)

Let's not kid ourselves here: Bill Maher has, more or less, called people who think the 2020 election was stolen are nuts. He's undoubtedly pressed those who have advocated such a position on his show. The HBO host has repeatedly espoused his most profound worry that Donald Trump would never concede power, all of which has never come to fruition. It's liberal psychobabble, but it's also an opinion. And he's not for censoring that being a free speech supporter. He might not agree with you about the reported funny business during the 2020 election, but he also doesn't want to see anyone censored for having that view.

The comedian said that claiming the 2020 election as stolen, or any election for that matter, shouldn't be censored. It's protected free speech.

Bill Maher believes Americans should have the right to claim the election is stolen:
Bill Maher: "Trump was off Twitter for a long time before Elon put him back on Twitter. It was kind of like keeping Pete Rose out of the Hall of Fame.
Can you say, if you're a Republican, or a... [1]pic.twitter.com/t7MWhu3LmU— Eric Abbenante (@EricAbbenante) [2]August 31, 2024

He mentioned the arrest of Russian entrepreneur Pavel Durov in France, who founded Telegram, a Twitter-like social media platform, to segue into this deeper discussion about censorship, though the circumstances surrounding Durov's arrest stem from his refusal to clean up some aspects of his site, like assisting in investigations into child sexual abuse, drug trafficking, and terrorism. Guest Peter Hamby noted that the ISIS terrorists who carried out the 2015 Bataclan attacks organized on Telegram.

That's a fair point, but in this discussion, Maher used Durov since he's like Elon Musk on free speech issues. I like the example the HBO host used to describe these two men's positions regarding such matters: it's a bathroom wall, and it's not my job to clean it. Donald Trump was banned from Twitter until Elon took it over, which was another point made in this discussion: Brazil is blocking Twitter.

1.9.5 Kamala Harris Throws a Fit Over Debate Rules (2024-09-01 17:06)

Earlier this week, [1]as we covered at the time, former and potentially future President Donald Trump announced that they had reached an agreement on the upcoming September 10 debate with ABC News. For his debate with Vice President Kamala Harris, the same rules will be in place as the debate Trump did with President Joe Biden did on June 27 with CNN.

a list of rules to the Trump campaign on Tuesday. Those rules include muted microphones for when the other candidate is speaking.

Here are the debate rules that ABC sent to the Trump campaign Tuesday, per an email reviewed by the Post. No audience and muted microphones as first debate was. [2]pic.twitter.com/ukj12rxyks— Josh Dawsey (@jdawsey1) [3]August 29, 2024

Harris, however, is trying to put out another narrative, as she continues to drag her feet about the debates.

On Saturday morning, she put out a lengthy post complaining about the rules, in a quoted repost of The Washington Post's Josh Dawsey who noted on Friday that the Harris campaign has still not accepted the rules. They want the microphones to be unmuted.

Trump campaign has accepted these rules, per Tuesday email to ABC reviewed by the Post. Kamala Harris's campaign has not yet accepted these rules, as they seek to unmute the microphones for the entire debate. Debate is in less than two weeks. While trying to make Trump look bad if he interrupts Harris might have something to do with it, Harris' gaslighting post claims otherwise.

"Donald Trump is surrendering to his advisors who won't allow him to debate with a live microphone. If his own team doesn't have confidence in him, the American people definitely can't," her post claimed.

It's worth reminding that it was the Biden-Harris campaign who insisted on the rules in place for the June 27 debate, which Trump agreed to. Even after getting what he wanted, the president still performed so poorly that he was forced to withdraw from the race less than a month later.

"We are running for President of the United States. Let's debate in a transparent way—with the microphones on the whole time," Harris also claimed.

It's especially laughable that Harris would speak about doing something "in a transparent way," given that she [8]only just recently gave [9]her first interview upon Biden withdrawing from the race and endorsing her as his replacement. Harris [10]couldn't even do a solo interview, [11]as she was joined by her [12]running mate, Gov. Tim Walz (D-MN). It was also taped ahead of time. She's also refused to hold press conferences.

In the few hours it's been up, Harris' post already has approximately 15,000 replies and close to 2,000 quoted reposts, many of them taking issue with her narrative.

[13]Amy Curtis and [14]Doug P put together some of the best replies, with many noting that it sounds like Harris may be trying to get out of the debate, something Democrats previously accused Trump of. It's worth reminding, however, that the issue for the Trump campaign was that the Democrats did not have an official nominee at the time.

Reminds me of a cousin of mine. Playing a board game as kids, every time he was losing, always tried to change the rules and thought I would be stupid enough to agree. [15]<https://t.co/28xb1DQco3>— Márta Lisle (@UrUnpaidPundit) [16]August 31, 2024

1.9.6 The Media Lies Add Up (2024-09-08 21:16)

The public is exhausted after a decade of chronic untruth from the left-wing and its media.

The 2016 presidential campaign will be long remembered for the false allegation that Donald Trump colluded with the Russians to warp the election.

Citing the bogus "Steele dossier," loser Hillary Clinton and other Democrat grandees claimed that the victorious Trump was an "illegitimate" president.

Almost immediately, the left and media then pushed for the appointment of special prosecutor Robert Mueller. He assembled a "dream team" of partisan prosecutors to prove Trump-Russian collusion.

Some 22 months later, Mueller found no evidence that Trump improperly won the 2016 election with help from any colluding Russians.

More hysteria followed when Trump was impeached in December 2019.

The left claimed he had pressured the Ukrainian government to look into the family of Joe Biden (then a potential 2020 election opponent) for its corruption with Ukrainian oligarchs – as a condition for releasing military aid designated to Kyiv.

Yet Hunter Biden was paid nearly $1 million a year by a Ukrainian energy company to enlist his father, Vice President Joe Biden, for quid pro quo services.

In turn, Joe Biden later bragged that he had pressured Ukraine to fire its prosecutor, Victor Shokin, who happened to be looking too closely into the various shady schemes of the Biden family.

The deceptions and lies continued.

On the eve of the first 2020 debate, Biden aide and now Secretary of State Antony Blinken helped to round up "51 former intelligence authorities" to claim falsely that Hunter Biden's abandoned laptop – full of incriminating evidence of felonious Biden family behavior – was fabricated by the Russians.

Yet the FBI already had the laptop and had authenticated it as genuine.

The FBI was also actively enlisting Silicon Valley social media companies to suppress accurate news accounts of the laptop's embarrassing contents – ostensibly to aid the Biden campaign.

The signees of the false letter included former intelligence kingpins such as Leon Panetta, James Clapper, and John Brennan. None has ever apologized for deliberating lying to the country in a (successful) attempt to help alter an election.

During the summer of 2021, top military officials, at least publicly, parroted the Biden administration's lie that it was safe to abruptly withdraw all troops from Afghanistan.

The Biden plan was to take political credit for ending the two-decade-long war on the 20th anniversary of 9/11 and the American invasion of Afghanistan.

Yet many intelligence officials in and outside the Pentagon had warned both Biden and the Pentagon top brass that any such reckless and total withdrawal would collapse Afghanistan.

They rightly advised that sudden flight would give terrorists a windfall of equipment and infrastructure.

But they were ignored, and during the subsequent Biden misadventure, 13 American Marines were needlessly killed.

After the greatest military humiliation in a half-century, Biden and many in the media lied that the mission was nevertheless a successful withdrawal.

But that was not all. For the first time in history, a presidential candidate, Donald Trump, was subjected to numerous criminal and civil suits in an election year.

Yet the federal prosecutor, Jack Smith, met with Biden officials. A high-ranking Biden Justice federal attorney joined the New York municipal prosecution. The Georgia prosecutor met stealthily with Biden's legal counsel. And a major Biden donor funded the civil suit.

The once collusion-hungry media ignored all such lawfare and rank collusion.

During the 2020 Democratic primaries, the general election, and throughout the first three years of the Biden administration, it was evident that Joe Biden was physically and mentally incapable of serving as president.

Yet his aides and the media all misled the American people. They insisted that Biden was vigorous and sharp.

Then, suddenly, in June 2024, within a 24-hour period, these same insiders declared Biden unfit to continue as the Democratic nominee.

Their new problem with Biden was not just his long-standing embarrassing dementia. Rather bad polls increasingly warned that voters no longer believed their lies and thus would likely not reelect Biden but would instead punish most Democrats in the upcoming 2024 election.

So, a new media narrative arose: the once-hale Biden was forced to resign as the Democratic nominee. His once widely caricatured vice president, Kamala Harris, was coronated as his replacement candidate just as abruptly as his replacement candidate by an equally suddenly gushing and colluding media.

In sum, for some nine years, the media and the left have successfully fed the country a succession of rank deceptions and conspiracies.

They did so because they proclaimed Trump too dangerous to be president, and therefore, any means they employed to stop him were to be justified. And they are doing so for a third time in 2024.

As they continue, they have all but destroyed democracy, ruined the reputation of the media, alienated the public – and embarrassed their country before the world.

1.9.7 This Is Why Democrats Won't Let Harris Or Walz Do Any Real Interviews (2024-09-08 21:18)

Kamala Harris and Tim Walz can't avoid the debates without looking like they're deliberately avoiding them – which means Kamala will be there Tuesday – but they can avoid being asked any serious questions, and they will. You'd think that would be political suicide, and it certainly won't help them in the election. Still, the old saying about being silent and leaving people to think you might be an idiot or opening your mouth and confirming their suspicions is doubly true with this ticket.

The heavy lifting the Democratic Party media did in 2020 was unprecedented, but it's also nothing compared to what will be needed this year. Not because Donald Trump is so wildly popular, neither ticket has a majority favorability rating, but because Kamala Harris and Tim Walz are uniquely awful candidates and, honestly, people.

There's a reason they speak in platitudes and fortune cookie slogans, and it's not because they are desperate to find new ways to convey to voters their policy ideas. They are the equivalent of used car salesmen who are just shy of their boat payment in commissions this month, and they see you walk on their lot. You're the mark.

The limited interviews they've given thus far have been devoid of substance or follow-ups, the two things that make interviews have any value whatsoever. CNN simply plowed through topics, limited by time to the point of worthlessness, which was the purpose of making it so short.

Kamala interviewed with someone called "Angel Baby," which I doubt is the name on the birth certificate. The middle-aged Spanish language radio host in Arizona was tough enough to make CNN's Dana Bash a grand inquisitor. To say it was worth less than zero would be an insult to the book.

Then there is Tim Walz. The stolen valor college mascot who dances around a stage like a coked-out Muppet seems incapable of having a serious conversation. More importantly, the unvetted Fraudie Murphy not only can't act like a normal human being for a few consecutive seconds, he can't string together a coherent thought.

Part of it is that Kamala Harris has, at one point in the last 4 years, been on every side of all the issues. It must be hard to keep up and articulate a vision for someone how has none, but listening to Walz talk makes you realize he wants to hide his own opinions too.

He gave an interview to an NPR station in central Michigan in which he said exactly nothing. At least nothing coherent.

To show what kind of pandering, lying frauds Democrats are, Walz kept claiming he and Harris would do things to lower property taxes. The federal government has no say over property taxes, but he claimed that building more houses and more federal spending on education would lower them, and just their general state of the economy in their fantasy land would too.

Never, in all of property tax history, have any of those things happened, but Timmy just casually dropped that they would throughout the interview. It being conducted by a public radio station meant there was exactly zero engagement or asks for clarity. The "journalist" had their list of 6 questions on 6 different topics and literally nothing said was going to prevent him from asking all 6. It really was one of the most awful examples of an interview I've ever heard, check it out, it's only 8 minutes long.

On each topic, Walz used a lot of words to say nothing. Listening to it and you might be confused into thinking he has some idea of what he's saying, but when you read it you realize he's simply that kid writing every buzzword he can think of in answer to an essay question hoping to get at least partial credit.

Here's his answer on the idea that a Harris/Walz administration could build 3 million houses - 2055 per day - over 4 years. See if anything he says in there makes sense.

Walz said:

"Yeah. And I think when we talk about this one, and I know this for a fact that that my home, my first home I bought, the only home I bought, was using the GI Bill. And what the GI Bill does on that was is it gives you...you don't have to have a down payment on it. And what we know is that housing is foundational to everything. It's foundational to a family stability, it's foundational school achievement and we know that it's the path to generational wealth, and we know that the supplies are too short right now."

"We know that it's a little too difficult to build in some areas and those are things that of course state and local regulations are going to have to work with. But this idea of giving a tax credit on the front end, the same thing with like small businesses, you start people out with this, it gives them the foundation to get in. That foundation allows them to build on it, and what we end up seeing is we see wealthier communities with more money invested back into them. We see a broader tax base, which means lower property taxes for everybody. And so that dream of owning a home. We can do this. What we don't need is, we don't need large venture capitalists buying up large stocks of homes and then jacking the prices up on them. That is not what we need and that's what we've seen in many areas."

"So, I think this plan gets more at that ability to get people in, and look, folks will pay their own way. You're still going to have to pay your mortgage. You're still going to have to make your way, but that coupled with an opportunity economy with a middle class is making a living wage, making a housing wage, has healthcare, and now has a home. We see all kinds of positive things happen when we do that."

Forget the lies; assume it's all true. Does it make sense? Does it sound like someone who knows what they're talking about?

The Left-Wing Industrial Complex can't allow these people near anyone who might know what they're talking about or demand a coherent answer. They can only appeal to dumb people who are ready to believe the idea that there is some quick and easy fix for every problem. Still, these Democrats – who are currently in power and could implement them right now – will only clearly articulate them if they win in November. Otherwise, they'll take their "solutions" to the grave.

Let's send them to their political grave so they can take their ideas with them. That way, we don't have to suffer through the horror of what would inevitably be a deeper hole than we're already in as Kamala cackles and Tim flails around while insisting we can dig our way out of it if we just dig harder.

1.9.8 House Committee Subpoenas Walz in COVID Fraud Scheme Investigation (2024-09-08 21:22)

The GOP-led Committee on Education & The Workforce issued a subpoena to Minnesota Gov. Tim Walz on Wednesday for records related to the largest COVID-19 fraud scheme in the country.

"As the chief executive and the highest ranking official in the state of Minnesota, you are responsible for the MDE [Minnesota Department of Education] and its administration of FCNPs [Federal Child Nutrition Programs]," Chairwoman Virginia Foxx (R-NC) said to Walz in a [1]cover letter accompanying the subpoena. "Statements in the press by you and your representatives indicate that you and other executive officers were involved, or had knowledge of, MDE's administration of the FCNP and responsibilities and actions regarding the massive fraud."

In 2022, a U.S. attorney charged 70 individuals associated with Minnesota-based Feeding Our Future (FOF) for their alleged roles in defrauding the USDA of over $250 million in taxpayer funds—money intended to feed hungry children. To date, five individuals have been convicted of fraud that the assistant U.S. attorney on the case called "not just criminal, [but] depraved and brazen." Charges include federal programs bribery, wire fraud, conspiracy, and money laundering. While dozens are still awaiting trial, questions remain regarding the role of the Minnesota Department of Education's (MDE) administration of the Federal Child Nutrition Programs and its oversight of FOF.

After MDE, under Governor Walz, failed to respond to previous attempts by the Committee to garner information necessary to uncover how the Governor and the USDA allowed such fraud to occur, the Committee today is proceeding with a subpoena to compel responses. ([2]Committee on Education and the Workforce)

The Committee said subpoenas were also sent to the U.S. Department of Agriculture and its Office of Inspector General.

1.9.9 Biden Reveals What the Woefully Misnamed Inflation Reduction Act Is Really About (2024-09-08 21:25)

With his term ending in a matter of months, President Joe Biden is still trotted out on occasion to give remarks. As he continues to be less and less with it, Biden has also made some curious admissions, including when it comes to the woefully misnamed Inflation Reduction Act (IRA), over two years after he signed it into law.

Speaking in Westby, Wisconsin on Thursday, Biden made quite the declaration. "I'm proud to announce that my-my investments—that through my investments, the most significant climate change law ever," accurately pointing out how the IRA is more so about climate alarmism. He also reminded that the bill came with a $369 billion price tag.

"It's called the—we—we should have named it what it was, but it—but any rate," Biden trailed off to laughter from the audience.

Joe Biden just STRAIGHT UP ADMITTED that the Inflation Reduction Act was a TOTAL SCAM that had NOTHING to do with reducing inflation!

Does Kamala Harris agree with this?

"We should've named it what it was!" [1]pic.twitter.com/2WL7N1exN2— Townhall.com (@townhallcom) [2]September 5, 2024

It's not only telling that Biden said the quiet part out loud about the IRA, which is that it didn't even have the proper name, but that he couldn't bring himself to say the actual name of the bill. He started to do so, but was ultimately unable to complete the thought. Is it because the president doesn't even know the name of a supposedly signature piece of legislation? Even if he did, it's still concerning that he couldn't get the words out.

Vice President Kamala Harris, in her interview from CNN last Thursday, spoke about the IRA in terms of prioritizing climate change, as Monica Crowley reminded when sharing a clip of Biden's remarks from this week.

Kamala admitted in her CNN interview that the "Inflation Reduction Act" was a scam to force through climate communism, aka the Green New Deal.

Here's Biden today admitting the same.

Trillions spent, setting off massive inflation, all on a lie.

Prices [7]have certainly gone up during the Biden-Harris administration, which Harris is currently a part of as the sitting vice president, yet she still talks about how she'll handle inflation if she's elected president. Inflation rates [8]are particularly high compared not only to the Trump administration, but the past several presidential administrations going back to Lyndon B. Johnson.

As Harris herself acknowledged in that CNN interview, [9]she also cast the tiebreaking vote for the IRA back in August 2022, making her pledge to combat inflation even more nonsensical.

Harris is still trying to gaslight voters into thinking Bidenomics is working and blames Trump's "mismanagement" of the pandemic for Americans' current struggles.

1.9.10 MSNBC Host Says the Quiet Part Out Loud About the ABC News Debate (2024-09-13 01:11)

Donald Trump missed his chance to deliver a knockout blow to Kamala Harris. It was sloppier than his first debate. She got under his skin, which led to some nonsensical tangents, something Harris wanted to do. Anything that can be done to get her out of talking about policy is a win for that camp. Yet, despite my disappointment in Trump's performance, where he had multiple opportunities to turn Harris inside out as a total clown who is unqualified and unprepared to be president, the vice president was assisted mightily by ABC News moderators David Muir and Linsey Davis. It was the Democrat media complex at work, and they arguably were debating with Trump during this circus last night. MSNBC's Nicole Wallace and Tim Walz both said the quiet part out loud: the moderators rigged the debate.

It was election interference, and when MSNBC hosts and Bill Kristol are saying ABC News' moderators are doing a good job, you know it's trash. From the war in Ukraine, which happened under Biden-Harris, to the spike in crime, ABC News was hell on wheels to fact-check the former president, even bizarrely getting whether Trump was being sarcastic or not. When even Trump-skeptic writers from right-leaning publications are noticing that this set-up is rigged, you know it's bad. Megyn Kelly suggested that this would backfire.

1.9.11 Good Guys with Guns (2024-09-13 01:13)

Do you carry a gun?

Bad idea, says Hollywood. Civilians with guns are fools. You are more likely to hurt yourself than the bad guy.

"Leave it to a good guy with a gun to really screw things up," says a cop on ABC's "The Rookie."

Liberal politicians agree.

"A good guy with a gun will stop bad guys with a gun?! It doesn't hold up," smiles New York Gov. Kathy Hochul.

"An adolescent rescue fantasy," adds an "expert" on CBS.

Now, I'm not a gun person. I was raised among lefty gun haters. I assumed Hollywood and "experts" were right.

When I saw economist John Lott's book, "More Guns, Less Crime," I rolled my eyes. But now I understand that Lott makes a good point.

"A couple million times a year, people use guns defensively," he says in my [1]new video. "When a civilian tries to stop one of these instances, they're overwhelmingly successful."

But FBI reports say self-defense with guns is rare.

"They're simply missing a huge number of cases," says Lott. He's posted [2]a list of cases the FBI ignored, where civilians stopped shooters.

The FBI lists the Pulse nightclub shooting in Orlando. Forty-nine people were killed.

"One week afterwards," says Lott, "there was a similar attack at a nightclub in South Carolina."

But there, a civilian shot the attacker.

"Still had 125 rounds of ammunition on him when he was stopped!" says Lott.

Somehow, the FBI missed that case, along with so many others.

When 17 people were killed at Parkland, Florida, that got lots of news coverage.

Few people know that "just a few months later in Titusville, Florida, (at) an elementary school," says Lott, "a man came up, started firing his gun. Fortunately, a hot dog vendor (with a) concealed handgun was able to wound the attacker and stop him before he was able to kill."

"Stepped in and saved a lot of people's lives," said a local police officer.

But the FBI somehow missed that, too ...

Lott's list of ignored cases includes the story of Raul Mendez, who was at a party when a guest opened fire.

"Bullet enters right by my ear, goes straight through my face and out my left eye ... Blind from one eye and covered in blood, I unloaded four rounds and finished him off."

Mendez probably saved the lives of a dozen people at that party.

I tell him, "The FBI records instances like this, but somehow they have no record of your case."

"They're not recording the true numbers," Mendez replies.

I ask Lott why.

"There's a lot of political views that infect their data," he says. "I had interactions with the people in the FBI ... I had people tell me, 'Well, I'm a Democrat.'"

I push back. "The FBI, who carry guns, are anti-gun? It's not believable."

"They think that it would go against the narrative that they want to push," answered Lott.

Advertisement

Stossel TV asked the FBI why they don't include self-defense cases like Mendez'. They replied that their data is: "not intended to explore all facets of active shooter incidents."

Too bad politicians and the media don't realize that.

"It'd be great if we could just make all guns disappear," says Lott. "But when you ban guns, it's basically the most law-abiding good citizens who obey. Every place in the world that's banned all guns or all handguns has seen murder rates go up."

So-called experts like a psychiatrist featured on Detroit's CBS station confidently say, "There haven't been good guys with a gun who stop mass shootings. It's the kind of thing you learn reading comic books!"

Mendez replies: "I was prepared, and it saved lives. There's no comic book story about that. Those are facts. That's what happened. I was there. I'm sure there's many more out there that go unheard."

1.9.12 Voter Reactions to the ABC News Debate Were Not Good...for Kamala (2024-09-13 01:14)

Donald Trump didn't clinch a decisive win last night, though he had his chances. That's what's so frustrating. Kamala Harris wasn't good, but also not a total disaster like Joe Biden was in June. She got under Trump's skin, with the former president taking the bait on rally size and the 2020 election. Trump sounded and looked flustered over these topics, plus January 6 and the weaponization of the Justice Department. The more he spoke less about policy, the more comfortable Kamala became—that's not good. There were chances to land a haymaker to knock her out, and Trump failed. Instead of demoralizing Democrats, we will now hear about how Kamala shifted the race.

The ABC News debate was a disaster from a moderator standpoint, with David Muir and Linsey Davis exhibiting gross bias, also laying traps for Trump like the question about Kamala Harris' racial identity. Trump was facing Harris, Muir, and Davis last night. If you want to say it was a draw, that's fair, but the fact Trump could bury Harris on policy is what irks me. It was there. Yet, as I noted earlier this morning, it might not matter. The CNN snap poll on who won showed Harris running away with it. Yet, on the crucial issue of the economy, she lost ground. It was already at a paltry 37 percent; It dropped to 35.

□ Holy smokes Trump gained 2 points on the economy among CNN viewers after they watched the debate.

We had voters saying how Trump, by default essentially, is more trusted on immigration. ABC News even admitted post-debate that Harris didn't answer the questions. One voter in a CNN focus group said that when it comes down to brass tacks, her life was better under Trump—this was an undecided voter:

We're in Rorschach territory on this one: those who thought Kamala dominated will see that while other voters will think Trump bested her. Let's revisit this once the latest wave of polls are released. No, I don't think Trump lost, but he didn't win either.

1.9.14 The GOP Could Sweep the Senate...If We Don't Screw It Up (2024-09-16 22:43)

We Republicans have to not just win the Senate but win the Senate beyond the margin of Lisa Murkowski and Susan Collins. If we have less than 53 Republicans in our coalition, it's these two who are going to be running things and Mitch McConnell won't be there to crack the whip and impose his iron discipline. But can we do it? We currently have 49 seats out of 100, but we have a pretty good map this year. That would normally mean that we're well-positioned to win. Yet, we Republicans have a disadvantage. We're Republicans, and far too often, we blow it.

Except this time, that doesn't seem to be true. Things look good. There are some real fights going on, and we shouldn't take any of them for granted. But the fundamentals are with us, the presidential election seems to be going our way despite the regime media orgasm over her marginal debate performance the other night, and we've got some good people running. We need to take the Senate, and we need, as a practical matter, about 53 seats to be able to support Donald Trump in making America great again.

We have a good shot at doing it, but it's not a given. It's not going to be easy. We could very easily not achieve it, especially if we don't focus and work. But things are looking good in recent elections. The vast majority of contested Senate races went away from the presidential winner, and Trump's looking pretty good.

But then, when I start feeling good, I start wondering if it's confirmation bias. I want to win. I want to hear we are doing well. So, I reached out to my sources deep in the fight, folks who are actually working with the candidates or candidates themselves. They are telling me things are looking better overall. Said one deep insider: "Not overhyping our odds, but if the environment is good, lightning could strike and build a durable majority."

Oh, it's not going to be a walkover. It's going to be a battle, and a Trump victory will be key. So, let's see where everything is at from my perspective and from some of the candidates...

Let's start with the gimmes. In West Virginia, Joe Manchin is sending himself off into retirement. There goes a Democrat seat in the reddest of America's states. He will be replaced by their current governor[1], Jim Justice, who looks like he should be chasing Bo and Luke and the General Lee through the backroads in a sheriff's cruiser. He's a politician from another time, arguably a better time than this gender, confused communist nightmare era. He's going to win, and the most important thing besides him providing the GOP's 50th vote is that he will bring his awesome puppy, [2]Ladydog, with him to Washington, DC.

Another done deal is [3]Jim Banks in Indiana, where he'll be replacing another, softer Republican. Banks is a Navy veteran and hardcore, and it looks like the Democrats are giving up even their faint hopes of success there. I asked him about the state of the race, and he told me that his “opponent had $15,000 cash on hand as of the last FEC report, and Democrats appear to be completely conceding Indiana to Republicans.” You love to hear it!

For some reason, the Democrats think they can beat [4]Deb Fischer in Nebraska, and I want to encourage this delusion because I want them to spend money there. Spoiler alert: The Democrats are not going to win Nebraska.

The Democrats say they’re going to beat [5]Rick Scott in Florida, which tells me that they aren’t waiting for the voters to pass the marijuana legalization initiative before getting high.

And, of course, the Democrats are imagining that they are going to turn Texas blue somehow and beat [6]Ted Cruz with some liberal hack. It’s always fun to watch them Lucy and the football his Texas Senate races. Ted’s going to beat this dude like he beat the furry.

Montana is not a done deal, but it’s getting close.

The GOP voters in Montana did the smart thing and nominated [7]Tim Sheehy to replace fake country guy John Tester. Sheehy’s campaign points out that “Tester claims to fight for Montanans, but he votes with Biden-Harris 95 % of the time.” That seems to be a suboptimal argument for reelection. Tester is a professional politician who acts like a character from “Yellowstone” when he visits Montana and drives his Prius to Whole Foods to get tofu when he’s back home in Washington, D.C. Sheehy was a Navy SEAL, and the polls have him ahead. He’s likely to be seat 51.

Now things get more challenging. Ohio and Pennsylvania are the big targets, and I happen to know the nominees in both races. [8]Bernie Moreno, who immigrated legally and made himself rich, is running in Ohio. He built himself a huge business, and, by coincidence, before he even got into politics, one of his companies happened to have an issue out in California, and I was the lawyer For his company. I remember noting that this CEO took a personal interest in that substantial, but not incredibly huge, case. I respect hands-on leadership. Bernie is a great guy and exactly what we need in The Swamp. The only thing I didn’t like about him was that he spoke Spanish with my wife, and I think they were talking smack about me!

Advertisement

I asked him about the state of the race in my home state: “We just got numbers out of the field and are tied - despite Sherrod spending $25 million over eight months. We just started our advertising and have Sherrod at the lowest point of his career. Voters are very smart and aren't sending Sherrod Brown back to the Senate to stop President Trump's agenda when he wins on November 5th!"

The Schlichters come from Pennsylvania, and [9]Dave McCormick lived as a child in both towns where my parents grew up. Dave is a soldier – finally, somebody from the Army! – and I won't hold him being a West Pointer against him. He went on to build a huge business, create jobs, and get rich, which real Americans understand to be a good thing. Dave is a genuine and down-to-earth guy, and I am particularly glad that he is a fellow Gulf War veteran because it'll be nice to have somebody who was part of America's last unequivocal victory helping to rebuild our military.

Some of the other races may be tougher, but they are winnable. I've gotten to know [10]Kari Lake, and the fake regime media image of her is complete baloney. She's down-to-earth, funny, and a smart and dedicated patriot. I think she is particularly wise for reaching out to moderate Republicans this time, trying to rebuild a state party that was shattered by internal division. But can she win? She told me: "The Arizona Senate race is a dead heat — AARP bipartisan polling shows it statistically tied. Club For Growth Polling shows the race tied. NRSC shows me leading by 1 point. President Trump is beating Harris by 4 points in recent New York Times polls." Kari knows her state – she spent years talking to the people of Arizona as a newscaster, and only a fool would underestimate her potential against the outright Marxist lunatic she's running against.

Advertisement

[11]Sam Brown has a tough race in Nevada against a faceless Democrat hack. Another Army vet, Brown has a shot of riding Trump's coattails to a surprise victory.

In Virginia, we have another Navy guy, [12]Hung Cao. He's got a tough but doable race. My fellow O6 told me that "the Virginia Senate race is one that will surprise everyone. President Trump knows this and that's why he made Virginia a battleground state. Virginia wants change, and change can't come from the same person that got us into high inflation, higher grocery and gas prices and higher interest rates." I think he will be greatly helped if the Trump campaign puts some effort into Virginia, which may happen if Kamala completely melts down, something I believe is possible.

And then there is deep blue Maryland. Unlike New Hampshire, where a popular blue state governor wussed out, Larry Hogan stepped up. Look, I know he's soft. But like Susan Collins, we're never doing better than him in that pinko hellhole.

We've got good candidates: [13]Mike Rogers in Michigan, [14]Eric Hovde in Wisconsin, and [15]Nella Domenici in New Mexico. But let's face it, fax. If it isn't a Trump landslide, it will be really hard to win these. That said, if you want to guarantee they lose, do nothing and don't get out there and help.

So, we're well positioned to get a majority, but a functioning and practical majority is more than just one seat. We need at least four turnovers, and right now, that is within reach. But in the end, it really depends on you. Pony up and get out and help. And if you aren't in one of those states, pick a candidate and help him or her out. Make it happen, folks, we have to win this one and win it big if we are going to help Donald Trump make America great again.

1.9.15 Jennings Has a Message for Those Complaining About 'Both Sides' After Trump Assassination Attempt (2024-09-16 22:46)

On Sunday, a second assassination attempt took place against former and potentially future President Donald Trump. It was rhetoric from Democrats and their allies in the mainstream media that incited such an attempt on the Republican nominee's life, as the Trump-Vance campaign highlighted in [1] a long list of examples sent out on Monday. Also on Monday, CNN commentator Scott Jennings shared his thoughts to counteract the narrative from Democrats and the media, which is that it's supposedly a "both sides" issue.

As he made clear we're living in "unprecedented" and "crazy" times, Jennings pointed out "I know everybody is talking today about all the rhetoric in this country, and what are we going to do to fix it going forward."

"Folks, it's too late. It's too late, in my opinion, because all the rhetoric about Donald Trump over the last several years that he is a threat to democracy that the country will come to an end if he gets elected president again," Jennings continued, as he mentioned how the media blamed Sen. JD Vance (R-OH) for bomb threats in Springfield, Ohio. The governor [2]made clear that such threats were hoaxes. "Well, if you have believed that over the weekend, then how can you not believe that the rhetoric leading up to today is not somehow responsible for the fact that this man has now survived two assassination attempts," Jennings asked.

As Jennings pointed out he is "extremely concerned for [Trump's] safety," he also noted he has "no level of confidence and anybody is prepared to do it" when it comes to the need for the nation to "calm down."

That was when host Rahel Solomon tried to cut in, claiming "but the rhetoric is on both sides," prompting Jennings to become even more passionate in his remarks.

"They have tried to kill this man twice. Okay? He got shot in the ear, and this guy was sitting up sharp outside of a golf course to try to kill him this weekend. And I know, after something like this happens, it's very fashionable to talk about rhetoric on both sides. Donald Trump is the target. Okay? He is the current target. And it's happening and it's happened again," Jennings reminded.

He also called on a discussion about losing elections, especially how Democrats and their rhetoric about Trump. "What I want Democrats to do, honestly, is to say, it's okay. Like, if Donald Trump wins, democracy will not end. The Constitution will not end. We're not going to live in a dictatorship. There will not be a bloodbath. All the things they say that are totally fabricated, to me, it would be a good day to stop doing that," Jennings offered.

It was an argument he stressed again later in the segment, after speaking about how "we have a culture of fear in politics." Thus, Jennings added, "the most important thing that could possibly happen, in my opinion, is for everybody to agree, especially Democrats that the country is not going to be irreparably damaged if Democrats lose that where Constitution is not going to go away, democracy is not going to come to an end."

Jennings also once more reminded viewers of the false claims that Democrats have made, should Trump be elected again. "There will be no [3]bloodbath. There will be [4]no dictatorship on day one, which they all say all day long on this network and others. If everyone could just agree that that kind of hyperbolic statement will not take place anymore and that it's not been true every time it's been said, that would be a step in the right direction."

Towards the end of the segment, Jennings also focused on worries for Trump, as he noted that he's "very concerned about Trump's safety. I mean, he- obviously, if he goes outside, he is in danger, and I don't know what to do about it."

I'm not interested in "the rhetoric on both sides" today. Trump is the target. He's survived two assassination attempts. He's in danger and it's probably too late to de-radicalize everyone who thinks the country will end if he wins. 1.9.16 NAACP Poll Is Brutal for Kamala (2024-09-16 22:48)

The tweet from The Hill sounded ominous: an NAACP poll showed that black voters are more enthused to vote in 2024 than in 2008. However, it only takes about three seconds to know that's facially untrue. Kamala Harris isn't Barack Obama. Harris isn't leading in the battleground polls since we know the Trump vote is underestimated—she's nowhere near where she needs to be to offset that polling conundrum. Obama had political skills and could efficiently deliver a message; it resonated. Harris is a cackling idiot who never answers the question. Obama was excellent in interviews, while Harris is a trainwreck from East Palestine, Ohio.

One could argue that the framing done by liberal outlets on this poll is insulting to voters, especially nonwhite voters, as it's an unnecessary 'what they meant to say' sort of spin to counter the heinous polling Harris is generating right now. [1]Here's how the Hill framed this poll:

Black voters, buoyed by Kamala Harris, more excited to vote in 2024 than in 2008: Poll [2]<https://t.co/3COY4X60HI>— The Hill (@thehill) [3]September 15, 2024

A majority of Black voters are just as excited or more this year as in 2008, when then-Sen. Barack Obama (D-Ill.) became the first Black president, according to new polling.

A survey from the NAACP, in partnership with HIT Strategies and Hart Research, found that 78 percent of Black voters feel the same sense of excitement as when Obama first ran, with 56 percent being more excited now than in 2008.

Fifty-one percent of Black voters said they would cast their ballots for Harris if the election were held today. Only 27 percent said the same of former President Trump.

But gender and generational disparities persist among Black voters.

While 79 percent of women over the age of 50 said they would vote for Harris, 66 percent of men over 50 said the same. Only 56 percent of voters aged 18-49 said the same.

And then, Ryan Girdusky decided to go to the source, and it's a disaster for Harris:

So I read this poll and it's actually a disaster for Kamala Harris.

Obama won over 95 % of the black vote.

The NAACP has Kamala winning 63 % of the black vote, including only 49 % of black men under 50. [4]<https://t.co/KO145tLeWs> [5]pic.twitter.com/W20a6gX2zj— Ryan James Girdusky (@RyanGirdusky) [6]September 15, 2024

Newsweek did mention how the NAACP [7]doesn't bode well, though it wasn't as specific as Girdusky. It only noted many lines down that Harris is polling behind past Democratic candidates.

1.9.17 What I did during the Holidays (2024-09-17 22:22)

Daily writing prompt

How do you celebrate holidays?

[1]View all responses

This is my first writing prompt. In the 1980s and 1990s, holidays were reunions with 4 nuclear families with cousins and aunts / uncles and grandparents. My grandma would invite me to her house or my uncle would invite our family over to their house with 3 or 4 other nuclear families. The men watched national football league(Greenbay Packers with Bret Farve) and drank Coors or Pabet Blue Ribbon beer. They would tell stories about their health. Then I had a birthday party for halloween where mom's friends were nurses or the Hartmons (David hartmon, age 39, Brian Hartmon age 37) would spend the night and play Nintendo 64, Saturn, Dreamcast, or Gamecube with me. I would watch Halloween (1979), The Horror of Dracula (1958), The Devil's Bride (1963), Sleepy Hollow (1999), Taste the Blood of Dracula, The thing (1950), Curse of the Demon (1950) or Dracula Prince of Darkness. (1962) We would decorate the house with pumpkins and department 56 halloween houses and german nutcrackers.

At Christmas, I would open presents under a Christmas tree and some years with a Christmas train. In my childhood, I went to a old Redeemer Lutheran church in Burkhardt, Wisconsin to celebrate with mom's pastor. Later I would open presents under a christmas tree, and watch youtube or movies like Ben Hur, A Christmas Carol (1984), A Christmas carol (1938), A Christmas Carol (1951) . Shop Around the Corner, White Christmas, Holiday Inn. There is also german santa clause nutcrackers and wreaths.

During Easter, I would find the basket with a gift inside and watch Ben Hur (1959) or The Ten Commandments, and always Easter Parade (1944). All these movies were on Turner Classic Movies, but over time I bought DVDs and Blurays. There is also Easter bunny nutcrackers.

1.9.18 Share a lesson you wish you had learned earlier in life. (2024-09-17 23:14)

<https://hkh.xrd.mybluehost.me/go-back-talk-to-my-younger-self/>

I went to a trade school earlier in my life in 2004 after high school up until 2007 at WITC New Richmond and Chippewa Valley Technical College I tried Electrician associate degree, but after the Algebra and flunking Electrician in 2nd quarter, I went into Industrial Networking with the multimeters and soldering motherboards and making Cat 3e RJ-45 cable and typing source code C++ into Visual Basic/Visual Studio. some students were taking mechanics or learning business administration. I knew I would fail, because I was failing at Electrician so I needed a Management information systems Business administration like industrial networking administrations. I couldn't see myself getting through college. I went to Rasmussen University after i flunked Chippewa Valley Technical college in River Falls Wisconsin and then WITC New Richmond. I wasn't good socially or with women. Women are just too crazy even then in 2004! I had no girlfriend for 40 years. Unless I had a stroke in my mid-20s. so point is I was at two trade schools. Then I got my BS in project management in business administration after 11 years driving to school, getting tutoring from college or spending most of the week on the school's online message board and typing 10-12 pages a week in Microsoft Word. Its so easy to get Fs in college if you slack just a little. To get that BS i had to be serious for 11 years.

I was on okcupid and eharmory and plentyoffish since 2005 and no woman were interested in me so I dated once in 2005 at a Hudson Wisconsin coffee shop with Nikki or Nicole. Nikki or Nicole was in college taking chemistry to become a scientist and didn't like my JPEG slideshow off my Playstation Portable of my house and hobbies. In 2012, PlentyofFish just banned me for messaging several women. The women wanted rich $100000 salary, tall, intelligent white men, and banned me. In the 2000s, those dating services were free. I have desktop screenshots of those 2000s dating sites logged in, but i have yet to upload them. The good guys were marrying from 2008-2014 my age. Since I'm 40, I know some divorced boy scouts already.

1.9.19 Anyone Notice What Was Odd About the First Biden Cabinet Meeting in 11 Months? (2024-09-22 18:24)

With Joe Biden no longer running, another Trump assassination attempt, and Election Day within weeks, the Biden administration is preparing for their political funeral by holding its first cabinet meeting in almost a year. But there was something unusual about this gathering: First Lady Jill Biden at the head of the table. It reverts to an old question about this presidency: who's in charge?

And would it shock you that CNN would frame the meeting like this as if this were anything but normal? Of course, Jill being at this meeting is buried toward the end. What is likely accurate, and it's not shocking, is that "President" Joe Biden wants his incompetent crew to go into hyperdrive [1]in enacting his agenda as his presidency ends. Everyone does that:

BREAKING: The White House just held its first cabinet meeting in 11 months

President Joe Biden will instruct Cabinet members Friday to “sprint to the finish,” a White House official said, as he looks to burnish legacy items while ensuring as much of his agenda is implemented before a potential second Trump presidency.

“He will direct his Cabinet to get as much work done as possible – whether that is moving funding out the door, announcing new programs or policies or delivering on programs and policies we have already announced,” the official said.

At Friday’s meeting, first lady Dr. Jill Biden will share an update on a White House women’s health research initiative, the first time she’s participated in a such a session. Previous first ladies have attended their husband’s Cabinet meetings.

“The president will direct his Cabinet to get to work and make the next four months as productive as any other period in our administration,” the official said. “Much of the Cabinet has been with President Biden since Day One and this meeting will be an opportunity for all of them to assess the enormous progress they have made together and game out how they will continue to make history in the remaining months of the Biden-Harris administration.”

At no point do the Articles of the Constitution state that the first lady may sit in for the President when he cannot fulfill his duties. In fact, article II section 1 explicitly states the vice president has that responsibility. [6]pic.twitter.com/YmrqRHwM4G— The Redheaded libertarian (@TRHLOfficial) [7]September 20, 2024

1.9.20 JD Vance Delivered Another Masterclass in Obliterating the Media (2024-09-22 18:25)

It got buried because Donald Trump was the victim of another attempted assassination on the same day. Still, Sen. JD Vance (R-OH) took CNN's Dana Bash to the cleaners about the situation in Springfield, Ohio. He took the liberal narrative about the town and ran it over with a tank. He knows the game—and executed another masterclass in outmaneuvering the establishment press. Bash was clearly irritated that she couldn't land any punches, and it was becoming clear that Vance might be entering an area where his invitation to this network might be cut down significantly or outright rejected if he kept embarrassing the network's hosts in this manner.

Bash tried to suggest Vance and Donald Trump were responsible for the bomb threats against the town. We now know that these threats were hoaxes sent by unhinged jokers overseas, though the media was sure it was the fault of the 2024 Republican ticket. At the time and during this interview, Vance denounced the violence. Still, the Ohio Republican said, rightly, that we can do both things: reject the violence being directed at the town and talk about Joe Biden and Kamala Harris' failed immigration policies, specifically the abuse in issuing temporary protected status.

Not sure if CNN is going to keep inviting JD Vance on as he always seems to run circles around their “journalists.” After spending 5 mins trying to blame him for reported threats in Springfield, Ohio, Vance leaves [1]@DanaBashCNN stammering that of course she would be treating... [2]pic.twitter.com/6HR1PzJC1n— Tom Elliott (@tomselliott) [3]September 15, 2024

I can’t stop watching this. Dana Bash jerking her head around like a bird because her target didn’t accept her Narrative’s premise. Vance rejects the premises. Then he attacks the premises. Just beautiful. [4]pic.twitter.com/gsNOV4hiwJ— Oilfield Rando (@Oilfield_Rando) [5]September 15, 2024

The CNN host interrupted Vance, who took the combative interview in stride. You know that Bash was cornered when she pressed Vance, a US Senator from Ohio, on whether he visited Springfield. When Vance said yes, he’d been there more than 100 times and knew the community. Bash wondered if he had recently as if that mattered. We know one thing is true: Bash and CNN probably never set foot within 1000 miles of Springfield until they thought they could use it to attack the Republicans.

The fact that memes and now remixed songs are coming from Trump’s remarks about “eating the dogs” and “eating the cats” shows the media cannot control this story. They cannot weaponize it, and it drives them nuts. A lot of it has to do with the fact that everyone knows the media has no integrity. They lie—and we know CNN is unabashedly anti-Trump.

Cope and seethe, CNN.

All Vance did was bring up concerns from his constituents. He admitted that he’d ignore it if it were one or two people. It’s not that, though—and now it seems to be spreading to nearby Columbus and Dayton.

With the media taking buckshot to the face on that narrative, why should we discount the Springfield city manager who made the allegations about pets being eaten back in March or the numerous eyewitness accounts?

Springfield, Ohio resident, Mark Sanders, tells Primetime how the influx of Haitian migrants has displaced lifelong residents and how they're being financially preyed upon. He also says their geese and duck populations have been nearly decimated... [6]pic.twitter.com/RMgsRWBcqz— Jesse Watters (@JesseBWatters) [7]September 13, 2024

SPRINGFIELD RESIDENT: "Have I seen a Haitian Creole immigrant killing ducks? Yes...They are chopping their heads off...They are also gutting animals up the reservoir."

1.9.21 Can Harris's Cynical, Run-Out-the Clock Campaign Succeed? (2024-09-22 18:26)

Cynically running out the clock has been the overarching principle of the entire abbreviated 105-day presidential campaign of Vice President Kamala Harris – ever since President Joe Biden, at the 11th hour, dropped out in July.

Harris seems unwilling or unable to answer any impromptu question that she has not been previously prepped for. Her answers at the debate were memorized and canned. They never addressed the questions asked.

Her single, 11-minute post-debate Philadelphia interview was a shipwreck of dodging and dissimulating – even though the host was sympathetically left-wing.

Even socialist Bernie Sanders pointed out that for Harris to get elected, she must temporarily disown her lifelong leftist credentials.

As vice president, she must further deny co-ownership of the unpopular record of the Biden-Harris administration.

Left unstated is that whether she wins the presidency – or loses it and continues as vice president for another three months – nonetheless she will inevitably revert back to her hard-core, lifelong leftist beliefs.

In addition, Harris has reconstructed her privileged upbringing as a child of two PhDs, living in a posh Montreal neighborhood into a struggling, middle-class Oakland childhood.

How can she stage such a complete makeover – and contemptuously count on the voting public to be so easily deceived?

She avoids all news conferences, one-on-one nationally broadcast interviews, and town halls. And like Biden, she will debate only on leftist venues with impartial pro-Harris moderators.

When asked to provide the details of her past responsibility for the open border, inflationary economy, spiraling crime, attacks on fossil fuels, and collapsing foreign policy, Harris smiles, makes hand gestures, and dodges. She changes the subject to her empathetic personality, her "joy" campaign, and her iconic profile as a supposedly dynamic black woman.

When pressed, Harris outsources the task of squaring her hypocrisies and subterfuges to the stonewalling campaign, Democratic surrogates – and the media.

Harris is also certainly not running on her demonstrable experience, vision, or intelligence as much as she is not Trump (or, for that matter, her former partner, Biden).

To make that distinction stark, Harris must demonize and bait Trump nonstop and make the country fear him.

So, she paints Trump as a racist and violent insurrectionist, not a former president whose four-year term saw a superior foreign policy, economy, border, and security than during the Biden-Harris term.

Instead, Harris has repeatedly claimed Trump is a dictator and a threat to democracy – as if he had politically weaponized the FBI, CIA, DOJ, or IRS as had former President Barack Obama and Biden.

Trump as Hitler has become a staple Democrat smear for the past decade.

That vicious caricature is so entrenched that major Democratic figures assume it's OK to joke about, or seriously call for, Trump's demise.

So, Harris's current prominent advisor David Plouffe years ago warned the nation that "it is not enough to simply beat Trump. He must be destroyed thoroughly. His kind must not rise again."

Just last year, Rep. Dan Goldman, D-NY, claimed that Trump "is destructive to our democracy, and he has to be, he has to be eliminated."

Advertisement

Even after an assassin sought to kill Trump last week, House Minority Leader Hakeem Jeffries declared, "Extreme MAGA Republicans are the party of a national abortion ban and Trump's Project 2025. We must stop them."

Harris's dehumanizing of Trump, outsourcing the campaign to the media, avoiding all public dialogue, and temporarily reinventing one's politics and biography have taken a toll on the country.

Harris was coronated the Democratic candidate without ever entering a primary or winning a single delegate by vote. Some 14 million Democrat primary voters were reduced to irrelevancy.

Like the 2020 Biden campaign, Harris has nationalized a new kind of cynical campaign in which leftist candidates seek for a few months to deceive the public into thinking they are centrist and moderate – until elected.

Avoiding all cross-examination and outsourcing the campaign to the obsequious media is now the new norm.

Most news stories deemed unhelpful to Harris – the left-wing, pro-Harris politics of the recent would-be Trump assassin, the distortion that dozens of bomb threats were called in against Springfield schools by Trump supporters when most, if not all, were perpetrated by foreign actors, or prominent Democrats before and after the recent assassination attempt blaming Trump for being the target of an assassin – are suppressed by the media.

The recent two foiled assassination attempts on Trump logically follow a near-decade pattern of trying to destroy rather than outvote him.

The Russian collusion hoax, the laptop disinformation con, the two impeachments, the effort to remove Trump from some 16 state ballots, and the attempt to jail and bankrupt Trump through five criminal and civil "lawfare" indictments and suits also led to the current hateful climate of Trump assassination attempts.

Harris thinks her delays, deceptions, and vilifications for the next 47 days will ensure her victory.

But if so, it will be because she, her stealth campaign, and her self-proclaimed guardians of democracy have been willing to systematically destroy it.

1.9.22 Tim Walz Roasted for Major Slip Up (2024-09-22 18:28)

Democrat vice presidential nominee Gov. Tim Walz (D-Minn) let slip the truth behind the Biden-Harris Administration— and the agenda he’s been touting since becoming Vice President Kamala Harris’ running mate.

During a campaign stop In Pennsylvania, Walz declared that America cannot “afford four more years of this.”

While criticizing former President Donald Trump’s running mate, Sen. JD Vance (R-OH), Walz promised to bring Harris home, claiming Vance and Trump want to “instill fear.”

“They want to tell you that [you should] just get over it; it’s a fact of life. This is the way it is,” he said. “[Harris] simply has said it doesn’t have to be this way. It doesn’t have to be this way. We can’t afford four more years of this.”

Tim Walz: “We can’t afford four more years of this.”

While it is unclear what Walz was referring to when he said the U.S. can't "afford four more years," social media was in a frenzy pointing to obvious issues the Biden-Harris Administration has caused.

Walz is right. We cannot afford 4 more years of woke incompetence.— Coco ☐☐ (@CoClarified) [5]September 21, 2024

Thanks to Bidenomics, prices are up 17.3 percent, with food prices increasing 20.2 percent. Rent costs are up 19 percent, and electricity costs are up 25 percent.

Since January 2021, when President Joe Biden first took office, the price of ground beef shot up [6]26 percent. The recent Consumer Price Index (CPI) data found that overall grocery items increased by 22 percent when Trump left the White House.

In addition, illegal immigration has swept through the country, destroying American communities and taking innocent lives.

Due to Biden and Harris' policies, the United States is also on the brink of WWII. Hundreds of millions of dollars have gone toward foreign countries peddling war and corruption, while the U.S.'s own border has not been helped.

So, yes, Walz, you're right. America cannot afford to spend another four years under a Harris Administration.

1.9.23 Kamala Harris And Oprah Winfrey's Delusional Campaign Telethon (2024-09-22 18:30)

I've never understood the appeal of Oprah Winfrey. She's always struck me as a giant fraud, the kind of person who will smile and hug when the cameras are on but an absolute oblivious nightmare when the public is not looking. Note that I didn't say mean; I don't know if she's mean, but she sure as hell seems to have zero self-awareness regarding her surroundings.

That's how she could do a show, back when she did shows, about her "favorite things," and it'd be full of things you'd have to mortgage your house to afford. Sure, it's great that she could be the world's most expensive whatever it is, but she seemed to notice no one, not her, could too.

It's the ultimate "Let them eat cake" mentality.

Kamala Harris, on the other hand, is just the opposite. From all reports, she is an absolute nightmare to work for. As Vice President, [1]her staff had more turnover than a [2]Suzuki Samurai.

Oprah actually grew up poor, and Kamala grew up really well-off, no matter how many times she tried to claim she was "middle-class." Do you know anyone whose family struggled with two parents who had Ph.D.s? Even after they divorced, high pay and job security were there waiting for both of them. Why she claims to have grown up in Oakland when she grew up in Berkeley and Montreal is a testament to her feeling the need to hide her privilege from Democratic Party voters. It's why she claims to have worked at a McDonald's, when no single human being has ever claimed to remember her there or has any proof that it has ever happened.

When your boss is Joe Biden, you learn that you can lie about your biography with impunity because even when you're caught, no one bothers reporting on it.

One thing Kamala Harris and Oprah Winfrey have in common is they are so insulated from the real world and even distant memories of when they weren't part of the wealthy elite that they can't be related to normal people. It's probably been 50 or more years since Oprah has had to shower from work rather than for it. Unless you count how Kamala got her first political job from Willie Brown, she likely never has had to.

So, when the two of them got together to "help" Kamala's presidential campaign, it made perfect sense that it would be a completely out-of-touch trainwreck.

A friend who works in crisis management once told me about the time a client, a long-dead singer who was in the midst of a career-destroying crisis, and an old, very famous actor (also now dead) decided they would address the singer's scandal by doing a live television interview with each other. While it would have been an all-time spectacular mess, especially if you knew the names, the crisis management firm talked them out of it over several hours. It was the best money either of them had ever spent.

There was no firm to talk Kamala and Oprah out of what they did.

It was a 90-minute joke of a campaign event, filled with filthy rich celebrities and screened audience members (who were all donors, by the way) pretending they weren't rehearsed. You could tell if it was fake by how the studio audience chosen to recite questions were wearing microphones that were run up under shirts, not handheld mics someone had randomly chosen would be given.

When not tossing word salads and not answering basic questions about things as simple as how she plans on bringing down costs she helped raise, the multimillionaire and the multibillionaire spent a lot of time talking to Hollywood celebrities. The collective net worth of Julia Roberts, Ben Stiller, Jennifer Lopez, Bryan Cranston, Chris Rock, Meryl Streep, and the rest likely rival Oprah's. Kamala Harris interacts more with them than she does with the audience.

Advertisement

Why? Because she and Oprah think they can “celebrity” her way into office. Barack Obama did it; why not Kamala?

However, Obama, while he was a “celebrity candidate,” also spoke about policies. He lied about them – if you like your doctor, you can keep your doctor, anyone? – but he at least offered them up. Kamala couldn’t give you a straight answer if you asked her what time it was; instead, she would lecture you about time zones and even conduct a brain-damaged exploration of the concept of time while mispronouncing basic words.

The Vice President has no idea how to communicate with real people because she hasn’t had to in decades. To win an election in California, you have to suck up to the wealthy donor class. Do that, and you’re most of the way to winning the Democratic Party’s nomination. Land that, and you’re in. You’ll run against another Democrat, usually, but if you can’t out-box-check them on the left-wing victimhood food pyramid, you’re as good as elected.

President is different – you have to appeal to real people, normal people. Kamala has never had to before and she has no idea how to do it. Oprah thinks she does because she’s been made rich by preaching to people on television. But just like the church Oprah belonged to for decades, then claimed to have not noticed the casual racism of (she was a member of Jeremiah Wright’s church with Barack and Michelle Obama, who also missed all the racism), the world she inhabits is unrelatable to most people. And thank God for that.

Weirdly, even though he’s been rich his whole life, Donald Trump actually can relate to normal people. The poll of Teamsters members shows just how connect they feel to him. There is no such corollary for Harris. The closest would be empty-nested, wealthy, white suburban women who have nothing to do all day except sip chardonnay and convince themselves they know best how everyone else should live. You know, Oprah’s old viewers.

Those two celebrities I referenced trying to hold a televised interview to save one of their careers had people they paid to tell them “no” when needed. Oprah Winfrey and Kamala Harris have no such people around them. And it showed in that “town hall.”

But what it really showed was how out-of-touch with normal people Kamala Harris truly is and how disinterested in even talking with them she is when Julia Roberts is available.

Life is about priorities, and you will learn everything you need to know about someone by watching what they do when they think they’re in safe company, which Harris even was. For that reason, I am grateful for Oprah Winfrey—but only for today.

1.9.24 How Nebraska Could Change the Outcome of the Election (2024-09-22 18:34)

Nebraska has renewed efforts to make it a winner-takes-all electoral votes state after Gov. Jim Pillen (R-NE) and Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) met with more than 20 Republican state senators to discuss changing the state's electoral college votes.

Nebraska and Maine are the only states that do not follow the winner-take-all system for electoral votes. Instead, it gives two electoral votes based on the statewide result and votes allocated by who wins certain congressional districts. In Nebraska, two of the five electoral votes are awarded to the candidate who wins the most votes statewide, while the other three go to the winners of each of the state's three congressional districts.

In recent months, the red state has attempted to secure a move that would award former President Donald Trump an extra electoral college vote in what will be a tight race. The extra vote could secure the election for the 45th president.

Meanwhile, Maine Democrats have tried to counteract the Nebraska legislature's move. However, it appears Democrats missed the deadline.

"I want the law changed. I've made no qualms about it," Graham said. "They were open-minded. I said: 'Listen, it's your decision to make. It comes down to one electoral vote. I want you to understand what that one vote would mean.'"

With the 2024 race looking to be tight, each electoral vote will be critical for the presidential candidates. Getting 270 delegates for either candidate will come down to just a few states.

Nebraska Sen. Merv Riepe (R-NEB) said he spoke to Trump, who supported changing the law.

Earlier this year, Gov. Jim Pillen (R-NEB) and Trump endorsed a proposal to change the state's Electoral College to a winner-take-all system. Ultimately, it was struck down.

However, Pillen announced efforts to call for a special legislative session that would reconsider the proposal if the GOP had 33 votes to make the change.

Although Nebraska is predominantly a Republican state, its 2nd Congressional District, which surrounds Omaha, has historically gone to Democrats, including former President Obama in 2008 and President Joe Biden in 2020.

If the law were to be changed, and Vice President Kamala Harris wins Michigan, Wisconsin, and Pennsylvania. In contrast, Trump wins North Carolina, Georgia, Arizona, and Nevada, they would tie at 269 electoral votes. However, if the change does not happen, and the same election results as explained above occur, and she takes Omaha, Harris would secure enough votes to be the next president, 270-268.

1.9.25 Illegal Aliens Arrested for Trying to Steal From Hurricane Victims in Eastern TN (2024-09-30 22:02)

In Washington County, Tennessee, a gang of illegal aliens decided to do the unthinkable amid the chaotic conditions that have befallen the area due to Hurricane Helene. They got busted, robbing stranded residents trapped due to heavy rains and catastrophic flooding. Over 100 people have died, with many expected to be without access to water or electricity for weeks.

Based on reports, Sheriff Keith Sexton and his deputies arrested eight men on September 28. They were due in court today and held on $20,000 bond:

NEW: 8 alleged migrants have been arrested in Eastern, Tennessee for robbing flood victims as local communities try to recover from apocalyptic flooding.

Meanwhile, we shouldn't expect much from the Biden administration. Kamala has been dragging her feet, taking staged photos to make it seem like she's engaged with the situation. Joe Biden likely is getting this natural disaster and the Israeli strikes in Yemen mixed up. These clowns did nothing when there was a toxic train derailment in East Palestine, Ohio. And we're more than blasé when Maui was engulfed in the deadliest wildfire in a century. This is rapidly becoming the Biden-Harris Katrina moment.

1.9.26 Israeli Forces Have Invaded Lebanon (2024-09-30 22:04)

We have reports that Israeli forces have invaded Lebanon. It was a military operation many observers foresaw even in the immediate stages of the ground war in Gaza after the October 7 attacks. The rocket attacks from Hezbollah have led to an internal displacement crisis within Israel.

The terror group planned a massive barrage that targeted Tel Aviv that was only disrupted at the last minute by a massive airstrike by Israeli forces. They didn't get all the munitions but severely crippled what could have been a more deadly attack. For months, it was assumed that at some point, Israel would have to invade Lebanon. It couldn't come at a better time: the terror group's entire leadership was decapitated in a massive airstrike last week. Hassan Nasrallah and his minions were turned into an ashtray, and his replacement was killed hours after he assumed control of the terror group.

The operation doesn't seem to be as aggressive as Israel's sloppy 2006 incursion or its invasion from 1982. The ground operations come after Israel conducted limited cross-border raids for intelligence purposes. The primary goal is overrun Hezbollah positions from which they've launched endless rocket attacks for months (via [10]NY Post):

The Israeli military has closed a stretch of northern Israel along the Lebanese border — as US officials reported that the Jewish state is preparing for an “imminent” invasion of southern Lebanon to take out Hezbollah outposts.

By Monday night, Israel's Northern Command head, Maj. Gen. Ori Gordin, ordered a section of Israel's northern district closed to all civilians, according to the Times of Israel.

The Jewish state told the Biden administration Monday that a limited incursion into southern Lebanon to take out Hezbollah's terror infrastructure is ready to begin at any moment, US officials told the Washington Post.

The goal is to ensure Hezbollah no longer can continue its daily missile strikes on northern Israel, which have caused tens of thousands to evacuate the area since Oct. 8.

The ground operation follows intelligence raids by special operations troops that have been carried out over several months, the Wall Street Journal reports.

What have you been putting off doing? Why?

[1]View all responses

I always wanted to visit a foreign country, but I put off doing it since it costs $3300 to travel there and if I'm lucky, Donald Trump will be president in 2025. You know because the southern border is horrible, terrible inflation, illegal aliens, Democrats lost Afghanistan war last year with thousands of military equipment lost (all Biden's /Democrats fault) , Biden's dementia. Democrats are still leading for some reason.

I wanted to renounce to Australia due to late 2020s/early 2030s nuclear family problems and long term employment troubles (it seems managers ask minimum wage when they employ me and want me to be homeless and hungry without friendships or relationships). I doubt Australia is this evil. I guess I had government payments off medicaid and other generous payments so i have somewhere to call home.

1.10.2 Understanding the Orthodox Christian worldview motivating Vladimir Putin in war with Ukraine (2024-10-02 23:11)

It seems a good, if not vital, moment to try and look beyond the narrow analysis of the dreadful war in Ukraine provided by the vast majority of our politicians and mainstream media, given the current conflation of related and significant events all happening around the same time.

Ukraine President Volodymyr Zelensky is currently visiting the US to drum up further military support for his beleaguered country – including being able to fire western missiles deep into Russia – while Russian President Vladimir Putin is again warning that the nuclear option is not off the table if Russia feels threatened enough, and Republican presidential nominee Donald Trump is saying that if he becomes the next US President he will end the war in Ukraine.

Ten years or so ago, a popular documentary film on prime-time Russian television drew attention to the lessons for Russia about the fall of Byzantium. It was from Byzantium that missionaries had brought the Orthodox faith to Russia in the 10th century, and it was to the Byzantine Emperors that the Tsars of Russia had traced their line of descent, all the way back to Constantine the Great.

The film The Fall of an Empire: The Lessons of Byzantium claimed that the foundations of the modern West's banking system derive from the Fourth Crusade's loot of Constantinople in 1204, and also that a significant factor in the Empire's final collapse had been its impoverishment by rapacious Western oligarchs through aggressive exploitation of trade concessions granted to them in 1082 by a cash-strapped Byzantine Emperor.

Constantinople's sack in 1204 remains firmly embedded in the consciousness of the Orthodox East, partly because it so weakened Byzantium to the point that its final collapse became inevitable, causing Christendom's centre of gravity to shift westward, but also because of the barbaric savagery of the Crusaders, who looted their way across Constantinople in a manner even the Vandals and Goths would have found unpalatable.

Although the Byzantines recaptured Constantinople from the Crusaders in 1261, the West's collective failure to honour the agreement they made with the Byzantines at the Council of Florence in 1449, and to provide them with military assistance against the advancing armies of Mehmet the Conqueror, was a further contributory factor in Constantinople's final fall to the Ottomans in 1453.

A particular source of scandal for the Orthodox East is that the Crusaders had been engaged in a Holy War. The concept of Holy War has never really been accepted by the Orthodox East, which is why Patriarch Kyrill's support for the Russian invasion of Ukraine is so controversial within the Orthodox world.

In the West, however, since at least the time of St Augustine and his Just War Theory, later expanded on by St Thomas Aquinas in Summa Theologica, there has long been an acceptance that there are circumstances in which war can be justified, one example of which is if the war is to be fought for the “common good”.

The Byzantines avoided war as much as they possibly could, relying on diplomacy and the use of bribery instead, in order to achieve their foreign policy objectives. However, they did also accept that there are circumstances in which the oikoumene – the ordered hierarchy of subordinate, Orthodox Christian states bound by a common allegiance to the Emperor of Byzantium – might use armed force in order to protect the integrity of its people.

Importantly, as far as the Byzantines were concerned, the Empire existed not for the purposes of material profit, or for political and social “progress”, but rather to provide the basic material conditions within which the Emperor’s subjects could pursue their one, over-riding duty and purpose in life – the quest for deification (theosis), or union with God. This quest required that a man be able to master himself to the extent that he ceased to be a creature of appetite.

The Byzantines strongly believed that one of the Emperor’s sacred duties was to act as the katechon, “the one who withholds” (2 Thessalonians 2: 6-7), a biblical concept developed by the Byzantines into a political philosophy, according to which the Emperor’s most sacred duty was to act as a restraint on the rise of the Antichrist. Any threat to the existence of the Empire, so long as the Empire was led by an Emperor mindful of his duty to act as a katechon, raised, in the view of the Byzantines, the possibility of the victory of the Antichrist.

Russian President Vladimir Putin is regarded by some in the Orthodox world as a 21st-century katechon, a view of Putin that is obviously very different to the one that prevails in decision-making circles in the West and among our media.

Despite recent claims in various Western press outlets that Putin dabbles in the occult, and likes to discuss nuclear weapons policy with Mongolian shamans – as described in a recent story by UK media The Times – it is an undeniable fact that Putin is a practicing Russian Orthodox Christian, who regularly attends the Divine Liturgy, and takes guidance from Orthodox spiritual directors, known as starets, as well as from his confessor Father Tikhon Shevkunov, who directed the film The Fall of an Empire.

In much the same way that many in the Orthodox world believe that, in order to weaken the Byzantine Empire – and maximise profit – the late medieval West instigated the separation of Serbia and Bulgaria from the Empire, so too, in around 2004, the great Russian writer Alexander Solzhenitsyn warned Vladimir Putin that the US-led, neo-liberal West would set about Russia's dismemberment by encouraging its "Balkanisation".

Solzhenitsyn said that this policy would be justified in the name of liberal "progress" – an encouragement of the "rights" of the constituent parts of the Russian Empire to exercise the principle of self determination, and break away from Russia. In actual fact, some would argue, that dismemberment of Russia would have nothing to do with high moral principle, and everything to do with weakening Russia's sovereignty in order to open it up to commercial exploitation by outside interests.

Alexander Solzhenitsyn, initially an atheist and later a Russian Orthodox Christian, stands within the "Slavophil" tradition of Russian intellectuals – a core belief of this tradition being that the Russian people are a Chosen People, with a unique destiny to act as a catalyst for the spiritual transformation of the world. Much of the reason for this ancient belief derives from the "Russian situation" on a boundary between East and West – long regarded as a necessary preliminary for the emergence of a new civilisation.

"Sophisticated" people in the West, of course, scoff at the idea of a people having a unique, God-given destiny, but plenty of the greatest intellectuals produced by Russia, including, for example, FM Dostoevsky and Vladimir Soloviev, fully subscribed to such a view of Russia as the bearer of a messianic mission.

If a people believe that they are descended from God, and not so much from apes, then it is not surprising perhaps if they believe that they have a God-given destiny to fulfil in life.

The Slavophiles of the nineteenth century were especially exercised with the problem of how best to respond to the Enlightenment-conditioned ideas that began to penetrate Russia from the West in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries.

They firmly believed that the Russian Orthodox faith is a purer, spiritually superior interpretation of Christianity than Westernised versions, and that Russia, which even at the end of the 19th century had not yet fully industrialised, was in a strong position. This was due to its unique situation as a Christian country on the boundary between East and West, and it being in a position to learn from the mistakes made by the West during the latter's process of rapid industrialisation, which the Slavophiles believed had led to a degradation of European character, intelligence and creativity.

[1]RELATED: Neo-liberal chaos: from the Olympics' opening ceremony to the UK riots

The Slavophiles were not imperialists – in fact they were probably more akin to the "off-the-grid" hippy types and eco-warriors of our times. Many, if not most, were, like Alexei Khomiakov, who had served in the Imperial Guard, high-minded, country gentlemen, nourished by the ascetic traditions of their Orthodox faith, with a deep love and respect for what they saw as the exemplary character of the Russian peasantry.

The Slavophiles were absolutely determined to resist any attempt to Westernise Russia. Khomiakov, for example, was famous for wearing a kaftan when visiting his club in Moscow, rather than the Western-style frock coat that Peter the Great had ordered on the gentry as part of his efforts to Westernise and “modernise” Russia.

The Slavophil vision for Russia was of a trans-national, decentralised Russia, based around a network of village republics, rather like Gandhi’s vision for a post-independence India, all held together under the leadership of a father figure, the Tsar Autocrat, protector of the Orthodox faith, spiritually bound to the service of his people through the act of solemn anointing at his coronation.

The Slavophil vision for the world was of a universal brotherhood of man, as outlined so eloquently, for example, by Dostoevsky in his famous “Pushkin Speech”.

It is said that when Solzhenitsyn met Putin in 2000, there was a meeting of minds about how best to rebuild Russia, although it is also said that Solzhenitsyn later expressed disappointment at Putin’s failure to properly prioritise action to prevent impending ecological catastrophe.

Putin, for his part, was especially impressed by Solzhenitsyn’s focus on what Solzhenitsyn called “The Great Catastrophe of the 1990s”, which was one way of describing the fact that, following the collapse of the Soviet Union, 25 million Russians had suddenly found themselves cut off from their homeland.

The question that Solzhenitsyn believed Russians must ask themselves was, “shall our people be or not be?” Solzhenitsyn believed that the Russian people were not so much an ethnic identity as a spiritual consciousness, and that any dismemberment of the Russian people, via, for example, the break up of the union of the Slavic people, would lead to the ultimate death of a unique spiritual consciousness – with all the negative consequences that loss would bring to the world as a whole.

In the light of all this it is not unreasonable, therefore, to understand Putin’s “special operation” in Ukraine, the place where the Russian people were first united by the Christian faith, in terms of an attempt by Putin to protect Russia’s particular spiritual consciousness, which Solzhenitsyn believed will wither away and die if Russia’s leaders allow it to be dismembered.

The French playwright Honoré de Balzac once said that “behind every fortune there is a crime”. One of the justifications for Byzantine autocracy was that it was needed to act as a check against the kind of oligarchic corruption that had helped bring about the collapse of pagan Rome.

Although the Russian aristocracy was hated by many for having allowed itself to become heavily Westernised, many Russian aristocrats only ever spoke Russian when dealing with their servants, and there was an undeniably close link between the Russian peasantry and the Tsars. It was Tsar Alexander II, for example, who had forced the emancipation of the serfs, and it was to the Tsars that the peasantry would directly appeal when they felt that their rights were being undermined by government elites in St Petersburg.

One of the themes of the campaign leading up to the US presidential election this November is widespread distrust of what President Trump has called the “Washington Swamp”, which Robert F Kennedy Jr believes has been pervaded by corporate corruption and subsequently caused innumerable harm to the physical and environmental health of the US.

At the same time, vice presidential candidate JD Vance is known to have been involved in conversations about whether or not America’s pursuit of economic growth, the cornerstone of corporate profit, really is conducive to the nation’s health.

If the Republicans win the next US presidential election, there may well emerge a strong degree of synergy between the anti-establishment policies of President Trump, Vice President Vance, John F. Kennedy Jr and President Putin, all of whom bear a deep distrust of global, oligarchic elites – the kind of elites that brought both Byzantium, in the late Medieval Era, and Russia in the 1990s, to their knees.

And the kind of elites, as some in the US are arguing, who, driven by a deluded faith in the false of gods of economic growth and human “progress”, are more than capable of bringing America to its knees.

1.10.3 JD Vance’s Catholic conversion inspired by St Augustine - and the wreckage of the modern age (2024-10-02 23:13)

The start of the 1996 film Jerry Maguire begins with our hero, the same-named sports agent played by Tom Cruise, suddenly getting an attack of morals about the way the sports management business he is in conducts itself and treats its clients, often young, impressionable sports stars.

During a long-night-of-the-soul episode, he pens a manifesto/mission statement laying out what's wrong with the industry and what needs to change, focusing on working with fewer clients to produce more caring relationships. Then, in an even more audacious moment, he sends it (by fax) to everyone in the business.

Initially, it seems that he has become a hero – everyone praises him for speaking out and trying to improve what needs improving. But then it begins, the system pushing back: over lunch he is fired, and then one by one his own clients start to leave him and he ends up with no one, a pariah for daring to buck the status quo.

JD Vance, the newly nominated running mate for Donald Trump, recently had a similar “Jerry Maguire” moment, penning a [1]long, heartfelt and very revealing essay for Catholic journal The Lamp, detailing how and why he became a Catholic.

His explanation, titled “How I joined the resistance”, reads like a Catholic mission statement. His turn to Catholicism is shown to be inextricably caught up in, and a response to, the dreadful state of society Vance grew up surrounded by and which actually continues even when he finds himself in the higher echelons of society, where as he trains to be a top-flight lawyer he finds himself submerged in hyper competitiveness, hubris and hollow careerism.

Fortunately for Vance, and unlike Jerry Maguire, given how many people aren't interested in Catholicism or what it has to say about the state of the world, his manifesto hasn't caused much reaction or led to much comment.

Though it is the most read article on The Lamp website, as it should be. It's fascinating. Any US Catholic, whether leaning Democrat or Republican, should read it to get a better understanding of the man and where he is coming from. Especially given that, as Trump's running mate and vice president nominee, Vance now has a real chance of becoming the country's third Catholic president in 2028 (if Donald Trump wins, he can only serve one term up to 2028).

Vance describes how he grew up with religion in the background thanks to his beloved grandmother who took care of him much of the time – though he highlights how much she mistrusted Catholicism, finding its liturgy and habits particularly peculiar – and notes that his “least favourite” passage from Scripture was Numbers 14:18: “The LORD is slow to anger, abounding in love and forgiving sin and rebellion. Yet he does not leave the guilty unpunished; he punishes the children for the sin of the parents to the third and fourth generation.”

He explains that previously he took this as “evidence of a vengeful, irrational God”, helping to drive him away from religion. But now, he says, he reads it very differently, because “who could look at the statistics on what our early twenty-first century culture and politics had wrought—the misery, the rising suicide rates, the ‘deaths of despair’ in the richest country on earth, and doubt that the sins of parents had any effect on their children?”

He goes on to say that, as a result, the words of Saint Augustine “echoed from a millennium and a half earlier, articulating a truth I had felt for a long time but hadn’t spoken”.

Vance cites a passage from City of God, which he had to study at college, in which Augustine summarises the decadent ways of Rome’s ruling class, the saintly scholar writing his critique from the perspective of that same debauched class:

“This is our concern, that every man be able to increase his wealth so as to supply his daily prodigalities, and so that the powerful may subject the weak for their own purposes. Let the poor court the rich for a living, and that under their protection they may enjoy a sluggish tranquillity; and let the rich abuse the poor as their dependants, to minister to their pride. Let the people applaud not those who protect their interests, but those who provide them with pleasure. Let no severe duty be commanded, no impurity forbidden. Let kings estimate their prosperity, not by the righteousness, but by the servility of their subjects. Let the provinces stand loyal to the kings, not as moral guides, but as lords of their possessions and purveyors of their pleasures; not with a hearty reverence, but a crooked and servile fear...”

The passage goes on, with St Augustine giving many more examples of folly and a broken society, leaving one hard pushed not to agree with Vance’s summation that:

“It was the best criticism of our modern age I’d ever read. A society oriented entirely towards consumption and pleasure, spurning duty and virtue.”

Vance notes that at the same time he read St Augustine, his friend Oren Cass published a book “arguing that American policy makers had focused far too much on promoting consumption as opposed to productivity, or some other measure of wellbeing”.

His friend’s book – like Jerry Maguire’s attempt at offering some home truths – was not well received, Vance points out, being heavily criticised for “daring to push policies that might lower consumption” and upset the status quo.

This condemnation left Vance bemused, he says, noting that “If people die sooner in the midst of historic levels of consumption, then perhaps our focus on consumption is misguided”.

And it was this revelation, Vance explains, “that ultimately led not just to Christianity, but to Catholicism...I slowly began to see Catholicism as the closest expression of [my grandmother’s] kind of Christianity: obsessed with virtue, but cognisant of the fact that virtue is formed in the context of a broader community; sympathetic with the meek and poor of the world without treating them primarily as victims; protective of children and families and with the things necessary to ensure they thrive. And above all: a faith centred around a Christ who demands perfection of us even as He loves unconditionally and forgives easily.”

There is a lot more that Vance offers, including how his [2]exposure to the French Catholic philosopher René Girard also greatly influenced his journey toward Catholicism as an answer to the “madness of the crowds”.

It’s pretty searing stuff, especially to read as a non-American. It is close to nigh-on impossible for a British politician to write such a thing publicly, and to so candidly address how their religion informs their thinking and heart.

The political costs are too high – just look at what has happened to SNP politician Kate Forbes for simply being known to be an active Christian, and the Liberal Democrats’ decision to reportedly deselect parliamentary candidate David Campanaleo over his Christian beliefs. I don’t want to live in a theocracy. I am very glad we don’t have such a system dictating our ways. I don’t want to live in a Catholic integralist society either. But I still think it is impressive, and exciting, to have a figure like Vance on the scene, speaking about the intersection of faith, virtue and society so daringly.

If more politicians and figures of authority could manage what Vance does – or at least just be a bit more like Jerry Maguire – we might actually get somewhere in addressing the problems of today, rather than the continual posturing, often over appalling policy that, as Vance lays out in his article, is proving so destructive and causing such misery.

1.10.4 Do We Want a Constitutional Government or Not? (2024-10-07 22:37)

"The government of the United States is a definite government, confined to specific objects. It is not like the state governments, whose powers are more general. Charity is no part of the legislative duty of the government.”

“I cannot undertake to lay my finger on that article of the Constitution which granted a right to Congress of expending, on objects of benevolence, the money of their constituents.”

Sadly, the answer to the question that is the title of this column is “no,” Americans no longer want a constitutional government (at least not our current Constitution), nor do we have such. The author of both the quotes above is James Madison, the man given most credit for writing America’s Constitution. If anyone should know what the Constitution means, it’s because he wrote it. Please note his words carefully—“Charity is no part of the legislative duty of government.” Indeed, (the second quote), where is the Constitution clause giving the national government the right to spend taxpayer’s money on charity? As Madison said, the states can do it; that’s what the 10th Amendment authorizes. However, nothing in the Constitutionally given powers to Congress says anything about spending taxpayer money on charity. So says James Madison, the main author of our Constitution.

Republicans—most of them—have been gleefully bashing the Biden administration for being slow in responding to the needs of people in southern states due to the damages caused by Hurricane Helene. “Where is the federal government?” “They don’t care about red states,” and there is probably much truth to that. Americans now believe when there is a national catastrophe, that the feds are supposed to jump in with whatever money is necessary. Remember George W. Bush and Hurricane Katrina? He moved too slowly and was crucified for it. Charity is now a power of the national government.

Where did we get that? Certainly not from the Constitution, James Madison being our witness. But then, 99 % of what the federal government does today couldn’t be found in the Constitution if you read it until your eyeballs fell out. Washington, D.C., except in some structural matters that do not relate directly to power, pays absolutely no attention—none, zero, zilch—to what the Constitution actually says. And that applies to all three branches—Congress, the President, AND the Supreme Court.

There were reasons why our Founders did not assign charity as one of the powers of the national government. They knew history and the tendency of government to grow in power at the expense of the freedoms of the people, and they intended to try to prevent that. They also understood that charity and welfare were no business of government, and for very good reasons. And those reasons mostly have to do with the nature and object of government and what government can and cannot do effectively.

Our Founding Fathers well understood that the nationalization of government is the nationalization of force because everything the government does is by force or the threat thereof. Citizens know that paying taxes is necessary, but we don’t generally do it out of the goodness of our hearts, and most of us try to pay as little as possible. But there is this thing called the “IRS.” They don’t ask for charity, and they don’t politely request we cough up our hard-earned cash. And then say, “Oh, it’s ok if you don’t, it’s your choice.” There is force behind everything the government does.

Advertisement

And force is the very antithesis of charity. “We are going to force you to be charitable.” That is an oxymoron if ever one existed. And so, the Founders didn’t put “charity” in the Constitution. If we want the national government to force us to be charitable, which our Founders didn’t, then we need to put that in the Constitution. Otherwise, don’t ever say the United States government has a Constitutional right to provide charity for hurricane victims. Such is NOT in our Constitution.

The Founders also understood quite well that the people (especially government) who give you money can control you, can tell you what to do, and if you don’t do it, they can take away the money (or, in the case of government, worse than that). Power-loving politicians know this principle very well. Government telling you what to do isn’t exactly “freedom.” Every dime the government takes from me is one dime more power they have, and one dime less free I am. Government takes, it doesn’t give, and when it DOES give, it is only because it has first taken something from us, thereby lessening our freedom by just that much. And, to get what government gives us we have to do what government tells us. You want government charity? Then you’ll have to do what government tells you to do. And “a government big enough to give you everything you want is strong enough to take everything you have” (Thomas Jefferson).

Helping people in distress is certainly a very good, and needed, thing. But it isn’t in the Constitution as a power given to the national government. Charity comes from the heart, which a government does not possess. Individuals, churches, charitable organizations—these are the groups, historically, helping the needy in times of distress, and millions of Americans have graciously and generously done so in the recent hurricane. That’s as it should be.

My only point in this essay is, if we want Washington to do so much of our charity for us, then the Constitution needs to be amended to add that power, from the states, to the national government. That’s what the Constitution says. And then we’ll have to expect our government to grow in power at the expense of our freedom. Which is exactly what it has done over American history.

And that is exactly what our Founders warned us about and why we fought a civil war.

1.10.5 Kamala Just Gave the Wrong Answer on The View (2024-10-08 15:18)

Vice President Kamala Harris is in New York City Tuesday, a stop on her friendly media tour this week, and gave an interview to the ladies of The View.

Throughout her campaign, which started in July when President Joe Biden abruptly left the 2024 campaign trail and she quickly ascended as the Democratic nominee, Harris has attempted to distance herself from Biden's record – a record that is very unpopular with voters.

Kamala Harris: "They've been very vague on the VP's agenda because she's trying to run away from the unpopularity of the Biden agenda and she can't fall back on her 2019/2020 stances because they are very far left and unpopular with those outside of... [1]pic.twitter.com/JrV4LGO1gk— TV News Now (@TVNewsNow) [2]August 19, 2024

Today, she fully embraced the Biden-Harris White House tenure and the Trump campaign took notice.

"If anything, would you have done something differently than President Biden during the past four years?"

KAMALA: "There is not a thing that comes to mind."

🗳️ [3]pic.twitter.com/kvS3zkMc4p— Trump War Room (@TrumpWarRoom) [4]October 8, 2024

Harris' comments come as Trump continues to lead with swing state voters on top issues of the economy and illegal immigration. Biden's approval continues to sit in the high 30s and low 40s.

The president's party has never (at least back to 1980) won another term in the White House with so few Americans saying the U.S. is on the right track (28 %, today).

The average when the prez party loses (25 %) is far closer to today's number, though there is a bit of a twist. [5]pic.twitter.com/hZtWRMW9mn— (((Harry Enten))) (@ForecasterEnten) [6]October 4, 2024

1.10.6 How Is Anyone Backing Kamala? (2024-10-08 15:19)

ice President Kamala Harris spent [1]some time on "60 Minutes" talking about...well, I don't really know.

I know she was asked a bunch of questions and gave responses, but that didn't clarify anything for anyone, really. In fact, following up on the discussion here a couple of days later, I'm left wondering who in the world is voting for her.

[2]RealClearPolitics shows the race between her and Donald Trump is neck and neck, with her having a slight edge but inside the margin of error, so someone is saying they support her, but I'm left wondering why.

I get that Donald Trump is loud, brash, and annoys a whole lot of people. I'm not a fan of his style of politics in the least, though at least his policies are generally a far cry better than anything the Democrats have offered. That's even true of the issues I don't agree with him on if I'm being fair, though that's all beside the point.

But while she was asked questions on "60 Minutes" and gave responses, she didn't answer all that much. It was just the latest example of word salad from the league leader in that category.

And this is just after Harris' interview on a podcast called "Call Her Daddy," which, let's just note, has nothing at all to do with parenting.

These, however, are two of the very few interviews the vice president has given, and based on the nothingness that comes out of her mouth, that was probably the smartest tactical decision her campaign could have made.

Harris also tried to pick a fight with Florida Governor Ron DeSantis, saying he was ducking her hurricane-related calls.

Of course, President Joe Biden says [3]he's talked to DeSantis and offered support should the state need it with Hurricane Milton bearing down on it.

This isn't the first time the president has [4]stepped all over one of Harris' talking points, either. Couple these with her claims that she worked at a McDonald's that literally no one can prove she worked at. Not even a former coworker stepped up and said, "Yeah, I worked with her." Nothing.

The media is largely silent on fact-checking the next Anointed One that no one seems to actually like, but if Trump gets a little boisterous or his running mate, Senator JD Vance, engages in some hyperbole about eggs, everyone comes out of the woodwork to debunk what they said.

Which might well explain much of it.

Kamala Harris lacks substance in almost every way, but because she's presented as if she's the messiah for democracy, a lot of the lemmings who simply do as the media tells them will trot out to vote. I just can't see how anyone can look at her, follow the campaign, and still decide she's the best choice.

It boggles the mind that anyone could be that stupid.

Then again, a lot of those folks don't know what bathroom to use or what a woman is, so I don't see why I'm so surprised.

1.10.7 Mayorkas Was Questioned If FEMA Has Enough Resources for Hurricane Milton. Here's What He Said. (2024-10-08 15:21)

Category 4 Hurricane Milton is closing in on Florida this week. This comes just after Hurricane Helene wreaked devastation in North Carolina and other areas of the southeast.

Last week, Department of Homeland Security Secretary Alejandro Mayorkas admitted that the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) did not have long-term funding to help the victims of Hurricane Helene. As Townhall [1]reported, over a billion FEMA dollars were spent on illegal immigrants in recent years.

"We are meeting the immediate needs with the money that we have. We are expecting another hurricane hitting," Mayorkas said, according to the [2]Associated Press. "FEMA does not have the funds to make it through the season."

"The New York Times is reporting that FEMA is running out of staff to respond to this hurricane that seems to be barreling towards Florida...Does FEMA have what it needs to respond to the storm?" former White House Press Secretary Jen Psaki asked Mayorkas on MSNBC.

"Yes it does, quite clearly. Everybody should rest confident that FEMA has the resources. We already have 900 personnel deployed, prepositioned, in Florida. People who are responding to Hurricane Helene...We are there. We have search and rescue teams, the Army Corps of Engineers are there. We are ready. We have the personnel...We can respond to multiple events at a single time.," Mayorkas stated.

[3]@SecMayorkas to [4]@jrpsaki: "You and I both remember a time when an extreme weather event actually brought people together. Now, unfortunately, tragically, quite frankly, it is politicized... the people who are victimized by the natural disaster are the ones who will suffer." [5]pic.twitter.com/z0RocPxva3— Inside with Jen Psaki (@InsideWithPsaki) [6]October 8, 2024

Last week, Townhall [7]covered how several whistleblowers have come forward alleging that FEMA misappropriated funds in the wake of Hurricane Helene. This was outlined in a letter to Mayorkas from Rep. Matt Gaetz (R-FL).

“FEMA has wasted taxpayer funds, misappropriated funds, and left other federal, state, and local responders without deployment orders on the ground,” the letter stated. “As reported and further confirmed by my office, hundreds, if not thousands, of service members were deployed by the Department of Defense to North Carolina and have say idle, waiting for FEMA.”

“We have confirmed FEMA employees deployed, on the clock, awaiting orders in hotels. FEMA pre-disaster aid was withheld, exacerbating the emergency. It is also public that NGOs have purchased airline tickets for migrants through the use of FEMA funds,” it added.

“The aftermath of Hurricane Helene is a major disaster, and your waste and unpreparedness are leaving Americans in distress – unable to access food, water, or medicine – and expecting help, with none coming,” it continued.

1.10.8 Harris Has a New Excuse for Her Policy Flip Flopping (2024-10-08 15:24)

During an interview with 60 Minutes Tuesday night, Vice President Kamala Harris gave a new excuse about why voters don't trust her latest and superficial policy positions.

This might be the worst television interview by a candidate in U.S. presidential history.

Bill Whitaker: "You've changed your positions so much that no one believes anything."

Harris: "Well, I'm the vice president and I travel a lot." [1] pic.twitter.com/5T33OawnD5— Tim Murtaugh (@TimMurtaugh) [2] October 8, 2024

The explanation comes after months of Team Harris desperately trying to walk back far left positions espoused by the presidential candidate during her failed 2020 campaign and her record as the most progressive member of the U.S. Senate - even beating out self proclaimed socialist Senator Bernie Sanders.

Former President Donald Trump responded to the interview on Truth Social.

"The Interview on 60 Minutes with Comrade Kamala Harris is considered by many of those who reviewed it, the WORST Interview they have ever seen. She literally had no idea what she was talking about, and it was an embarrassment to our Country that a Major Party Candidate would be so completely inept. In addition, her Incompetence on 'helping' people through the devastation of Hurricane Helene is being reviewed as, by far, the Worst in American History, even worse than Katrina - If that is possible! I can't imagine anybody living in North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Florida, or Tennessee, voting for her," Trump said.

"Pollsters are saying that the anti, or negative, Vote in those places, and even places not affected but with people watching what took place, will be heavily against her. This is good news because November 5th is the Most Important Day in the History of our Country, and we cannot bear four more years of Incompetence. MAKE AMERICA GREAT AGAIN!" he continued.

Harris is on a friendly media blitz this week as she continues to lose ground in polling among key demographics.

1.10.9 'Shark Tank' Star Says the US Must 'Bring China to Its Knees With a Blowtorch.' Here's How. (2024-10-08 15:30)

Investor Kevin O'Leary called on the U.S. to impose even heavier tariffs against China, telling Fox News' Trey Gowdy on Sunday that the "Chinese only understand the stick."

Pointing to Congress' bipartisan ban on TikTok as just one example of how the Chinese do not compete on a level playing field, the "Shark Tank" star recalled how they used the U.S. judicial system against Americans.

"Congress on a bipartisan basis said, 'Look, it's a spyware and we want to shut it down January 19th.' It's an act of Congress, it's the demand of the people of America, they made that decision," he said. "The Chinese came here, the supreme leader who controls it, and he used our court system to sue us, to litigate that from happening, suing the American people. Do you think I can do that in China? Not a chance in hell I could do that in China. So, I'm OK if he wants to use our legal system against us, but I have to do the same thing. I want access to their courts, I want access to their IP, they have to pay the same price to list their companies that I do, and they don't because they don't have the same compliance costs, and we should kick them off the exchanges.

"I want to go to DEFCON-19 against China," O'Leary added. "I don't like tariffs against anybody else, but I want to bring them to their knees with a blowtorch to deal with us fairly. And that is why you use tariffs. You squeeze them because the Chinese only understand the stick. I've said it countless times, they understand the stick, they respect the stick, give them the stick. And believe me, after enough pain, because their economy has got some fractures in it, they will say, 'Okay, just kidding. We will play on a level playing field.' I want heavy, heavy, heavy tariffs on China, more than we have, even more, because I live with it. They steal our IP. I can't say enough negative stuff. I'm sorry, I'm just telling the truth."

The Chinese only understand the stick and with enough economic pain, they will come to the table and play fairly. I don't like tariffs against anybody else, but we need to bring China to its knees with HEAVY tariffs then we can have a level playing field. 1.10.10 Harris Has a New Excuse for Her Policy Flip Flopping (2024-10-08 15:32)

During an interview with 60 Minutes Tuesday night, Vice President Kamala Harris gave a new excuse about why voters don't trust her latest and superficial policy positions.

This might be the worst television interview by a candidate in U.S. presidential history.

Bill Whitaker: "You've changed your positions so much that no one believes anything."

Harris: "Well, I'm the vice president and I travel a lot." [1]pic.twitter.com/5T33OawnD5— Tim Murtaugh (@TimMurtaugh) [2]October 8, 2024

The explanation comes after months of Team Harris desperately trying to walk back far left positions espoused by the presidential candidate during her failed 2020 campaign and her record as the most progressive member of the U.S. Senate - even beating out self proclaimed socialist Senator Bernie Sanders.

Former President Donald Trump responded to the interview on Truth Social.

"The Interview on 60 Minutes with Comrade Kamala Harris is considered by many of those who reviewed it, the WORST Interview they have ever seen. She literally had no idea what she was talking about, and it was an embarrassment to our Country that a Major Party Candidate would be so completely inept. In addition, her Incompetence on 'helping' people through the devastation of Hurricane Helene is being reviewed as, by far, the Worst in American History, even worse than Katrina - If that is possible! I can't imagine anybody living in North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Florida, or Tennessee, voting for her," Trump said.

"Pollsters are saying that the anti, or negative, Vote in those places, and even places not affected but with people watching what took place, will be heavily against her. This is good news because November 5th is the Most Important Day in the History of our Country, and we cannot bear four more years of Incompetence. MAKE AMERICA GREAT AGAIN!" he continued.

1.10.11 How to Blow Up the Middle East War in 5 Easy Steps (2024-10-15 23:12)

When [1]Joe Biden became president, the Middle East was calm. Now it is in the midst of a multifront war.

So quiet was the inheritance from the prior Trump administration that nearly three years later, on Sept. 29, 2023—and just eight days before the Oct. 7 Hamas massacre of Israelis— [2]Biden's national security adviser, Jake Sullivan, could still brag that "the Middle East region is quieter today than it has been in two decades.”

So, what exactly happened to the inherited calm that led to the current nonstop chaos of the present?

In a word, theocratic Iran—the nexus of almost all current Middle East terrorism and conflict—was unleashed by Team Biden after having been neutered by the Trump administration.

The [3]Biden-Harris administration adopted a five-step revisionist protocol that appeased and encouraged Iran and its terrorist surrogates Hamas, Hezbollah, and the Houthis.

The result was a near guarantee that something akin to the Oct. 7 massacres would inevitably follow—along with a subsequent year of violence that has now engulfed the Middle East.

First, on the 2020 campaign trail, Biden damned longtime American ally Saudi Arabia as a “pariah.”

He overturned the policies of both the [4]previous Obama and Trump administrations by siding with the Iranian-supplied terrorist Houthis in their war on Saudi Arabia.

Biden accused the kingdom of war crimes, warning it would “be held accountable” for its actions in Yemen. Biden-Harris took the murderous Houthis off the U.S. terrorist list.

Almost immediately followed continuous Houthi attacks on international shipping, Israel, and U.S. warships—rendering the Red Sea, the entryway to the Suez Canal, de facto closed to international maritime transit.

Worse still, by the time of the 2022 midterms, when spiraling gas prices threatened Democratic congressional majorities, Biden opportunistically flipped and implored Saudi Arabia to pump more oil to lower world prices before the November election. Appearing obnoxious and then obsequious to an old [5]Middle East ally is a prescription for regional chaos.

Second, Biden-Harris nihilistically killed off the Trump administration’s “Abraham Accords.” That diplomatic breakthrough had proved a successful blueprint for moderate Arab nations to seek detente with Israel, ending decades of hostilities to unite against the common Middle East threat of Iran.

Third, Biden begged Iran to reenter the appeasing, so-called Iran Deal that virtually had ensured that Iran would eventually get the bomb.

Worse yet, it dropped oil sanctions against the theocracy, allowing a near-destitute Iran to recoup $100 billion in profits. And it green-lighted $6 billion in hostage ransoms to Tehran.

An enriched Tehran immediately sent billions of dollars in support and weapons to the anti-Western terrorists of Hamas, Hezbollah, and the Houthis to attack Israel, Americans, and international shipping. Iran soon began partnering with China and Russia to form a new anti-American axis.

Biden-Harris also fled abruptly from Afghanistan, abandoning billions in weapons and American contractors. The humiliation thus virtually destroyed American deterrence in the Middle East, inciting enemies and endangering friends.

Fourth, Biden-Harris restored hundreds of millions of dollars in aid to the West Bank and Gaza, but without any guarantees that the Palestinian Authority and Hamas would desist from their past serial terrorist acts.

In the case of Hamas, U.S. and Western “humanitarian aid” simply freed up more fungible dollars in Gaza to arm Hamas and to expand its subterranean tunnel complex essential to its Oct. 7 massacres and hostage-taking.

Fifth, from the outset of the ensuing increased tensions, Biden-Harris began pressuring the Israelis to act “proportionally” in responding to the massacre of some 1,200 Israelis and nearly 20,000 missiles, rockets, and drones launched at their homeland from Iran, the Houthis, Hamas, and Hezbollah.

Such straitjacketing of our closest Middle East friend further signaled the Iranian-backed terrorists that there was now “daylight” between the U.S. and its closest regional ally. That opportunity provided still further incentives for Iran to test just how far it could safely go in attacking Israel.

But why did Biden-Harris so foolishly ignite the Middle East?

In part, the administration naively tried to resurrect the old, discredited Obama administration notion of “creative tension”—of empowering a rogue Iran and its terrorists to play off Israel and the moderate Arab regimes, as a new sort of balance of power in the region.

In part, Biden-Harris was caving to increased antisemitism at home and the rise of powerful, pro-Palestinian groups on U.S. campuses and in critical swing Electoral College states.

In part, Biden-Harris was naive and gullible. The two bought into the anti-Americanism and anti-Israel boilerplate of our enemies. So, they thought to make amends by seeing Iran and its terrorists as the moral equivalent of democratic, pro-American Israel.

Their malignant legacy is the current Middle East disaster.

1.10.12 Try a Little Honesty About Israel (2024-10-15 23:13)

Both the Harris-Walz presidential ticket and now lame-duck President [1]Joe Biden keep insisting that they are Israel’s best friend.

A snarly Biden recently bragged at a contentious press conference, “No administration has helped Israel more than I have. None, none, none. And I think [Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu] should remember that.”

Yet the thin-skinned and triggered Biden’s prickliness poorly hid—or perhaps revealed—the truth: This current administration knows that it is responsible for the current explosion of the Middle East and the particular dilemmas of [2]Israel.

Biden further revealed his blame-gaming of the Israeli government when asked another loaded question about purported Netanyahu election interference, saying, “Whether he’s trying to influence the election, I don't know."

[3]Election interference?

Biden apparently forgot who just flew Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelenskyy into swing-state Pennsylvania, just as early and mail-in voting there began, to lobby for more aid even as he trashed candidates Donald Trump and JD Vance to a left-wing magazine.

Recently, Democratic candidate Vice President [4]Kamala Harris refused to say whether the Netanyahu administration is even an ally of the United States.

Her Democratic running mate, Minnesota Gov. [5]Tim Walz, could not state whether the Democratic ticket would approve of an Israeli response—by either targeting the Iranian nuclear bomb program or its oil fields and exporting facilities—to some 500 Iranian missiles and rockets that hit the Jewish state.

Another Bob Woodward racy and gossipy tell-all book just appeared. It alleges that Biden despised Netanyahu and has reportedly smeared him to aides: "That son of a b—, Bibi Netanyahu, he's a bad guy. He's a bad f-king guy!"

What are we to make of this Biden-Harris-Walz mess?

It is an election year and one of the closest races in modern memory. Biden and his would-be successors, Harris-Walz, know that support for Israel is a bipartisan cornerstone of U.S. foreign policy and critical for Democratic unity.

Yet they feel they must also pander to anti-Israel, Muslim-American voters who may determine the Electoral College votes of critical swing-state Michigan.

Democratic politicians square that circle by claiming they support Israel—despite damning the conservative Netanyahu. That way they seek to blame Netanyahu for alienating Arab and Muslim-American voters, while they do not alienate left-wing Jewish and pro-Israeli Democrats.

For all the invective, a demonized Netanyahu is now regaining public support in Israel. The Israeli public approves of his near-destruction of Hamas, the ongoing brilliant Israeli emasculation of Hezbollah, and Israel's revelations that the once widely feared terrorist regime in Iran may in fact well prove to be a paper tiger.

Biden [6]national security adviser Jake Sullivan admitted just eight days before the Oct. 7 massacres that “the Middle East region is quieter today than it has been in two decades.”

His boast was an admission that Biden and Harris had inherited from the prior Trump administration a stable Middle East.

So, what blew up Sullivan’s quietude?

Certainly not Netanyahu or Israel in general.

It was the terrorists of Hamas who surprise-attacked and killed 1,200 Israeli civilians during peace and a Jewish holiday.

Their slaughtering, torturing, raping, and hostage-taking revealed a level of precivilization barbarism rarely seen in the modern era.

Israel was simultaneously targeted by rockets from Hamas and Hezbollah that would eventually number more than 20,000.

It did not respond to the bloodbath with a full-scale invasion of Gaza until Oct. 27, some three weeks after the slaughtering.

During that interim, for most of the Muslim world and both U.S. Muslim communities and on American campuses, there was rejoicing at the news of slaughtered Jews.

For over three years, the Biden administration had signaled Israel’s enemies that it no longer acted like a close ally of the past.

After it all, Biden-Harris lifted sanctions on a hostile Iran, giving it $100 billion in oil windfalls. It begged Iran to reenter the disastrous Iran deal. It abandoned the Abraham Accords. It lifted the terrorist designation from the terrorist Houthis. It restored fungible aid to the Hamas tunnel builders. It gave new aid to Hezbollah-controlled Lebanon.

Israel's enemies got the Biden message: Attack the Jewish state, and perhaps Americans for the first time in a half-century may not really mind that much.

And so they did, in unison.

Rather than admitting their own role in igniting the Middle East, Biden and Harris now blame the victims of their own incendiary foreign policy.

The final irony?

Israel has concluded that Biden-Harris foolhardiness can be toxic and endanger its very survival—and so, will not agree to its own suicide.

Instead, Israel seeks to finish a multifaceted war it did not seek. And one of whose beneficiaries from Israeli blood and treasure will be the U.S. itself, given Israel is now systematically weakening America's own existential enemies.

1.10.13 The Media Are the Scum of the Earth (2024-10-24 17:01)

However much you hate the progressive corporate media, double it. Then double it again. After that, triple it and you're getting close to where you should start hating these people. There isn't a good person among the lot of them, there really isn't, as they happily dance on the graves of dead loved ones and lie with impunity about Donald Trump under the banner of "truth-tellers Hypocrisy is the wrong word, as it is not strong enough. It's not that the left has double standards – one for them, another for everyone else. They have standards for everyone else and absolutely none for them. They don't have to change the standards they hold themselves to because they hold themselves to nothing. It is "agenda über alles," written in its original German on purpose. The Atlantic is a prime example of how the left-wing echo chamber operates. They "report" a piece about a upcoming book, working hard to make sure their fellow travelers make some cash, and declare Donald Trump has a history of praising Adolf Hitler and his generals. Weird how this tidbit of information about the most investigate human being on the planet escaped reporting for 4 years, but now someone finally decided to tell it! That person is John Kelly, a retired partisan General who was fired at Trump's Chief of Staff and has been scrambling to worm his way back into the good graces of the establishment left ever since. Kelly started by spreading lies about Trump declaring soldiers who died in the D-Day invasion "suckers" and "losers." He's the only person claiming this, likely the source who "leaked" it to The Atlantic in 2020. Literally everyone else in the room denied it happened, but The Atlantic is the plaything of Lauren Powell Jobs, unaccomplished widow of Steve Jobs, who uses her inherited wealth to advance the left-wing agenda that gives this otherwise vacationing "philanthropist" meaning in life.

She publicly admitted

she owns the rag for the express purpose of serving her political whims, to create narratives for extremists leftists to use. Anyone with self-respect working there would quit, that none have tells you pretty much everything. Worried that Democrats might lose, Kelly returned to The Atlantic with another story - something he seemingly just remembered, though the Democrat Party Press insists he's told the story privately to them in the past. We all know how shy Kelly is about being publicly critical of Trump over the last 4 years, and we know how the media would never, ever report something critical of the former President they'd only heard in private, as that would be a lot like reporting something from an anonymous source with an axe to grind. Oh yeah, that's exactly what this is. The choices are actually pretty simple: A) John Kelly is lying because he's a Democrat working to elect Democrats, or B) John Kelly, only 2 weeks before an election, was so overwhelmed with feelings that he decided to publicly tell a story he'd been blabbing all over town for years that - even in a town where second-hand rumors about Trump are treated as gospel truth and lead the nightly news - has been held as closely as the identity of Deep Throat was by those very same rumormongers. Which seems more likely? A causal mention about Doug Emhoff, husband of Kamala Harris, being credibly accused of smacking an ex-girlfriend across the face because he was upset she was talking to another man shut down the network, but a story with less proof about something, again, everyone else in the room denies ON THE RECORD, leads the day.

same Atlantic story claims Trump smeared a murdered soldier, Private Vanessa Guillen, swore about her and complained about the cost of her funeral. This, once again, is something everyone involved openly denies on the record, including the family of the slain soldier. The soldier's sister even publicly called on Democrats to stop exploiting her sister's murder. They won't. They're scum. The Atlantic lied about this, too. They don't care. There are no standards there, only narratives, according to beneficiary jobs. The family of Amber Thurman, the Georgia woman Democrats pretend died from an abortion ban who actually got her abortion and died from medical malpractice as a resulting infection went untreated, has asked Democrats to stop dancing on their loved one's grave and exploiting their tragedy. They have not and will not. Scum.They will dance on any grave they think will give them an advantage, no matter how painful it is to the family or how big the lie is they have to tell. These are not the actions of good people.Scum of the Earth is too kind for these people, but like "hypocrisy" not accurately capturing how Democrats function, it will have to do until new words are created to fill the gap. Or maybe we could just use old ones, words Democrats have either abandoned or changed to fit their political needs. Maybe "women" will work, since the true victims of most of the policies of the left are women and Democrats claim complete ignorance as to what one is, it seems to be unused these days. Well, except when it comes to abortion, when they all suddenly become gynecologists. Maybe not.

Oh well, scum of the Earth will do, at least for now.

1.10.14 For Kamala Harris, Abortion Isn't About Freedom; It's About Force (2024-10-24 17:02)

Democratic Party presidential candidate Kamala Harris has struggled to articulate issues that resonate with voters in the campaign's final days. Other than bland assurances about "an opportunity economy" and growing up "a middle-class kid," the only issue Harris seems both emphatic and explicit about is abortion.

At a recent rally in Wisconsin, Harris was once again promoting the need for a federal law "codifying" Roe v. Wade when [1]two college students shouted out, "Jesus is Lord!" In response, Harris[2] joked, "Oh, you guys are at the wrong rally. ... I think you meant to go to the smaller one down the street."

The "official" line is that this was a jab at former President Donald Trump's upcoming event in Detroit. But the impromptu message was not lost on Americans: People who think Jesus is Lord apparently don't belong at Harris' campaign events and rallies where attendees do believe that Jesus is Lord will be smaller than those where Harris is the keynote.

Mm-kay.

There are other buried messages in Harris' constant drumbeat of abortion, abortion, abortion. She casts it as a matter of personal freedom, arguing that women should have the right to "control their own bodies." But if Harris finds her way into the White House – and certainly if President Harris has a Democrat-controlled Congress willing to do her bidding – abortion will not be a matter of freedom but a matter of force.

Harris was uncharacteristically overt about this during a recent [3]interview with NBC News's Hallie Jackson. When Jackson asked whether Harris would support "religious exemptions" for opponents of abortion, Harris was adamant: "I don't think we should be making concessions when we're talking about a fundamental freedom to make decisions about your own body."

Pressed by Jackson about the limitations that might come with a Republican-controlled Congress, Harris would brook no compromise. "(A) basic freedom has been taken from the women of America: the freedom to make decisions about their own body," Harris insisted. "And that cannot be negotiable."

One need only look at Harris' record as California attorney general to see what she means when she says abortion is non-negotiable.

When California's Reproductive FACT Act became law in 2015, Harris, as AG, issued a [4]statement praising the law and taking credit for its co-sponsorship. The law targeted [5]pro-life pregnancy resource centers, mandating that they[6] promote abortion clinics (on penalty of heavy fines if they refused). It was struck down as unconstitutional by the U.S. Supreme Court in NIFLA v. Becerra in 2018.

Harris also targeted pro-life activist and investigative journalist David Daleiden, who obtained [7]shocking undercover footage of Planned Parenthood abortionists bragging – in public – about selling the organs and body parts of aborted fetuses, some past viability. Harris had Daleiden's home raided, arrested him, [8]charged him with [9]multiple felonies (which even the Los Angeles Times called a [10]"disturbing overreach"), seized the damning footage (which has since been [11]released), and changed the law to make similar recordings illegal.

Harris' disregard for the religious freedoms of medical care professionals will not be limited to abortion. Anything she claims is a "right" will be justification for comparable government coercion, including the chemical castration and physically mutilating surgeries of so-called "gender-affirming care," assisted suicide, and euthanasia. Physicians who refuse to perform these procedures will have their licenses revoked. Nurses who refuse to help will be fired. Hospitals and clinics that object will be shut down.

Advertisement

In this respect, Harris will be following in the footsteps of former President Barack Obama, whose administration forced religious institutions – including orders of Catholic nuns – to offer abortifacient contraception and surgical sterilization as part of the insurance coverage they provided for their employees, a policy that prompted lawsuits by the [12]University of Notre Dame and the Little Sisters of the Poor, among other religiously affiliated organizations.

After years of litigation, the U.S. Supreme Court also [13]struck down the Obama administration's regulations, ruling that they provided inadequate conscience protection.

(Side note: Obama has been dragged out to stump for Harris in an obvious attempt to prop up her flagging poll numbers. At a campaign appearance earlier this week, Obama [14]said, "I don't understand how we got so toxic and just so divided and so bitter." Seriously? Here's a clue: Calling those who disagree with you "bitter" people who "cling to their guns or their religion" and then using government power to force them to violate their religious beliefs is a good recipe for toxicity and division.)

Former Hawai'ian congressional Rep. Tulsi Gabbard, who left the Democratic Party[15] two years ago and endorsed Trump [16]earlier this year, announced that she had officially joined the Republican Party at a Trump rally in Greensboro, North Carolina, this week. In Gabbard's announcement, she called the Republican Party "the party of the people, the party of peace ... the party of equality, the party of common sense." Gabbard lamented the changes in the Democratic Party, describing it as [17]"completely unrecognizable."

She's not alone. Traditional and social media are filled with the personal accounts of former Democrats – politicians like former presidential candidate [18]Robert F. Kennedy Jr. and U.S. Sens.[19] Joe Manchin and [20]Kyrsten Sinema, academics [21]Alan Dershowitz and [22]Bret Weinstein, journalists [23]Matt Taibbi and [24]Ana Kasparian, and countless ordinary people – who are disgusted that the Democratic Party has become the party of corporate power and government abuse: censorship, deliberate disinformation, political persecution, weaponization of law enforcement and constant war.

Harris may have thought it funny to tell two Christian boys they were at "the wrong rally." But if you're a Democrat who's also a practicing Catholic or Christian, a member of any faith tradition that holds life to be sacrosanct, or simply an American who believes strongly in the individual freedoms guaranteed by the U.S. Constitution, you're not only at the wrong rally; you're in the wrong party.

1.10.15 Team Harris' Campaign of Condescension Draws Pushback (2024-10-24 17:04)

The election is finally shaping up to be not only liberal Democrat [1]Kamala Harris versus conservative Republican [2]Donald Trump.

Instead, it has become a larger contest between those who talk down to their fellow Americans and those who are increasingly sick and tired of being lectured.

How smart is it, for example, for Harris supporters to claim nonstop that ex-President Trump is a fascist dictator—and thus, by extension, those also who vote for him?

[3]Female voters poll in favor of Harris. Trump enjoys a similar, although likely somewhat smaller, majority margin of male voters.

Yet Harris—along with campaign surrogates [4]Barack Obama and [5]Bill Clinton—has been lecturing both black and white male voters nonstop that they are misled.

Or they supposedly suffer from false consciousness—as if they have no clue that Harris and her progressive agenda are really in their own self-interest.

Such haughtiness reached a zenith when Harris ran ads of actors costumed as supposedly working-class men. They voiced scripted talking points to prove that “real” men are progressive Harris supporters.

But the actors were so patently ridiculous, their canned lines so unreal, that most viewers likely thought the ads were run by Trump himself—to show how arrogant, out-of-touch elites must imagine how the so-called “clingers” and “deplorables” think and talk.

The Trump campaign also tries all sorts of strategies to win over female voters, from promising to rectify the Biden-Harris hyperinflation to reducing spiraling crime in towns and cities.

But one method it avoids is claiming women are ignorant of their real self-interest and deluded by Harris, accurately assuming that a candidate does not win voters by belittling their intelligence.

Harris and Obama both dressed down black men, claiming they are especially culpable for not voting en masse for Harris—even though a far higher percentage of black males will vote for Harris than for Trump.

This hectoring the electorate on its supposed ignorance or moral shortcomings has become a Harris campaign trademark.

To Harris, objecting to 10 million to 12 million foreign nationals entering the country illegally without background checks during the [6]Biden-Harris administration is supposedly a sign of a lack of compassion.

And claiming that a current declining rate of illegal immigration should allay voters' supposed paranoias utterly ignores the [7]millions of illegal aliens who were all but welcomed in by Biden-Harris before the 2024 election cycle.

Voters are also talked down to ad nauseam that they do not appreciate the Biden-Harris economy, given the rate of [8] inflation is falling.

True. But most voters go shopping in a manner politicians do not.

So, they resent such top-down sermons. They know best that prices for staple foods, fuel, insurance, and housing have spiked by some 20 % to 30 % since 2021—and stayed astronomically high.

Currently, the auto industry is in crisis. Its huge inventory of electric vehicles sits unwanted and unsold. Harris and the Left, remember, mandated all sorts of EV standards in their war against the internal combustion engine.

Then the proverbial people revolted against the comparatively limited range of [9]EVs and the difficulty in finding accessible and quick-charging stations.

So, the free market and consumer demand ignored the increasingly strident lectures.

Likewise, Harris pontificated that crime that had spiked from 2021 to 2023 is now not all that bad.

But voters know all too well that their major cities are now unsafe. They sense one reason this year that [10]crime is not soaring as it was two years ago is because it had gotten so bad that any further commensurate increases would have made life utterly unlivable.

The Harris campaign was further hurt by past videos that keep popping up of Harris lecturing voters about how they either must think correctly or remain cluelessly selfish or ignorant.

So, a recent clip surfaced on Columbus Day 2021 of Harris lecturing America about Western civilization's "shameful" sins in discovering the New World.

Another video reveals Harris warning the country in 2020 on national television that the massive post-George Floyd demonstrations—that had turned violent and deadly—would not and should not stop, as if the country had to pay collective penance for its sins.

This 2024 race may be becoming analogous to an October 1980 teachable moment.

Then a preachy and sanctimonious incumbent President Jimmy Carter—ahead in the final October polls over challenger Ronald Reagan—finally turned off voters for good.

The previously underdog Reagan won in a landslide for a variety of reasons. But certainly, one explanation was that the electorate had finally collectively shrugged off their weariness. They were sick and tired of Carter's downer lectures about how they were wrong and culpable.

Reagan, however, reminded voters that America was better than all of the alternatives, needed not be perfect to be good, and had nothing to apologize for.

The same contrast will likely determine the election of 2024.

1.10.16 Kamala's Insane Talking Points (2024-10-24 23:34)

As Vice President Kamala Harris slips in the polls, the Democratic National Committee/Harris campaign/mainstream media fusion talking points become even more absurd.

Claiming that JD Vance and Donald Trump were "weird" did not work –especially given the genuinely odd behavior of vice presidential candidate Tim Walz and would-be First Gentleman Doug Emhoff.

Nor was the next Harris meme convincing that the frenetic and non-stop Trump was somehow "exhausted," "senile," and "confused." Voters know the workdays of the younger Harris are usually far shorter – or sometimes not workdays at all.

But Harris also falsely claimed the physically and mentally challenged President Joe Biden was, in her words, "absolutely authoritative" and "very bold and vibrant."

Now Harris asserts that Trump is a "fascist," a "dictator," and "unfit" for office. But this new talking point will also not stop the Harris campaign's hemorrhaging – and for a variety of reasons.

First, voters see the election as a conflict of two absolutely antithetical visions.

On the one hand, is the prior Trump 2017-20 concrete record: border security, no major wars abroad, calm in the Middle East, a deterred Russia, Iran, and China, low inflation, low interest rates, lower crime, lower taxes, strong deterrent military – and opposition to mandatory electric vehicle mandates, biological males competing in women's sports, and the woke/DEI agenda.

On the other hand, is the Biden-Harris 2021-2024 record: the unchecked entry of 12-20 million illegal aliens and a destroyed border. People still struggle under Biden-Harris's earlier hyperinflation and high interest rates. The horrific regional wars in Ukraine and the Middle East continue. Biden-Harris embraces the unpopular DEI/Woke agenda.

Harris herself knows that the Biden-Harris years were a failure. That is why she has shed almost all of their hard left-wing agendas – policies she has embraced for much of her adult life.

So suddenly, in the last 90 or so days, Harris has completely flipped and flopped.

Now she is for more of, not defunding, the police. She pivots for a secure border, not 20 million illegal aliens pouring across it. Harris brags about fossil fuel energy, not banning fracking, and for increasing, not cutting, defense.

In fact, several endangered incumbent Democratic senators in swing states are claiming more allegiance to Trump's issues than identifying with Harris and her unpopular record as vice president.

Voters likely conclude that if Trump doubles down on his record, while even Harris and many senators temporarily piggyback on it, then it must be more effective and popular than Harris's own.

Second, Harris now claims Trump is a fascist and insurrectionist.

But mouthing ad nauseam "January 6th" no longer persuades voters that Trump is a danger to anyone. They recall that Harris bragged of the far more violent demonstrations of 2020 – 35 killed, $2 billion in damage, 1,500 law enforcement officers injured, 14,000 arrested – that the unrest would not and "should not" stop, while drumming up support to bail out jailed violent protestors.

Nor does the slur that Trump is a fascist resonate. The Obama and Biden-Harris administrations weaponized the CIA and FBI to interfere in the 2016 and 2020 elections by peddling the fake Steele dossier and suppressing all the embarrassing news about Hunter Biden's incriminating laptop.

Trump certainly did not coordinate, as Biden did, with local, state, and federal prosecutors to wage lawfare prosecutions to destroy his political opponents. He did not use the FBI to partner with social media to suppress the news.

Neither Trump nor his supporters tried to remove Biden from state ballots.

The Republican House majority did not impeach Biden twice despite the Biden family's corruption and Joe Biden's unlawful, decades-long removal of classified papers to several insecure private residences.

Trump and the Republicans never coercively removed the party's primary-winning nominee. They did not nullify the will of 14 million primary voters. And in backroom fashion, they did not anoint a candidate who had never entered a single primary in her life.

Nor did Trump support packing the Supreme Court. He does not seek unconstitutional means of destroying the Electoral College. He is not demanding an end to the Senate filibuster or the creation of two new states to obtain four partisan senate seats.

Third, as for Trump being "unfit" and lacking "decorum," it depends on what were the Biden-Harris standards?

Having a trans activist reveal his breasts on camera at a White House "pride party?"

Biden's reportedly calling Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu "a f-ing idiot" and "son of a b-ch?" Bragging about locking Trump up, while waging lawfare against him?

Unleashing son Hunter Biden with impunity to shake down foreign governments?

The election will not be decided on these empty talking points or fake media-generated narratives.

Instead, only two criteria matter: Which candidate's past record and current agenda best appeal to voters? And which candidate seems the most authentic and genuine?

1.10.17 Latest Poll of Young Black and Latino Male Voters Has to Embarrass Dems (2024-10-24 23:36)

That's brutal. No matter how you cut it, the fact that Democrats have lost significant ground with black and Latino male voters must embarrass the Democrats. For many, I'm sure they dismissed the polls as outliers. It can't be ignored in the two-week stretch here. Trump looks like he will have the best performance with black voters since Nixon (via [1]Politico):

Strange voting patterns for Hitler. [2]<https://t.co/S4uPChYQo0>— Glenn Greenwald (@ggreenwald) [3]October 24, 2024

A new poll that includes large oversamples of young voters of color shows Donald Trump has massively increased his support among groups that he previously performed poorly with in 2020.

[...]

The GenForward survey, which ran from Sept. 26 to Oct. 6 by the University of Chicago and included 2,359 eligible voters 18 to 40 years old, included some fascinating findings:

- A quarter of young Black men are supporting Trump. (Black men overall backed President Joe Biden nearly nine to one in 2020.)
- 44 percent of young Latino men said they'd back Trump, an improvement over the roughly 38 percent who backed him in 2020.
- For her part, Harris is at 58 percent with Black men, 37 percent with Latinos and 57 percent with Asian American and Pacific Islander men.
- Kamala Harris is doing incredibly well among women of color. A majority of Black (63 percent), Asian American and Pacific Islander (60 percent) and Latina (55 percent) women say they will vote for Harris.
- White women are nearly evenly split between Harris (44 percent) and Trump (40 percent).

Yet, Harris remains underwater with black women compared to Biden's 2020 numbers.

Nate Cohn at The New York Times [4] offered five reasons why we're seeing a shift with these key Democratic voter groups:

1. They don't mind the alleged dog whistles
2. Hope and Change is dead
3. They're concerned about the economy
4. They're not offended; they're entertained
5. Trump is 'normal' to these voters now

1.10.18 Harris: The First Amendment Must Take a Back Seat to This 'Fundamental Freedom' for her Banana Republic madness (2024-10-24 23:37)

In an interview with NBC News on Tuesday, Vice President [1] Kamala Harris lamented America's divisive politics, arguing that her desire to 'turn the page' is really about "closing the page" – whatever that means – on "an era that suggests Americans are divided." It's true that Americans are divided. Figures in both major political parties and across the political spectrum bear some responsibility for that reality, including both her and her opponent. Part of the polarization and acrimony is stoked and fueled for cynical purposes. But a lot of it is simply a reflection of profound differences on policies and values. Voters have divergent views on what they want the country to look like, what sort of leaders they want to wield power, and what our priorities should be. Part of the genius of our founding is that America's system of government was designed to push many important decisions on such matters down to the state and local level, allowing people to shape their communities in alignment with their values. This allows those disaffected by what's happening around them to either seek and make change close to home, or have an option to resettle in a community that may be a better fit.

Kamala Harris holds a top-down, command-and-control worldview. She is a California leftist whose vision for the country, as [2] repeatedly articulated and illustrated during her start-from-scratch presidential campaign in the 2020 cycle, is to impose California's hardcore brand of identity-driven leftism upon the rest of the country. She was a zealous advocate for bans, mandates, and all manner of state coercion – as long as such blunt instruments served her ideological agenda. During her current, truncated, election-nullifying, plug-and-play presidential campaign, she is trying to pretend the previous version of herself doesn't exist, or is temporarily irrelevant. She doesn't believe any of those things anymore, or won't pursue them in office, anonymous aids assure us through journalists. When given opportunities to explain – really explain – any of these supposed flip-flops, however, Harris has steadfastly declined. Her answers are either vague and non-responsive, or simply non-existent. She would very much like middle-of-the-road voters to believe that she's not the extremist she ran as last time (and the Senator she governed as). She's more of a pragmatic Democrat who just wants to bring us all together, you see. Kind of like Joe Biden promised to be. But not quite like him, per se. Let's not talk or think about him, please.

She would also prefer to opt out of any insight into what she actually believes, or why, or why that has (ostensibly) changed so dramatically in such short order. She does not appreciate your questions about it, thank you very much. But amid her jarring policy makeover, and her phony hand-wringing about unity and "closing the page" on divisiveness, there's one issue on which she is truly passionate. She is a fanatical enthusiast on unlimited abortion-on-demand, at any stage of pregnancy, funded by taxpayers. She has occasionally been asked if she could name a single limitation or restriction on abortion that she might support. She has deflected away from this challenge because the ghastly truth, based on [3]legislation she has championed, is that she emphatically opposes any conceivable limitation. Thus, in the very same interview in which she bemoaned our tragic divisions, she promptly rejected a modest abortion olive branch floated by the NBC journalist. Might she be comfortable with 'religious exemptions' on abortion, Hallie Jackson asked, referring to allowing religious practitioners and institutions like Catholic hospitals to decline to provide, finance, or otherwise participate in abortions? Answer:

Wow.

Kamala Harris says that she does not believe in any religious exemptions for abortion.[4]pic.twitter.com/oOijJOi6lb— Greg Price (@greg_price11) [5]October 22, 2024

As many people [6]have observed, Harris frames unlimited abortion as a "fundamental freedom," but not religious freedom. Her [7]worldview, as [8]modeled in her state, are deeply hostile to a core tenet of [9]the First Amendment. She and her fellow leftists eagerly would, and have, trample on actual fundamental American freedoms, in the name of unfettered abortion. She is so, ahem, pro-"choice" that she believes all of us should pay for other people's elective abortions, without any restrictions, and that religious and other conscientious objectors to abortion, which literally stops a human heart, within the healthcare space must be forced to participate in abortions. No exceptions. No exemptions. She even selected a running mate who [10]repealed protections for infants born alive during failed abortions, and who eliminated laws barring coercing women into abortions. "Choice," you see.

The Supreme Court, at least as it's currently composed, would likely have something to say about this radical, disturbing vision if or when Harris tried to crush the First Amendment in service of her abortion fanaticism. But Harris has also embraced Supreme Court "reform," [11]including expressing an openness to the Banana Republic madness of packing the Court by adding additional seats. Her running mate recently confessed to leftist donors in California that they all know the Electoral College should be done away with, too. Among many other reasons, when the 2024 Democratic ticket tries to pose as the guardians of institutions and "our democracy," they do not deserve to be believed or taken seriously. It's also why when Trump-skeptical conservatives and independents are lectured about how 'important' it is to support Harris in this election, supposedly for the security of those cherished institutions and norms, rejecting those insulting sermons is an easy, principled, rational call.

1.10.19 For Kamala Harris, Abortion Isn't About Freedom; It's About Force (2024-10-24 23:38)

Democratic Party presidential candidate Kamala Harris has struggled to articulate issues that resonate with voters in the campaign's final days. Other than bland assurances about "an opportunity economy" and growing up "a middle-class kid," the only issue Harris seems both emphatic and explicit about is abortion.

At a recent rally in Wisconsin, Harris was once again promoting the need for a federal law "codifying" Roe v. Wade when [1]two college students shouted out, "Jesus is Lord!" In response, Harris[2] joked, "Oh, you guys are at the wrong rally. ... I think you meant to go to the smaller one down the street.”

The “official” line is that this was a jab at former President Donald Trump’s upcoming event in Detroit. But the impromptu message was not lost on Americans: People who think Jesus is Lord apparently don’t belong at Harris’ campaign events and rallies where attendees do believe that Jesus is Lord will be smaller than those where Harris is the keynote.

Mm-kay.

There are other buried messages in Harris’ constant drumbeat of abortion, abortion, abortion. She casts it as a matter of personal freedom, arguing that women should have the right to “control their own bodies.” But if Harris finds her way into the White House — and certainly if President Harris has a Democrat-controlled Congress willing to do her bidding — abortion will not be a matter of freedom but a matter of force.

Harris was uncharacteristically overt about this during a recent [3]interview with NBC News’s Hallie Jackson. When Jackson asked whether Harris would support “religious exemptions” for opponents of abortion, Harris was adamant: “I don’t think we should be making concessions when we’re talking about a fundamental freedom to make decisions about your own body.”

Pressed by Jackson about the limitations that might come with a Republican-controlled Congress, Harris would brook no compromise. “(A) basic freedom has been taken from the women of America: the freedom to make decisions about their own body,” Harris insisted. “And that cannot be negotiable.”

One need only look at Harris’ record as California attorney general to see what she means when she says abortion is non-negotiable.

When California’s Reproductive FACT Act became law in 2015, Harris, as AG, issued a [4]statement praising the law and taking credit for its co-sponsorship. The law targeted [5]pro-life pregnancy resource centers, mandating that they[6] promote abortion clinics (on penalty of heavy fines if they refused). It was struck down as unconstitutional by the U.S. Supreme Court in NIFLA v. Becerra in 2018.

Harris also targeted pro-life activist and investigative journalist David Daleiden, who obtained [7]shocking undercover footage of Planned Parenthood abortionists bragging — in public — about selling the organs and body parts of aborted fetuses, some past viability. Harris had Daleiden’s home raided, arrested him, [8]charged him with [9]multiple felonies (which even the Los Angeles Times called a [10]“disturbing overreach”), seized the damning footage (which has since been [11]released), and changed the law to make similar recordings illegal.

Harris' disregard for the religious freedoms of medical care professionals will not be limited to abortion. Anything she claims is a "right" will be justification for comparable government coercion, including the chemical castration and physically mutilating surgeries of so-called "gender-affirming care," assisted suicide, and euthanasia. Physicians who refuse to perform these procedures will have their licenses revoked. Nurses who refuse to help will be fired. Hospitals and clinics that object will be shut down.

In this respect, Harris will be following in the footsteps of former President Barack Obama, whose administration forced religious institutions — including orders of Catholic nuns — to offer abortifacient contraception and surgical sterilization as part of the insurance coverage they provided for their employees, a policy that prompted lawsuits by the [12]University of Notre Dame and the Little Sisters of the Poor, among other religiously affiliated organizations.

After years of litigation, the U.S. Supreme Court also [13]struck down the Obama administration's regulations, ruling that they provided inadequate conscience protection.

(Side note: Obama has been dragged out to stump for Harris in an obvious attempt to prop up her flagging poll numbers. At a campaign appearance earlier this week, Obama [14]said, "I don't understand how we got so toxic and just so divided and so bitter." Seriously? Here's a clue: Calling those who disagree with you "bitter" people who "cling to their guns or their religion" and then using government power to force them to violate their religious beliefs is a good recipe for toxicity and division.)

Former Hawai'ian congressional Rep. Tulsi Gabbard, who left the Democratic Party[15] two years ago and endorsed Trump [16]earlier this year, announced that she had officially joined the Republican Party at a Trump rally in Greensboro, North Carolina, this week. In Gabbard's announcement, she called the Republican Party "the party of the people, the party of peace ... the party of equality, the party of common sense." Gabbard lamented the changes in the Democratic Party, describing it as [17]"completely unrecognizable."

She's not alone. Traditional and social media are filled with the personal accounts of former Democrats — politicians like former presidential candidate [18]Robert F. Kennedy Jr. and U.S. Sens.[19] Joe Manchin and [20]Kyrsten Sinema, academics [21]Alan Dershowitz and [22]Bret Weinstein, journalists [23]Matt Taibbi and [24]Ana Kasparian, and countless ordinary people — who are disgusted that the Democratic Party has become the party of corporate power and government abuse: censorship, deliberate disinformation, political persecution, weaponization of law enforcement and constant war.

Harris may have thought it funny to tell two Christian boys they were at “the wrong rally.” But if you’re a Democrat who’s also a practicing Catholic or Christian, a member of any faith tradition that holds life to be sacrosanct, or simply an American who believes strongly in the individual freedoms guaranteed by the U.S. Constitution, you’re not only at the wrong rally; you’re in the wrong party.

I was on eharmony for couple of months, and its similar to okcupid where no woman wants to date. Apparently women don't like my G rated introduction. I see women of every education and sexual orientation on here. I was looking at Taylor the fiend and Better Bachelor on youtube where women from the city (liberal Twin Cities and subbergs have high body counts and go to clubs/bars.

My cousin Uli had a black girlfriend for 5 months who he met at a Roberts, Wisconsin bar and they were distancing from one another. He had her over at his house. He was a part of the Lions club and bowled. He lived in an apartment and had a painter job and played Diablo 4 and watched Hulu.

Now Harris asserts that Trump is a “fascist,” [4]a “dictator,” and “unfit” for office. But this new talking point will also not stop the Harris campaign’s hemorrhaging—and for a variety of reasons.

First, voters see the election as a conflict of two absolutely antithetical visions.

On the one hand is the prior, concrete Trump 2017-20 record: border security; no major wars abroad; calm in the Middle East; a deterred Russia, Iran, and China; low inflation; low interest rates; lower crime; lower taxes; strong deterrent military—and opposition to mandatory electric vehicle mandates, biological males competing in women’s sports, and the woke/diversity, equity, and inclusion agenda.

On the other hand is the Biden-Harris 2021-2024 record: the unchecked entry of 12 million to 20 million illegal aliens and a destroyed border. People still struggle under Biden-Harris' earlier hyperinflation and high interest rates. The horrific regional wars in Ukraine and the Middle East continue. Biden-Harris embraces the unpopular woke/DEI agenda.

Harris herself knows that the Biden-Harris years were a failure. That is why she has shed almost all of the administration's hard left-wing agendas—policies she has embraced for much of her adult life.

So suddenly, in the last 90 or so days, Harris has completely flipped and flopped.

Now she is for more funding of, not defunding, [5]the police. She pivots for a secure border, not 20 million illegal aliens pouring across it. Harris brags about fossil fuel energy, not banning fracking; she's for increasing, not cutting, defense.

In fact, several endangered incumbent Democratic senators in swing states are claiming more allegiance to Trump's issues than identifying with Harris and her unpopular record as vice president.

Voters likely conclude that if Trump doubles down on his record, while even Harris and many senators temporarily piggyback on it, then it must be more effective and popular than Harris' own.

Second, Harris now claims Trump is a fascist and insurrectionist.

But mouthing "Jan. 6" ad nauseam no longer persuades voters that Trump is a danger to anyone. They recall that Harris bragged of the far more violent demonstrations of 2020—five killed, $2 billion in damage, 1,500 law enforcement officers injured, 14,000 arrested—and said that the unrest would not and "should not" stop, while drumming up support to bail out jailed violent protesters.

Nor does the slur [6]that Trump is a fascist resonate. The Obama-Biden and Biden-Harris administrations weaponized the CIA and FBI to interfere in the 2016 and 2020 elections by peddling the fake "Steele dossier" and suppressing all the embarrassing news about Hunter Biden's incriminating laptop.

Trump certainly didn't coordinate, as Biden did, with local, state, and federal prosecutors to wage lawfare prosecutions to destroy his political opponents. He didn't use the FBI to partner with social media to suppress the news.

Neither Trump nor his supporters tried to remove Biden from state ballots.

The House's Republican majority didn't impeach Biden twice despite the Biden family's corruption and Joe Biden's unlawful, decadeslong removal of classified papers to several insecure private residences.

Trump and the Republicans never coercively removed the party's primary-winning nominee. They didn't nullify the will of 14 million primary voters. And in backroom fashion, they didn't anoint a candidate who had never entered a single primary in her life.

Nor did Trump support packing the Supreme Court. He doesn't seek unconstitutional means of destroying the Electoral College. He isn't demanding an end to the Senate filibuster or the creation of two new states to obtain four partisan Senate seats.

Third, as for Trump being "unfit" and lacking "decorum"? It depends on what the Biden-Harris standards were.

Having a trans activist reveal his breasts on camera at a White House "pride party"?

Biden's reportedly calling Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu "a f—ing idiot" and "son of a b—ch?" Bragging about locking Trump up, while waging lawfare against him?

Unleashing son Hunter Biden with impunity to shake down foreign governments?

The Nov. 5 election will not be decided on these empty talking points or fake, media-generated narratives.

Instead, only two criteria matter: Which candidate's past record and current agenda best appeal to voters? And which candidate seems the most authentic and genuine?

1.10.22 How the Biden-Harris Admin Diverted Billions From Scientific Research Funds to Promote DEI (2024-10-30 22:45)

A damning new report found that the Biden-Harris Administration may have illegally diverted billions of dollars from scientific research funds to promote woke diversity, equity, and inclusion (DEI) initiatives.

American First Legal launched an investigation into the politicization of billions of dollars in federal research funds by President Joe Biden and Vice President Kamala Harris to promote their dangerous DEI initiatives after Senate Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation Ranking Member Sen. Ted Cruz (R-TX) released a bombshell[1] report.

The legal group [2]filed a lawsuit against the National Science Foundation (NSF) for illegally obscuring the employment records of its agency officials who approved the grants. The lawsuit claims the Biden-Harris Administration used more than a quarter of NSF's funding to financially support left-wing ideological agenda items described under the guise of "academic research."

Immediately upon taking power, the Biden-Harris White House [3]created a task force on "scientific integrity" to provide "a review of the impact on [the] scientific integrity of diversity, equity, and inclusion practices" at all science-related agencies. Later, the White House and NSF [4]ordered agencies to "[i]ncorporate DEIA [Diversity, Equity, Inclusion, and Accessibility] considerations into all aspects of science planning, execution, and communication."

The Biden-Harris Administration has hijacked billions in federal taxpayer funds meant for important scientific research to promote anti-intellectual, anti-science, and anti-American DEI and leftist ideology. Awarding taxpayer dollars to radical initiatives in the name of “science” is the height of government weaponization, waste, fraud, and abuse. AFL will keep fighting to expose the Biden-Harris Administration’s racism, to stop the misuse of taxpayer funds, and to protect the integrity of our taxpayer-funded research enterprise.

Earlier this month, Cruz revealed that NSF gave more than $2.05 billion in federal funding to thousands of scientific research projects that push DEI initiatives, or as Cruz described, “neo-Marxist perspectives about enduring class struggle.” Between January 2021 and April 2024, more than 32,000 Prime Award grants were approved, and by 2024, 27 percent of all new grants that promoted DEI initiatives totaled $2.05 billion. The report noted that “social justice”-related grants amounted to $1.6 billion.

Corruption of science [5]<https://t.co/x9RVMnUKbO>— Elon Musk (@elonmusk) [6]October 30, 2024

Cruz’s report pointed out that most of the “extreme research proposals were led by principal investigators who also promote radical perspectives through on-campus activism and in their classrooms.”

Some examples from the report are listed below:

In 2023, NSF awarded Georgia Institute of Technology’s (Georgia Tech) Kelly Cross $99,791 to “disrupt[] racialized privilege in the STEM classroom” by acknowledging “Whiteness and White Supremacy” are “deeply ingrained in the past, present and future of U.S. Higher education.”

In 2022, NSF awarded San Jose State University $401,744 for an ongoing project to “transform[] science teaching and learning through empowering teachers and students as climate justice action researchers and change agents.” The project is meant to foster the “development of a hub for justice-centered science education and will produce school-based materials and professional development activities that examine the interwoven nature of climate justice and racial justice.

1.10.23 Take 2 Million Immigrants and Call Me in the Morning (2024-10-30 22:54)

At this point, the only thing we know for sure about the presidential election is that if Donald Trump loses, it will be because of his [1]personality, and if he [2]wins, it will be because of [3]immigration.

I know this because the media are publishing almost as many stories about the wonders of immigration as they are about Trump being Adolf Hitler. The New York Times, The Washington Post, NPR, MSNBC, the lickspittles at Cato – you can't open your computer or turn on the TV without encountering a tidal wave of lies about our beloved immigrants. (Former Washington Post readers, you'll just have to take my word for it.)

In the Times, Linda Qiu produced a [4]whopper of an article purporting to refute Trump's malicious nonsense about immigration, and as an immigrant herself, she must be completely unbiased, so I'll use that as my template.

Qiu begins with the silly claim that Trump and his vice-presidential nominee, JD Vance, blame everything on illegal immigrants. (Her article is already hanging in my Museum of Straw Man Arguments.)

"Be it gun violence, high [5]housing costs, [6]long wait times at [7]emergency rooms or an impending depletion of [8]disaster relief funding," she writes, "Mr. Trump and Senator JD Vance have offered the same diagnosis: All are because of unauthorized immigration."

Well, maybe not exclusively because of illegal immigration. (Only RACISM can be blamed for everything.) But while immigration is not 100 % responsible for these problems, it's hard to think of anything that's been made easier to solve by dumping millions of uneducated, poverty-stricken, non-English-speaking people on our country.

Nevertheless, Qiu claims Trump and Vance are not merely overstating the case, but are completely wrong. You see, she has "experts."

One "expert," Ieva Jusionyte, a professor at Brown University, said, "Vance is not correct that there is an influx of illegal guns from Mexico ... It is simply not a thing."

I totally trust someone who says, "it is simply not a thing." If she threw in "not on my bingo card" or "saying the quiet part out loud," she'd have sold me right there.

Except Jusionyte's claim is absurd. Where do liberals imagine [9]criminals get their guns? According to the Department of Justice, the guns used in crimes mainly come from [10]illegal sources, to wit: people involved in the sale of illegal drugs, markets for stolen goods and other criminals or criminal enterprises. (How about the much-maligned gun shows? A grand total of about [11]0.8 % of guns used in crimes come from gun shows. Ninety percent of guns used in crimes do not come from any retail source at all.)

As it happens, Mexican cartels are a gigantic criminal enterprise right on our border. They move enough fentanyl, synthetic methamphetamine and other drugs into our country [12]to kill about 100,000 Americans every year. But, according to Jusionyte, not [13]guns – no sir! Perhaps [14]cartel enforcers protect their "multibillion-dollar [15]narco empire" (New York Times) with complaints to the HR department.

The Times' Qiu cites other "government data and experts" who claim we're the ones sending guns to the cartels. (NYT rule: Always blame Americans.)

Liberals have been pushing this lie for 20 years. They finally got so desperate that Barack Obama's attorney general, Eric Holder, had to start putting U.S. guns directly into the [16]hands of Mexican drug cartels so that Democrats could [17]blame innocent American gun dealers. (For my younger readers, look up "[18]Operation Fast and Furious.")

Except Holder got caught, so the Democrats' next idea was to dummy up a phony study that's been [19]refuted a million times, but was bought hook, line and sinker by the crack Times reporter.

Citing "U.S. and Mexican governments and independent researchers" – I just hope the independent researchers use phrases like "that's not a thing" – Qiu somberly reported that "about 70 percent of firearms recovered at crime scenes in Mexico came from the United States."

That is precisely the opposite of the truth – also my idea for the Times' new motto.

Mexico doesn't send all guns retrieved from crime scenes to the U.S. for tracing, only the ones with serial numbers, indicating they came from the U.S. About 70 % of guns used by Mexican criminals have no serial numbers and no conceivable connection to the U.S., and, therefore, were [20]never sent to the U.S. for tracing.

It's only among the roughly [21]30 % that were sent to the U.S. that a majority were traced to the U.S. That's the Democrats' big gotcha: Guns from the U.S. were traced to the U.S.! It's a miracle! On the other hand, more than 80 % of all guns found at Mexican crime scenes were not from the U.S.

This is the sort of stupid game liberals play to try to convince us that all guns are bad and all Mexicans are good – definitely better than Americans, with their nasty gun culture.

As for housing, anyone with the intellect of a parakeet ought to be able to grasp that more people in need of housing will inevitably drive up the price of housing. It's called the Law of Supply and Demand. If Qiu has figured out a way to repeal that law, she should publish immediately. Not only will she win a Nobel Prize in economics, but everyone in the world can have beachfront property and a classic six on Park Avenue.

Advertisement

On the other hand, if she hasn't repealed the law of supply and demand, Qiu is, in fact, dumber than a parakeet.

Finally, of course mass third world immigration harms our [22]schools, [23]hospitals, Social Security, disaster relief and every other service meant for the American people. First, there are the gobs of money required to accommodate millions of non-English speakers – like [24]bilingual teachers, doctors, nurses, law enforcement officers, court translators, etc. All mandated by law.

But also, since 1970, we have been deliberately bringing in the poorest, least-educated people in the world. They don't come close to making enough money to pay for the [25]massive amounts of services they consume. Every additional schoolbook, teacher, bus driver, janitor, hospital bed, catheter, liver transplant – that's on you, taxpayer. (If Kamala Harris is elected, you'll be on the hook for illegals' [26]transgender operations, too.)

Not surprisingly, [27]a majority, 54 %, of immigrant-headed households are on welfare, compared to only 39 % of U.S.-born households – i.e., the people government assistance was intended to help. For illegal immigrants, the figure is [28]59 %. It might be time to update liberals' favorite cliché to, "We're a nation of immigrants on public assistance."

What happened to the claim that immigrants, especially illegals, aren't allowed to collect welfare? Oh, yeah, that's a lie.

Among other [29]free stuff, illegals get free school breakfasts and lunch, as well as women, infants and children (WIC) benefits, plus emergency room care for all their medical needs. Some states give illegals [30]Medicaid and SNAP. Most important, illegals simply need to drop [31]a baby, and they can [32]immediately start collecting full welfare on behalf of their allegedly, but [33]not really, "American citizen" kid.

Since the left will not stop bringing in the third world until our country is the same as every other country and there's no reason for anyone to come here, we don't have much of a choice on Tuesday.

1.11 November

1.11.1 Harris Is Ending Her Campaign With Lies and Smears (2024-11-03 22:24)

In the last two weeks, [1]Vice President Kamala Harris has been trying to revive her stagnant campaign by smearing [2]former President Donald Trump as being Hitlerian and a fascist. She claims Trump is planning to put his enemies in encampments.

Yet in the modern era, it was not Trump who put large numbers of U.S. residents and citizens into “relocation camps,” but liberal Democrat President Franklin D. Roosevelt who sent Japanese-American citizens and residents into them.

If Harris refers to Trump’s supposed fascist policies during his prior four-year tenure, there is no such evidence.

Nonetheless, the once “joyful” Harris is ending her campaign by trafficking in lies and smears reminiscent of the Joe McCarthy era.

Recall that fascists hijack law enforcement and the military to suspend constitutional rights and punish enemies. But Trump did neither.

Instead, in 2016, a corrupt FBI went after Trump himself during the Obama administration with the bogus Steele dossier.

The FBI, which in 2016 had hired the faker Steele, in 2020, fused with social media to suppress accurate news reporting of the embarrassing [3]Hunter Biden laptop scandal.

A number of FBI directors and intelligence officials—John Brennan, James Clapper, James Comey, Andrew McCabe—who openly sought to destroy Trump had a long history of either lying or feigning amnesia under oath.

Fascists try to warp the legal system. But Trump's own [4]Justice Department selected an independent special counsel to investigate the invented Russian collusion accusations against him.

In vast contrast, the Biden Justice Department coordinated with Georgia prosecutors Fani Willis and Nathan Wade, special counsel Jack Smith, Manhattan prosecutor Alvin Bragg, and New York Attorney General Letitia James to prosecute Trump, bankrupt him, and keep off the campaign trail.

Fascists use their governments to destroy their enemies.

During Trump's term, for the first time in history, the House of Representatives impeached a first-term president twice. And in another first, the Senate tried Trump as a private citizen.

A self-styled "anonymous" federal official bragged openly of deliberately, and likely unlawfully, leading a bureaucratic cabal to sabotage Trump's lawful executive orders.

Lt. Col. Alexander Vindman, in collusion with other bureaucrats, deliberately leaked a classified presidential phone call in an effort to ensure that Trump was impeached.

Fascists seek to change existing laws to destroy opponents and illegally consolidate power.

Currently, it is only the Democrats who seek to pack the court, destroy the Electoral College, end the Senate filibuster, and create two new states and thus gain four left-wing senators.

In key states, they radically changed voting laws.

As a result, roughly 70 % of voters in 2020 did not cast their ballots in person on Election Day—even as the traditional rejection rates for fraudulent ballots mysteriously dived amid the influx.

Fascists arbitrarily nullify any laws they feel do not aid their agendas. Biden-Harris destroyed immigration law in order to bring in more than 12 million [5]illegal aliens and gain new constituencies.

They also protected sanctuary cities, as some 600 such jurisdictions illegally and with impunity nullified federal immigration laws in neo-Confederate fashion.

Fascists seek to politicize the military.

But in Trump's case, his former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Gen. Mark Milley, brazenly violated the Uniform Code of Military Justice by libeling Trump as a fascist.

Worse still, Milley sabotaged the chain of command by ordering theater commanders to report directly to him in times of serious crises.

And in near-treasonous fashion, Milley contacted his Chinese communist counterpart in the People's Liberation Army to assure him that he would warn the Chinese military before carrying out any Trump order he felt existentially dangerous.

Some of the most prominent retired four-star military officers—again in violation of the Uniform Code of Military Justice—publicly smeared Trump as a coward, liar, fascist, Hitler-like, a Mussolini, a creator of Auschwitz-like death camps, and worthy of being removed “the sooner the better.”

Fascists seek to control and weaponize the media. So, Facebook and Twitter both conspired with the FBI to censor news accounts favorable to Trump. The major newspapers, social media corporations, television networks, and public broadcasting systematically and continually attacked Trump, censored his supporters, and fused with his opponents.

Why then the charges of Trump the fascist and Hitler reincarnation?

Simple. Harris' personal negatives are rising, her polls inert. Her Marxist-Leninist-Maoist views.

She has abandoned her prior run-out-the-clock avoidance of the media, her smiley "joy" campaign, and instead now embraces the big lie, while President Joe Biden writes off Trump supporters as "garbage."

Harris is now confirming to voters that she really can neither think nor speak well and has no consistent agenda that appeals to the middle class.

So, in final desperation, Harris is smearing Trump as a fascist, even though, ironically, he has been the target of fascist machinations from her own party and supporters for nearly a decade.

1.11.2 One Big Thing Biden Will Leave Behind (2024-11-06 22:13)

The 1972 presidential election – which pitted incumbent President Richard Nixon against Sen. George McGovern of South Dakota – was an absolute wipeout.

Nixon won 49 of the 50 states, losing only Massachusetts

In Delaware that year, Nixon took 59.6 % of the popular vote and McGovern took only 39.2 %. But the incumbent Republican senator running for reelection there that year suffered a surprising defeat.

"President Nixon, a conservative, won handily in Delaware," reported the Wilmington News Journal the day after that election. "Yet, Democrat Joseph R. Biden, a moderate-to-liberal Democrat, defeated the more conservative Sen. J. Caleb Boggs despite Boggs' longevity in the Senate."

Age was a key issue in this race between Boggs and Biden – with Biden running ads that suggested Boggs was too old and local newspapers celebrating the then-29-year-old Biden's youth.

"Biden finally shifted into an oblique attack on Boggs' age, 63, in a series of ads implying that Boggs would have been good for the job in the 1950s but Biden was more in tune with the '70s," the Wilmington Morning News reported the day after Biden defeated Boggs.

The Wilmington Evening Journal carried this headline that day: "State Elects The Youngest U.S. Senator."

"Democrat Joseph R. Biden Jr. squeaked past two-term Republican incumbent J. Caleb Boggs yesterday to become the nation's youngest U.S. senator and score one of the nation's biggest political upsets," the paper reported.

"Biden, who will not be eligible for the Senate until he turns 30 on Nov. 20, upset Boggs by 2,986 votes," the paper said.

Biden was sworn in as a senator on Jan. 3, 1973.

What was the federal government like when Biden started his career in federal office 51 years ago?

In fiscal 1974 – the first full fiscal year that Biden served in the Senate – the federal government took in $263.224 billion in taxes and spent $269.359 billion, running a deficit of $6.135 billion, according to data published by the White House Office of Management and Budget.

Where did the federal government spend that $269.359 billion in fiscal 1974?

The largest spending category in that fiscal year when Biden was beginning his career in Washington was the Department of Defense – Military Programs. It consumed $77.864 billion in fiscal 1974

The second largest was the Social Security Administration, which spent $58.123 billion. The third largest was the Department of Treasury, which manages the federal debt and spent $35.369 billion. The fourth largest was the Department of Health and Human Services, which spent $28.062 billion.

As Biden approaches the end of his single term in the White House, we are now in fiscal year 2025 – more than half a century past the first full fiscal year of Biden’s time in the Senate. In that more-than-half a century, Biden has had some responsibility for federal spending except during the time when President Donald Trump had responsibility for signing federal spending bills. From January 1973 to January 2009, Biden served in the Senate. From January 2009 to January 2017, he served as vice president; and from January 2021 until now, he has served as president.

What was federal spending like in fiscal 2024, the last full year Biden has overseen?

Biden’s OMB estimates that the federal government collected approximately $5.0815 trillion in taxes in fiscal 2024 and spent approximately $6.9409 trillion, while running a deficit of approximately $1.8593 trillion.

The single largest spending category in fiscal 2024, according to the OMB estimates, was the Department of Health and Human Services, which spent approximately $1.6693 trillion. The second was the Social Security Administration, which spent approximately $1.5171 trillion. The third was the Department of the Treasury, which spent approximately $1.3456 trillion.

The OMB has also published a table that shows federal revenues, spending and deficits for every year going back to 1940 converted into constant fiscal year 2017 dollars. This table shows that in fiscal 1974, when Biden was serving his first full fiscal year in the Senate, the federal government spent approximately $1.2413 trillion in constant 2017 dollars. In fiscal 2024, it spent approximately $5.5876 trillion in constant 2017 dollars.

Thus, in this era when Biden has served all but four years in federal office, real federal spending has increased more than fourfold.

At the same time, according to the Congressional Research Service, the federal debt was $450.068 billion at the end of January 1973, the month Biden was sworn into the Senate. This Monday, according to the Treasury Department, it was $35.884 trillion.

When Biden released his last federal budget proposal in March, he declared his commitment to fiscal responsibility.

"Well, the budget I'm releasing today sends a clear message to the American people that we – what we value," he said. "First, fiscal responsibility."

"The first value," he repeated, "is fiscal responsibility."

History will not remember Biden that way.

1.11.3 TB - The Silent Killer Crossing Our Border (2024-11-06 22:34)

Open borders allow deadly narcotics and criminal gangs to invade our country. But there's a silent killer also making its way across the border: tuberculosis.

America's woke public health authorities are more concerned with equity – redistributing health resources among racial groups – than with keeping a disease the U.S. once nearly eradicated from becoming a threat again.

Reported cases of TB shot up 34 % from 2020 to 2023, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, and continue to rise. More than three quarters of the cases are foreign-born people who picked up the disease in their home countries or traveling through countries with high TB rates. The TB incidence rate is 60 times higher in Haiti than in the U.S.

In New York City – the No. 1 destination for migrants – the incidence of TB is two and a half times the national average and still rising.

A staggering 89 % of TB patients in the Big Apple are foreign-born. The Flushing/Clearview areas of Queens, Sunset Park, Brooklyn and the Lower East Side of Manhattan are the neighborhoods most affected. The single largest national group with reported TB cases is from China, according to the city's most recent Annual Tuberculosis Summary.

TB is no laughing matter. Globally it has just overtaken COVID-19 as the biggest infectious disease killer on earth. There is no effective vaccine for it, but most cases – except severely drug-resistant ones – can be treated with antibiotics, provided they're taken daily without interruption for several months or longer. Not easy.

Western Europe, Scandinavia and North America are all reporting rising TB rates as migrants from poorer countries – where TB is common – arrive. UK health authorities are alerting the public to the distinctive cough that comes with TB.

In Europe, public health authorities are engaged in a lively debate about how to affordably screen TB carriers and keep them from infecting the local population. Someone can carry latent TB for years, then suddenly, after resettling in a new country, develop active – and highly contagious – TB and spread it by coughing and sneezing.

But in the U.S., the mission-confused CDC is stressing health equity and rushing resources to the "disproportionately affected" groups. That's fine, but how about also shielding Americans from the reemergence of a disease they've largely eliminated? In all the agency's reports, not a word about what's causing the surge in TB: an open border.

Immigrants who enter the country legally and apply for green cards are screened for TB with the interferon-gamma release assay test. Latent carriers are allowed into the country and referred to a local health department for follow-up treatment. It's voluntary and hit-or-miss but better than no screening at all.

Migrants flooding across the border illegally or entering with Biden's new parole app get no screening. Zip.

The CDC is MIA about screening and isolating the infected before they bring the disease to cities and towns across the country. The agency is forgetting its "Control and Prevention" mission.

Take the case of a Chinese migrant with active drug-resistant TB who crossed the border illegally in April. When her symptoms worsened and she was diagnosed on July 23 as "highly positive," nothing was done to isolate her. Instead, she was shuffled between immigration processing facilities in California and Louisiana, exposing hundreds.

Now Louisiana is suing federal authorities to keep the exposed migrants detained until they are medically cleared. State Attorney General Liz Murrill warns about illegals who are "untested for diseases that can threaten the lives of Louisiana and American citizens."

Thousands of unaccompanied minors with latent TB are being released into communities across the country, rather than being kept in Health and Human Services shelter facilities for the many months it would take to treat them with a course of antibiotics.

CDC data show a whopping 42 % increase in incidence of TB among children ages 5-14 in one year.

On Nov. 1, Sen. Mike Lee (R-Utah) demanded that Homeland Security head Alejandro Mayorkas erect precautions against a disease invasion, warning that TB "is rapidly spreading through the millions of unscreened illegal immigrants released into the interior of the United States."

The number of reported cases this year – just under 10,000 – is small but the trend is worrisome. The U.S. waged a war against TB in the 20th century and won. Americans shouldn't have to surrender to this disease now because of open borders.

1.11.4 Trump Gains Another Win With Arizona (2024-11-06 22:37)

On Wednesday evening, Decision Desk HQ officially called Arizona's 11 electoral votes in favor of President Elect Donald Trump. The race was called just before 9pm EST on Wednesday evening, approximately 24 hours after the polls closed. Officials from the state had previously warned [1]that it could take days or even weeks for the results to come in, [2]especially due to Maricopa County.

While such a win was nevertheless expected given the polling trends, it still represents a flip from 2020, when President Joe Biden won the state.

Trump addressed supporters early on Wednesday morning, referencing not only his win in Pennsylvania and thus the presidential election, but also that he was leading in states such as Michigan and Arizona. RealClearPolling had Trump leading Arizona [7]by +2.8, making it one of his best battleground states. Nate Silver's [8]final forecast showed Trump winning by +2.4 in Arizona, though the poll trends had been favoring Harris for the past week.

Trump has indeed won the state, though the U.S. Senate race out of Arizona has still not yet been called. Democratic Rep. Ruben Gallego is considered to have the edge in his race against Republican Kari Lake to see who will replace retiring Sen. Kyrsten Sinema, who switched from the Democratic Party to becoming an Independent in late 2022. That being said, Lake does look to potentially be closing the gap.

With such a win, Trump has not only increased his electoral vote to 312 votes, and flipped a state from 2020, but he has won all seven swing states, thanks to wins in North Carolina, Georgia, Michigan, Wisconsin, Pennsylvania, and Nevada.

My College degrees were $33,000 from 2003 - 2015 of education at WITC New Richmond, Chippewa Valley Technical College and Rasmussen University. The Rasmussen University had a mascot, but no sports, no dorms, and mostly online education off message boards, and 10-12 pages of APA papers weekly. WITC and Chippewa Valley were on campus. There was no cameras on campus except they didn't enforce that totally. There were only class pictures by staff and events or holidays on the colleges instagram and facebook page unless someone snuck phone camera inside it.

1.11.6 It's Happening: Trump Tasks Elon Musk and Vivek Ramaswamy to Lead Department of Government Efficiency (2024-11-12 21:21)

This piece has been updated to include another post from Vivek Ramaswamy about other political endeavors.

During the 202 election, President-elect Donald Trump had the enthusiastic support from Elon Musk and Vivek Ramaswamy, the latter who had once been a primary opponent. After Musk's frequent references to being involved in a department to do with government efficiency, which our own Kurt Schlichter [1]predicted, the Trump-Vance transition team [2]made it official with a statement on Tuesday night.

According to the statement, Musk, in conjunction with his American Patriot PAC, and Ramaswamy, will lead the Department of Government Efficiency, also known as "DOGE." The statement also included a quote from Musk himself, who declared that "This will send shockwaves through the system, and anyone involved in Government waste, which is a lot of people!"

As the full statement read:

I am pleased to announce that the Great Elon Musk, working in conjunction with American Patriot Vivek Ramaswamy, will lead the Department of Government Efficiency ("DOGE"). Together, these two wonderful Americans will pave the way for my Administration to dismantle Government Bureaucracy, slash excess regulations, cut wasteful expenditures, and restructure Federal Agencies - Essential to the "Save America" Movement. "This will send shockwaves through the system, and anyone involved in Government waste, which is a lot of people!" stated Mr. Musk.

It will become, potentially, "The Manhattan Project" of our time. Republican politicians have dreamed about the objectives of "DOGE" for a very long time. To drive this kind of drastic change, the Department of Government Efficiency will provide advice and guidance from outside of Government, and will partner with the White House and Office of Management & Budget to drive large scale structural reform, and create an entrepreneurial approach to Government never seen before.

I look forward to Elon and Vivek making changes to the Federal Bureaucracy with an eye on efficiency and, at the same time, making life better for all Americans. Importantly, we will drive out the massive waste and fraud which exists throughout our annual $6.5 Trillion Dollars of Government Spending. They will work together to liberate our Economy, and make the U.S. Government accountable to "WE THE PEOPLE." Their work will conclude no later than July 4, 2026 - A smaller Government, with more efficiency and less bureaucracy, will be the perfect gift to America on the 250th Anniversary of The Declaration of Independence. I am confident they will succeed!

The statement also made reference to America's 250th birthday celebrating, noting that Ramaswamy and Musk will have concluded their work by July 4, 2026, on that 250th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence.

Musk was a frequent guest for the Trump-Vance rallies in the final weeks of the campaign, appearing in places such as Butler, Pennsylvania, as well as at Trump's October 27 rally at Madison Square Garden.

Ramaswamy shared the statement over his X account, also noting, "We will not go quietly," complete with a tag of Musk and the American flag.

We will not go gently, [3]@elonmusk. [4]<https://t.co/sbVka2vTiW>— Vivek Ramaswamy (@VivekGRamaswamy) [5]November 13, 2024

Later in the evening, Ramaswamy also posted that such a role means he is removing his name from consideration to replace Vice President-Elect JD Vance, who currently serves as a U.S. Senator representing Ohio. He was elected to the role in 2022.

"And yes, this means I'm withdrawing myself from consideration for the pending Senate appointment in Ohio. Whoever Governor DeWine appoints to JD's seat has some big shoes to fill. I will help them however I can," Ramaswamy posted, still signaling a willingness to help.

1.11.7 So, That's Who Trump Wants to Run the Pentagon (2024-11-12 21:24)

President-elect Donald J. Trump has announced his nominee to run the Pentagon: Fox and Friends co-host and decorated veteran Pete Hegseth. Hegseth, who continues to serve in the US Army, was seen as a frontrunner to run Veterans Affairs during the first Trump presidency and also served with various veterans' advocacy groups like Concerned Veterans for America and Vets for Freedom.

Mr. Trump had this statement regarding his nominee:

I am honored to announce that I have nominated Pete Hegseth to serve in my Cabinet as The Secretary of Defense. Pete has spent his entire life as a Warrior for the Troops, and for the Country. Pete is tough, smart and a true believer in America First. With Pete at the helm, America's enemies are on notice - Our Military will be Great Again, and America will Never Back Down. Pete is a graduate of Princeton University, and has a Graduate Degree from Harvard University. He is an Army Combat Veteran who did tours in Guantanamo Bay, Iraq, and Afghanistan. For his actions on the battlefield, he was decorated with two Bronze Stars, as well as a Combat Infantryman's Badge. Pete has been a host at FOX News for eight years, where he used that platform to fight for our Military and Veterans. Pete's recent book, "The War on Warriors," spent nine weeks on the New York Times best-sellers list, including two weeks at NUMBER ONE. The book reveals the leftwing betrayal of our Warriors, and how we must return our Military to meritocracy, lethality, accountability, and excellence. Pete has also led two Veterans Advocacy organizations, leading the fight for our Warriors, and our great Veterans. Nobody fights harder for the Troops, and Pete will be a courageous and patriotic champion of our "Peace through Strength" policy.

This selection comes as Mr. Trump announced that Kristi Noem will head the Department of Homeland Security, Marco Rubio will run the State Department, and Mike Huckabee will be our next ambassador to Israel. Former Texas Congressman John Ratcliffe was nominated to be the next director of the Central Intelligence Agency.

1.11.8 Pentagon Has Two Years to Prevent World War III (2024-11-13 22:39)

Xi Jinping has ordered the People's Liberation Army to be ready to seize Taiwan by 2027. Whether he launches an invasion may depend on President Trump's defense secretary. If confirmed by the Senate, Army National Guard veteran and Fox News host Pete Hegseth, Mr. Trump's [1]nominee, will have to confront the collapse of deterrence in Europe and the Middle East, resource constraints on Capitol Hill, recruitment challenges, and a deteriorating balance of power in the Indo-Pacific. The only way to promote peace is to go to war on day one—not with China, Russia or Iran but with the Pentagon bureaucracy.

The first task is to fix the U.S. Navy. America needs a maritime industrial base that can counter China's. Pentagon requirements for building maritime assets involve too many uncoordinated stakeholders. The Pentagon establishes war-fighting requirements—such as the number of missiles on a ship—without regard to interdependent technical specifications such as that ship's center of gravity. When those technical specifications aren't tightly linked to war-fighting requirements, the mismatch can cause underperformance or unplanned costs and time. The Defense Department should return to the board model that served the Navy well until the 1960s. The Navy would have a forum of senior stakeholders with a chairman empowered to decide both requirements and specifications, ensuring that these work in harmony.

The Navy should also create an office focused on expediting the development and deployment of certain war-fighting technologies, similar to the Rapid Capabilities Office at the U.S. Air Force and U.S. Space Force. The next secretary should insist on more flexible processes to deliver unmanned surface, aerial and underwater vehicles with speed and at scale. He must also work with Congress to help shipyards attract and retain talent. Rebuilding the maritime industrial base can also help save Aukus—the security partnership between Australia, the U.K. and the U.S.—which is in danger of stalling. Under the Aukus agreement, the U.S. Navy intends to sell Australia at least three Virginia-class attack submarines by the early 2030s. To realize this goal, the Navy needs to build more than today's 1.2 hulls a year and shrink maintenance backlogs that have sidelined nearly 40 % of the fleet. Addressing these challenges will demand consistent funding, which will come only if t etired four-star General Jack Keane has said "World War III is in the future" while discussing the U.S. election's impact on global stability.

Donald Trump [1]won last week's election at a time when the western world is grappling with a war in the Middle East, Russia's invasion of Ukraine and tensions with North Korea and China.

General Keane has said that while Trump's victory will force U.S. adversaries to "reassess," the world is headed for "global war."

He told [2]Fox News' Life, Liberty & Levin that the global security challenges that we are facing, "are the most serious, the most dangerous and the most challenging we have had since World War II.

He added: "And I do believe that we're in a pre-war era leading to global war - that is the status that we're facing."

General Keane went on to add that "all of these adversaries - China, Russia, Iran, North Korea, who are cooperating, collaborating coordinating together in a degree that exceeded the expectations of all of our intelligence agencies, by the way, and they have been honest about that appraisal" will have to "reassess, based on this election that's taken place."

"Because they have been acting so aggressively, so assertively, because they believe that our leadership in the United States is weak, that we've lost the political will to confront them, much less go and fight them," he added.

Later on in the interview, General Keane said: "This election has been a seminal event. And I'm convinced that President Trump knows that World War III is in the future.

"And we have got to take action to restore deterrence in dealing with our adversaries. And one of those is rebuilding a military - it has to be done. And we have to fix how the [3]Pentagon does its business, or we're going to be throwing taxpayers' money away."

General Keane went on to say: "And we absolutely have to support our allies who are fighting these adversaries. Israel is fighting a major adversary - give them everything they need to finish it as soon as possible.

He added: "Ukraine is fighting Russia - give them everything they need and finish it as soon as possible. These are investments in our security when our allies are fighting our adversaries."

A major theme in Trump's campaign message was his promise to end wars in the Middle East and Ukraine, often claiming that they would never have started if he was in office.

The President-elect has reportedly [4]spoken with Russian President Vladimir Putin in a post-election phone call, according to The Washington Post, which said Trump reminded Putin about "Washington's sizeable military presence in Europe" and said he would look for a follow-up conversation to discuss a "resolution of Ukraine's war."

Steven Cheung, Trump's communications director, told Newsweek in an emailed response to a request for comment that "we do not comment on private calls between President Trump and other world leaders."

Meanwhile, a senior [5] Hamas official has called for an immediate end to Israel's war against the group in the Gaza Strip in [6] a statement shared with Newsweek in the wake of Trump's victory.

In regards to North Korea, Pyongyang responded to [7] Donald Trump's claim that the nation's leader [8] Kim Jong Un misses him, saying [9] it does "not care" about his re-election.

Chinese President [10] Xi Jinping called President-elect Donald Trump [11] to congratulate him on his win, in a statement that also said he hopes China and the U.S. will strengthen communication, "properly manage differences" and "find a correct way for China and the United States to get along in the new era, so as to benefit both countries and the world."

Iran's foreign minister, [12] Abbas Araghchi, said that "Iran respects (the American people's) right to elect the President of their choice" and called for "respect," insisting that Iran is "NOT after nuclear weapons" and denying accusations that an Iranian man was involved in a [13] murder-for-hire scheme to kill Trump.

1.11.10 Melania Trump Sets the Record Straight About Not Meeting With Jill Biden (2024-11-13 22:41)

Future First Lady Melania Trump did not join her husband, President-elect Donald Trump, at a White House meeting on Wednesday with President Joe Biden.

In a statement, the Office of Melania Trump wished her husband “great success” in the transition process, but slammed “several unnamed sources in the media” for providing “false, misleading, and inaccurate information” about the ordeal.

“Be discerning with your source of news,” the statement, shared on X, said.

This week, the Daily Mail reported that Trump was “snubbing” Jill Biden by skipping the visit to the White House (via [2]Daily Mail):

Traditionally, when the outgoing president hosts the incoming president-elect in the Oval Office, the first lady hosts her successor for tea in the residence.

Michelle Obama hosted Melania Trump for tea in the Yellow Room after the 2016 election. However, Melania Trump did not meet with Jill Biden after the contentious 2020 race as Donald Trump falsely and repeatedly claimed he was the true win

A source told Daily Mail that the two women have not spoken since Donald Trump defeated Harris in the election.

Daily Mail claimed that Jill Biden's office "extended congratulations and a joint invite to the Trumps to meet at the White House."

Reportedly, the Trumps have not been back to the White House since they left the morning of Biden's inauguration in 2021.

1.11.11 Thanks to Tim Walz, Kamala Lost This Key State (2024-11-13 22:42)

Vice President Kamala Harris' first significant campaign decision backfired almost immediately, costing her and the Democratic Party the keys to the White House.

Harris's choice to pick Minnesota Gov. Tim Walz (D) over Jewish Gov. Josh Shapiro (D-PA) had a lasting effect that, according to a report, is among the top reasons she lost to President-elect Donald Trump. Exit polls reveal that in addition to Harris struggling to unify the Democratic base, her running mate, Walz, also had trouble rounding up Americans from a critical group: Jewish voters.

Although the Harris-Walz ticket won Pennsylvania Jewish voters 48 to 41 percent against Trump and Vice President-elect JD Vance, leaving Shapiro off the ticket was a significant failure for Democrats. A survey conducted by Honan Strategy Group for the Teach Coalition, a branch of the Jewish Orthodox Union, found that 53 percent of Jewish voters would have preferred Shapiro as vice president over Walz.

If 53 percent had voted for Harris and had Shapiro been her running mate, support for Trump would have decreased to 38 percent.

Ultimately, Trump and Vance [1]won Pennsylvania by securing the state's 19 electoral votes, 50.4 percent to Harris' 48.6 percent.

Meanwhile, 43 percent of Pennsylvania voters suggested that the increase in antisemitism influenced how they voted in the 2024 election. Ironically, Shapiro was reportedly targeted by an “ugly, antisemitic campaign.” As a result, Harris failed to secure the majority among a group traditionally favored by Democrats.

“The far-left has made anti-Israel activity a cornerstone. They have sway in the Democratic Party,” the founder and CEO of the Teach Coalition, Maury Litwack, said. “This is a wake-up call for the Democratic Party in New York.”

Republican Sen. Ted Cruz (R-TX) accused the Democratic Party of being antisemitic.

“You oughta ask yourself why didn’t she pick Josh Shapiro as her VP?” Texas Cruz said during an interview on Fox News. “The answer is, in today’s Democrat Party, they could not stomach a candidate who was Jewish.”

1.11.12 Kamala Harris Was Always Doomed (2024-11-13 22:43)

[1]The presidential race was not unpredictable, as the now once again discredited polls swore to us.

The Republicans had made massive gains in voter registration since 2020, when [2]Donald Trump lost the Electoral College by only a few thousand strategically placed votes.

[3]Republicans began to master the transition to non-Election Day balloting—first engineered by the Left in 2020 under the pretext of COVID-19. Republicans not only vastly exceeded their early or mail-in voting totals of 2020, but by Election Day they often outpaced Democrats.

For months, it was widely reported, albeit grudgingly, that there were large defections in Hispanic and African American voters from [4]Vice President Kamala Harris.

The betting odds over the past three weeks usually favored Trump.

Harris simply could not run on anything she had so emphatically promoted in the past—given these left-wing, unpopular, and failed policies had no majority support.

So, the chameleon Harris renounced her prior 30 years of earlier radical advocacy that, along with her race and gender, had forced [5]Joe Biden in 2020 to select her as vice president.

There was no way Harris could still support banning fracking, defunding police, opposing border security and the wall, or calling for mass amnesties and an end to the Border Patrol.

Nor could Harris still promote racial reparations, ending private health care insurance, or advocating higher income and capital gains taxes as well as a wealth tax.

Much less could Harris still boast of wanting mandatory “buyback” or confiscation of some semi-automatic weapons—including entering private homes to seize them.

So given all that, Harris simply flipped—and serially lied about who she was, renouncing her entire political career.

Indeed, Harris began to copycat Trump’s own positions. And so, she never convinced the electorate that she would not flip back to her earlier radicalism once elected or even in defeat finishing out her vice-presidential term.

There were three damning realities that even if Harris had been a gifted politician and an adept speaker, she could never have changed.

One, Harris was preposterously running as a turn-the-page, new-generation candidate.

But why had she not sought to implement such a “new chapter” for the prior 45 months as an incumbent vice president, especially while in office during the campaign itself?

Voters knew the answer: The entire Biden-Harris tenure was an utter, far left-wing disaster, one for which the radical Harris 1.0 had for three-plus years claimed co-ownership.

Two, why did Harris avoid all impromptu interviews and the media for most of the campaign—only to reverse course and seek out reporters when her polls eroded?

Did it hurt Harris more to avoid the media—or meet with reporters and thus confirm her inanity to millions of viewers and listeners?

Three, why did Harris serially lie to America that Biden was hale and vigorous as president—until hours before his senility prompted leftist donors and party insiders to force him off the ticket?

And why could she not declare her independence from the historically unpopular Biden?

Harris instead chose to terrify voters to vote against a demonized and “fascist” Trump rather than to vote for Harris and her make-believe agendas.

But even in demonizing Trump, the maladroit Harris hit a wall.

By campaign’s end, Trump’s favorables were often higher than her own.

His prior four years as president polled higher than the current Biden-Harris train wreck.

Trump, the purported “racist,” won more Hispanic and [6]black voters than past “moderate” Republicans such as Bob Dole, John McCain, or Mitt Romney.

It was hard to damn Trump as a crazy fascist when iconic liberal figures, like Robert Kennedy Jr. or Tulsi Gabbard, were campaigning for him.

Trump had reinvented the Republican Party by substituting ecumenical, middle-class solidarity for polarizing racial tribalism. Elitist Democrats were left to cater to the interests of their well-off and very rich donors as well as the subsidized poor.

Finally, workaholic Trump campaigned nonstop for two years, won all the Republican primaries, and was endorsed by his two chief primary rivals.

In contrast, the Harris “nomination” was the product of a coup that, in 48 hours, removed from the ticket an incumbent president, nullified the will of his 14 million primary voters, and coronated Harris, who had neither won nor ever entered a primary.

That late July forced abdication of Biden lent an air of illegitimacy to Harris's candidacy, as well as truncating the time available to campaign.

Finally, Harris' first major decision was to nominate as her vice president the buffoonish and inept [7]Minnesota Gov. Tim Walz. His radicalism, serial lying, and herky-jerky "weirdness" proved a force multiplier of her own mediocrity.

In contrast, the calm, empathetic, and astute Sen. [8]JD Vance of Ohio, Trump's running mate, eviscerated Walz in their sole debate and did the same to the media.

Add it all up—and Harris and her star-crossed candidacy were simply and rightly doomed.

1.11.13 Celebrate Diversity (Or Else)! (2024-11-21 10:04)

Somewhere along the line the Democratic Party went from "celebrate diversity" to "CELEBRATE DIVERSITY OR ELSE, YOU BIGOT!" They lost the American public – that was perfectly happy to acknowledge firsts and applaud people who achieved them – once they demanded conformity and the bastardizing of reality. And now we find ourselves fighting to keep reality in our public spaces and men out of the ladies' room.

If you could travel back in time just a few years and tell your younger self that one political party would be fighting tooth and nail to make sure a man in a dress is treated like they were your mother, you'd have your older-self committed. Yet, that's where the Democrats have led society.

When Delaware elected the first “trans-woman” to Congress, a man named Tim McBride who now goes by Sarah, you knew a conflict was coming between Democrats and reality. See, McBride is one of those leftists who want to be celebrated for existing in a way the left deems important. We normal people are not worthy of celebration for our existence, and most of our accomplishments are diminished because of our skin color, our sexuality or political beliefs – the same reason Democrats celebrate their chosen groups.

As a “trans woman,” the left insists, McBride is a “real woman.” Every bit as real a woman as your sister, your wife, your mother – you can tell by the way a hyphenate is required to explain the penis.

It’s insanity, of course, but people can live insanely if they so choose. What they don’t have is the right to force everyone else to live in crazyland with them.

I’m not saying be rude – Tim changed his name to Sarah, so I’d call him Sarah – but I’m not going to pretend he’s a woman or use whatever pronouns he decrees as the only acceptable ones to use in reference to him.

I would mostly rectify this situation by avoiding him; live and let live doesn’t mean I have to live with anyone or anyone has to live with me. If we worked together, I’d deal with him as little as possible (a feeling that would probably be mutual), but any required interactions would be respectful. Outside of work, we wouldn’t interact at all. I’m too old to play these game or to allow reality to be perverted in order to protect the fragile psyche of anyone – grow the hell up and be more than superficial and we can talk, till then...pass.

That being said, the outrage over Congresswoman Nancy Mace’s desire to keep men out of women’s bathrooms and locker rooms is everything wrong with the left, why they lost the election and why they should continue to lose in perpetuity.

I have no interest in the people who created the concept of “safe spaces” and “trigger warnings” for adults uncomfortable with having someone who disagrees with their politics appearing somewhere on campus having a role in my life at all. If you bring in puppies and Play-Doh for snowflakes to play with after shouting down conservatives or in their post-throwing Molotov cocktails at police, your indifference toward a genuine rape survivor being uncomfortable having men, in a dress or not, in a women-only space speaks louder than you ever could with Metallica’s sound system.

Many on the left are pretending to be outraged that so many conservatives, especially women, are trying to make one little old person feel uncomfortable; that they have no right to do that. Why does one man have the right to make so many other people (and it’s not just Republicans who feel it, they're just the only ones who won't be destroyed for admitting it) uncomfortable; to make a rape survivor uncomfortable?

It's free for female Democrat Members of Congress to pretend to be angry at Mace, "Believe all women" hypocrisy aside, each Member has a private bathroom in their office, so they can make sure it's never an issue for them, if they're careful.

But the ultimate simple fact is if it weren't for the demands of Democrats to "celebrate" this, rather than just exist and ignore it, this whole issue would likely never have risen to this level. McBride has been all over leftist media, with multiple interviews on CNN and MSNBC, for the express reason that he's a "trans woman." There is literally no other reason to even acknowledge the existence of a backbench Freshman Congressman from Delaware or anywhere else.

Live by raising a stink, die by raising a stink.

The odds are about even that you've been in a public bathroom with someone in drag, either direction, or just someone of the opposite gender. As the father of 2 girls, I've been a part of it. Most people don't notice because you don't do anything to draw attention to yourself - the business gets done, hands get washed and you get the hell out - no one goes into a bathroom to make friends or put on a show.

But if your existence is continually validated through external forces and attention, positive or negative, you can't just go about your business. It's the mentality that asks, "Did I really eat a meal if I didn't post a picture of it on Instagram?"

That's not a healthy way to live, but if an adult wants to live that way, who cares? The problem comes in when others insist you live that way too, or else. There's a difference between not caring what an adult does, as long as what they do it with is of age and willing, and being forced to applaud it. Democrats don't care as much about the first part; they demand conformity through the second. To hell with that.

1.11.14 John Oliver Defended Transgender Athletes Competing in Women's Sports. JK Rowling Responded. (2024-11-21 10:07)

This week, best-selling author J.K. Rowling ripped into HBO's John Oliver for one of his recent monologues defending transgender athletes in women's sports.

"There are vanishingly few trans girls competing in high schools anywhere, even if there were more, trans kids like all kids vary in terms of athletic ability, and there is no evidence they pose any threat to safety or fairness," Oliver said on Friday.

Rowling responded in a lengthy post shared on X.

"An undoubtedly intelligent person spouts absolute bullshit to support something he wants to be true, but isn't," Rowling wrote, before delving into the fact that a recent report from the UN showed that women have lost nearly 900 medals to men.

"Again and again I've come up against men who argue exactly what Oliver does here, using the very same talking points. With a straight face, the 'believe the science' guys will say 'actually, we don't yet have enough data to say whether men and boys are stronger and faster than women and girls'. The 'be kind' crew can't see what the issue is. 'Why are you bothered, it only affects a tiny minority of females?'" she added.

"They'll stare unabashedly into a camera and insist that their audiences' eyeballs are incapable of seeing what's plain as day, and that there's something wrong with the great unwashed for believing that girls are being robbed of opportunities and put at physical risk. If you want to tell the world you're happy to watch females suffer injury, humiliation and the loss of sporting opportunities to bolster an elitist post-modern ideology embraced by a minute fraction of the world's population, fair enough; you're allowed your opinion. But if you've just told girls they don't deserve fair sport, maybe rethink using all too real and common sexual predation against young women as a punchline for your 'edgy' closing joke," she concluded.

Nothing about this feels good, because John Oliver generously gave his time for my charity Lumos and I liked him very much when I met him, but God knows, if you ever need an example of motivated reasoning and confirmation bias, this video's for you. An undoubtedly intelligent... [1]<https://t.co/3IS4onzXq0>— J.K. Rowling (@jk_rowling) [2]November 17, 2024

Rowling has long been outspoken about transgenders competing in women's sports. In May, Townhall [3]covered how she was accused of "bullying" after she called a transgender soccer manager a "straight, white, middle-aged bloke" on social media. Rowling's statement came after a new law was enacted in Scotland making "misgendering" someone a crime.

That's not all. In recent months, Townhall has [4]covered how Rowling fired back at a news outlet that referred to a so-called "transgender" killer as a woman. In addition, the United Kingdom's first "transgender" news anchor [5]reported Rowling to the police for intentionally "misgendering" "her" as a "man" on social media.

1.11.15 Restoring Deterrence Will Prevent Endless Wars (2024-11-21 10:10)

On Jan. 3, 2020, the Trump administration conducted a drone strike near Baghdad International Airport, killing Iranian Maj. Gen. [1]Qassem Soleimani.

Soleimani had a long record of waging surrogate wars against Americans, especially during the Iraq conflict and its aftermath.

After the Trump cancellation of the Iran Deal, followed by U.S. sanctions, Soleimani reportedly stepped up violence against regional American bases—most of which [2]President Donald Trump himself ironically wished to remove.

A few days later, Iran staged a performance-art retaliatory strike against Americans in Iraq and Syria, assuming Trump had no desire for a wider Middle East war.

So, Iran launched 12 missiles that hit two U.S. airbases in Iraq. Supposedly, Tehran had warned the Trump administration of the impending attacks that killed no Americans. Later reports, however, suggested that some Americans suffered concussions, while more damage was done to the bases than was initially disclosed.

Nonetheless, this Iranian interlude seemed to reflect Trump's agenda of avoiding "endless wars" in the Middle East while restoring deterrence that prevented, not prompted, full-scale conflicts.

Yet in a second Trump administration, rethreading the deterrence needle without getting into major wars may become far more challenging. The world of today is far more dangerous than when Trump left in 2021.

An inept Biden administration has utterly destroyed U.S. deterrence abroad through both actual and symbolic disasters: the Chinese dressing down of U.S. diplomats in Anchorage; the humiliating skedaddle from Afghanistan; the brazen flight of a Chinese spy balloon across the U.S.; the invasion of Ukraine by Russia; the Oct. 7, 2023 massacre of 1,200 Israelis; the serial Houthi attacks on international shipping in the Red Sea; the visible restraint of Israel from fully replying to Iranian missile attacks on its homeland; and renewed bellicosity on the part of both North Korea and China toward American allies such as Japan, South Korea, and Taiwan.

Of course, a second-term Trump must radically reform the [3]Pentagon and beef up the military while warning enemies of the consequences to follow from any unwise aggression.

But if opponents believe such admonitions remain only vocal threats, then empty verbiage surely will erode deterrence further—such as [4]President Joe Biden's serial and empty brag-gadocio, "Don't!"

Biden's past theatrical finger-shaking translated into aggressors like Russian President Vladimir Putin going into Ukraine, Iran sending missiles into Israel, and the Houthis serially hitting shipping in the Red Sea.

Given the past messes of the Iraqi, Libyan, and Syrian interventions, and the catastrophic Biden humiliation in Afghanistan, Trump in 2024 is much more emphatic about the need to avoid such overseas dead-end entanglements or even the gratuitous use of force that historically can sometimes lead to tit-for-tat entanglements.

Still, Trump's selection of [5]JD Vance as vice president, along with Tulsi Gabbard, RFK Jr., and Tucker Carlson as close advisers, coupled with the announcements that former Secretary of State Mike Pompeo and prior U.N. Ambassador Nikki Haley will not be in the administration, may be misinterpreted by scheming foreign adversaries as proof of Trump neo-isolationism.

Moreover, the U.S. is battered by an unsustainable $37 trillion national debt and a nonexistent southern border that saw 12 million illegal aliens enter with impunity.

So, the use of force abroad is now often seen in a zero-sum fashion as coming at the expense of unaddressed American needs at home.

Moreover, a woke, manpower-short military has not achieved strategic advantages from wars abroad, while disparaging and alienating the very working-class recruits who disproportionately fight and die in them.

Recently, even as President-elect Trump's inner circle emphasized an end to endless conflicts, Trump warned Putin not to escalate his attacks against Ukraine. Yet that advice was followed by a Russian massive drone onslaught against civilian Ukrainian targets.

Putin no doubt wishes to encourage American enemies to test Trump's deterrent rhetoric against his campaign's domestic promises to mind America's own business at home.

Is there a way to square the deterrence circle?

Trump will have to speak clearly and softly while carrying a club. And for the first few months of his administration, he will be tested as never before to make it clear to Iran and its terrorist surrogates, China, North Korea, and Russia, that aggression against U.S. interests will be swiftly and quietly met with disproportionate and overwhelming repercussions.

Yet Trump will likely have to rely on drones, missiles, and airstrikes and not on major engagements, to deter enemies from aggression—and his domestic critics from claiming he turned into a globalist interventionist.

He is not.

Trump remains a Jacksonian. But such deterrence entails warning from time to time the reckless and adventurous abroad that our allies have no better friend than America and our adversaries no worse enemy.

In other words, Trump must remind Americans only by periodically deterring enemies can he prevent endless wars.

1.11.16 Remembering Why the U.S. Navy Was Formed: To Combat Islamic Terror (2024-11-21 11:27)

uring a recent mosque sermon at the North Hudson Islamic Center in New Jersey, a [1]CAIR official, Ayman Aishat, made a seemingly startling claim:

We live in America, the United States of America. Brothers and sisters, those who do not know history, not too long ago, the USA was paying the jizya to the Ottoman Caliph.

Could this be?

First, let us define jizya. In brief (full discussion [2]here), it is the monetary tribute that conquered or cowed infidels pay their Islamic overlords in exchange for peace, according to Koran 9:29:

Fight those among the People of the Book [Christians and Jews] who do not believe in Allah, nor the Last Day, nor forbid what Allah and his Messenger have forbidden, nor embrace the religion of truth [Islam], until they pay the jizya with willing submission and feel themselves subdued.

And yes, Aishat is correct: once upon a time, in its fledgling youth, the United States succumbed to paying jizya to appease Muslim terrorists. That story is instructive — not least as it includes the genesis of the U.S. Navy.

Between the sixteenth and eighteenth centuries, the Muslims of North Africa (“Barbary”) thrived on enslaving Europeans. According to the conservative estimate of American professor Robert Davis, “between 1530 and 1780 there were almost certainly a million and quite possibly as many as a million and a quarter white, European Christians enslaved by the Muslims of the Barbary Coast.” (With countless European women selling for the price of an onion, little wonder by the late 1700s, European observers noted how “the inhabitants of Algiers have a rather white complexion.”)

As Barbary slaving was a seafaring venture, nearly no part of Europe was untouched. From 1627 to 1633, Lundy, an island off the west coast of Britain, was actually occupied by the pirates, whence they pillaged England at will. In 1627 they raided Denmark and even far-off Iceland, hauling a total of some 800 slaves.

Such raids were accompanied by the trademark hate. One English captive writing around 1614 noted that the Muslim pirates “abhor the ringing of the [church] bells being contrary to their Prophet’s command,” and so destroyed them whenever they could. In 1631, nearly the entire fishing village of Baltimore in Ireland was raided, and “237 persons, men, women, and children, even those in the cradle” were seized.

By the late eighteenth century, Barbary’s strength relative to Europe had plummeted, and the Muslims could no longer raid the European coastline for slaves — certainly not on the scale of previous centuries — so its full energy was spent on raiding non-Muslim merchant vessels. European powers responded by buying peace through tribute, which the Muslims accepted as jizya.

Fresh and fair meat appeared on the horizon once the newly born United States broke free of Great Britain and was therefore no longer protected by the latter’s jizya payments. In 1785, Muslim pirates from Algiers captured two American vessels, the Maria and Dauphin. They enslaved and paraded the sailors through the streets to jeers and whistles. Considering the horrific ways Christian slaves were treated in Barbary — sadistically tortured, pressured to convert, and sodomized, as described in the writings of missionaries, redeemers, and others (e.g., John Foxe, Fr. Dan, Fr. Jerome Maurand, Robert Playfair; see [3]pp. 279-283) — when the Dauphin’s Captain O’Brian later wrote to Thomas Jefferson that “our sufferings are beyond our expression or your conception,” he was not exaggerating.

Jefferson and John Adams, then ambassadors to France and England respectively, met with Tripoli’s ambassador to Britain, Abdul Rahman Adja, in an effort to ransom the enslaved Americans and establish peaceful relations. In a letter to Congress dated March 28, 1786, the hitherto puzzled American ambassadors laid out the source of the Barbary’s unprovoked animosity:

We took the liberty to make some inquiries concerning the grounds of their pretensions to make war upon nations who had done them no injury, and observed that we considered all mankind as our friends who had done us no wrong, nor had given us any provocation. The ambassador answered us that it was founded on the laws of their Prophet, that it was written in their Koran, that all nations who should not have acknowledged their authority were sinners, that it was their right and duty to make war upon them wherever they could be found, and to make slaves of all they could take as prisoners, and that every Musselman who should be slain in battle was sure to go to Paradise.

This, of course, was a paraphrase of Islam's so-called "Sword Verse" (Koran 9:5), which ISIS [4]invoked earlier this year.

At any rate, the ransom demanded to release the American sailors was over fifteen times greater than what Congress had approved, and little came of the meeting.

Back in Congress, some agreed with Jefferson that "it will be more easy to raise ships and men to fight these pirates into reason, than money to bribe them." In a letter to a friend, George Washington wondered:

In such an enlightened, in such a liberal age, how is it possible that the great maritime powers of Europe should submit to pay an annual tribute to the little piratical States of Barbary? Would to Heaven we had a navy able to reform those enemies to mankind, or crush them into nonexistence.

But the majority of Congress agreed with John Adams: "We ought not to fight them at all unless we determine to fight them forever." Considering the perpetual, existential nature of Islamic hostility, Adams was probably more right than he knew.

Congress settled on emulating the Europeans and paying off the terrorists, though it would take years to raise the demanded ransom. In 1794 Algerian pirates captured eleven more American merchant vessels.

Two things resulted: the Naval Act of 1794 was passed, and a permanent standing U.S. naval force was established. But because the first war vessels would not be ready until 1800, American jizya payments — which took up 16 % of the entire federal budget — began to be made to Algeria in 1795. In return, some 115 American sailors were released, and the Islamic sea raids formally ceased.

American jizya and “gifts” over the following years caused the increasingly emboldened pirates to respond with increasingly capricious demands.

One of the more ignoble instances occurred in 1800, when Captain William Bainbridge of the George Washington sailed to the Dey of Algiers (an Ottoman honorific for the pirate lords of Barbary) with what the latter deemed insufficient tribute. Referring to the American crew as “my slaves,” Dey Mustapha proceeded to order Bainbridge to transport the Muslim’s own annual tribute — hundreds of black slaves and exotic animals — to the Ottoman sultan in Constantinople (Istanbul).

Adding insult to insult, the Dey commanded the U.S. flag taken down from the George Washington and the Islamic flag hoisted in its place; and, no matter how rough the seas might be during the long voyage, Bainbridge was ordered to make sure the vessel faced Mecca five times a day for the prayers of Mustapha’s ambassador and entourage. Bainbridge condescended to being the Muslim pirate’s delivery boy.

Soon after Jefferson became president in 1801, Tripoli demanded another, especially exorbitant payment, followed by an increase in annual payments — or else. “I know,” Jefferson concluded, “that nothing will stop the eternal increase of demand from these pirates but the presence of an armed force.” So he refused the ultimatum, and, on May 10, 1801, the pasha of Tripoli, having not received his timely jizya installment, proclaimed jihad on the United States.

Thus began America’s first war as a nation, the First Barbary War (1801-1805) — and it was with Muslims who think and act just like ISIS.

1.11.17 The Morning Briefing: Are the Lawfare Lunatics Sweating Yet? (2024-11-21 11:28)

Happy Thursday, dear Kruiser Morning Briefing friends. Brezmerick never ceased to be amazed at how well Irish coffee paired with Count Chocula.

The Democrats and their flying monkeys in the mainstream media Spent a good portion of this year insisting that Donald Trump would be a vengeful tyrant if he was elected again, hell-bent on retribution against, well, them. That didn't go over quite like they thought it would, obviously. Heck, it sounded like a strong selling point to some of us.

When Trump returns to office in January, he'll have plenty of work just beginning to undo the overwhelming damage that Joe Biden and the commie cabal running his brain have done. Getting the southern border under control, putting out the international fires that President LOLEightyonemillion has started, and ridding the economy of all of the Dem stink will be time-consuming. It's not likely that Trump will be spending his lunches plotting payback.

The Democrats are going to be alternately relieved and crushed when they realize Trump isn't going to Hitler for them.

There is still a conversation to be had about some of the worst players in the 2024 anti-Trump jihad. People tasked with upholding law and justice became an election interference racket and were fervently hoping that they could get him in jail before the election. It was a truly frightening, un-American spectacle, and a legitimate threat to the Republic.

Article III Project founder and president Mike Davis emphasized that New York authorities' postponing Donald Trump's sentencing illustrates how political the whole case was from the start in exclusive comments to PJ Media.

Davis, a Republican legal expert, has repeatedly called out the judges, DOJ officials, and DAs involved in the many and various lawfare cases against Trump. Now, corrupt Judge Juan Merchan and [1]Soros-backed Manhattan DA Alvin Bragg admitted that Trump's sentencing in the case involving alleged "hush money" payouts and records falsification has been [2]indefinitely delayed. Davis sees this as a vindication not only of Trump but of all those who consistently exposed the corrupt lawfare.

Davis stated, “The postponement of the sentencing in New York proves that this case was always about Democrat lawfare and election interference.” If the case were legitimate, why keep delaying the sentencing?

It is difficult to figure out who the most egregious Trump-hating perverters of the law were in this tawdry assault on justice, but Alvin Bragg and Juan Merchan would probably get my vote. Bragg is a daddy issues-laden freak show who doesn’t hide his creepy obsession with Trump. He’s a typical Soros hack who is more interested in protecting criminals than law-abiding citizens.

We know that Trump can deal with the rot at the federal level. Department of Justice employees have been operating as Joe Biden’s personal goon squad since Biden got into office, and they know what’s coming. Their days of arresting family men for singing hymns outside abortion clinics are numbered. This is something I shared in a column [3]I wrote the other day:

“This is by far the biggest crisis of morale, and flat-out depression and horror that I’ve ever seen,” former Assistant Deputy Attorney General Harry Litman says of the mood at the Department of Justice after President-elect Donald Trump named former Florida congressman Matt... [4]pic.twitter.com/wYuOuyrFY3— CBS News (@CBSNews) [5]November 15, 2024

Whatever housecleaning Trump ends up doing at the DOJ won’t be retribution; it will be a necessary reorganization for the survival of the United States.

I’m not even sure what can be done about the likes of Bragg, Merchan, and the rest of the lawless people in the legal profession who targeted Donald Trump. The mood of the electorate is hopefully giving them some cause for concern. As we just saw in Los Angeles with the defeat of the criminal-friendly DA George Gascón, the Soros operatives aren’t safe even in the bluest of cities.

Some kind of message has to be sent that what we witnessed this year can never happen again. The Democrats can’t come away thinking that lawfare is an option in every election, which they will if Bragg & Co. emerge from this unscathed.

1.11.18 Kyiv Reports Russia Fired an ICBM Into Ukraine. A Western Official Denies It. (2024-11-21 11:29)

The Ukrainian military is reporting that Russia fired an intercontinental ballistic missile (ICBM) along with six other missiles at Dnipro, in Ukraine's southeast. But an unnamed Western official [1]told ABC that the missile was not a long-range weapon, but rather a shorter-range ballistic missile.

The Russian missile was launched from the Astrahan region, in Russia's southwest. According to Google Maps, the distance from Astrahan oblast to the city of Dnipro is [2]more than 1,200 miles. The other missiles fired at Dnipro were KH-101 missiles with a range of about 2,100 miles.

If true, this is a major and troubling escalation by Russian President Vladimir Putin, after Biden did some escalating of his own, giving the green light for Ukraine to launch American ATACMS into Russian territory for the first time. This kind of tit-for-tat escalation could get out of control. Previously, Putin said he changed Russia's nuclear doctrine to make any attack on Russian territory by Ukraine with Western missiles an attack that would require a nuclear response.

I'm not trying to be an alarmist. But once the escalation game starts, someone is going to have to climb down off the ledge or the world will be in big trouble. I don't see Putin backing down. And the real scary thing is that Biden is allowing Ukraine to unleash the full panoply of U.S. weapons on Russia proper because he thinks that his "Ukraine Project" won't last much into Donald Trump's term of office.

Obviously, Putin was sending a message with the ICBM launch. Washington and the West probably see this "message" in the same context as other Putin warnings about red lines in giving Ukraine Abrams tanks, fighter jets, and long-range missiles.

[3]Associated Press:

The developments come as the war has taken on a growing international dimension with the arrival of North Korean troops to help Russia on the battlefield — a development that U.S. officials said prompted U.S. President Joe Biden's policy shift on allowing Ukraine to fire longer-range U.S. missiles into Russia. The Kremlin responded with threats to escalate further.

Putin has previously warned the U.S. and other NATO allies that allowing Ukraine to use Western-supplied longer-range weapons to hit Russian territory would mean that Russia and NATO are at war.

Biden keeps stepping across Putin's red lines, confident that the Russian president won't act on his threats. What if Biden is wrong? I'm sure Biden and his advisors have gamed out dozens of scenarios, and the psyche folks at CIA have analyzed Putin's words and actions and are assuring Biden that Putin isn't serious, just as he wasn't serious about enforcing all his other "red lines" during the war.

I needn't remind anyone that if Biden and his advisors are wrong, there are no do-overs, no second chances. And that's a huge problem.

If you've never read it, you should read Robert F. Kennedy's "Thirteen Days," a book about the Cuban missile crisis. The movie doesn't do the book justice. It was a harrowing time, as you can imagine. President Kennedy struggled not to put Krushchev in a corner while trying to keep the U.S. from surrendering.

In the aftermath, the myth arose that "We were eyeball to eyeball and I think the other fellow just blinked." In fact, Kennedy gave up some strategically valuable Jupiter ICBM's stationed in Turkey, so who "blinked" is a matter of perspective.

I don't trust Joe Biden to manage the situation. At this point, presidents are concerned about their "legacy." How that plays out in Ukraine and with Russia will determine whether Biden and we will even have a legacy to examine.

1.11.19 Play Stupid Games, Win Stupid Prizes: Business Receives Backlash After Refusing to Serve Trump Supporters (2024-11-21 11:30)

At times, it can feel like the country is only concerned about all things red and blue, but if you're a business owner, you're typically only worried about another color: green ([1]despite what Whoopi Goldberg says). However, [2]one woman in Tennessee broke that unspoken rule and decided she only wanted to work with people who supported her own political views. The backlash came so fast and furiously that she had to shut down her business.

49-year-old Kristin Wolter of Memphis is the owner of the florist shop Everbloom Designs in Memphis, Tenn. In a video posted on social media, she announced after Election Day that she was changing her business policies. "I won't do business with people who support the president-elect, and it is because I need to create a safe place for me, my staff, and my family," Wolter said.

Everbloom Design in Memphis says they will no longer do business with Trump voters. We certainly appreciate the heads up! [3]pic.twitter.com/poPRC97tic— KWAM News Radio 990 AM Memphis (@Mighty990KWAM) [4]November 14, 2024

According to NewsMax's Todd Starnes, Wolter also said she was "triggered" by the election results and couldn't believe her "community chose financial concerns and economy over human rights and decency."

Everbloom Design, a Memphis flower shop, announced they will no longer do business with any Trump supporters.

"I won't do business with people who support the president-elect and it is because I need to create a safe space for me, my staff and my family," owner Kristin Wolter... [5]pic.twitter.com/1cOdS96ajP— toddstarnes (@toddstarnes) [6]November 15, 2024

Apparently, Wolter received such harsh backlash online and in person that she made her social media accounts private and shut down her shop temporarily. According to KWAM News Radio 900, she posted a note on the shop door that stated, "I knew standing up for what I believe in would have consequences. I am so grateful to those of you that have supported me in this. They are showing their true colors and lack of decency and humanity."

The owner of Everbloom Design now claims she is the victim. This is the Memphis flower shop that announced a ban on customers who support President Trump. The owner went out of her way to post multiple statements condemning Trump supporters. Such intolerance is disheartening.... Look, we all have strong political views. But as of the time this article is published, [9]Decision Desk HQ reports that 76,837,044 people have voted for Donald Trump and 74,313,883 people voted for Kamala Harris. Why would you want to risk alienating any of those people? As a small business owner myself, I have strong political views, too, but I'm also a capitalist who enjoys earning as much money as I can. I don't stop and ask people who they voted for when they request my services. Then again, I gave up trying to figure out liberal reasoning years ago. The other thing that I'm absolutely tired of hearing from the left is how Trump supporters "lack decency and humanity." I don't know, but to me, telling people they're not welcome in your business when they haven't really done anything to you sort of lacks decency and humanity in itself. Maybe instead of showing contempt for people who vote differently than you do, reach out and ask for a conversation and ask them why they do what they do so you can maybe understand them better.

1.11.20 And This Is Why the Public Doesn't Trust the DOJ (2024-11-26 21:46)

The U.S. Department of Justice (DOJ)'s Office of the Inspector General (OIG) has [1]released its annual report identifying the top management and performance challenges currently facing the federal agency.

Among the OIG's findings, [2]a lack of public trust in the DOJ remains a "longstanding" problem, Inspector General Michael E. Horowitz [3]announced Monday, and strengthening such trust poses "a significant challenge."

However, in its [4]59-page report highlighting incidents that have contributed to the department's confidence crisis, the DOJ watchdog largely overlooked transgressions under the Biden-Harris administration, which still reigns. Instead, the OIG looked farther back to Trump's time in office, his first term, as we head into the president-elect's second.

Today we released the 2024 Top Management and Performance Challenges Facing the DOJ. The challenges are identified based on our oversight work and are meant to help the DOJ improve its operations.

Learn more about this report and explore the challenges:
[5]<https://t.co/HoENPob5Em> [6]pic.twitter.com/eHiiZxOWbC— DOJ Inspector General (@JusticeOIG) [7]November 25, 2024

Based on the OIG's oversight work, the inspector general's office blames a medley of Trump-era episodes as reasons why public trust in the institution has eroded over time.

First, the OIG report points to public statements that former federal prosecutor David Freed, a Trump-nominated U.S. attorney, made about an ongoing criminal probe into alleged ballot tampering during the 2020 presidential election.

Freed had said several mail-in military ballots, mostly cast for Donald Trump, were [8]discarded (tossed into the trash) at a Pennsylvania election office in pro-Trump Luzerne County.

Ultimately, the OIG [9]concluded that Freed's comments "unnecessarily inserted partisanship into the investigation" and "created a false impression" that the incident was "much more serious than DOJ leadership knew it to be."

The report also calls attention to another [10]OIG inquiry into claims that senior DOJ appointees placed "political pressure" on the trial team [11]prosecuting Roger Stone, a close confidant of Trump, so that they lowered their sentencing recommendations.

While the OIG did not find evidence that the prosecution's revision was the result of "improper political considerations," the report chastises the "unusual substantive involvement," though not prohibited by law or policy, of then-Attorney General Bill Barr and other high-level DOJ officials in the second sentencing recommendation's preparation and filing.

Their embroilment in the case against the president's political ally "affected the public's perception of the Department's integrity, independence, and objectivity," the OIG says.

The report then cites an old [12]OIG review blasting the DOJ's response to the George Floyd riots in Washington, D.C., specifically the clearing of Lafayette Park when Trump walked through shortly afterward to [13]visit St. John's Church, which was set ablaze the night before, on June 1, 2020. Joined by Barr and other DOJ officials, Trump posed for a photograph in front of the church while holding up a Bible and promising to uphold the rule of law.

"In doing so, Department leaders placed the safety of the Department's personnel and members of the public at risk, thereby jeopardizing the public's perception and confidence in the Department," the OIG report says.

This despite the fact that [14]a separate U.S. Department of the Interior inspector general's report debunked the false narrative that federal authorities had forcibly cleared peaceful Black Lives Matter protestors to make way for Trump's photo-op.

Advertisement

The bombshell Interior Department report, vindicating Trump, determined that U.S. Park Police were given permission to carry out the park's clearing long before anyone knew Trump was walking over.

In fact, the operational plan in place allowed for the safe installation of anti-scale fencing to ward off property destruction and injury to officers that occurred days prior.

Of course, the OIG report makes no mention of the [15]now-failed federal prosecutions of President-elect Donald Trump or the discriminatory use of the Freedom of Access to Clinic Entrances (FACE) Act [16]overwhelmingly against pro-life defendants for peacefully protesting at abortion clinics.

Although the report did mention the [17]sprawling January 6 cases, in which over 1,424 defendants were federally charged following the event and [18]hundreds ultimately convicted, the subject was [19]categorized under combatting the threat of "Domestic Terrorism and Domestic Violence Extremism."

"The riot at the U.S. Capitol on January 6, 2021, serves as an indication that the charged political climate magnifies the domestic terrorism threat," the OIG report says.

However, the report acknowledges that [20]the OIG is reviewing the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI)'s direction and handling of its confidential human sources (CHS) in the lead-up to and on January 6, 2021, as well as whether the agency exploited its CHSs to obtain incriminating information. "Implementing the remaining recommendations from the OIG and the U.S. Government Accountability Office reports would ensure the Department is better coordinated and able to meet the DVE [domestic violence extremism] threat while at the same time safeguarding civil liberties."

To ensure that the agency is free from political influence, DOJ officials ought to strictly adhere to [21]policies and procedures designed to protect the department from accusations of political influence or politically motivated application of the law, the OIG report recommends. Political appointees should "exercise discretion and judgment when considering whether to personally involve themselves in DOJ criminal prosecutions."

Under the Biden-Harris White House, public trust in the federal government has hovered near record lows. According to [22]Pew Research, in June 2023, fewer than two-in-10 Americans said they trust the government in Washington to do what is right "just about always" (1 percent) or "most of the time" (15 percent). Those figures were among the lowest trust measures in nearly seven decades of polling.

1.11.21 Government Efficiency Requires Federal Workers to Go Back to Their Offices (2024-11-26 21:51)

Election Day was three weeks ago, resulting in a win for President-elect Donald Trump, with Republicans also taking control of the Senate and keeping control of the House. Although Trump was declared the winner in the early morning hours following the election, Vice President Kamala Harris [1]didn't address her sniffling supporters until Wednesday afternoon, [2]a move she was strongly criticized for. On Tuesday night, Harris delivered another message, shared over X.

In a clip that's less than 30 seconds long, Harris declares, "I just have to remind you, don't you ever let anybody take your power from you. You have the same power that you did before November 5, and you have the same purpose that you did. And you have the same ability to engage and inspire! So don't ever let anybody or any circumstance take your power from you," she concludes, after sounding as if she were slurring her words at moments. Intoxicated or not, her tone and demeanor also did not match the message Harris was trying to send.

Another clip, where Harris still seems to be slurring her words, shows Harris offering, "again, I'll say, you know, the election didn't turn out like we wanted it to, certainly not as we planned for it to, but, understand that the work we put into it was about empowering people, that was the spirit with work we did." It became trickier to decipher her words at the end of such a clip.

Harris' remarks [8]have become a trending topic over X for Tuesday, with many taking to brutally savaging the vice president and failed Democratic nominee for how such brief remarks come off. Many of the quoted reposts and the close to 4,000 replies have pointed out it looks like Harris has been drinking.

The vice president hasn't been seen around much at the White House, [9]and still looks to be on less than friendly terms [10]with First Lady Jill Biden, given how much they avoided each other for Veterans' Day. She was also just in Hawaii, [11]as Bob Hoge reminded when covering Harris' remarks for our sister site of RedState.

Harris wasn't the only one out with a message, as Gov. Tim Walz (D-MN), her running mate who was always an odd choice and looks to have done the ticket no favors, also shared a message. Just as he did while on the campaign trail and [27]in Minnesota a few days following the election, Walz went for a rather unhelpful tone.

1.11.22 Trump Announces List of New Picks to Serve in His Administration (2024-11-26 22:07)

Last Friday, President-elect Donald Trump [1]announced several nominees he selected to serve in his Cabinet, and he's now announced a list of several other names of those who will serve in his administration. Many of the picks have served with him previously, as are mentioned in Trump's statements.

Among those announced on Tuesday night include Vince Haley who has been tasked with serving as for Director of the Domestic Policy Council. He had served as the Director of Policy and Speechwriting for his campaign. In his statement in praise of Haley, Trump took the opportunity to reference his 2024 win:

The 2024 Presidential Election was won by an unprecedented margin, which many in the Mainstream Media and Washington, D.C. did not expect, because the size and magnitude of our MAGA Movement was greatly underestimated. The American People gave us a Mandate to deliver on our Promises, and put AMERICA FIRST. As Director of the Domestic Policy Council, Vince will help make life better for ALL Americans, and unify our Country through SUCCESS. Together, we will defeat Inflation, rapidly bring down Prices, secure the Southern Border, cut Taxes and Regulations, reignite Growth, build the Greatest Economy in History and, MAKE AMERICA GREAT AGAIN!

From there, other names announced included:

- Jamieson Greer, who has been nominated to serve as the United States Trade Representative (USTR). Greer is lauded in Trump's statement for having replaced NAFTA with USMCA.
- Dr. Kevin A. Hassett, of Massachusetts will serve as the Director of the White House National Economic Council, who, as the chair of Trump's Council of Economic Advisers, "played a crucial role in helping to design and pass the Tax Cuts and Jobs Act of 2017," Trump noted. Trump also spoke about putting Hassett to use in recovering "from the Inflation that was unleashed by the Biden Administration," Tax Cuts, and Fair trade.
- John Phelan as our next United States Secretary of the Navy

The last two names to be announced on Tuesday night both have to be confirmed, and will work with Robert F. Kennedy Jr., who was nominated by Trump earlier this month [2]to serve as his Secretary of Health and Human Services.

Jay Bhattacharya, MD, PhD has been nominated to serve as Director of the National Institutes of Health (NIH), while Jim O'Neil has been nominated to serve as Kennedy's deputy. O'Neil is no stranger to the department, as Trump's statement noted that "Jim previously served as the Principal Associate Deputy Secretary of HHS. He led reforms at FDA to overhaul Food Safety Regulations, and implemented the FDA Amendments Act, which improved Drug and Medical Device Safety, and ensured greater protection for Public Health."

[3]While Matt has highlighted concerns about one of Trump's picks from last week, Dr. Janette Nesheiwat as the United States Surgeon General, over her support for masking, lockdowns, and vaccines, this pick of Bhattacharya may put such concerns to rest, as it looks like he may provide a balanced approach.

Bhattacharya was particularly critical of the federal government's response to COVID. [4]As Katie covered at the time in December 2022, [5]he was blacklisted on X, then known as Twitter, for daring to speak out.

"Jay is a co-author of the Great Barrington Declaration, an alternative to lockdowns proposed in October 2020. His peer-reviewed research has been published in Economics, Statistics, Legal, Medical, Public Health, and Health Policy Journals. He holds an MD and PhD in Economics from Stanford University," Trump's statement about Bhattacharya noted in part.

1.12.2 The Trump Counterrevolution Is a Return to Sanity (2024-12-03 19:12)

We are witnessing a historic counterrevolution after President Donald [1]Trump's victory, far different from his first election in 2016.

The orthodox and the supposed scripted future are now suspect. And they are likely to be dethroned—from the trivial to the existential.

Critics claim Trump has no mandate to stage such a counterrevolution. They argue that he did not win 51 % of the popular vote or achieve a Reaganesque landslide in the [2]Electoral College.

Yet all the initiatives he advanced and won on polled landslide public approval.

Despite being the target of Democrat lawfare for years, a defiant Trump promised to end an open border, massive [3]illegal immigration, rising crime, and soaring prices. He pledged to slash government and its administrative state, terminate racial and gender identity politics, and restore deterrence abroad.

The people overwhelmingly wanted those messages but were waiting for an unorthodox messenger who would actually deliver them.

The Trump messenger reassured weary citizens that they were not crazy.

Instead, they had good cause to be sick of being talked down to by a media, academic, bureaucratic, and political elite that never earned nor deserved such self-appointed status.

The FBI, the CIA, and the Justice Department, not the massive crowds at rallies, were the ones truly out of control.

[4]President Joe Biden was really suffering from dementia, not those who said he was.

Criminals with weapons are as deleterious to society as law-abiding citizens deprived of them.

It is not a thought crime to believe there are two sexes—not three or four or more. No one should be forced to buy an electric vehicle, disconnect their natural gas stove, or submit to racial or gender indoctrination sessions.

Americans should speak their minds and write what they wish without worry of being censored, blacklisted, ostracized, doxxed, or shadow-banned—or jailed.

Campuses are not oases of tolerance, disinterested inquiry, and free expression. They instead increasingly became overpriced indoctrination centers that shred the Constitution and graduate indebted students who know less—but are far more biased—than when they enrolled.

[5]Trump and his MAGA appointees promise to slash over a trillion dollars from the annual federal budget, disbanding entire agencies.

Is the objection that an ever-expanding government— $37 trillion in debt, running nearly $2 trillion in annual deficits—should keep growing?

Trump pledges to reform [6]the Pentagon—ending DEI Pentagon commissars and revolving-door corporate generalship.

He vows to hold the 4-star class responsible for the catastrophe in Afghanistan and to reenlist soldiers who were driven out due to draconian vaccination mandates or woke intolerance. Trump envisions changing the entire system of military procurement.

Does the status quo object on the grounds that our military leadership has been winning our wars abroad?

Is the Pentagon currently awash in eager recruits?

Has it stockpiled a huge surplus of shells, bombs, and rockets?

Trump promises historic deportations of the 12 million who destroyed the southern border and surged in without health or criminal audits.

Trump vows to rescue swamped social services and stop crimes by illegal alien felons.

Is that really worse than the Biden administration's original massive importation of millions of illegal aliens, empowered by drug-importing and sex-trafficking cartels?

Who are the culpable? Those flagrantly mocking and breaking the law, or those vowing to enforce it?

Trump says he will deter enemies without bogging America down in "endless wars"—and did just that in his first four years as president.

Is the current alternative preferable to convincing enemies that there are few consequences to their aggression, sandbagging allies like Israel, or feeding the war in Ukraine without any plan of either winning or ending it?

The Trump revolution is also cultural and social. Shared class interests have replaced race, ethnicity, and gender chauvinism.

Athletes of all races are no longer taking a knee in protest of America's supposed systemic racism during the national anthem. Sometimes they celebrate their scoring by doing honorific Trump YMCA/golf-swing dances on national television.

Enlistments to help craft the Trump counterrevolution are not always predicated on degrees, conventional resumes, or past lengthy government service. Race and gender do not determine qualifications alone. Nor does class.

Common sense, successful lives outside of government, and a desire to end the current nonsense count instead as better prerequisites.

For Trump, party identification, titles, and traditional prestige matter less as he is surrounded by an ideologically diverse cadre, including Elon Musk, Robert Kennedy, Jr., Dana White, Tulsi Gabbard, and Joe Rogan.

The country no longer must apologize incessantly for its past or present but can move on—content that it need not be perfect to be better than all the alternatives.

The age of flashing pronouns, renaming iconic landmarks, statue toppling, trashing the dead, vandalizing with impunity the campus library, or spouting antisemitic venom is passing.

So, another name for the Trump counterrevolution is a simple return to sanity.

1.12.3 Universities Have a 2025 Rendezvous With Reality (2024-12-03 19:13)

Universities have suffered a cataclysmic decline in public approval and support.

A Gallup poll taken this year found that only 36 % of Americans polled either expressed “a great deal” or “quite a lot” of confidence in higher education—once the agreed-on touchstone to upward mobility.

Gifting to most universities has been down for two consecutive years.

The Daily Signal depends on the support of readers like you. [1]Donate now

There is zero intellectual diversity on most university campuses.

Speakers with conservative viewpoints are often either disinvited or shouted down—and worse.

The federally guaranteed student loan program is in shambles. Some $1.7 trillion in outstanding loans were taken out by half of all college students.

Nearly one-fifth are now not being paid back.

Marriage, child-rearing, and home ownership are all delayed by some 40 million indebted graduates, who can take decades to pay loans back.

The Biden administration demagogued the issue by illegally granting rolling student loan amnesties—to win votes just before both the midterm and general elections. That proposed debt relief would be covered by taxpayers, over half of whom never went to college.

The expansion of student loan debt roughly correlates with universities raising their annual costs higher than the rate of inflation—largely due to administrative bloat.

Although the U.S. Supreme Court recently struck down the practice of using race and gender to adjudicate applications and hiring, universities are already seeking ways to circumvent the ruling.

Asian and white Americans for decades have been systematically, overtly, and supposedly with justification, discriminated against by ignoring or not requiring test scores and downplaying grade point averages.

[2]Stanford University may be representative of these crises.

In the 2020 election, 94 % of Stanford faculty voted for the Joe Biden-Kamala Harris ticket. Four years later, some 96 % of all Stanford-affiliated donations went to Democrats during the 2024 election season.

Former Stanford law professors Joseph Bankman and Barbara Fried—parents of mega-Democratic donor and now [3]imprisoned Sam Bankman-Fried, and recipients of millions in gifts from their felonious son—were reportedly heavily involved in either bundling large left-wing campaign donations or offering legal advice to their son's bankrupt and Ponzi-like business.

In 2023, a federal judge was shouted down at [4]Stanford Law School, his lecture aborted and then hijacked—by a Stanford diversity, equity, and inclusion administrator!

Former Donald Trump health advisor and Hoover Institution scholar [5]Scott Atlas in 2020 was censured by the Stanford faculty.

Yet subsequent events supported Atlas's prescient warning that a complete lockdown of the country and the shutdown of K-12 schools would not only not retard the COVID-19 epidemic, but would cause far greater economic, social, cultural, and health damage than the virus itself.

Two recent attempts to lift that censure failed—in part because some faculty claimed—that to do so would empower the Trump reelection bid!

In contrast, Stanford professor Jeff Hancock, who founded the "Stanford Social Media Lab," boasts he researches 'how people use deception with technology.' Yet when liberal Minnesota officials wanted such "experts" to support their new law banning "deep fake" technology at election time, they called in the expert deception-detector Hancock.

However, the references Hancock provided to prove his support for the law allegedly never existed.

In fact, the lawyers who challenged his online expertise argued his sources apparently were invented by artificial intelligence software like ChatGPT.

Who will police the deception police?

Last academic year, anti-Israel Stanford students with impunity violated university rules and camped out for months in the free speech area, shouting and disrupting passersby.

A small group of students occupied and trashed the president's office, and another vandalized historic campus architecture.

After Oct. 7, a Stanford lecturer was suspended for singling out and targeting Jewish students in his classroom.

A Stanford faculty committee on antisemitism recently concluded, "The most existential problem at Stanford is the emergence of a general atmosphere in which Jewish and Israeli members of the Stanford community are denied dignity and respect based on their Jewish identities, denied treatment and protection afforded to other minority groups, and afforded equal respect and inclusion only if they denounce Israel in various ways and forms."

Can out-of-control universities reform?

The incoming Trump administration has floated a variety of tough-love remedies.

They include predicating hundreds of billions of dollars in federal grants on campuses' adherence to the Bill of Rights, taxing the income on universities multibillion-dollar endowments, and removing the federal government from the student loan business.

Recently, there have been a few hopeful signs that campuses are aware of the need to change.

At Stanford, a new president was hired, widely respected for his singular commitment to disinterested education and freedom of expression.

The SAT entrance exam is returning to many campuses and is still appreciated as crucial to most universities' applications.

A number of partisan elite college presidents have [6]resigned in disgrace.

So, hope springs eternal, even if it may be too little, too late.

1.12.4 After Biden Pardons Hunter, Trump Moves to Dismiss Hush Money Case (2024-12-03 19:17)

After President Joe Biden pardoned his son, Hunter, [1]on Sunday, the legal team for President-elect Donald Trump made a request for Judge Juan Merchan to dismiss the hush money case. On May 30, Trump was found "guilty" on 34 felony counts in a sham trial held in New York City on hush money charges brought by Manhattan DA Alvin Bragg. What's particularly noteworthy about the motion, from Monday, is that the second paragraph makes reference to the pardon of Hunter Biden.

Trump has filed his motion to dismiss the hush money case in Manhattan. It's a 72-page document and the first mention of Hunter Biden's pardon appears in paragraph #2.— erica orden (@eorden) [2]December 3, 2024

The motion from Trump's attorneys, Todd Blanche and Emil Bove, who have also been tasked for key roles in the Trump administration's Department of Justice (DOJ), uses the pardoning of Hunter to further argue that the case be dismissed.

As [3]that motion read early on:

Yesterday, in issuing a 10-year pardon to Hunter Biden that covers any and all crimes whether charged or uncharged, President Biden asserted that his son was "selectively, and unfairly, prosecuted," and "treated differently." Ex. 81.1 President Biden argued that "raw politics has infected this process and it led to a miscarriage of justice." Id. These comments amounted to an extraordinary condemnation of President Biden's own DOJ. This is the same DOJ that coordinated and oversaw the politically-motivated, election-interference witch hunts targeting President Trump by disgraced Special Counsel Jack Smith, the other biased prosecutors in Smith's Special Counsel's Office ("SCO"), and others. This is the same DOJ that sent Matthew Colangelo to DA Bragg to help unfairly target President Trump in this empty and lawless case.

Since DA Bragg took office, he has engaged in "precisely the type of political theater" that President Biden condemned. Bragg v. Jordan, 669 F. Supp. 3d 257, 271 (S.D.N.Y. 2023). This case is based on a contrived, defective, and unprecedented legal theory relating to 2017 entries in documents that were maintained hundreds of miles away from the White House where President Trump was running the country. There are no "aggravating factors" here, other than those arising from DANY's misconduct. Ex. 81. Thus, this case should never have been brought, particularly during a period when DA Bragg's failure to protect this City from pervasive violent crime frightens, threatens, and harms New Yorkers on a daily basis. And this case would never have been brought were it not for President Trump's political views, the transformative national movement established under his leadership, and the political threat that he poses to entrenched, corrupt politicians in Washington, D.C. and beyond.

Wrongly continuing proceedings in this failed lawfare case disrupts President Trump's transition efforts and his preparations to wield the full Article II executive power authorized by the Constitution pursuant to the overwhelming national mandate granted to him by the American people on November 5, 2024. Under Trump v. United States, 603 U.S. 593 (2024) and related caselaw, DANY's disruptions to the institution of the Presidency violate the Presidential immunity doctrine because they threaten the functioning of the federal government. Local elected officials such as DA Bragg have no valid basis to cause such disruptions, which also violate the Supremacy Clause. Consequently, the federal Constitution is an absolute "legal impediment" to further proceedings, CPL § 210.20(1)(h), and the case must be immediately dismissed.

There were plenty of concerns about the case that Bragg's office brought against Trump from the start, including when it comes to the role of politicized DOJ that the motion mentioned above, [4]with Matthew Colangelo, formerly a top employee at the Biden-Harris DOJ, leaving to work for Bragg's office and prosecute Trump.

While Judge Merchan has moved to indefinitely delay sentencing, [5]as Townhall has been covering, Bragg's office still stubbornly looks to hold onto the conviction by merely agreeing to a pause, [6]as CNN noted in their reporting of such a motion to dismiss.

Reporting [7]from The Hill also includes a statement from Steven Cheung, who served as communications director for the Trump-Vance campaign and will have such a role in the incoming administration. Trump's lawyers also laid out other arguments in favor of dismissing the case:

[8]Steven Cheung, Trump's spokesperson and incoming White House communications director, in a statement called the new brief a "powerhouse motion" that "provides every possible chance for Judge Merchan to do the right thing and end what remains of this charade immediately."

"Wrongly continuing proceedings in this failed lawfare case disrupts President Trump's transition efforts and his preparations to wield the full Article II executive power authorized by the Constitution pursuant to the overwhelming national mandate granted to him by the American people on November 5, 2024," Trump's attorneys wrote in the filing.

When it comes to the suggestion that Bragg's office focus on a "renewed opportunity to put an end to deteriorating conditions in the City and to protect its residents from violent crime," it's worth reminding that there's been a serious mishandling of priorities. In addition to the rise of hate crimes in New York State, [9]especially New York City, Bragg's office meanwhile prioritizes targeting political opponents like Trump and heroic figures [10]like Daniel Penny, who has been charged for the death of Jordan Neely, a homeless man who was terrorizing people on the subway.

The legal cases against Trump have been failing, though those who brought such charges against him still look to be holding on in many ways. Special Counsel Jack Smith [11]has dropped all of his cases against Trump, though he did so without prejudice so that they may still be theoretically brought back. He [12]is also looking to finalize a report for Attorney General Merrick Garland to release.

1.12.5 Joe Biden is a genius. (2024-12-03 19:36)

OK, he's actually a doddering old fool who can't remember his own name half the time, but we know he has moments of lucidity here and there. We also know that he wanted a second term and his fellow Democrats pushed him to the side. Why he would be shocked that the party that uses "old white men" as a pejorative wouldn't really be behind an old white man is beyond me, yet he apparently was.

From the moment he stepped aside, though, Biden seemed bound and determined to scuttle Kamala Harris's nomination.

Sure, it may have been gaffe after gaffe – or, such as when he said Harris had been intimately involved in economic discussions just as she was trying to distance herself from Biden's economic policies, he might have actually thought it would help – but over a month ago, I commented how it looked just like he was trying to sabotage her.

I'm not saying that Biden is actively trying to sabotage Harris's campaign without looking like he was.

I'm just saying I can't think of that much he'd do differently if he were actively trying to sabotage her campaign without looking like he was.— Tom Knighton (@TheTomKnighton) [1]October 30, 2024

Plus, despite everyone calling Trump "literally Hitler," what did Biden do immediately after the election? Have Trump come on over and have a nice sit-down chat with him, something you don't do with someone who is considered the most evil man to ever live reincarnated.

Then we have the Hunter Biden pardon.

You've heard all about it by now. You know what was said, what Biden's "reasoning" was, and how he'd repeatedly claimed that he would do no such thing, only to turn out that he lied yet again.

But in that same moment, he set a precedent that President-elect Donald Trump can now use as he wants. The problem was that the prosecution was political? That can be said about pretty much every January 6 defendant. Trump could pardon them all, and over a broad period to make sure they couldn't be prosecuted for anything else later on.

Others have been prosecuted because of their affiliation with Trump. Steve Bannon, for example, or Roger Stone. While Bannon has done his time and it was only a misdemeanor, it would send a signal how he's running things. Trump held off in pardoning Stone last go-around because it would be a political liability, but that's not as true today as it was in 2020.

Honestly, from the moment when he left the campaign trail, Joe Biden has done so much that has benefitted Trump that it's hard for me not to look at some of it and wonder if he was really just trying to hurt the Democrats.

I wouldn't be surprised if he did. He'd been a good Democrat for decades, working his way up the food chain and finally making it to the top, only to have his party turn on him. If that were me, and I were actually lucid enough of the time, I'd probably think about ways to get back at them without being too obvious.

Of course, that all assumes there's enough of Biden left to actually be that calculating. I can't rule out that his handlers are resentful of being ousted with the old goat, so it might be them working through Biden, but that feels a little too tin-foil hat for me.

Then again, the difference between "established fact" and "conspiracy theory" seems to be about six weeks, so anything's possible.

1.12.6 Ninth Circuit Court of Appeal Hands Trump Some Good News (2024-12-03 19:38)

In a move that's sure to be good news for the incoming Trump administration, a three-judge panel on the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals ruled that the federal government does in fact have the authority to carry out deportations, even if local officials object. The case actually comes from the first Trump administration, [1]as The Center Square reported on Monday.

As the report explained:

At issue is an April 2019 executive order issued by King County Executive Dow Constantine, which directed county officials to prohibit fixed base operators on a county airfield near Seattle from servicing U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement charter flights used to deport illegal foreign nationals.

Constantine's order prohibited King County International Airport from supporting "the transportation and deportation of immigration detainees in the custody of Immigration and Customs Enforcement, either traveling within or arriving or departing the United States or its territories."

The airport is located next to a major ICE-Seattle base of operations.

The Trump administration at the time sued, arguing Constantine's order violated the Supremacy Clause's intergovernmental immunity doctrine and a World War II-era Instrument of Transfer agreement allowing the federal government to use the airport in King County.

A district court agreed, ruling in favor of the federal government. King County next appealed to the Ninth Circuit.

The Ninth Circuit panel affirmed the district court's summary judgment that the order violated the Supremacy Clause and the Instrument of Transfer agreement.

The panel also held that the federal government had Article III standing to sue and “had two related concrete and individualized injuries.” The first is “the inability to conduct the charter flights – which has increased ICE’s operational costs – constituted a de facto injury that affected the United States in a particularized, individual way” and “an imminent risk of future injury from the Executive Order.”

The second is the federal government’s injuries “were fairly traceable” and “are likely, as opposed to merely speculative,” as a result of the order. Were there no order, “an FBO would resume servicing ICE charter flights,” the court notes.

Constantine’s order violated the intergovernmental immunity doctrine because it “improperly regulated the way in which the federal government transported noncitizen detainees by preventing ICE from using private FBO contractors at Boeing Field, and on its face discriminated against the United States by singling out the federal government and its contractors for unfavorable treatment,” the court held.

Reporting from The Seattle Times [2]also noted that Kings County will not further appeal the decision, with a spokesperson mentioning in part that the county “will of course follow the court’s dictates.”

King County is one of those described as a “sanctuary city,” but the days of sanctuary cities being able to get away with covering for illegal immigrants are likely coming to an end. Even better news for the incoming Trump administration is that, as The Seattle Times also mentioned, a district-level federal court issued a similar ruling last year.

The Ninth Circuit covers the more western states in the country, which are also among some of the most liberal and include many sanctuary cities when it comes to immigration.

Not only will King County be “follow[ing] the court’s dictates,” but it looks like they’ll be eating plenty of crow as well, given that they hoped to be “leading the way,” as The Seattle Times noted:

In 2019, under the first Trump administration, Constantine [3]issued an executive order seeking to block the federal government from using King County International Airport (the formal name for Boeing Field) for flights deporting immigrants.

The order targeted private companies that fuel and maintain planes at the airport, ordering that future leases between the county and the companies would prohibit deportation flights.

At the time, county officials said it was likely the first attempt anywhere in the country by local officials to block ICE deportation flights, and they hoped to be “leading the way.”

“Deportations raise deeply troubling human rights concerns which are inconsistent with the values of King County, including separations of families, increases of racial disproportionality in policing, deportations of people into unsafe situations in other countries, and constitutional concerns of due process,” Constantine’s 2019 executive order said.

Tom Homan, [4]named last month to be President-elect Donald Trump’s border czar, has made clear that there will be mass deportations of illegal immigrants. He has also [5]repeatedly made clear that local officials are not to stand in his way, as was recently the case with Denver Mayor Mike Johnston (D), who threatened to stop deportations.

“He’s willing to go to jail. I’m willing to put him in jail,” [6]Homan said, which led Johnston to soon after [7]admit that he regretted his remarks.

Polling from CBS News, [8]including before and [9]after the November election, shows that a majority of Americans favor plans for mass deportations. [10]Last week’s poll from The Economist/YouGov [11]also showed that a majority or plurality of Americans across several demographics approve of Trump’s plan to build a border wall along the U.S.-Mexican border and that they believe he’ll actually carry through with such plans.

1.12.7 Why the Left Is Going Insane Over Trump's Cabinet Nominees (2024-12-08 22:32)

Deflated by the resounding November defeat, [1]the Left now believes it can magically rebound by destroying President-elect Donald Trump's Cabinet nominees.

Many of [2]Trump's picks are well outside the usual Washington, D.C./New York political, media, and corporate nexus.

But that is precisely the point—to insert reformers into a bloated, incompetent, and weaponized government who are not part of it.

The Daily Signal depends on the support of readers like you. [3]Donate now

Trump's nominee for FBI director, [4]Kash Patel, is already drawing severe criticism.

Patel's furious enemies cannot go after his resume, since he has spent a lifetime in private, congressional, and executive billets, both in investigations and intelligence.

Instead, they claim he is too vindictive and does not reflect the ethos of [5]the FBI.

But what will Patel not do as the new director?

He will not serially lie under oath to federal investigators, as did interim FBI Director Andrew McCabe, a current Patel critic.

He will not forge an FBI court affidavit, as did convicted felon and agency lawyer Kevin Clinesmith.

He will not claim amnesia 245 times under congressional oath to evade embarrassing admissions, as did former FBI Director James Comey.

He will not partner with a foreign national to collect dirt and subvert a presidential campaign as the FBI did with Christopher Steele in 2016.

He will not use the FBI to draft social media to suppress news unfavorable to a presidential candidate on the eve of an election.

He would not have suppressed FBI knowledge that [6]Hunter Biden's laptop was genuine—to allow the lie to spread that it was “Russian disinformation” on the eve of the 2020 election.

He will not raid the home of an ex-president with SWAT teams, surveil Catholics, monitor parents at school board meetings, or go after peaceful, pro-life protesters.

Decorated combat veteran [7]Pete Hegseth is another controversial nominee for secretary of defense.

What will Hegseth likely not do?

Go AWOL without notifying the president of a serious medical procedure as did current Defense Secretary Lloyd Austin?

Install race and gender criteria for promotion and mandate training in diversity, equity, and inclusion, [8]or DEI?

Insinuate falsely that cabals of white supremacists had infiltrated the military—only to alienate that entire demographic and thus ensure the Pentagon came up 40,000 recruits short?

Oversee the scramble from Kabul, Afghanistan, that saw $50 billion in U.S. military equipment abandoned to Taliban terrorists?

Watch passively as a Chinese spy balloon traversed the continental United States for a week?

Allow the chairman of the Joint Chiefs to promise his Chinese communist counterpart that the People's Liberation Army would first be informed if the president of the United States was felt to issue a dangerous order?

Rotate into [9]the Pentagon from a defense contractor boardship and then leave office to rotate back there to leverage procurement decisions?

Oversee the Pentagon's serial flunking of fiscal audits?

[10]Robert F. Kennedy Jr., Trump's nominee to head the Department of Health and Human Services, is certainly a maverick. He may earn the most Democratic hits, given his former liberal credentials.

But what will RFK also not do as HHS secretary?

Oversee his agencies' circumventing of U.S. law by transferring money to [11]Communist China to help it produce lethal gain-of-function viruses of the COVID-19 sort—in the manner of Dr. Anthony Fauci?

Organize scientists to go after critics of mandatory masking and defame them?

Give pharmaceutical companies near-lifetime exemptions from legal jeopardy for rushing into production mRNA vaccines not traditionally vetted and tested?

Leave office to monetize his HHS expertise and thus make millions from the pharmaceutical companies?

Trump's nominee for national intelligence director, former House member and military veteran [12]Tulsi Gabbard, will soon be defamed in congressional hearings.

But what has Gabbard not done?

Joined "51 former intelligence authorities" to lie on the eve of the 2020 election that the Hunter Biden laptop "had all the hallmarks" of a Russian information/disinformation operation"—in an effort to swing the election to Joe Biden?

Lied under congressional oath like former Director of National Intelligence James Clapper, who claimed he gave only the "least untruthful answer" in congressional testimony?

Encourage the FBI to monitor a presidential campaign in efforts to discredit it—in the manner of former CIA Director John Brennan, who lied not once but twice under oath?

Fail to foresee the American meltdown in Kabul, the Russian invasion of Ukraine, the Hamas terrorist attacks on Israel, or the Houthis' takeover of the Red Sea?

We are going to hear some outrageous things in the upcoming congressional confirmation hearings.

But one thing we will not hear about are the crimes, deceptions, and utter incompetence of prior and current government grandees.

The current Biden-Harris crew, not their proposed Trump replacements, prompted the sick and tired American people to demand different people.

Voters want novel approaches to reform a government that they not only no longer trust but also now deeply fear.

1.12.8 We Need to Ritually Sacrifice a Squish GOP Senator to Encourage the Others (2024-12-09 11:09)

There is a wonderful and salutatory effect to publicly posting a head on a pike for all to see. Now, after the hideous leftist celebration of the murder of that executive from an unpopular industry, it's necessary – for the benefit of dumb and disingenuous people who will cry about this imagery – to make clear that this is not to be taken literally. It is to be taken figuratively. That is, we in the America First movement must figuratively post the head of at least one hack GOP establishment senator at the summit of Capitol Hill during the 2026 cycle. The real question is who we're going to make an example of.

Now, I'm old enough to remember when there were a whole bunch of soft Republicans in the Senate. There are far fewer today than they used to be, believe it or not. About 16 years ago – how time flies when you are reforming the Republican Party – the Tea Party movement started up and shook up Washington. It was a direct response to the continued failure of the business-as-usual, managed-decline Republican Party. The establishment told us that we couldn't ever change things. We had to vote Republican, no matter how bad the Republicans were, and keep our mouths shut. All we were were mere voters; it wasn't like we mattered. But you know what? We did matter. We mattered hard. And we posted some heads on pikes.

Rand Paul didn't just show up. Mike Lee didn't just show up. Ted Cruz didn't just show up. No, that was us. We changed things in the Senate. We beat unbeatable incumbents. We won unwinnable primaries. And we made it known that we expect conservatism from our alleged conservatives.

Did we also lose some races? Yeah, and as adults, we understand that you don't win them all. Some of our candidates were subpar – remember that woman who had to go on TV explaining how she wasn't a witch? That went poorly, but no one bats a thousand. We don't have to be perfect to course correct back to conservatism. We just have to scare the living daylights out of the spineless invertebrate Republican senators who want to talk red back at home and vote blue in DC. They need to know they'll be held to account. They need to understand that the head on the pike in 2026 could be theirs.

The current resistance to Donald Trump's nominees—especially Pete Hegseth, but not only to him—demonstrates that some of these Republican senators have forgotten what happened nearly a generation ago. They have forgotten that sometimes primaries succeed. We are constantly told that it's a terrible idea to primary Republican senators who are firmly entrenched in Washington. Why spend all that money on a primary? Why take the risk that we could lose the seat in the general? Why not just stick with the status quo?

Well, the reason is simple. Politicians need to know fear. It is said that the beginning of wisdom is the fear of God. Fear is important. A healthy fear of the consequences of one's action incentivizes better actions. The fact is that some of these Republicans don't think they will ever be held accountable. If we listen to the sages and wise men – who are largely happy with the status quo, by the way – these senators will never be held accountable for their heresies and betrayals.

By taking primary challenges off the table, we effectively tolerate collaboration with the enemy by Republican senators. It's time to stop tolerating it. The 2026 election cycle is beginning, and we need to pick someone for the pike.

Yes, at least one GOP senator must be primaried and go down. It's nothing personal. It's only business. The methodology is sound for those who remember the British Navy before it became a ridiculous joke. Back in the day, a British admiral was required to do his utmost to win. That was an ambiguous and hazy standard, but the British admirals got the idea and did their utmost. Why? Because when they didn't do their utmost, the British shot them to encourage the others.

Republican senators must do their utmost to get President Trump's nominees and program passed. But they're not going to if they're not afraid of the consequences of failing to do so. Instead, they're going to focus on the short-term attention of the regime media for being mavericks and rebels. We don't need mavericks or rebels. We need reliable conservative votes to get Trump's agenda through. So, we have to show them the consequences of these stupid games. We have to award them stupid prizes. We have to pick some Republican senator up for election in 2026 to make an example of.

Sure, it will cost the party some money. It could potentially put a seat at risk, although our selection of the target may mitigate that potential downside. But there's no alternative. Too many GOP senators have forgotten that they can be fired. We need to remind them, hard and unpleasantly.

Now, who should it be? Who do we take out? We have several solid targets in the coming cycle. We shouldn't focus on someone who can't be conservative. Susan Collins of Maine is never going to be a hard-core conservative because she comes from a deep blue state. We must say “Yes” to success with her and accept that she needs to do what she needs to do.

Lisa Murkowski in Alaska is just awful. She’s a continual pebble in our political shoe. Our challenge is that she’s popular in her state, and she’s helped impose their ridiculous rank choice voting system to establish herself in power forever. One of our important considerations in selecting the appropriate senatorial sacrifice is that we win – you don’t want to strike at the king and miss.

How about Thom Tillis in North Carolina? He’s always been terrible. He’s genuinely soft. There are harder noodles. The problem is that North Carolina could go blue if we don’t get the right candidate. We don’t want to risk that if we can help it, and he might be the best candidate to hold it. But we shouldn’t take him out of contention. If he knows he’s a potential primary target, he may ignore his Romneyesque instincts and play ball.

There’s the obnoxious John Cornyn of Texas. I may establish residency there just to vote against him, which would be a joy. He’s got a ton of money but he’s also created a ton of resentment. He really screwed up badly by joining with Democrats on a gun control bill that they spent the 2024 election cycle touting as a bipartisan achievement. What the hell is a Republican thinking signing onto a gun control bill that is not purely a repeal of prior gun control bills? The good thing is that Texas is deep red, and it’s got a deep bench of good conservative candidates who can win a primary and almost certainly win the general. The loss of John Cornyn is no loss at all. We haven’t yet seen him take the lead in fighting Donald Trump’s nominees, something we might expect him to do because the President is not selecting bland, status-quo establishment hacks of the kind that people like Cornyn are comfortable with. Perhaps Cornyn has already gotten the message that he is a prime primary target and adjusted his attitude accordingly.

And then there’s Joni Ernst. I would love to give her the benefit of the doubt because she’s a fellow colonel, but boy, she sure miscalculated. As many have pointed out (which I noted after I drafted this column), the Iowa timeserver managed to draw unwelcome attention to her hack record by refusing to provide a full-throated endorsement of Pete Hegseth, and for, according to some, acting behind the scenes to stop his nomination. That’s a problem for her because, until the spotlight shown down upon her, most of us didn’t realize that she backed the terrible [1]Lankford immigration compromise bill, that she supported the Cornyn [2]gun control fiasco, that she is OK with [3]mentally ill trans people in the military, that she [4]voted for a lot of Biden’s terrible nominees, and that she was all in for all sorts of [5]other terrible stuff. America First folks dug up her appalling [6]George Floyd suck-up tweets and other examples of her Washington Post-friendly kind of weak Republicanism. None of that’s good.

She thought she was going to be a heroine by opposing Hegseth. This was a big mistake. Instead of hosannas for opposing Hegseth’s his unrepentant heterosexuality and appreciation of beer, she gave every America First social media pundit reason to trawl through her crappy record, and all because she thought she might get some regime media love by blocking Trump's pick. Hope it was worth it, Joni.

So, is Ernst the right senator to go after in 2026? Well, she was at least savvy enough to finally realize that what she thought would give her a star turn might just lead her to getting turned out of office. By the end of last week, [7]she was explaining that she's not necessarily against Pete, and that she really just wants to see how the hearings work out, and that she doesn't want to be SecDef herself, and blah blah blah blah blah.

At the end of the day, she's going to vote for Pete Hegseth because she knows if she doesn't, she definitely becomes target Number One. After all, Iowa is a pretty red state, and there are some potential challenges there who don't have her baggage. Will capitulating be enough to not make her our electoral target du jour? I don't know, but if I were her – and I would not be because I am not soft – I would try to explain why all this stuff about not backing Pete is just a terrible misunderstanding and then put the “hard” in hard-core for the next couple of years.

A lot of this is going to depend on Donald Trump. At the end of the day, he may be the one to pick the target. He's very good at selecting an enemy and personalizing it. We will soon know who he thinks is the problem, and we will be the solution. This is a good thing. It's necessary. It's been far too long since we launched a primary against an incumbent squish and tossed him/her/them onto the unemployment line. But somebody in the GOP caucus has to go. Somebody has to be the head on the stick. My advice to the soft senators – don't be that guy.

Or gal.

1.12.9 This Recent Development With Dems Only Shows the Extent of Their Sickness (2024-12-09 11:26)

A meeting of state Democratic chairs in Arizona was a whine fest of epic proportion, though no one seemed capable of grasping why Kamala Harris lost in 2024. The liberal bubble, as dense and insane as ever, laughably had liberals thinking that Harris was going to ride into DC with 400 electoral votes. Some of these people had Harris winning Florida. Harris didn't win a single swing state and got handily trounced by President-elect Donald J. Trump. Outside this echo chamber, everyone knew trouble was ahead; spending a billion dollars and being unable to move the needle meant something was wrong. Outgoing Democratic National Committee Chair Jamie Harrison was adamant that the party should do what they ought to do when it comes to voter outreach: dump the 'woke' antics.

I can't believe I'm saying this, but the only person who made any sense was Martin O'Malley—yeah, remember him—who said that the Democratic Party only needs to revert to its pro-working class roots. That's easier said than done—there are no working people within the Democratic Party, at least not in the circles where political strategy is dictated (via [1]Politico):

At a Hilton hotel outside of Phoenix, where Christmas carols piped into the lobby, state Democratic chairs gathered for their annual winter meeting. They weren't frantic like they had been after Trump's first stunning victory. They were exhausted. Even after Trump tapped the likes of Kash Patel and Robert F. Kennedy Jr. to staff his government, they still weren't ready to demonstrate in the streets or tune into liberal networks.

In a fiery speech, Harrison lambasted critics in his party who want to walk away from "identity politics." Democrats began their meeting on Thursday with a "land acknowledgement," a symbolic gesture that grants that the land a person is standing on previously belonged to Native Americans, which conservatives have derided as "woke."

As Democrats tried to figure out a path forward, there was a quiet sense among some here that they wouldn't be out of power for long. It was a stark contrast from people elsewhere in their party who are worried that a realignment could rob them of power for years. After all, these Democrats reasoned, Americans had voted for Trump before — and then quickly grew tired of him, as evidenced by the 2018 midterms and then again in the 2020 presidential election. They took comfort in the fact that voters this year supported liberal ballot initiatives and Democratic Senate candidates in states Trump won.

Native Americans [2]shifted to the right, too.

Democrats now look upon these voters as sewer trash. They've taken a position that they're poor by choice and should suffer the consequences of not being part of their country club of snobbery, derision, and suffocating self-righteousness. These people think they're right about everything because they have a degree. That's not how this works, and most liberals are bonafide idiots. Only these people would bash working people for not being able to soak up the ludicrous price increases brought on by Joe Biden's inflationary agenda. That's like stoning a homeless person for not being able to buy a house. That's how detached these people are. The good news is that the Democrats' systemic dysfunction is the opportunity Trump and the GOP must exploit to get things done, namely on border security and ensuring the Trump tax cuts become permanent.

The Democrats remain blind because they refuse to leave their comfort zone, which is what most voters hate about the Left. Their views make them unlikable, unapproachable, and all-around deplorable.

1.12.10 Is Trump Already Our De Facto President? (2024-12-09 11:29)

The French president – whose government has been [1]buffeted by chaos in recent days – invited President-elect Donald Trump to Paris to help commemorate the reopening of the iconic Notre Dame cathedral, after a damaging fire in 2019. Trump accepted the invitation, [2]meeting with a number of European leaders on the trip, having already huddled with other world leaders at Mar-a-Lago in recent days. During the festivities, [3]as Sarah noted over the weekend, a stream of dignitaries lined up to warmly greet the incoming American president, as cameras rolled. These are striking images, both because of who is depicted in them, but also because of who wasn't there. One might be forgiven for watching this footage and assuming Donald Trump is already President of the United States – as relayed by one of his top State Department nominees:

One by one, world leaders rise to greet President Trump.

This is what respect for our President and country looks like.[4]pic.twitter.com/6YKVjWFnqX— Monica Crowley (@MonicaCrowley) [5]December 7, 2024

Another related clip:

President-Elect Donald Trump with French President Emmanuel Macron in Paris.

[6]pic.twitter.com/WrElJ4Be2R— America (@america) [7]December 7, 2024

It is impossible to avoid juxtaposing these scenes with the reality that the current, sitting President of the United States [8]was not in attendance at all. These may be harsh comments, but they're also inevitable and reasonably-founded observations:

Combination of Biden being feeble & needing to hide from the press after Hunter pardon with Trump having previously been president makes it very easy for world leaders to just ignore Biden now & go straight to Trump. [9]<https://t.co/G5tIB2gDuT>— Dan McLaughlin (@baseballcrank) [10]December 7, 2024

This is such a weird thing that it almost seems like Trump is already president when Biden still has 6 weeks left as president

Like... this is historically weird. It feels surreal. [11]<https://t.co/gnp2mECci8>— PoliMath (@politicalmath) [12]December 8, 2024

The man who is nominally running the US government was represented in France by his wife and daughter, who even appeared to have [13]gotten a bit chummy with Trump, in spite of everything that has transpired over the last four-plus years. This could have been an awkward seating arrangement, but this isn't an awkward photograph:

Perhaps he's just literally not able to be in public without risking embarrassment:

Biden's [22]polling numbers are bleak as he approaches the official end of his presidency. As noted above, it already feels like his presidency is over, so much so that some people are already blaming the not-yet-president for current problems:

1.12.11 The Evaporation of the Obama Mystique (2024-12-13 22:38)

Former President Barack Obama had long been rumored as the catalyst for the 2020 Joe Biden nomination – and thereafter played the whispering puppeteer behind the subsequent lost Biden administration years.

Advertisement

As such he and his coterie proved the virtual architects of the Biden administration, one of the most unpopular and failed presidencies in American history.

Recall earlier that after a flailing candidate Biden lost the first three 2020 primaries and caucuses, his inert campaign was headed nowhere.

Obama and fellow Democratic insiders abruptly engineered the withdrawal of his rival 2020 presidential candidates: hard left but likely sure-loser candidates, including Bernie Sanders, Elizabeth Warren, and Pete Buttigieg.

The Obamas ignored or withheld from the public their own firsthand knowledge that Biden was suffering from signs of dementia.

Instead, they found Biden's cognitive decline and his former concocted reputation as working-man's Joe useful as a veneer for a veritable Obama third-term, "phone it in" administration. Or as wistful Obama once conditioned his dream of a third term – "If I could make an arrangement where I had a stand-in, a front man or front woman, and they had an earpiece in."

The Obamaites then got their wish for four years of enacted hard-left directives that they could only have dreamed of while in actual power.

But their radical menu since 2021 had divided and nearly wrecked the nation—hyperinflation, 12 million illegal aliens, a ruined border, spiraling crime, a shattered foreign policy of appeasement, the popular backlash against DEI/Woke/trans chauvinism, partisan lawfare, and weaponization of the government.

And the ruling radicalism beneath the Biden facade eventually cost the Democrats nearly everything – the presidency, the House, and the Senate.

An inert Biden is departing office with a 36 percent favorability rating in a recent Emerson poll. His Democratic nominee replacement, losing presidential candidate Vice President Harris, also has virtually vacated her office with 40 days left of her tenure.

Failed candidate Harris has been roundly faulted by staffers and donors for blowing through some $2 billion in assorted 2024 campaign money.

She ended up doing worse against Trump than Biden himself had in 2020.

Many Democrats believe that they might have done just as well had Biden stayed on the ticket even in his vastly diminished state.

The Obamas were further blasted for nullifying the wishes of 14 million primary voters by forcing Biden off the ticket – ironically in the same backroom, anti-democratic manner they had cleared the way for him in 2020.

Obama emerged from his comfortable retirement to hit the 2024 campaign trail, schooling the country that President-emeritus Donald Trump was a dictator, a fascist, a tyrant, and, of course, a "racist."

The more Trump polled even with, or ahead of, Kamala Harris, the more an exasperated and ignored Obama talked down to supposedly low-information voters.

Advertisement

But by the time Harris lost the election, voters had tuned out a nagging and patronizing Obama – and his stale, now-dated hope-and-change boilerplate speeches.

What Obama did not mention, but what the voters knew, was that the border was more secure under Trump than during either the Obama or Biden tenure.

Russian President Vladimir Putin invaded countries during the Obama and Biden administrations but stayed put on Trump's watch.

Obama's bizarre vision of a new Middle East had sought to empower Iran as a supposed counterweight against moderate Arab nations and our ally Israel.

Years ago, Obama invited the Russians into Syria, empowered dictatorial Syria, berated Israel nonstop, and all but ignored the violence of Iran's surrogate terrorists: Hamas, Hezbollah, and the Houthis.

But after October 7, Israel retaliated to the mass slaughter of Jewish civilians with all-out war against Hamas and Hezbollah – rendering these once feared terrorists nearly impotent.

In an exchange of air attacks with Iran, Israel showed the world that Iran was as militarily weak as its chanting and threats were tiresome and shrill.

Iran is now tottering on the brink, as its terrorist appendages – including most recently the Assad dynasty – are melting away.

Israel and the moderate Arab regimes are in ascendance, as the entire crazy Obama-envisioned Middle East agenda melts away.

Advertisement

The 2024 anemic Democratic campaign and the Trump electoral college and popular vote victories – combined with record defections of Hispanic and African-American voters from the Democratic Party to Trump – proved a resounding rejection of the Obama legacy and his surrogates’ left-wing visions.

Yet after the people spoke in the election, the more Obama whined that democracy itself had failed him. Voters, he remonstrated, who disagreed with him were written off as racist and sexist.

Obama again harped that constituents did not know what was good for them.

And then, the disappointed former community organizer suddenly disappeared – pondering to which of his own four mansions his private jet would fly him home to commiserate.

1.12.12 Time Magazine Asked Trump What He Thought Was Kamala’s Worst Error in the 2024 Race. His Answer is Epic. (2024-12-13 22:53)

Time Magazine has named Donald J. Trump their ‘Person of the Year.’ It’s not shocking—it leaked hours before it was made official, which didn’t sit well with the publication or its readers. Don Lemon was significantly perturbed that Trump was awarded this honor again—he won it in 2016 as well. Of course, MSNBC thinks the award is [1]worthless because Trump won it. The best part is that we don’t care what these clowns believe, and neither does Trump. The media has never been more dismissed, mocked, or flat-out wrong since the 2016 election (via [2]WaPo):

Time's editor in chief, Sam Jacobs, wrote that it was not a difficult choice this year: "Since he began running for President in 2015, perhaps no single individual has played a larger role in changing the course of politics and history than Trump. ... On the cusp of his second presidency, all of us — from his most fanatical supporters to his most fervent critics — are living in the Age of Trump."

Trump rang the opening bell of the New York Stock Exchange about two hours after the Time announcement, in an event to celebrate the honor.

NYSE chairman Jeffrey Sprecher said as he introduced Trump that markets had hit record highs since Election Day.

You can read the [8]interview transcript here, but he was asked about Kamala Harris and what mistakes she made during her 2024 run. Trump's response was gold:

WOAH. Trump just showed up to the New York Stock Exchange with members of his cabinet in front of his giant TIME Person of the Year cover.

Speaking of Kamala Harris. What do you think were her worst mistakes in the campaign?

Taking the assignment. Number one, because you have to know what you're good at.

Well, there is no argument there. Kamala's disastrous 2020 run was a preview of what would have happened if she had ever been able to win the Democratic nomination. She obtained it via coup after top Democrats pushed Joe Biden out of the 2024 race. We quickly learned she couldn't do it, and the lack of media interviews was because the woman couldn't string two coherent thoughts together.

1.12.13 Tim Walz Wants Us to Feel Sorry For Him Because He Has to 'Pay Bills' (2024-12-15 22:39)

Failed Democratic Vice Presidential candidate Gov. Tim Walz (D-Minn.) is trying to gain sympathy after a devastating loss by crying about the struggles of managing bills and responsibilities he faces as the country's "poorest" vice president candidate that Americans face daily. Walz shed light on how it felt to be the least richest person to run alongside a presidential candidate despite making over $100,000 annually, while most Americans bring in far less than that.

During an interview, Walz said he thought it was a "flex" that he had to "pay bills" like all Americans and appeal to voters because he is "poor."

"I thought it was a real flex when the Wall Street Journal pointed out that I might have been the least wealthy person to ever run for vice president," he said. "I thought that would be something people say, well, this guy knows where we're coming from. He's had to pay his bills."

According to Time Magazine, Walz had a[1] total income of about $299,000, with $135,000 coming from pensions or annuities. The average American makes only [2] $63,795 a year, which is on the higher end. In some states, it's as low as $50,000. The publication noted that Walz's net worth as of 2024 stands at just over $1 million. But, yes, we should all feel sorry for him.

1.12.14 Kamala Harris for CA Governor? Here's What Her Close Aides Think (2024-12-15 22:41)

In a bold and unprecedented move, failed presidential candidate Kamala Harris is reportedly eyeing California Gov. Gavin Newsom's job. The move would significantly shift her political trajectory after she was largely defeated by President-elect Donald Trump in the 2024 election. However, conservatives argue that her time as California attorney general would mirror her agenda as a governor.

According to a CNN [1]report, several top aides are urging Harris to run for governor in 2026 despite polling as one of the most unliked vice presidents in U.S. history. The report noted that the decision will depend on whether Democrats believe the outgoing vice president has a strong chance of winning the party's presidential nomination in what is expected to be a highly competitive primary in 2028. Half the party appears to be split on whether Harris should try her chance at the White House again or take a different path.

The governor's race, meanwhile, looks like a lay-up: Harris was elected statewide three times and served 10 years combined as state attorney general and US senator, and when asked by CNN, several major candidates made clear either directly or through aides that they would likely step aside if she got in. In CNN's conversation with over a dozen current and former Harris advisers and other top California Democratic players, the only consensus around the vice president is that she likely can't do both, since that would essentially require launching a presidential campaign soon after being sworn in as governor. Harris will need to decide very soon after Trump's inauguration if she will quickly give up on her dream of being president – which she feels got short shrift from the circumstances of this year – and instead go for a job that, while one of the most powerful in American politics, would clearly be a fallback.

The report highlighted the tight timeline Harris would need to follow if she ultimately decides to run for Newsom's seat. It pointed out that, at the latest, she must have a clear agenda for a potential governorship by the summer of 2025.

"What she's been saying to people over the last couple of weeks, donors, other supporters that she's been talking with, is you haven't seen the last of me, I'm not going quietly into the night," CNN's Issac Devore said. "Advisors, people close to her, are debating about what that means. They do not want her final official act ever to be essentially certifying Donald Trump's win over her, especially four years after January 6. And so they look at this governor's race in California in 2026, and it seems to them like a layup, essentially, that she would probably clear the field or mostly clear the field, and she would get to be governor of California."

A former advisor to Harris said that a run for governor would be more like a "capstone" rather than a "stepping stone," adding that "if you're thinking of running for president in 2028, the worst thing you can do is run for governor in 2026."

Meanwhile, another believed that Harris could win the presidential race once Trump was out of office and that the gubernatorial race would be distracting.

1.12.15 Let The WNBA Die Already (2024-12-15 22:54)

It's difficult to think of an analogy to use when trying to illustrate how the media and players are trying to destroy the WNBA without realizing it. Not because it's particularly impossible, but because they're all so outdated. To hear the Democrats say it, racism is everywhere and "white supremacy" controls everything in the country, if not the world. But it's really not. It still exists, but it does so in insignificant ways as to not really matter. Yet, getting back to the WNBA, the press around, and hatred of Caitlin Clark is racist. Just let the league die already.

First off, let me say that I am not the target demographic for the WNBA. Not only am I a man, but I don't enjoy basketball - once you've seen a 7-foot-tall guy slam dunk a basketball one time, you're pretty much seen it every time. I get the skill, and I don't have the skill, but I also don't really want to have the skill. There are far too many timeouts, traveling, fouls (called and missed) and seemingly always comes down to the last 2 minutes, which takes as long as the rest of the game had, for me to be interested. It's like watching an NFL game with a flag-happy referee crew: it's boring.

That being said, people like it. The NBA is wildly popular and very profitable. The WNBA is none of those things.

The league lost $40 million this year and considered that to be a victory because they expected to lose closer to $50 million.

The only reason they didn't lose $10 million more is the rise of Caitlin Clark.

Clark is white, and the media decided she would be "the star" of the league because of that fact. They started hyping her in college - "She's scored more points in college than anyone, including Pete Maravich" was the first I'd heard of her. Never mind the fact that Maravich wasn't allowed to play his freshman year thanks to rules at the time and there was no 3-point shot, Clark was the "greatest ever!!!"

Don't get me wrong, my animosity is not directed toward Clark - she's better than I could ever be at the game, but perspective and reality matter. The left was waiting for some player to hype and they wanted that player to be white. Why? Because they believe America is racist and would only accept a white player as a star.

This is beyond stupid, of course, but it's how the mind of Democrats work. The top player in baseball is from Japan, players in the NFL are majority black and it's the most popular game in sports, while the NHL is full of Canadians and Swedes and isn't even a blip on the radar. If the American public is into "white supremacy," we really suck at it.

Clark go the full court press: magazine covers, TV profiles, more basketball cards selling for a small fortune than established athletes, and games all over TV. When her team came to town, the story was about her going to be there, being there, then having been there. It sold tickets and merchandise. But only hers.

The public bought the sizzle without realizing the steak was just ok.

I don't mean to say she's not a good player, she is. But she was only the 7th in average points. Nothing to sniff at, but I bet no one in the media who'd hyped her could name any of the 6 players ahead of her. I bet not one single panel member on CNN whining about "white supremacy" being why she gotten so much attention could name one either. You'd think they learn them, if only to name drop and seem to be genuine.

But they aren't genuine, it's performance art.

None of the energy from the left behind pushing Caitlin Clark was ever put behind a black player; they didn't even try. That's not Clark's fault, it's the fault of the left. And with literally all of the energy behind her, it only makes sense that there is no residual impact on anyone else and the rest of the league. Games not involving her are about as popular as the league was before her.

Advertisement

Still, even team owners don't get it and spend their time degrading Clark rather than expanding the case for the whole league. "Caitlin Clark was named Athlete of the year. Why couldn't they have put the whole WNBA on that cover and said 'The WNBA is the league of the year?'" asked Washington Mystics owner Sheila Johnson. (Honestly, I had to look up where the Mystics were from, which is a problem for the league that pre-dates Clark.) "Because when you just keep singling out one player it creates hard feelings. And so now you're starting to hear stories of racism."

Yes, it is racism. Racism by the left in elevating a rookie as the savior of the league because she is white, then racism of black players toward her rather than directing that animosity toward the people choosing a person to highlight because of their skin color. The only person who hasn't done anything here is Clark herself, and she's the one getting bodychecked and her eye gouged by bitter racists.

I say let the league die. I was indifferent about its existence before, but the whining and victimhood by people lucky enough to play a game for a living about the one person bringing in the people necessary to grow the league and all of their salaries is just too much. So many stories about how “little” WNBA players are paid compared to NBA players are stupid – how many of the league’s players could make $100,000 in the non-sports world? The rookie starting wage is $76,535. How many people without an advanced degree make that much right out of college? Not many, and fewer still when you remove rich kids hired by their family’s business.

But they aren’t worth more. Rather than whine about the attention, accolades and endorsements Caitlin Clark is getting, practice and play better. The vast majority of players in the WNBA, Clark included (41.7), shoot well below 50 percent. You have to go to the 40th player on the league leader board for shooting percentage to get below 50 in the NBA. There are only 12 of the top 50 leaders in the WNBA above 50, with most just barely.

In other words, the game itself is boring. I can watch my friends miss shots and I don’t have to be lectured about how horrible and racist everything is as I do it.

The league won’t die – it’s subsidized by the NBA, at least in part, to distract from the womanizing of players – so they aren’t about to let it die. It is immune from reality, both economic and political. I guess I’ll just keep doing what I’ve been doing: not giving a damn, no matter how much its hyped or how loud the whining gets.

The more Trump polled even with, or ahead of, [5]Harris, the more an exasperated and ignored Obama talked down to supposedly low-information voters.

But by the time Harris lost the election, voters had tuned out a nagging and patronizing Obama—and his stale, now-dated “hope-and-change” boilerplate speeches.

What Obama did not mention, but what the voters knew, was that the border was more secure under Trump than during either the Obama’s or Biden’s tenure.

Russian President Vladimir Putin invaded countries during the Obama and Biden administrations, but stayed put on Trump’s watch.

Obama’s bizarre vision of a new Middle East had sought to empower Iran as a supposed counterweight against moderate Arab nations and our ally Israel.

Years ago, Obama invited the Russians into Syria, empowered dictatorial Syria, berated Israel nonstop, and all but ignored the violence of Iran’s surrogate terrorists: Hamas, Hezbollah, and the Houthis.

But after Oct. 7, 2023, Israel retaliated to the mass slaughter of Jewish civilians with all-out war against Hamas and Hezbollah—rendering these once feared terrorists nearly impotent.

In an exchange of air attacks with Iran, Israel showed the world that Iran was as militarily weak as its chanting and threats were tiresome and shrill.

Iran is now tottering on the brink, as its terrorist appendages—including most recently the Assad dynasty in Syria—are melting away.

Israel and the moderate Arab regimes are in ascendance, as the entire crazy Obama-envisioned Middle East agenda melts away.

The 2024 anemic Democratic campaign and the Trump Electoral College and popular vote victories—combined with record defections of Hispanic and African American voters from the Democratic Party to Trump—proved a resounding rejection of the Obama legacy and his surrogates' left-wing visions.

Yet after the people spoke in the election, the more Obama whined that democracy itself had failed him. Voters, he remonstrated, who disagreed with him were written off as racist and sexist.

Obama again harped that constituents did not know what was good for them.

And then, the disappointed former community organizer suddenly disappeared—pondering to which of his own four mansions his private jet would fly him home to commiserate.

1.12.17 Blame Biden for Drone Hysteria (2024-12-22 00:44)

New Jersey is now subject to nonstop and often sensational civilian reports of swarms of nocturnal drones crossing city skies and violating the airspace of airports and [1]military bases.

Terrified thousands demand to know what these drones are doing and to whom they belong.

In response, the [2]Biden administration had initially kept mum.

Then, under mounting public pressure, it assured the public to be calm, given that most of the drones were likely launched by hobbyists and private citizens.

When that narrative failed to convince many, spokespeople pivoted to claims of mass hysteria and mistaken identity.

Amateur sightseers, they inferred, were subject to panic and hallucinations—supposedly wrongly confusing normal civilian and airline planes with drones.

Perhaps.

But as the sightings continued, more government narratives followed that the drones were unidentified but assuredly still harmless and certainly not foreign-operated.

Still, the mysterious sightings continued.

And the public's initial curiosity soon turned to fear and finally to anger at their government's silence, subsequent gaslighting, and final mendacity.

In its characteristic stonewalling, the Biden administration has only fueled speculations and occasional conspiracy theories when it could have at least reviewed logical theories and welcomed legitimate questions.

Is a controversial government agency—perhaps the CIA or the Environmental Protection Agency—surveilling installations, areas, or people that would either be too embarrassing to be revealed or otherwise might set off panic? And for the public good or consistent with this administration's weaponization of government?

Or are these drones the work of foreign surveillance in the mode of the 2023 Chinese spy balloon?

A government that long ago lost all its credibility could not reassure the people of the truth even if it wished to.

For nearly four years, Homeland Security Secretary [3]Alejandro Mayorkas assured the American people almost weekly that “the border is secure”—even as a reported 12 million illegal entrants easily crossed it.

White House spokeswoman Karine Jean-Pierre asserted weekly that President Joe Biden was vigorous, in full control of his faculties, and always “sharp.”

In fact, she knew that the American people grimaced as their president slurred his speech, suddenly went mute, tripped, fell, and wandered aimlessly.

In late January and early February 2023, a huge Chinese surveillance balloon traversed across the United States. Public outrage grew as the administration changed its excuses by the day.

It variously assured the public that it was a mere weather balloon, that it would be too dangerous to shoot it down, that it did not transmit any of its photographic capability to China, or that its trajectory did not cross key military installations.

All those excuses were either half-lies or untrue.

In late July and early August 2021, it became clear that the Biden administration planned a massive, previously unannounced, and abrupt withdrawal from Afghanistan.

Rumors circulated that Biden rushed to claim that he alone had ended the messy Afghan war misadventure after 20 years and would celebrate his triumph on the 20th anniversary of the 9/11 terrorist attacks.

To assuage public fears, our top generals assured us that [4]the Taliban was at bay, Kabul was secured, and the withdrawal would be orderly.

But within hours, sheer bedlam broke out.

Thirteen Marines were murdered by terrorists.

There were no audits or background checks on Afghans who were flown to America. Meanwhile, loyal Afghan interpreters and American contractors were ignored and left behind to fend off triumphant terrorists on their own.

Even as Americans watched the disaster on their screens, the Biden administration boasted of a supposedly heroic and Herculean effort to evacuate tens of thousands—in what the public saw instead as the greatest American military humiliation of the last half-century.

So, the American public understandably no longer believes much of anything the waning Biden administration says—not after its other chronic lies about denying the role of the Wuhan lab in the COVID-19 pandemic, only “moderate” inflation, and assurances that [5]Hunter Biden would never be pardoned by his father.

This administration knows that anytime there is a scandal or embarrassment on Team Biden’s watch, it wheels out megaphones that ignore inquiries, gaslights critics by claiming they are hallucinatory, defames them as conspiratorial, or simply flat-out lies and stonewalls.

No one yet knows what, if anything, these drones are, what they are doing in our skies—and much less whether they pose any threat at all.

But almost everyone assumes the Biden administration knows and yet expects that it will likely deceive us that it doesn’t.

1.12.18 Merry Christmas (2024-12-22 19:03)

I have a nice christmas tree, right?

[1]

1. <https://iainthegreat.wordpress.com/wp-content/uploads/2024/12/img-4919.jpg>

1.12.19 Why Christmas Remains the Greatest Story of All Time (2024-12-22 19:11)

Across cultures throughout human history, people have sought to flee oppression and escape persecution. A recurring theme in Western classical literature and in modern classics such as Superman and Disney originals, which revolve around the struggle between good and evil, is the need and critical role for a rescuer or savior.

Christmas is the celebration of the birth of the messiah, the ultimate rescuer and savior for mankind who would vanquish evil, oppression and falsehood once and for all. In that sense, Jesus is the most revolutionary figure of human history. No other religion makes the claim that it was founded by a messiah.

Many people assume Christianity is like other religions that require followers to give up bad habits and perform certain works and rituals acceptable to God. Not so. Christ reminds us in Matthew 11:30 that, “My yoke is easy, and My burden is light.” When a learned Jewish Pharisee whose life revolved around living up to stressful “dos and don’ts” of the Mosaic law asked Jesus which was the greatest commandment in the law, Jesus answered simply that if we love God and love our neighbor as ourselves, we will have fulfilled all the laws.

Even non-believers recognize Jesus as the most far-reaching revolutionary. For one thing, Jesus Christ—being God, affected history with such an impact that He split time, dividing all human activities and events into happening before his coming (called B.C.) or after his coming (called A.D.). Christ had to have had a supernatural impact for non-Christians around the world to agree to dividing history in two.

The power of Christ can also be measured by beauty. A full collection of Renaissance Christian art, if it could be assembled, would be worth many times more than all the other art in the world combined.

First, the account of Jesus Christ is more historically verifiable than other renowned figures and their works who lived in that ancient time and era—including literary greats, Virgil and Horace and military-kings like Alexander the Great—because of the number of eye-witness accounts, the short lapse of time between what Jesus said and did and the written account of those events and the number of surviving manuscripts.

No one doubts Virgil and Horace lived and originated great poetic masterpieces, although the written manuscripts of their works were recorded more than 400 years after they had died. There are only two original biographical accounts of Alexander the Great, written by Arrian and Plutarch some 400 years after Alexander died. The eye-witness accounts of Jesus were recorded in writing within a generation of his life. In addition, there are about 1,000 times more manuscripts that preserve the deeds and teachings of Jesus than there are ancient documents preserving other classical ancient works and records of historic figures who lived at approximately the same time.

Second, Christ is the only person in history who was pre-announced starting 1,000 years before he was born—with 18 different prophets from the Old Testament between 10th and the 4th centuries B.C. predicting his coming birth, life, and death. Hundreds of years later, the circumstances of Christ's birth, life and death validated those prophecies in surprisingly accurate detail. This is unique to Jesus Christ—no one else in human history.

Third, Christ not only demonstrated his otherworldly power to heal and perform the ultimate miracle of bringing the dead back to life, but he set the absolute highest standard of love possible—being willing to die to give life to others. As Jesus prophesied, his resurrection confirmed God's power and plan—providing “seeing is believing” evidence by bringing Jesus back from the dead and buried in a tomb to being resurrected and alive, thus providing the people with living proof of who He was.

In fact, Jesus made ten separate appearances to his disciples between the resurrection and his ascension into Heaven—a period of 40 days. Some of those appearances were to individual disciples, some were to several disciples at the same time, and once even to 500 at one time. This was not hearsay, but a matter of record of multiple separate eye-witness accounts recorded in writing.

Fourth, no other religion teaches that God became flesh. In other religions God is too otherworldly and pure to be accessible in terms of having a communion with earthly followers. In Christianity, God had his Son born in the humbleness of a stable and had Him raised in Nazareth, a small and very poor town that was one of the lowest in social status in Israel because He wanted his Son to be approachable by people from all walks of life.

Unlike other religious paths that require certain formalities and good works, the Christian approaches God not by works but by a humble recognition that Christ gave his life for our sins—that he paid the price for us—and that through Christ, we find forgiveness and reconciliation that provide a direct relationship with God.

Christianity is Foundational to the Declaration and the Constitution

As a Christian holiday, Christmas is foundational to America's original character. If Christ had never been born and died the way He did, all of history would have been different. Neither Columbus nor the Pilgrims would have received or have been motivated by the good news of salvation through Christ to explore or establish new communities with a higher moral purpose in the New World.

There would never have been a constitutional government created in the way and time that it was in America, without two necessary conditions:

First, the foundation of recognizing man's unalienable rights of freedom and equality that came out of the teachings of Christ, but not fully recognized until the Protestant Reformation of the 16th century.

Second, the unprecedented collection of Christian human genius that came together—rather amazingly at the same time—people we call the Founding Fathers, who were 95 percent Christian in their beliefs. It was their extraordinary biblical, historical, and classical learning, together with their wisdom, temperament, and practical experience that enabled them to write and frame the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution, and its Bill of Rights. Equally important, those Christian founders knew the sin and depravity that exists in everyone would lead to abuse of power and tyranny. And so, they structured the government with checks and balances between the three branches of government, and also through the federalist system of division of power between the states and the federal government.

So profound was the accomplishment of the Founding Fathers that it far surpassed achievements of Periclean Athens in Greece, Cicero and the Roman Republic, Florence under the Medicis, England in the period of Elizabeth and Shakespeare, or any other nation. The spiritually-based founding of America was the greatest political and civic event in all human history, which is why evil enemy forces—both domestic and foreign—relentlessly work to destroy the United States.

The constitutional republic formed by the Founders provided for and protected individual rights of freedom and independence such that America achieved material prosperity for more people, more rapidly than any other prior civilization. Additionally, the American constitutional framework enabled people to move closer to the divine image in which all people are created free and equal more than they would have achieved under any prior system.

The Essence and Summary

It is remarkable that Christ had no servants, yet everyone called him master. He had no formal education or degree, yet educated Jews called him rabbi and teacher. Jesus had no medicines, yet he was desperately sought out as a healer. He had no army, yet emperors and kings feared him.

History shows that the greatest advancement of human character—and the accomplishments that followed—was made possible by God who became man, born in the humble circumstances of a dirty stable in the small village of Bethlehem, a speck in the vast Roman Empire. And while that empire would crumble and fall, Jesus, who had neither an army nor won military battles, went on to become the Lord and Savior for people who believe all over the world. While Jesus did say, “My Kingdom is not of this world,” He also implored His disciples and all believers that God’s “will be done on earth, as it is in heaven.” In the end, the Christmas story is about peace and the great joy that good will triumph over evil.

1.12.20 Christmas: Ties to the Past and Hope for the Future (2024-12-22 19:15)

Christmas miracles exist because the miracle of Christmas is true. In a world where mis- and dis-function and information are rampant, Christmas ties us to a peaceful “Silent night” past while proclaiming a promised future: “no more lives torn apart...” No such promise of peace exists in any other setting. While secular DEI initiatives crumble, Christmas and the Bible are more popular than ever.

Circana BookScan figures show that while book sales generally are only up 1 percent, [1]2024 Bible sales are up 22 percent. In May, Gen-Z-ized Bible rephrasings began trending on TikTok. While 18-25-year-olds are frustrated with government, society and life, the Bible, with its Christmas story, parables and music, has been refreshing people and nations for centuries, and Gen-Z is catching on.

In April 2019, my heart sank as I watched the fire at France’s historic Notre Dame Cathedral. Within hours, the spire, which stood for more than 800 years, crashed into a pool of molten lead. Millions worldwide felt the pain. I’m not Catholic but was moved when French President Macron promised to rebuild.

[2]Friends of Notre Dame reported, “Thousands of donors from more than 50 countries... contributed funds....” Money for restorations came from Christians worldwide and nations like Saudi Arabia. The contributions totaled over €846 million; the love was immeasurable.

The world watched in amazement as 1,200 French oak trees and 1,000 construction professionals restored the cathedral. Some called it a “miracle.” It’s not Jesus rising from the dead in three days, but it’s miracle-ish compared to Notre Dame’s original 200-year construction schedule. [3]The French celebrated the feat with President-elect Donald Trump, Ukrainian President Zelenskyy, Prince William, Elon Musk and hundreds of dignitaries.

It’s a testimony to the French people, prayers, and I contend, the enduring power and influence of Christianity on the world. While also a UNESCO World Heritage Site, Notre Dame is, first and foremost, a church dedicated to worshiping the Jesus of Christmas

The impact of Christianity on the world is undeniable, especially this time of year. Retail stores play the Bee Gees singing “O Come All Ye Faithful...” In Christmas classic movies, Jimmy Stewart quotes Scripture. Christmas is still changing the world 2000 years after Jesus’ birth — other attempts at peace and equity fail faster than Middle Eastern dictators.

Colleges and corporations are abandoning DEI. Why? Because it does not engender cooperation, unity, peace or equity, quite the opposite. [4]Rutgers’ NCRI study proved that DEI training made participants more likely to agree with — literally — Hitler. By comparison, Christmas, like its Originator, continues to heal, save, uplift, wed and bless the world.

The historical Jesus is undeniable: Pliny the Younger, Suetonius, Thallus and Jewish historian Josephus record Jesus’ family members’ names, that His followers were called “Christians,” and details about His miracles. [5]Roman historian Tacitus records that He was tried before Pontius Pilate and crucified.

The impact of the Baby of Bethlehem could be correlated without ever opening the Bible. Only two of the top 100 rock songs of all time do not reference Jesus. Art, traditions, names and even athletic teams reflect our connections to Christianity. Because of Christmas, Jesus changed the world. Christians have been changing it ever since.

Quaker Christian Dr. Thomas Bond and Benjamin Franklin founded the first hospital in the colonies, [6]Pennsylvania Hospital. Today, one of the top four U.S. hospitals, its logo still bears the image of a Good Samaritan and the inscription from Jesus’ parable, “Take care of him, and I will repay thee”(Luke 10:35).

Advertisement

Award-winning [7]NYT journalist John S. Dickerson notes, “If you have a deadly medical condition, you want to be in a hospital that was founded by Christians or Christian-trained doctors.

In his book, “Miracles,” [8]C.S. Lewis observed, “It is a Jewish girl at her prayers upon whom all humankind depended. All humanity (so far as it concerns redemption) has narrowed to that.”

If you don’t know where you’re going, Jesus is still the star of Bethlehem. When it’s dark, He’s still the Light of the world. If you’re searching for God, you don’t need to find Him; if you go to His word, He will find you.

Merry Christmas past, present and future.

1.12.21 What Was So Different This Time About Trump’s Election? (2024-12-28 23:57)

In the weeks before his 2016 Electoral College victory, [1]Donald Trump was polling between 35 % and 40 %.

He would average only about 41 % approval over his tumultuous four-year tenure.

No one knows what lies ahead over the next four years. But for now, Trump already polls well over 50 % approval.

His inauguration in a few weeks will likely not resemble Trump's 2016 ceremony.

In the 2016-7 transition, Democrat-affiliated interests ran commercials urging electors to become "faithless," and thus illegally reject their states' popular votes and instead elect the loser, [2]Hillary Clinton.

Massive demonstrations met Trump on Inauguration Day.

In less than four months after assuming the presidency, special counsel Robert Mueller was appointed to investigate the hoax of Russian collusion.

That wasted 22-month, $40 million investigation found no collusion, but did derail the first two Trump years.

What followed the collusion ruse was a consistent effort to undermine the Trump presidency—two subsequent impeachments, the laptop "disinformation" hoax, the [3]COVID-19 nationwide lockdown, and news suppression of any mention of the Chinese lab origin of the virus or questioning the closing of schools.

In the Trump administration's last summer of 2020, 120 days of riot, arson, looting, assault, and murder followed, with the denouement of the Jan. 6 turmoil.

In contrast, the current Trump transition has all but assumed the presidency. Over 100 foreign leaders have elbowed each other to be invited to Mar-a-Lago or to phone in their congratulations to the newly elected Trump.

Remember that in 2016 [4]the Left screamed "Logan Act" if a Trump transition appointee even talked with foreign officials.

So why is newly elected Trump a veritable cultural hero in 2024 in a fashion unimaginable eight years ago, when the media had rendered him a near demon?

One, Trump is seen now as a welcome relief.

A departing and unpopular [5]President Joe Biden leaves with about a 36 % approval rating.

The prior Biden years are now seen as abnormal.

The Left's cultural revolution championed fringe policies never quite seen before: destroying the border, welcoming in 12 million illegal aliens, nihilist critical race and legal theories, institutionalizing a third sex, and mandating [6]woke/DEI quotas and indoctrination sessions.

Yet Biden had inherited from Trump a secure border, an economy rebounding after the COVID-19 quarantines, 1.23 % inflation, no wars abroad, and cheap energy.

Four years later, the outgoing [7]Biden administration is widely unpopular. Almost every one of its policies polls before 50 %.

In reaction, Trump promises not just to restore his first-term success, but to expand it.

Two, Trump personally remains transparent and energetic—eager to talk and meet anyone, anytime, and just about anywhere.

His energy offers a sharp contrast with the non-compos-mentis Biden. The change is welcomed by an electorate exhausted by the past four years of presidential stumbling, wandering, incoherence, mind-freezes, and angry, “get-off-my-grass” aged fragility.

Three, Trump is grudgingly admired, now even by some of his enemies who once sought but failed to destroy him.

He endured two impeachments, five civil and criminal court indictments, incessant lawfare, 95 % negative media coverage, attempts to remove him from states' ballots, and two assassination attempts.

Yet all these unprecedented hostile efforts to end Trump may only have made him stronger—and more empathetic when seen as a target of increasingly fanatical enemies.

Four, Trump has expanded his MAGA base and permanently branded it as an ecumenical movement that welcomes shared class interests rather than the tired old tribal racial and ethnic chauvinism.

Trump also brought in disaffected Democrats, independents, and minorities in a way the Democrats could not with the evaporating “Never Trump” dead-enders.

Trump’s veritable campaign menagerie of [8]RFK Jr., Tulsi Gabbard, Elon Musk, Joe Rogan, Dana White, and Kid Rock made it impossible for the Left to demonize MAGA Republicans as right-wing aristocrats or laissez-fair capitalists.

Fifth, the endorsements of the [9]Biden-Harris legacy media, calcified Hollywood endorsers, blowhard university faculties, and tech barons proved vastly overrated.

It was trumped by more popular and dynamic internet influencers, podcasters, bloggers, and maverick entrepreneurs.

Sixth and finally, Trump himself proved more experienced, and more measured and reflective than in 2016. His team too was more disciplined and street smart, led by savvy chief of staff Susan Wiles.

The past year has seen truly pivotal moments of Trump as an everyman—posing for a mug shot after being railroaded by a weaponized lawfare indictment, serving McDonald’s drive-through customers, riding in a garbage truck cab, raising his fist and yelling, “Fight, fight, fight”—and after nearing have his head blown off by a would-be assassin.

Add up all of these once unimaginables, and the people trusted more—and liked better—the Trump reboot than grouchy Biden or inane and inauthentic Vice President [10]Kamala Harris, as well as their shared extremist agendas.

1.12.22 Trump States Where He Stands on H-1B Visas (2024-12-29 00:06)

President-elect Donald Trump has announced his position on the H-1B visa, which imports hundreds of thousands of foreign workers, mainly from India, to work specialty occupations. His statements starkly contrast his first term, where he emphasized the need to prioritize American workers and "America First" policies. His first administration implemented several measures, including stricter eligibility criteria, increased scrutiny of applications, and reduced visa approvals, to ensure that American workers were not displaced or underpaid.

Trump said he has many H-1B visas employed on his properties and believes in the “great” program.

“I’ve always liked the visas, I have always been in favor of the visas,” Trump told the New York Post. “That’s why we have them.”

Trump, who was previously critical of foreign worker visas during his first administration, agreed with Elon Musk and Vivek Ramaswamy, who argued that the program is crucial for enabling American companies to access highly skilled labor that may be scarce within the U.S. workforce and should be expanded to meet growing demands.

However, critics say the program prioritizes H-1B holders over U.S. citizens for American jobs. According to reports, there are about 650,000 H-1B visa foreign workers in America at any time. U.S. citizens are often laid off and forced to train their foreign replacements.

Musk, however, has doubled down on his support for the program, slamming a social media user who criticized the billionaire’s stance on the H-1B visa.

“The reason I’m in America along with so many critical people who built SpaceX, Tesla, and hundreds of other companies that made America strong is because of H1B,” Musk wrote on X.

Ramaswamy echoed Musk's sentiments: "American culture has venerated mediocrity over excellence."

Breitbart News [1]reported that in 2015, Trump laid out key visa program reforms, such as increasing the wage for issuing visas to attract Americans to corporate positions rather than foreigners.

1.12.23 Law Professor Explains Why Joe Biden's Picture With Chinese Executives Is Another Blow to the Media (2024-12-29 00:08)

It's another game of catch-up for the media and yet another painful reminder for them why scores of Americans are flocking to other sources for news because they cannot be trusted. It's why some media heads are ranting about the 2024 election, Elon Musk's purchase of Twitter, and the proliferation of streamers and podcasts. They're losing control, and they know it. Even Kamala Harris' operatives admitted that legacy media isn't what it used to be regarding voter reach and influence.

Also, the pervasive lying the media does to cover for Democrats, specifically Joe Biden, has been one of the overt operations in recent memory. They used to hide their bias better, layering it, making it less noticeable, or at the very least debatable regarding their true intentions. There was slightly more nuance, but that's over.

Most CNN and MSNBC segments read like they're coming out of the headquarters of the Democratic National Committee, and law professor Jonathan Turley, who is not a conservative, even noted the legacy media took another broadside hit with the National Archives [1]releasing old photos of Joe Biden and Hunter with their supposed business associates in China. These are the people Joe had never met or even heard of, and we all knew that this was a lie.

Like Sonny Corleone shot up in The Godfather, the media's death was a prolonged and bloody event, a death by a thousand cuts. Yet, the Russian collusion, the burying of Biden's dealings, the Hunter Biden laptop, and the smokescreen concerning the president's mental health might be the four big stories that shredded the media's credibility. The photos obliterated one of the final fake narratives about Biden, so please, establishment press, learn from this because no one cares about your standing anymore (via [2]Jonathan Turley):

...It is not only factually wrong but legally irrelevant. As I stated in my testimony in the Biden impeachment hearing, enriching your family is treated the same under corruption statutes...[3]<https://t.co/1lCpLXuo6p>— Jonathan Turley (@JonathanTurley) [4]December 28, 2024

...Phillip appears willing to accept that Hunter and his uncle enriched themselves with influence peddling but somehow believes that that does not implicate the subject of the influence peddling, Joe Biden...— Jonathan Turley (@JonathanTurley) [5]December 28, 2024

America First Legal has been engaged in a prolonged legal fight with the National Archives to get access to the undisclosed evidence. It recently won critical rulings forcing the release. The discovery includes this photo of then-vice president Joe Biden meeting with Hunter and his clients. It adds to an already ample photographic and testimonial record contradicting the President's past denials.

The House has released records showing $27 million in payments from foreign sources to Hunter Biden and his business partners from 2014 to 2019. Hunter used official trips with his father to facilitate some of these associations.

Despite denying meeting with these clients or knowing anything about his son's dealings, it was later revealed that Biden was repeatedly put on a speakerphone with clients, attended dinners, and took pictures with them, including BHR Partners CEO Jonathan Li. A key witness said that he sat down with Joe Biden specifically to discuss these foreign deals with this son.

Joe Biden later wrote college recommendation letters for Li's son and daughter.

In the summer of 2019, Li wired Hunter Biden $250,000 that originated in Beijing and had Joe Biden's Delaware home as the beneficiary address.

There were diamonds as gifts, lavish expense accounts, and a sports car, in addition to massive payments that Hunter claimed were "loans."

After years of ignoring the influence-peddling scandal, the media is not likely to suddenly pursue the story. If you want to see one of the reasons why the public is abandoning the legacy media for new media, just look at this photo.

In the meantime, Democrats have praised or rationalized Biden for pardoning his son despite the fact that it covered possible crimes that might implicate not just Hunter but his father in corruption.

1.12.24 Trump Needs To Be Ready For The Gathering Storm Over H1B Visas (2024-12-29 00:12)

Businesses love cheap labor like a fat kid loves cake. The reason we have so many illegal aliens in the United States is we have so many companies willing and wanting to hire them. They aren't simply hiring them over Americans, they're hiring them over Americans for much cheaper than they can hire Americans - many times for cash, avoiding taxes. It's just a simple fact of economics, made much worse by the failures of Joe Biden and his administration to secure the border. But the fight that is brewing just over the horizon is not about illiterate illegal aliens coming to service the physical labor tasks around the houses of rich Democrats; it is about the fight over the legal immigrants these Democrats will not fire for making eye contact or speaking to the: people coming to the United States on a H1B visa.

The American Immigration Council [1]describes an H1B visa as "a temporary (nonimmigrant) visa category that allows employers to petition for highly educated foreign professionals to work in 'specialty occupations' that require at least a bachelor's degree or the equivalent. Jobs in fields such as mathematics, engineering, technology, and medical sciences often qualify. Typically, the initial duration of an H-1B visa classification is three years, which may be extended for a maximum of six years. Before an employer can file a petition with USCIS, the employer must take steps to ensure that hiring the foreign worker will not harm U.S. workers.”

These visas came into existence to fill the void left by the failing American education system. We were not creating enough educated, skilled workers, instead pumping out gender and race studies grievance drones and sociologists to manufacture studies to keep them feeling self-righteous.

The problem is we never corrected that failure.

Engineering is hard, medicine requires a lot of work and discipline, etc. American popular culture requires immediate gratification – social media influencers only have to wait a few seconds for the likes and “tips” to come rolling in. Planning for when you’re really old – like 30 – is something people with fewer than a million followers do.

Rather than address this rot by disallowing federal student loans and grants to study fields with a 3 percent employment rate – fields like gender or race studies, where the only jobs available are teaching other people dumb enough to take those classes or explain to left-wing corporations why they need to defecate on Martin Luther King’s grave by hiring based on the color of an applicant’s skin and not the content of their resume. There aren’t nearly enough of those jobs to go around, relative to how appealing these universities make the profession seem.

RecommendedChoke off the federal money, and these students can choose a useful field of study or get their fitting for the barista uniform before they pack on the freshman 15. If their parents want to cover the costs, let them. Not everyone can be saved – the world needs cautionary tales too.

Without an effort to create enough high-skilled labor being churned out (and I mean skilled, not simply people with the degree) the H1B will continue to exist.

But to pretend it is not being exploited by tech companies looking to do what those Democrats who don’t want to pay an American to cut their lawn are doing is ignorant.

Foreign labor, even skilled labor, is cheaper. Companies throwing their hands up and whining about how they can’t find enough workers is an old, tested trick to get people for less, who can’t bitch about their low wages or they’ll be let go and shipped back home. The H1B visa worker is tethered, essentially owned, by the company that sponsored them. Get fired and they’re gone.

That incentivizes silence and acceptance of low pay and abuse.

The truth is there are plenty of people with the education to do the job being graduated, but many lack the skills and drive of foreign workers. That's a failure of the education system and no one seems interested in addressing it.

It's being described as "meritocracy," when in reality it is manipulation. Acknowledge the problem, but do not address it because the problem itself is actually beneficial to the businesses.

There is a fight brewing that is just now bubbling over top about H1B visas that will get ugly very quickly, if the Trump administration isn't ready for it. Democrats won't help, they'll try to make things worse because that will help them.

The incoming President has to realize he's already a lame duck. He has a year, at the most, of political capital to push for big changes he campaigned on, then the mid-term campaigning starts. Once that happens, nothing major is going to get done legislatively - that just the nature of the beast. If Republicans hold the House and Senate, or even expand, he gets another year of getting things done before the 2028 cycle starts up.

Time is of the essence here. Someone in the incoming administration needs to step up and break up this gathering storm between Donald Trump, Stephen Miller, Elon Musk and the rest of MAGA before it gets out of control and derails Trump II.

1.12.25 We Can Never Know How Evil These People Were (2024-12-29 00:15)

As those whom the media have protected may finally be exposed for their actions, we might start to get a glimpse of how evil certain people have been both at home and abroad.

Joseph Stalin was a mass murderer. He was also, unfortunately for humanity, a fairly smart guy. He made many observations such as it does not matter who votes but rather who counts the ballots. Or when pressed to get the Pope to come out against the Nazis, he asked how many divisions the Pope had available to fight. One of Stalin's more famous comments was "One death is a tragedy. A million deaths is a statistic." There is absolutely no way to know how many people Joe Stalin, Adolph Hitler or Chairman Mao killed. If one searches for the number, he might find quite a broad range, plus or minus a couple million. There is no way to know how evil these people were. We may know a great deal but we will never have a final accounting.

During Stalin's reign, much of the Western intellectual set and the press warbled on about the wonderful Workers Paradise that was the Soviet Union. They knew of Stalin's brutal actions in Ukraine and the resulting famine, but they would not report it. It was not until Nikita Krushchev denounced his predecessor that a green light was given to the New York Times and other newsrooms to report about the gulags, starvation, show trials, and summary executions. The press was rooting for Stalin and the anti-Capitalistic system for as long as they could. When the jig was up, they decided to try something new: report the news.

As the Trump transition is only a few weeks away, will we have a similar national experience of finding out more about the damage that Joe Biden, Barack Obama, Tony Fauci, Bill Gates and others protected by the press did? There are many things we know, in part due to websites like this one and the newly freed X social media juggernaut. But still, there is a good deal that we don't know—and may never know. I remember that when Obama ran for the presidency for the first time, the LA Times said that it had a video of a younger Obama speaking with a known Israel-hating professor. They said that they would never let the video see the light of day. But isn't it their job to report the news? Aren't they supposed to help us better understand the world in which we live? No. Their sole job is to protect the system that they have bought into. And that system may be going under when Donald Trump raises his right hand and once again swears to uphold the Constitution.

Can we ever know how much money Hillary Clinton directed to the Clinton Foundation in return for favors from the sitting secretary of state? How about the Bidens? We have seen snippets of their corruption through former business partners and of course the Hunter laptop. Can we know how much money they received and from whom? Do we know everything they did for the advancement of their partners' interests at the expense of American needs and advantage? We will never know all of the details, even if there is a special counsel. The same is true for Barack Obama. We know from a hot mic that he promised Vladimir Putin to be more "flexible" after the 2012 election. He sent pallets of money to the mullahs to help them continue their terror activities. But can we ever know how many individuals and companies suffered because of the actions of Obama and his coterie? How many companies fired employees as federal monies were directed to favored green losers? How much of our tax money was wasted on trash companies only because the owners or investors gave a lot of money to the Obama or Biden campaigns? Like with Covid, we will never have an accurate number of those damaged and how many trillions destroyed.

And as for Covid, will we ever have a complete report on the damage caused by Tony Fauci and his chums at the NIH and big pharma? How many young men have heart troubles because we were lied to about the safety of the mRNA vaccines? How many children today are way, way back in their education and development because for the 1 % chance that they might get sick, they needed to stay home and lose their future? Can anyone say how many firms went out of business because of the fake six-foot rule? How many died because available treatments were swept away in order to make way for the mRNA vaccines and mammoth profits? I may not agree with Bobby Kennedy, Jr. on every subject, but one thing that I have found is that he always brings the receipts. He showed that Fauci and company had to get rid of any possible Covid treatment in order to allow for an emergency approval of the experimental treatments. Then, when the pandemic had passed, we started to see that some of those banned treatments actually worked, while the usefulness of the mRNA vaccines has a bigger and bigger question mark after it.

Advertisement

The Pentagon went all in on DEI, and how many soldiers died? How did the failures there lead to the wars in Ukraine and Gaza? How many promising officer candidates stayed out of the armed forces in order not to swear an oath to a guy wearing a dress? Can our fighting forces be brought back up to snuff quickly enough to meet the global challenges of China, Russia and a changing Middle East?

None of what the left did could have taken place without the specific aid of the bureaucracy and the media—including social media. The FBI went from the premier law enforcement agency to a Stasi-like enforcer. Talk about trans surgeries for minors on Facebook and win a visit from two plainclothes agents. The media also had to make Nancy Pelosi's stock riches disappear, for risk that we might notice that she and many others in Congress were becoming fabulously wealthy with their exemption from insider trading laws. Who could forget Twitter closing the account of anyone who dared to share a completely accurate description of Hunter Biden's laptop and its contents? We are currently experiencing the bureaucracy and the media working to convince us that millions of unvetted immigrants and strange drones in the skies are no big deals. Tony Blinken ran out and rented 51 former intelligence hotshots, who had sworn their allegiance to the United States. to lie and say that Hunter's laptop was invented in Putin's living room. They have not apologized for bamboozling the American people, and some of them are proud of what they did. Stalin would give them a kiss on the forehead: never apologize for your more unseemly actions.

The return of Donald Trump and the changing of the guard at the FBI, the Department of Justice, the Pentagon and elsewhere will hopefully have two positive effects. One is to get those bodies once again focused on serving the American people and advancing American (not Democratic) interests. And finally, maybe with new people in place who have the power of investigation and declassification, we will start to get a glimpse of how evil, narrow minded, selfish, and destructive the Obama-Pelosi-Biden-Donors mafia truly was.

There was a story in the early 1990's of a young East German couple who protested against American nuclear weapons in Europe. When the USSR fell and people were allowed to see their state files, the woman was flummoxed to learn that her long-haired hippie husband was a Stasi informant on her. I would not be surprised if we learn of similar acts of betrayal by many of those who ran the country for the past sixteen years.

1.12.26 What the National Archives Just Did Is a Total Scandal (2024-12-29 00:20)

There's no evidence Joe Biden enriched himself, say the liberal media. It's another declaration that quickly got gutted, skinned, and filleted because these people are wrong about everything. It's becoming amusing as hell. Whenever they take a firm stand like this, be prepared for these folks to be run over with a tank because we saw that happen this week.

CNN's Abby Phillip said, "I'm still waiting to see the proof of Joe Biden enriching himself. I take his brother and his son, perhaps." No, ma'am. Rep. Mike Lawler (R-NY) destroyed that narrative in less than a minute, going line-by-line about the layers the Biden crime family goes through via their shell companies where Joe Biden finally gets his cut of the takings. It's an elaborate pipeline, yes, but not one that's a true brainteaser if the media did their job, which they won't because they can't; they're too incompetent, biased, and perhaps a little mentally challenged:

NEW: CNN host abruptly ends segment after her defense of Joe Biden's crimes completely falls apart.

The National Archives finally released photos of Joe palling around with his business partners, who he claims he never met ever (via [3]NY Post):

America First Legal obtained photos from the National Archives & Records Administration showing then-Vice President Joe Biden introducing his son to Chinese leader Xi Jinping in China in 2013 when Hunter Biden was setting up shady business deals with his Chinese partners. [4]pic.twitter.com/x3eZchzeYD— Jerry Dunleavy IV ☐☐ (@JerryDunleavy) [5]December 24, 2024

The National Archives has finally released photos showing then-Vice President Biden meeting with two of first son Hunter Biden's Chinese government-linked business partners — again proving that the president lied about not interacting with his family's foreign patrons.

The cache of photos, released long after their potential political salience and days before Biden retires on Jan. 20, also show Chinese President Xi Jinping grinning as then-Vice President Biden introduced his son during the same December 2013 trip to Beijing.

The Xi-Hunter Biden encounter, which had not previously garnered much attention, appears to have been at a meal Hunter described in an email to his former associate Devon Archer as “pretty amazing” because his dad and China's powerful authoritarian leader “were supposed to spend 2hrs together [but it] stretched to 7hrs. I think they are in love.”

Xi was about two months into his ambitious “Belt and Road” foreign-influence and investment campaign — and a Chinese state-backed company aligned with that vision, BHR Partners, was in the process being co-launched by Hunter.

The newly released photos, which would have been politically explosive if they were released during the now-closed House impeachment inquiry into alleged Biden family corruption, show the elder Biden shaking hands with incoming BHR Partners CEO Jonathan Li and greeting the company's managing director Ming Xue.

A May 2017 email written by Biden family associate James Gilliar penciled in a 10 % cut for the "big guy" in reference to Joe Biden and another former family associate, Tony Bobulinski, said he spoke with Joe Biden the same month about the CEFC venture.

A further $5.1 million flowed directly to entities linked to Hunter and James Biden after Hunter wrote to a CEFC associate in July 2017 that he was "sitting here with my father" and expecting payment.

The CEFC venture focused in part on Chinese attempts to purchase US natural gas.

The fact that Joe Biden met with his son and brother James Biden's foreign associates throughout his vice presidency and in the years that followed has been established by witness testimony — including Hunter's own in February — though the president continued to deny it as he sought re-election.

Yeah, the National Archives throws a hissy over cocktail napkins and state dinner menus Donald Trump kept at Mar-a-Lago, setting off the FBI's ransacking of the president-elect's home in August of 2022. But they're totally fine hiding damning photos of Joe Biden and his Chinese associates.

What a crock. Isn't this the real scandal?

1.12.27 Top AG's Words Come Back to Haunt Her After Refusing to Comply With Trump's Deportation Plans (2024-12-29 00:23)

Arizona's Democrat Attorney General Kris Mayes has boldly declared she is unafraid to stand against President-elect Donald Trump's sweeping deportation plans, signaling her commitment to opposing more vigorous border enforcement. This stance reflects a growing divide between leaders prioritizing political correctness over national security and those advocating for stricter immigration policies. Critics argue that such opposition undermines federal efforts to combat illegal immigration and protect American communities, especially in a border state such as Arizona. Her remarks underscore the ongoing battle between state officials and federal immigration policies aimed at upholding the rule of law.

Speaking to the Guardian, Mayes said that any attempts to send Dreamers, beneficiaries of the Obama-era DACA program, back to their home countries would be crossing a "red line" and that she would not tolerate the incoming Trump Administration's plans to deport them. She threatened to do everything in her power to fight so-called family separation at the southern border legally or what she likes to call the construction of "deportation camps."

"Not on our soil," Mayes said, arguing that the Dreamers, or illegal aliens, are "part of the very fabric of our state and we will protect them."

Supporters of DACA— a controversial Obama-era program that grants temporary legal status and work permits to individuals brought to the U.S. illegally as children argue that it provides opportunities for young people who grew up in the U.S. to contribute to society. However, critics see it as an overreach of executive power that undermines immigration laws and incentivizes illegal immigration. Conservatives often stress that while compassion is essential, DACA bypasses Congress, creating a patchwork solution instead of addressing broader immigration reform or securing the southern border.

"I think the Supreme Court will ultimately see the merits of protecting them," Mayes said of the program. "We want to give the courts the opportunity to make the right decision here, and we'll be making very strong arguments on that proposition."

President-elect Donald Trump opposed DACA during his first term, but the Supreme Court stopped it in DHS v. University of California.

Pro-Trump lawyer Mike Davis [1]accused Mayes of obstructing Trump's immigration plans and "plotting to overturn the will of American voters." He threatened to send her to prison and "make political lives Hell" if she refused to comply with Trump's mandate.

1.12.28 Kevin O’Leary: Half of Canadians Agree With Trump’s Proposal to Join the United States (2024-12-29 00:29)

Canadian businessman and “Shark Tank” investor Kevin O’Leary, 70, said in an interview this week that half of Canadians support President-elect Donald Trump’s idea for Canada to become part of the United States.

Additionally, O’Leary proposed that the United States and Canada eliminate their border and form a united front against China and Russia.

This came after weeks of Trump stating that Canada should become America’s 51st state, including on Christmas Day in a post on Truth Social.

In the post, Trump wished “Merry Christmas” to “Governor Justin Trudeau of Canada, whose Citizens’ Taxes are far too high, but if Canada was to become our 51st State, their Taxes would be cut by more than 60 %, their businesses would immediately double in size, and they would be militarily protected like no other Country anywhere in the World.”

<https://truthsocial.com/@realDonaldTrump/113715171941661598/embed>

“There’s 41 million Canadians, basically the population of California, sitting on the world’s largest amounts of all resources, including the most important, energy and water. Canadians over the holidays the last two days have been talking about this. They want to hear more,” O’Leary said in an interview with Fox Business.

“And so there’s obviously a lot of issues and more details, but what this could be is the beginning of an economic union. Think about the power of combining the two economies, erasing the border between Canada and the United States and putting all that resource up to the northern borders where China and Russia are knocking on the door,” he added.

“So secure that, give a common currency, figure out taxes across the board, get everything trading both ways, create a new, almost EU-like passport. I like this idea and at least half of Canadians are interested. The problem is the government’s collapsing in Canada right now,” he continued.

“Nobody wants [Canadian Prime Minister Justin] Trudeau to negotiate this deal. I don’t want him doing it for me. So I’m going to go to Mar-a-Lago. I’ll start the narrative. The 41 million Canadians, I think most of them would trust me on this deal,” he concluded.

As Townhall [4]covered, Trump previously said that adding Canada to the U.S. would be a “great idea.”

“No one can answer why we subsidize Canada to the tune of over $100,000,000 a year? Makes no sense! Many Canadians want Canada to become the 51st State. They would save massively on taxes and military protection. I think it is a great idea. 51st State!!!” Trump wrote.

Advertisement

<https://truthsocial.com/@realDonaldTrump/113672861551554010/embed>

Before this, he wrote: “It was a pleasure to have dinner the other night with Governor Justin Trudeau of the Great State of Canada. I look forward to seeing the Governor again soon so that we may continue our in depth talks on Tariffs and Trade, the results of which will be truly spectacular for all!”

<https://truthsocial.com/@realDonaldTrump/113626786987358864/embed>

This remark came shortly after reports broke that Trump told Trudeau that if he has an issue with the tariffs that he plans to impose, Canada could [5]join the United States.

2.1.2 The National Nightmare Is Ending (2025-01-03 23:54)

Après Biden, “L’audace, l’audace, encore l’audace, toujours l’audace!”

To paraphrase mixed French 18th-century memorable quotations: After Biden, follows not the deluge, but now daring, and still more daring, and always more daring.

Why?

A combination of two self-evident truths.

[1]Joe Biden’s inept administration proved an ungodly disaster, not just for America but for the West as well, who looked abroad for a stronger America but found it weaker.

And second, Trump Invictus is now liberated—“In the fell clutch of circumstance /I have not winced nor cried aloud, /Under the bludgeonings of chance /My head is bloody, but unbowed.”

He is without worry over another election, or a discredited and defanged media (“so doves do peck the falcon’s piercing talons”), much less a third [2]Nancy Pelosi-contrived impeachment.

Instead, he stalks indomitable, after failed de-balloting capers, failed lawfare vendettas, and failed assassination attempts. To quote Shakespeare of his recent visit to Notre Dame and the once hostile Euro crowd who now mobbed him, “He doth bestride the narrow world /Like a Colossus, and we petty men /Walk under his huge legs and peep about /To find ourselves dishonorable graves.”

In sum, our weakest president is to be followed by our most audacious.

Biden's bumbling arrogance nearly destroyed the [3]American military in Kabul. It ruined Western deterrence. It showered the [4]creepy Taliban with a multibillion-dollar windfall arsenal.

His lies, his incompetence, and, yes, his narcissism demoralized Americans and our allies, but at least ensured he would never reach 50 % approval again.

What immediately followed from the Kabul nightmare was as bad or indeed worse: two theater-wide wars in Ukraine and the Middle East, appeasement of Iran, hammering of Israel, a nonexistent [5]U.S. border, 12 million illegal aliens, the [6]hyperinflation of staples, the weaponization of the executive branch, third-world lawfare, looting and shoplifting legitimized, spiking crime contextualized, and printing trillions of debased dollars normalized.

Biden sought to turn the once-preeminent U.S. military into a cruel cultural woke joke.

The trainwreck of the last four years was force-multiplied by Biden's own feebleness, masked by the most scandalous media-politico conspiracy of suppression of it in U.S. history.

But now there is a giddy sense that restoration and normalization are not just possible but on the horizon.

The truth now is set free, and it smothers the old lying denials about the [7]origins of COVID, about the truth of diversity/equity/inclusion, about the naked greed of the Biden family syndicate, about the dementia of Joe, about the chauvinism of three sexes, and about the joy and momentum of the fracking, gun-toting, McDonald's veteran and border hawk [8]Kamala Harris.

No one fears or listens to the now-defenestrated frauds and tiring dissimulators: the Bidens, a Fauci, Mayorkas, Garland, Milley, Austin, Jean-Pierre, Comey, Brennan, Clapper, or McCabe—and their old lies that Hunter is brilliant, Biden is fit as a field, no gain-in-function viruses, a bat caused COVID, the border is secure, Chinese army generals are more trustworthy than Trump, the laptop was Russian, Trump is a Putin puppet, and always their nauseating “I can't recall,” “I don't remember,” “I have no recollection,” and “I am not at liberty to say.”

Our allies are feeling more confident, our enemies scared.

The idea of an impending deterrent and reliable Trump administration has terrified Iran and helped collapse Syria. Israelis buoyant. Not so Hezbollah, Hamas, and the Houthis.

In anticipation, the dollar reigns, the stock market stays strong.

Even Trump's traditional enemies, whether on Wall Street, Silicon Valley, or in corporate board rooms are whispering that they secretly are delighted with their old nemesis's dream of more and cheaper energy, less government regulation and taxation, and confidence again that everything is now possible when a government says an exhilarant yes to dreams rather than a crabby no to them.

Suddenly the woke bullies are on the run. The porous border really can be closed; illegal alien gangs and criminals will be sent packing.

The Left now invokes no Logan Act. They are instead relieved that the president-elect is now the virtual president—and their guy is gone.

Biden yelps now that his sins were not doubling down on them and sinning even more when he had the chance.

In other words, the recently impossible is not just possible again, but likely!

Each of us, at least for this brief window of opportunity, again feels, "I am the master of my fate, I am the captain of my soul."

2.1.3 Germany's New Morgenthau Plan (2025-01-03 23:57)

Less than a year before the end of World War II, then-U.S. Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau drew up a nightmarish plan to punish postwar Germany.

After the serial 1870-1871 Franco-Prussian War, World War I, and World War II—along with the failed Versailles peace treaty of 1919—the Allies in World War II wanted to ensure there would never again be an aggressive Germany powerful enough to invade its neighbors.

When the so-called Morgenthau Plan was leaked to the press in September 1944, at first it was widely praised. After all, it would supposedly render Germany incapable of ever starting another world war in Europe.

The Daily Signal depends on the support of readers like you. [1]Donate now

Morgenthau certainly envisioned a Carthaginian peace, designed to ensure a permanently deindustrialized, unarmed, and pastoral Germany.

Postwar Germany would have resembled something akin to the ancient, pre-civilized frontier that the first-century AD historian Tacitus wrote about in his Germania.

The plan would have ensured that within six months of Germany's surrender, all of its industrial plants and equipment were to be dismantled.

The Ruhr, the renowned center of European industrial strength, was to be permanently neutered, starved of its energy, raw materials, and infrastructure.

After the war, the plan demanded virtual complete disarmament of Germany. Its once-feared armed forces were to be rendered nonexistent.

There were also promised massive reductions in Germany's borders. Various countries, such as the Soviet Union, Poland, and France, were to be given large slices of the old Third Reich.

Future German security would hinge only on the power and goodwill of the victorious United States and its allies.

When the dying Nazi Party got wind of the plan, Adolf Hitler's propaganda minister Joseph Goebbels had a field day. He screamed to Germans that they were all doomed to oblivion if they lost the war, even growing opponents of the Nazi Party.

Even many Americans were aghast at the plan.

Gen. George Marshall, the Army chief of staff, warned that its mere mention had galvanized German troops to fight to the end, increasing American casualties as they closed in on the German homeland.

Ex-President Herbert Hoover blasted the plan as inhumane. He feared mass starvation of the German people if they were reduced to a premodern, rural peasantry.

But once the victorious allies occupied a devastated Germany, witnessed its moonscape ruined by massive bombing and house-to-house fighting, and discovered that their "ally" Russia's Josef Stalin was ruthless and hellbent on turning all of Europe communist, the Harry Truman administration backed off the plan.

There is a tragic footnote to the aborted horrors of the Morgenthau Plan. Currently, Germany is doing to itself almost everything Morgenthau once dreamed of.

Its green delusions have shut down far too many of its nuclear, coal, and gas electrical generation plants.

Erratic solar and wind "sustainable energy" means that power costs are four times higher than on average in the United States.

Once-dominant European giants Volkswagen, BMW, and Mercedes are now bleeding customers and profits. Their own government's green and electric vehicle mandates ensure they will become globally uncompetitive.

The German economy actually shrank in 2023. And the diminished Ruhr can no longer save the German economy from its own utopian politicians.

The German military is all but disarmed and short thousands of recruits.

German industries do not produce enough ammunition, tanks, ships, and aircraft to equip even its diminished army, navy, and air force.

Just a few hundred miles from Germany in Ukraine, more than a million Ukrainians and Russians are dead, wounded, or missing—in the costliest European battle since the horrors of Stalingrad.

Yet the once postwar German dynamo nation now lacks the manpower, munitions, and money to aid Ukraine in any meaningful way against an ascendant Russian invader.

More than 1 million immigrants have entered the country illegally, the vast majority of them from the Middle East. Many of them are hostile to European values and culture, as recent terrorist killings have shown. One-fifth of the population was not born in Germany.

The shrinking German people are growing angry, divided, and depressed. Their 1.4 % fertility rate is one of the lowest in the Western world.

A tragic irony now abounds.

After World War II, the Truman administration rejected the notion of a pastoral, deindustrialized, and insecure Germany as a cruel prescription for poverty, hunger, and depopulation.

But now the German people themselves voted for their own updated version of Morgenthau's plan—as they willingly reduced factory hours, curtailed power and fuel supplies, and struggled with millions of illegal aliens and porous borders.

Germans accept that they have no military to speak of that could protect their insecure borders—without a United States-led NATO.

Eighty years ago, Germany's former conquerors rejected wrecking the defeated nation as too harsh. But now Germany is willfully pastoralizing, disarming, deindustrializing—and destroying—itsself.

2.1.4 Law Professor Nails Why Judge Merchan Is Sentencing Trump on January 10 (2025-01-04 19:46)

President-elect Donald J. Trump will be sentenced on January 10, but there will be no jail time, not that was ever a concern. The laws and statutes got so contorted that even CNN's Elie Honig, the network's chief legal analyst and former assistant US attorney, couldn't defend it, aptly calling it a total disaster of a case. In essence, Trump only got convicted because Manhattan District Attorney Alvin Bragg and his team perverted the rule of law.

CNN Senior Legal Analyst Describes How The Trump Conviction Was A Political Hit Job

1. "The judge donated money... in plain violation of a rule prohibiting New York judges from making political donations—to a pro-Biden, anti-Trump political operation."

2. Alvin Bragg... [1]<https://t.co/PZV5x3EcaB> [2]pic.twitter.com/OMdEEbrCMX—KanekoaTheGreat (@KanekoaTheGreat) [3]January 3, 2025

Law professor Jonathan Turley nailed why Judge Juan Merchan wants to get this wrapped on January 10. It's to give the liberal media the talking point they've salivated over for months: Trump is a convicted felon, and now he's being sworn in as one on Inauguration Day:

...The sentence will finalize the case and allow for an appeal. However, it would also label the President-elect a convicted felon just before he is sworn into office. It is the final cathartic act for lawfare warriors...— Jonathan Turley (@JonathanTurley)

[4]January 3, 2025

...we will also finally be able to see an appeal of his case. While there are low expectations for the New York court system, the sentencing will allow the full array of alleged errors by Merchan to be placed before appellate judges.— Jonathan Turley (@JonathanTurley) [5]January 3, 2025

It's a consolation prize for the anti-Trump lawyers who tried repeatedly and failed to nail Mr. Trump. Bragg's team even tried to postpone sentencing until 2029, which was laughably transparent. That was never going to happen. Then again, Turley added that when an appeal is filed, which is likely, all of Merchan's reported misdeeds will be laid bare. Trump's communication team didn't hold back, with Steven Cheung, incoming White House communications director, taking a blowtorch to the judge:

Today's order by the deeply conflicted, Acting Justice Merchan in the Manhattan DA Witch Hunt is a direct violation of the Supreme Court's Immunity decision and other longstanding jurisprudence. This lawless case should have never been brought and the Constitution demands that it be immediately dismissed. President Trump must be allowed to continue the Presidential Transition process and to execute the vital duties of the presidency, unobstructed by the remains of this or any remnants of the Witch Hunts. There should be no sentencing, and President Trump will continue fighting against these hoaxes until they are all dead.

The best part is that no one cares that he's a convicted felon. No one. He won. Kamala lost, and the Democrats lost. Deal with it.

We do not care because the actual crook is leaving, half brain-dead, but he's leaving.

2.1.5 One Dem Had a Stupid and Grossly Transparent Meltdown After the House Speakership Vote (2025-01-04 19:48)

Rep. Mike Johnson (R-LA) was elected Speaker of the House, though there was a moment where it looked like it could go multiple rounds, feeding the narrative of GOP disunity. Alas, that didn't happen. The chaos over Kevin McCarthy was not repeated, as Johnson was elected on the first ballot. With the theatrics cut short, the House can start formal business, starting with the certification of the 2024 results on January 6.

The GOP Civil War is in full swing.

And it's only Day 1.— Hakeem Jeffries (@RepJeffries) [1]January 3, 2025

Last we checked, you didn't win either.— ForAmerica (@ForAmerica) [2]January 3, 2025

Del. Stacey Plaskett of the Virgin Islands wouldn't remain silent, voicing outrage over her inability to vote in this contest before going on about America's colonies problem. Shut up, lady. You know the rules. The clerk reread them, so take a sit. No one cares. Also, last time I checked, I'm pretty sure the American territories don't want statehood (via [3]Fox News):

lol...Democrats really thought they could elect the Speaker they wanted by having non-voting delegates from territories participate. [6]<https://t.co/AoIBwAEuxM>— Bonchie (@bonchieredstate) [7]January 3, 2025

U.S. Virgin Islands Delegate Stacey Plaskett protested the nonvoting status of the Virgin Islands and other U.S. territories Friday— sparking mixed reactions after she accused the U.S. in House floor remarks of having a "colonies problem."

The exchange occurred after Plaskett, a Democrat, stood after the first roll call vote to note what she said was a parliamentary inquiry.

Plaskett then asked the House clerk why she and other delegates from the Northern Mariana Islands, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and the District of Columbia were not asked to participate in the House speaker vote.

Combined, she noted that the delegates excluded represent some four million Americans and what she said was "the largest per capita of veterans in this country."

Speaking over Republican cries of "order!" that could be heard in the background, the House clerk then explained to Plaskett that delegates-elect and the resident commissioner-elect are not qualified to vote in the House speaker election.

"Representatives-elect are the only individuals qualified to vote in the election of a speaker, as provided in Section 36 of the House Rules and Manual," the clerk said.

2.1.6 Bowl's Moment of Silence and National Anthem (2025-01-04 19:50)

All that can be said about this move during the Allstate Sugar Bowl is that ESPN got caught doing ESPN things. The college football playoff game between the Notre Dame Fighting Irish and the Georgia Bulldogs was held in New Orleans, postponed after 14 people were killed in an ISIS-inspired terror attack committed by Shamsud-Din Jabbar, 42, a Texas native, who used a Ford truck to run over pedestrians on a crowded Bourbon Street before opening fire on other bystanders. Police killed him.

The game was supposed to be held on New Year's Day but postponed until Thursday afternoon. There was a moment of silence held for the victims of this tragedy, along with the national anthem, but ESPN opted not to broadcast (via [1]NY Post):

This was a travesty that [2]@espn skipped one of the most moving and nationally significant moments of the [3]@SugarBowlNola. The anthem and moment of silence at the Dome was beautiful. [4]<https://t.co/QYxQXjCRym> [5]pic.twitter.com/vgoriBxiLW— Raymond Arroyo (@RaymondArroyo) [6]January 3, 2025

Wow [7]@espn didn't air the national anthem or the moment of silence for the New Orleans terror attack victims per [8]@burackbobby_ and they continue to label the terror attack a "truck attack" on screen. [9]<https://t.co/QWmOGZbKm3>— Clay Travis (@ClayTravis) [10]January 3, 2025

It was my distinct honor to have coached in 3 Sugar Bowls during my coaching career. American sports, and especially college football, have always been a patriotic tradition that brings ALL AMERICANS together.

Unfortunately, ESPN (who is owned by Disney) gave in to the woke...— Coach Tommy Tuberville (@SenTuberville) [11]January 3, 2025

All eyes were on ESPN on Thursday as the Sugar Bowl took place a little more than 24 hours after an ISIS-inspired terrorist created mayhem on Bourbon Street in New Orleans that left 14 people dead and injured dozens more.

But noticeably absent from the pregame broadcast on the main network was the national anthem and the moment of silence held in honor of the tragedy that occurred about 1 mile away from the Caesars Superdome where Notre Dame and Georgia squared off.

The exclusion of both moments from the ESPN telecast angered some football fans and led to criticism of the network on social media.

“SportsCenter,” which had served as the pregame show due to the unusual circumstances, had wrapped on an interview with Tim Tebow and went to a commercial break before the moment of silence and returned in the middle of the anthem, “making it awkward to cut it” at that moment, the source explained.

ESPN did open its broadcast of the Sugar Bowl with a pre-recorded message from President Joe Biden, and play-by-play broadcaster Sean McDonough spoke about the tragedy in his open while a montage of fans, police and the city of New Orleans played on the screen.

“SEC Nation,” which airs on the ESPN-owned SEC Network, was broadcast live from the Superdome and aired the moment of silence and national anthem in their entirety.

Still, not airing the tributes on ESPN following the tragedy stirred a lot of emotions for fans online.

Another unforced error by the network.

Here's the SEC Network's broadcast of the moment:

The pregame ceremony at the Sugar Bowl was beautiful.
Roman – a New Orleans icon – and I were quite moved. The moment of silence for those lost and hurting. The National Anthem. The cheers for our nation.
You pray for the right words to convey the emotion.

2.1.7 The West Does Not Even Know That It Is Committing Suicide (2025-01-04 19:52)

Certain trends threaten the very existence of Western nation states that we have taken for granted for the past several hundred years.

A friend once told me a story that occurred just prior to the 1967 Six Day War. Israel took a group of officers and tasked them with determining what Israel needs to do to win the upcoming war with Egypt, Syria and other Arab states. Egypt's Nasser had been on the warpath and the only question was when hostilities would begin. The officers determined that the most important task for Israel was to wipe out Egypt's air force. Without air cover, all of the invading armies would be open to attack. Israel determined the optimal moment to attack and preemptively wiped out Egypt's Russian-supplied air force. The outcome was that after six days, Israel had added the Sinai peninsula, the West Bank, and the Golan Heights.

If the U.S. were to take a bunch of geniuses and similarly lock them in a room and ask what the West needs to do to remain viable, it would probably make some very important observations and suggestions. Two might include the following:

The first would be to get birth rates up. One of the major drivers for bringing in large numbers of illegal aliens and causing social instability, increased crime and lower wages is because the locals are not producing enough kids. All Western countries other than Israel are well under the accepted 2.1 children per woman for the population size to remain as is. In the U.S., all of the growth in population is due to uncontrolled immigration. More people entered the U.S. via the southern border than were born in U.S. hospitals last year. Let that sink in. Governments have very few real buttons to push to make the people bring more babies into the world. Sure, they can offer tax breaks and subsidize education and other expenses. But the prospect of not sleeping for a few years and changing one's life patterns may simply outweigh any potential handouts. Increased religiosity tends to lead to more children. Ultraorthodox Bnei Brak is one of the poorest cities in Israel and it also is home to the largest average family size in the country. The final way to get the people to make more children is to create an economic and security environment where people feel comfortable bringing more children into the world. The parents' income can cover expenses and war and famine seem distant. The Baby Boom period included incredible post-war confidence.

Another recommendation is dealing with Islam. I remember after 9/11, there were discussions as to whether American Muslims themselves could police their brethren to prevent "radicalization" and future attacks. Based on continuing attacks by Islamic terrorists and the never-ending anti-Israel and anti-Western protests that often turn violent, the answer is no. Like most religions, Islam would appear not to be monolithic. I can attest that when we traveled to Dubai last year, we were treated with respect and kindness. Israelis are not welcome in many Muslim countries, and even the ones that do have relations with Israel are often quite unfriendly. Egypt and Jordan have never been major vacation destinations for Israelis, except for southern Sinai which has very good scuba diving. Israelis used to flock to Turkey; today, there are no flights between the countries, and their leader is Hamas' biggest cheerleader. What will be the future of Islam and the West?

Since Islamic institutions cannot regulate their members to prevent harm to other Americans or Westerners, then the government will have to step up its game to keep its citizenry safe:

1. Eject anyone from a Muslim country who in any way violates his or her visa—from jaywalking on up.

2 Eject anyone from a Muslim country who participates in protests demanding Sharia replace the local laws and customs. Foreigners do not benefit from Constitutional protections on freedom of speech. Anyone found to support “intifada revolution” or the like should be given an expedited one-way ticket back home.

3. Local Muslim populations need to be monitored and infiltrated by law enforcement. While the U.S. has been a bastion of freedom of religion, it has never faced a religion that has expressly stated its desire to destroy the democratic nature of the Republic. No branch of Christianity or Judaism has as a plank demanding the takeover of the U.S. government and converting it into a religious theocracy run solely according to its religious tenets. Tough times require tough measures. My grandparents in New York, as alien residents, had to have their papers on them at all times. On the Sabbath, when one is generally prohibited from carrying things outdoors, my late grandfather put his documents in the band of his fedora in the event that he was stopped by a cop.

The same suggestions for the U.S. would normally apply to Europe. But Europe is lost. It’s like those few seconds when we saw the second plane approaching the World Trade Center tower. The impact had not happened yet, but everyone knew what was about to happen. Europe could eject its problematic Islamists and encourage the pursuit of traditional values. But as we see in England, the Labor government will not even allow for an investigation into the recruiting and sexual abuse of hundreds of thousands of white British girls at the hands of Pakistani men. Europe does not have the moral fortitude or belief in its own past and institutions to fight for its future. Le Pen, Reform and AfD will all come to power, but through a combination of too little/too late and EU bureaucratic hurdles, the countries will not be able to right the ship in time. I am not a prophet and I hope that I am wrong. But I think that Europe is too far gone. Look at the violence and hatred in Germany against the locals on New Year’s Eve. It will only get worse as the countries don’t have the internal fortitude to throw out trouble makers and use deadly force to end the rioting. The “right-wing” Meloni in Italy has not stopped the boats or ejected illegal aliens from her country.

The U.S. can still change course. It will have to remove Muslims who wish to make the U.S. a Sharia state, and it will have to monitor Muslim citizens and institutions. There is no alternative. It does not sound very American to have the FBI putting listening devices in American mosques or educational institutions. But burying 3,000 citizens killed by Islamic terrorists does not sound very American either. It’s either one or the other.

Islamic supremacism will not change. Just last week, Recep Erdogan said that Jerusalem still belongs to Turkey because it was part of the Ottoman Empire so many years ago. As long as there are Islamic supremacists, then there will be violence to gain control of the West. Either we can fight it or we had better start learning the Koran.

2.1.8 Selective Force, Strategic Restraint: Unpacking Trump's Jacksonian Foreign Policy (2025-01-09 00:07)

Have you noticed recently that [1]Donald Trump has both issued threats to our existential enemies abroad and that he's called for peace as well?

In other words, he's told Hamas: "You better let the hostages go by the time that I'm president or else."

And yet he's also said, at the same time, we don't want these 2,000 Americans in [2]Syria. It's a mess. The country's destroyed. Get them out before they get killed.

This brings up kind of a dichotomy that's been discussed: Is the [Make America Great Again] agenda and Donald Trump in particular isolationist? That's what the accusation is, that under no circumstances will we slay dragons abroad, looking for them. Or is he a neoconservative, and he wants to intervene everywhere. And I think the answer, of course, is neither.

It was Walter Russell Mead, a columnist for The Wall Street Journal, who coined—he didn't coin it—he rebooted the word "Jacksonian" in reference to Andrew Jackson, the hero of the battle of New Orleans, a [two-term] American president. And what that really means is that America will be second to no one, preeminent military abroad. We will be no better friend to our allies and no worse enemy to our enemies.

More importantly, we don't have to be perfect to be good abroad. We just act as Americans, and if we're better than the alternative, that's fine.

How does this boil down, though, to actual policy. After all, Donald Trump at one point was reported to have told [Russian President] [3]Vladimir Putin, "Don't go into [4]Ukraine or I'm going to look at the Kremlin"—meaning, he might even attack the Kremlin. And now he's saying, "This is one of our endless wars and we want to get out of it."

So how do you square that circle of restoring deterrence lost during the [5]Biden administration and yet not getting bogged down in nation-building and ground wars in the Middle East? And

I think the answer is partly to be found in his first term.

Remember what he did? During the Cold War of some 75 years, we didn't really ever kill Russian soldiers. We may have, as pilots, as Russian pilots were flying in North Korea or Vietnam, but not knowingly and deliberately. Yet, when the Wagner group, some 500 soldiers strong, swarmed an American installation in Syria, they were devastated by U.S. airpower.

He did kill [Abu Bakr al-Baghdadi], the creator of ISIS. He killed Qassem Soleimani—the greatest Iranian terrorist, Gen. Soleimani—in the Middle East that was the architect of supplying weapons to Hezbollah, Hamas, and the Houthis.

And he also put a maximum pressure policy against Iran. But, but, he did not get in a war, even when he threatened North Korea.

So, what is the MAGA approach to foreign policy? It's Jacksonianism. He's a Jacksonian ... that is, he builds up the military to ensure that it can deter anybody, but he does it not to use it, but to not use it.

Unfortunately, he's inherited a world that has lost U.S. deterrence after the Kabul [Afghanistan] fiasco, the greatest military humiliation ... in American history, but surely in the last 50 years since we had helicopters flying off the [U.S.] Embassy in Saigon in 1975.

Then we had the Middle East fiasco, where some days we supported Israel; some days we didn't. Some days we said that Hamas, we can negotiate, some days we didn't, we wanted to get back in the Iran deal. It was a complete mess, complete mess.

So, when Donald Trump takes office on Jan. 20, he is going to have to restore deterrence to make a calmer world. But he can't get in an endless bogged-down war. So, he has to be very careful, because that is one of the keystone premises of the Make America Great Again movement.

We do not want another Afghanistan, two decades. We do not want 10 years in Iraq. We do not want to create chaos in Libya. We don't want to be in the tribal infighting in Syria. But we want the world at peace. And so, I think, what we should look for is that, at particular places, at particular times, when the use of force favors the United States; that is, without getting in house-to-house fighting or terrorism, tit for tat, in the streets of Baghdad ... type of endless engagements, we will use overwhelming force to send a signal that we can destroy you without having to fight your type of war on your ground.

And I don't think you'll have to do very much of it to restore U.S. calm and deterrence. And it will not be neoconservative interventionism, and it won't be isolationism. It will be Donald Trump-MAGA Jacksonianism. Thank you.

2.1.9 L.A. Water Chief Knew Fire Hydrants Were Broken, Yet Earns Nearly $800K Annually (2025-01-12 22:25)

In yet another example of mismanagement and government waste, the head of Los Angeles' water department, who was reportedly aware that crucial fire hydrants were out of service, is pulling in a staggering nearly $800,000 annually. While L.A. residents face increasing dangers from the wildfires ravaging the city— with many who have already lost their homes and 12 dead— the city's water chief appears more focused on lining his pockets than ensuring the safety of the public. Critics argue that this glaring oversight is emblematic of local government's broader incompetence. Top officials continue to earn hefty salaries while failing to address basic public safety issues.

According to a new report, Los Angeles Department of Water and Power (LADWP) CEO Janisse Quiñone was fully aware that the Santa Ynez Reservoir was offline and fire hydrants were not operating. However, despite the city stretching its budget to "attract private-sector talent," it appointed Janisse Quiñones as CEO of the Department of Water and Power (LADWP) in May, offering her a $750,000 salary—nearly double what her predecessor earned.

The Los Angeles Fire Department (LAFD) blames Quiñones for leaving fire hydrants empty and disconnecting the Santa Ynez Reservoir in the Pacific Palisades for several months.

According to the Daily Mail, this is [1]not the first time Quiñones has been involved in a scandal.

Quiñones past employer is also linked to fire scandals. She was previously a top executive at electricity company PG &E, which went bankrupt over liability for several massive wildfires in California. She served as senior vice president at Pacific Gas & Electric (PG &E) from 2021 to 2023. The utility company's power lines sparked the second-largest wildfire in California history, Dixie, in 2021. Its involvement in the 2018 Camp Fire cost PG &E a $13.5 billion legal settlement.

The firm's liability for allegedly causing fires was estimated at $30 billion when it filed for bankruptcy in 2018. It exited bankruptcy in 2020.

Sources told DailyMail.com that since her hiring at LADWP, Quiñones oversaw the shutdown and emptying of a reservoir in the Pacific Palisades during brushfire season. The shutdown meant firefighters battling the current Palisades Fire ran out of water faster, experts say.

2.1.10 The Bible and the Schools (2025-01-12 22:26)

Irony of ironies. There was an attempt to ban the Bible from school libraries in a conservative state because of a law against risqué content in school books.

The Mirror out of the UK [1]reports: "A Texas school district has reportedly been forced to remove copies of the Bible after a new state law banned books that were 'sexually explicit.' It was revealed in an email from Canyon Independent School District Superintendent Darryl Flusche, that the holy book had been deemed unsuitable due to 'sexually explicit material.'"

It clearly appears that school officials are trying to play "gotcha" with opponents of sexually explicit schoolbooks. The Mirror added, "Several parents were reportedly furious with the news. During a school board meeting earlier [in December 2024], Canyon ISD parent Regina Kiehne told school officials it 'seems absurd to me that the Good Book was thrown out with the bad books.”

The [2]blowback was so strong, school officials retreated from their guileful position in the face of widespread opposition.

I’m glad to hear that some of the school districts in Texas allow the Bible on school property at all. But it’s a shame that ever since the Supreme Court [3]ruled in the Abington v. Schempp case of 1963, many school districts have banned the Good Book altogether from the schools (while at the same time often allowing all manner of LGBTQ pornography).

In Schempp, the court declared as unconstitutional use of the Bible for devotional purposes in the classroom. But they added that the Bible has its place in a well-rounded education.[4]

[5]Said the majority of the justices: “It certainly may be said that the Bible is worthy of study for its literary and historic qualities. Nothing we have said here indicates that such study of the Bible or of religion, when presented objectively as part of a secular program of education, may not be effected consistently with the First Amendment.”

For decades, many public school systems have systematically gone way beyond what the Supreme Court decided. Personally I think many of those Supreme Court decisions, such as Schempp, were wrongly decided. They grew out of a bias in favor of secularism and opposed to religion. Frankly, this country was founded by Christians for religious freedom, which they generously offered to other groups.

The irony of the Bible being controversial in the schools is that this is the book that helped create the educational system in America.

When you trace back education in our country, you see the Bible was the chief motivating factor. It was so that people could read the Bible for themselves that schools were started in the first place.

The first law regarding education in America is nicknamed “the Old Deluder Satan Act.” The Puritans, the founders of Boston, wanted their children to learn how to read so they could read the Scriptures for themselves.

The act explicitly states that this was a counter-measure against the devil, who wants people to remain ignorant of the Word of God.

This 1647 Act [6]states: “It being one chief project of that old deluder, Satan, to keep men from the knowledge of the Scriptures...and that Learning may not be buried in the graves of our fore-fathers in Church and Commonwealth, the Lord assisting our endeavors: it is therefore ordered... [that every township] shall then forthwith appoint one within their town to teach all such children as shall resort to him to write and read.”

The children even learned their ABCs with Bible lessons. The widely used New England Primer [7]taught: “A-In Adam’s fall, we sinned all. B-thy life to mend, the Bible tend. C-Christ crucified, for sinners died.”

The original colleges and universities were started to train ministers of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. Harvard’s original [8]motto (in Latin) was “Truth for Christ and the Church.” The first president of Princeton, Rev, Jonathan Dickinson, [9]said, “Cursed be all learning contrary to the cross of Christ.” Except for Cornell (founded 200 years after Harvard), all of the Ivy League schools were explicitly Christian.

And on it goes.

Founding father and Declaration of Independence signer Dr. Benjamin Rush [10]declared, “The only foundation for a useful education in a republic is to be laid in RELIGION....Without this, there can be no virtue, and without virtue there can be no liberty, and liberty is the object and life of all republican governments. . . . the religion I mean to recommend in this place is the religion of JESUS CHRIST.” [emphasis his]

Dr. Rush also [11]warned of the consequences when schools ignore teaching the Bible: “I lament that we waste so much time and money in punishing crimes and take so little pains to prevent them.”We need more Bible in the schools, including the public schools, not less.

2.1.11 Selective Force, Strategic Restraint: Unpacking Trump's Jacksonian Foreign Policy (2025-01-12 22:27)

Have you noticed recently that [1]Donald Trump has both issued threats to our existential enemies abroad and that he's called for peace as well?

In other words, he's told Hamas: "You better let the hostages go by the time that I'm president or else."

And yet he's also said, at the same time, we don't want these 2,000 Americans in [2]Syria. It's a mess. The country's destroyed. Get them out before they get killed.

This brings up kind of a dichotomy that's been discussed: Is the [Make America Great Again] agenda and Donald Trump in particular isolationist? That's what the accusation is, that under no circumstances will we slay dragons abroad, looking for them. Or is he a neoconservative, and he wants to intervene everywhere. And I think the answer, of course, is neither.

It was Walter Russell Mead, a columnist for The Wall Street Journal, who coined—he didn't coin it—he rebooted the word "Jacksonian" in reference to Andrew Jackson, the hero of the battle of New Orleans, a [two-term] American president. And what that really means is that America will be second to no one, preeminent military abroad. We will be no better friend to our allies and no worse enemy to our enemies.

More importantly, we don't have to be perfect to be good abroad. We just act as Americans, and if we're better than the alternative, that's fine.

How does this boil down, though, to actual policy. After all, Donald Trump at one point was reported to have told [Russian President] [3]Vladimir Putin, "Don't go into [4]Ukraine or I'm going to look at the Kremlin"—meaning, he might even attack the Kremlin. And now he's saying, "This is one of our endless wars and we want to get out of it."

So how do you square that circle of restoring deterrence lost during the [5]Biden administration and yet not getting bogged down in nation-building and ground wars in the Middle East? And I think the answer is partly to be found in his first term.

Remember what he did? During the Cold War of some 75 years, we didn't really ever kill Russian soldiers. We may have, as pilots, as Russian pilots were flying in North Korea or Vietnam, but not knowingly and deliberately. Yet, when the Wagner group, some 500 soldiers strong, swarmed an American installation in Syria, they were devastated by U.S. airpower.

He did kill [Abu Bakr al-Baghdadi], the creator of ISIS. He killed Qassem Soleimani—the greatest Iranian terrorist, Gen. Soleimani—in the Middle East that was the architect of supplying weapons to Hezbollah, Hamas, and the Houthis.

And he also put a maximum pressure policy against Iran. But, but, he did not get in a war, even when he threatened North Korea.

So, what is the MAGA approach to foreign policy? It's Jacksonianism. He's a Jacksonian ... that is, he builds up the military to ensure that it can deter anybody, but he does it not to use it, but to not use it.

Unfortunately, he's inherited a world that has lost U.S. deterrence after the Kabul [Afghanistan] fiasco, the greatest military humiliation ... in American history, but surely in the last 50 years since we had helicopters flying off the [U.S.] Embassy in Saigon in 1975.

Then we had the Middle East fiasco, where some days we supported Israel; some days we didn't. Some days we said that Hamas, we can negotiate, some days we didn't, we wanted to get back in the Iran deal. It was a complete mess, complete mess.

So, when Donald Trump takes office on Jan. 20, he is going to have to restore deterrence to make a calmer world. But he can't get in an endless bogged-down war. So, he has to be very careful, because that is one of the keystone premises of the Make America Great Again movement.

We do not want another Afghanistan, two decades. We do not want 10 years in Iraq. We do not want to create chaos in Libya. We don't want to be in the tribal infighting in Syria. But we want the world at peace. And so, I think, what we should look for is that, at particular places, at particular times, when the use of force favors the United States; that is, without getting in house-to-house fighting or terrorism, tit for tat, in the streets of Baghdad ... type of endless engagements, we will use overwhelming force to send a signal that we can destroy you without having to fight your type of war on your ground.

And I don't think you'll have to do very much of it to restore U.S. calm and deterrence. And it will not be neoconservative interventionism, and it won't be isolationism. It will be Donald Trump-MAGA Jacksonianism. Thank you.

2.1.12 California Inferno Was 'Preventable.' Blame Malfeasance of Newsom, Bass for Catastrophe. (2025-01-12 22:29)

As I'm speaking on a Wednesday night, there have been 15,000 acres, 1,000 structures destroyed. Nobody knows how many people are killed or missing. And how do we characterize this? Everybody's talking about the Santa Ana winds, climate change—I mean everybody, the people in power.

But it was preventable. And once it started, this fire, it could have been assuaged. You could have had it lessened, that the severity didn't have to be as catastrophic. So, I would characterize it as a [1]DEI-[2]Green New Deal hydrogen bomb. It's something out of "Dante's Inferno."

And what I mean by that is, it's a systems breakdown, a civilizational collapse. When you look at the people in charge, [California Gov.] [3]Gavin Newsom flew in, to sort of do these performance-art stunts, but he has systematically ensured that water out of the Sacramento River and the watershed of Northern California would go out to the sea, rather than into the aqueduct, so Los Angeles didn't have sufficient amounts of water.

He bragged not very long ago that he blew up four dams on the Klamath River. They provided 80,000 homes with clean hydroelectric power. They offered recreation, flood control, irrigation. He blew them up.

California's fire management, whether we look at the Paradise Fire or the Aspen Fire near where I'm speaking, it destroyed 60 million trees. We have no timber industry in California. [Newsom's] dismantled it.

We don't clean the forest. We don't let loggers come in and have a viable livelihood by harvesting trees. It's sort of considered natural to let these things burn or to at least create the conditions in which they will inevitably be burned.

It's almost as if we don't like humans. We worry about grubs and worms and birds and the ecosystem.

The second breakdown was the mayor, Karen Bass, was in [4]Africa. You tell me why the mayor of the third-largest city in the United States at fire season, when she had been warned and warned for days on end that the Santa Ana winds were up to 100 miles an hour in the evening, and there was a danger of fire, and she goes off to Africa for the inauguration of the president of Ghana.

With all due respect, Mayor, but who cares? You have an obligation to the 6 million people of greater Los Angeles. And then we have the fire chief. I don't really care that she's LGBTQ, I don't care [about] any of that. All I do care is her emphases. She's been bragging for the last two years that her goal was to make sure [the Fire Department] was diverse and inclusive.

That can be good if it's competent. But when you announce that 70 % of your hiring will not be meritocratic, but will be based on diversity, equity, inclusion, then you're not putting the interest of your constituents first.

There were not even enough, there wasn't enough water pressure in Pacific Palisades. Pacific Palisades is not where I live. It's one of the wealthiest, most exclusive neighborhoods in the United States. If they don't have water, then no one's going to get water, believe me.

There's not enough insurance. There were famous actors that didn't have insurance. Why? Because industry is overregulated, it's fraught with people who make fraudulent claims, and the insurance industry knows that California is hostile to it, but more importantly that it will never clean up its forest or take preventive, time-tried, ancient protocols to lessen the dangers of fire.

And so put it all together, whether it's a deliberate policy to not store water, not preserve water. Last year was one of the wettest years that we've had. We've had three out of the last four years have been very wet. We had a huge snowpack. We had rivers that were running in 19th-century fashion, but out to the sea to save the delta smelt.

So, it was a total systems collapse from the idea of not spending money on irrigation, storage, water, fire prevention, force management, a viable insurance industry, a DEI hierarchy. You put it all together and it's something like a DEI-Green New Deal hydrogen bomb.

Gavin Newsom was fiddling, as he's almost Nero Newsom. And this has been something that is just unimaginable, this system's breakdown.

And to finish, what we're seeing in California is a state with 40 million people. And yet the people who run it feel that it should return to a 19th-century pastoral condition. They are decivilizing the state, and deindustrializing the state, and defarming the state, but they're not telling the 40 million people that their lifestyles will have to revert back to the 19th century when you had no protection from fire, you didn't have enough water in California, you didn't have enough power, you didn't pump oil.

So, we are deliberately making these decisions not to develop energy, not to develop a timber industry, not to protect the insurance industry, not to protect houses and property.

And we're doing it in almost a purely nihilistic fashion. And Karen Bass should resign. She came to the airport, back from Africa. She had nothing to say. She was confronted at the airport: "Why were you in Africa? Why did you cut the fire department?"

They cut the fire department by almost $18 million. They gave fire protective equipment to Ukraine's first responders, and she had nothing to say. She had nothing to say because she couldn't say anything.

I don't want to be too pessimistic or bleak tonight, but this is one of the most alarming symptoms of a society gone mad, and if this continues, and if this were to spread to other states, we would become a Third World country if we're not in parts already.

2.1.13 America and Europe Can Hang Together—or Hang Separately (2025-01-12 22:30)

Consider these European and American binaries.

On Dec. 20, a terrorist, Taleb Al-Abdul Mohsen, rammed his SUV into a Christmas crowd in Magdeburg, Germany. He killed six pedestrians and injured 299 others.

Eleven days later, on New Year's Eve in New Orleans, Louisiana, Shamsud-Din Bahar Jabar smashed his pickup into a festive crowd. He killed 15 and hurt more than 35.

Germany's fertility rate is scarcely above 1.4—about average for a shrinking European Union. About 20 % of the country is now foreign-born, a record high.

American fertility has precipitously dived to 1.6. The foreign-born now represent 15 % of the American resident population, the highest in both actual numbers (50 million) and percentages in history.

The German military is a shell of its former self, with fewer than 200,000 soldiers and a shortage of almost all types of weapons.

The U.S. military, after being humiliated in Afghanistan, is currently down some 40,000-plus recruits. It faces shortages of antitank weapons, artillery shells, ships, and logistic support.

Germany may finally manage to spend 2 % of its gross domestic product on defense. The United States is heading downward below 3 %—the lowest in more than 80 years since the Great Depression.

Last year, the German economy shrank. This year, it will scarcely grow, in part because of shortages of affordable fossil fuels.

Germans pay four times what Americans on average do for electricity. Yet the Trump administration has promised an oil and natural gas renaissance, hoping to expand both production and exports with envisioned new pipelines and liquefied natural gas terminals.

In sum, the U.S. is beginning to mimic the pathologies of Europe—and yet in the next four years, renewal could help slow the decline of both.

Both face shrinking and aging populations. Both either cannot or will not control their borders, despite popular protests. Both suffer from woke political correctness and are pushing back.

The proverbial people of both nations want smaller government—and more freedom of expression and less woke. They insist on less and legal-only immigration and secure borders.

They vote for cheaper energy and fewer regulations.

Europeans and Americans alike want more meritocracy and fewer fixations on race and gender.

In the chaos of the postmodern 21st century, Europe and the U.S. nevertheless are still likely to share the same enemies and friends.

Both resent the asymmetrical Chinese approach to global commerce, based on a mercantilism that would never allow Europe and the United States to treat China as it does both.

The Europeans and the Americans are both worried about a vastly expanding conventional and nuclear Chinese military.

Neither wants Iran to develop nuclear-tipped missiles with ranges to hit the capitals of both. They do not want Russian President Vladimir Putin to re-create the former Soviet Union's borders.

Europe, as a rule, loves Democrats as kindred quasi-socialists. But privately, many Europeans assume their own security and prosperity do better when America is governed by conservatives.

In the past, Europe has not been a fan of Donald Trump, both as president and as a pre- and post-presidency candidate.

They fear that he is an isolationist, insufficiently diplomatic, not fully supportive of NATO, or too tariff-happy for their tastes—and are scared of his art-of-the-deal trolling to prompt wake-up calls.

But 2025 is certainly not 2017 or even 2020. And a “reset” in thinking on both sides is urgently needed, now more than ever.

The Biden administration was no model partner for Europe. It quite outrageously forced cancellations of a joint Cypriot, Greek, and Israeli EastMed pipeline to bring much-needed natural gas to Europe.

It talked a great game about strengthening NATO. But the alliance's bulwark, the U.S. military, saw its real budget cut, its Pentagon politicized, and recruitment short more than 40,000 enlistees.

The humiliating 2021 skedaddle from Afghanistan not only eroded American credibility, but undermined all Western deterrence as well.

President Joe Biden opposed building new liquefied natural gas export terminals in the U.S. designed to help energy-starved Europe find a reliable and honest supplier and decouple from Russia.

Trump, in contrast, promises to “drill, drill, drill,” in part to ensure needed income by exporting huge amounts of LNG to fuel-starved Europe.

Europe was angry that a bantering Trump once bullied it to meet its promises to increase its defense spending. But after the invasion of Ukraine, it is happy that some countries did just that.

Europeans likely want—and need—Trump to restore a more deterrent U.S. military, not a woke one.

Europe and America are both in crisis and need radical new thinking.

So, who knows: Europe may soon quietly rejoice that Biden is gone, Trump is back, and they have a strong, loyal, and rowdy friend, rather than a simpering enabler.

2.1.14 Deport Millions, Finish the Wall, Tax Remittances, and End Birthright Citizenship (2025-01-12 22:31)

I want to talk about illegal immigration. You know, this is the point in our history that we’ve never been before. We have not a porous border, but no border at all. We’ve had somewhere between 10 [million] to 12 million illegal entrants since the Biden administration began.

There is no real corpus of immigration law. It’s been destroyed. We’re at a historical period in our country, where 55 million people, never such a large number of people born outside the United States, that are residing here. In terms of percentages, almost 16 % of the population was not born in the United States.

That’s an enormous task of assimilation, integration, [and] civic education, and we just haven’t been doing any of that. So, what are we going to do? Well, the first thing is: We need to stop “catch and release.” We need to make entrants, legal entrants, go back to their country if they’re applying for refugee status. You cannot come here, and then say you’re a refugee. You must ascertain that and prove that at the consulate overseas.

We’ve got to finish the walls. It’s a 2,000-mile border, and we’ve never quite been able to continue. We’ve got a wall or fence or somehow obstruct the entire 2,000-mile border. That will save manpower. It will save time and cost, and it will have an enormous deterrent effect.

The next couple of things are a little bit trickier. I think that whatever your status is, if you are sending money back to a foreign country from the United States that is singled out as a source of illegal immigration—Mexico, Latin America, for example—then the United States government should put a 10 % to 20 % or 30 % tax on all the remittances.

That would earn us up to maybe somewhere around $20 billion. And that would also deter Mexico, to take one example, that depends on remittances as its largest source of foreign exchange—greater than tourism, greater than its oil revenues. And yet, so often the American taxpayer—state, local, federal—through generous subsidies, free up the cash so that the illegal resident can send it back for social necessities that the Mexican government itself is responsible for, so we're subsidizing everybody but ourselves.

I think it's very important that we start looking at the countries that are the source of illegal immigration in terms of security. A Sudan, a Syria, terrorist countries that support, countries that support terrorism like Venezuela, the Middle East, especially Iran. Russia, as well.

Why would we let them send people here that we have no background checks, have not adjudicated their status? So, we should have a travel ban, an immediate deportation, and immediate consequences for the mother country that knowingly sends these people here. And that, too, would be a deterrent.

We've got to also look at anchor babies.

The 14th Amendment didn't really ever say, as sometimes [is] alleged, that if you're born in the United States, then you're an automatic citizen. It says if you're born in the United States, and not subject to the laws of another country. All the people coming, in some sense, are subject to the laws of another country.

So, we have to redefine that, either through legislation or renewed attempts in the courts.

Europe, the Left always looks for guidance—17 [European] countries don't even allow it. And the other 13 or 14 have restrictions that qualify it. So, we're the only country in the world that gives unqualified citizenship to people who happen to be born here and then anchor an entire family.

Why not also put a 10-, 20-year ban on people who have been detained here illegally and stop them from applying for a green card or legal readmissions for 20 years? That would be a very powerful deterrent.

In other words, we would announce sometime in February and say, "We want all of you to know, all 12 million who came here during the Biden administration, to take the first iteration of cohort, you have 30 days to go back. If you do not go back to your country, and you are detained, arrested here in the United States, you will be deported, but you will not be given any chance to get a green card for 10 to 20 years," depending on how the courts or legislation adjudicates it.

And finally, I think it's time to look at how we deport people. The first 500,000 who have committed a crime, it will be no problem. There's unanimous consent. They should be deported immediately. They're wreaking havoc on the American population.

The next iteration, the 1.5 [million], 1.7 million people who have already gone through the system, they've been adjudicated, they failed to show up for the court hearings. Or they left detention when they were facing deportation.

Those would be the next group that would face deportation. The third group of people, as I said earlier, from terrorist countries or terrorist-supporting countries, no one is going to sympathize with their residents here.

The fourth group is a little trickier, but I think we could pretty easily find hundreds of thousands, if not millions, of able-bodied residents who are on public assistance and who have not been here five years. If you haven't been here five years, you came during the Biden open-borders era.

You were on welfare of some sort, and you're able to work. You should go back home. That would leave a large group of people who have been here five years. They've never committed a crime. They're not on public assistance. And they want to get a green card, not citizenship, a green card.

I think if we had won public opinion and support by deporting the most egregious offenders, say 10 [million] to 12 million, then I think in a bipartisan fashion, we could work out a system for the law-abiding, the productive, and the long-residing American residents and allow them to pay a fine to recapture legality and stay in the United States.

It's going to be a tough road to restore border security, because the prior administration didn't believe in it. But I think now that the White House, the Senate, and the House are in Republican hands, it's absolutely possible. It can be done rather quickly.

2.1.15 Elon Musk's First DOGE Agents Arrive In DC (2025-01-12 22:33)

Elon Musk's ambitious push to reshape America's financial landscape took a bold step forward this week. His first "DOGE Agents" arrived in Washington, D.C., with a clear target: the Internal Revenue Service (IRS). These agents are aiming squarely at the agency's grip on taxation and regulation of digital currencies. As Americans watch closely, many see this as a much-needed pushback against bureaucratic overreach. In contrast, others warn that Musk's growing influence could open the door for unchecked corporate power over public policy.

According to reports, the newly established government agency already has 50 employees working for DOGE out of SpaceX's Washington offices, configuring ways to lessen the government's spending. The agents have reportedly been hard at work interviewing more than a dozen executive branch departments, including the U.S. Treasury, IRS, Departments Veterans Affairs, Homeland Security, and Health and Human Services.

The "nongovernmental" body, directed by Musk and Ohio businessman Vivek Ramaswamy, aims to cut up to $2 trillion from the federal budget by eliminating redundancies, scaling back the workforce, and dissolving unnecessary agencies.

According to Vinay Hiremath's blog post, the co-founder of tech company Loom, who worked for DOGE for four weeks, the group has gone "from 0 to 100 taking meetings and getting s done."

"Within 2 minutes of talking to the final interviewer for DOGE, he asked me if I wanted to join. I said 'yes'. Then he said 'cool,' and I was in multiple Signal groups," Hiremath wrote. "I was immediately acquainted with the software, HR, and legal teams. The next 4 weeks of my life consisted of 100s of calls recruiting the smartest people I've ever talked to, working on various projects I'm definitely not able to talk about, and learning how completely dysfunctional the government was. It was a blast."

DOGE hopes to reach at least 100 employees in the next several weeks. The DOGE X account wrote a post to the account seeking full-time salaried Software Engineers and InfoSec Engineers.

“Recruiting for a very small number of full-time salaried HR, IT, and Finance positions,” the DOGE X account posted. ‘If interested, please DM us your resume and a few bullet points about why you are interested in DOGE.”

2.1.16 Democrats Killed Los Angeles And No One In Power Cares (2025-01-12 22:34)

The horror that has hit Los Angeles is something we haven’t seen since Mrs. O’Leary’s cow kicked over that lantern in 1871. Back then, Chicago burned to the ground and roughly 300 people died. That was more than 150 years ago, things were different then, and things are very different now. There is literally zero reason for a repeat, in any respect, of what happened in Chicago, and yet we are getting just that because of the mentality of the radical progressive leftists who’ve run that city for all but 8 of the last 64 years.

The Great Chicago Fire makes sense in a weird way. Wood and brick were the building materials of choice back then, and wood burns like mad. There were no zoning laws to speak of; buildings were clustered together because “traffic” was a bunch of horses stopping for water or a poop. Go to any old town’s “historic district,” and you’ll see what I mean – it is not rare to find “roads” or alleys where you or a friend can touch buildings on both sides of the street.

When fire hit one house, it risked wiping out the block or the section of town for those very reasons. Add in the infancy and luddite nature of the fire fighting profession and technology and it was a recipe for disaster. Almost every major city around back then has some (much smaller) version of the Great Chicago Fire.

But we aren’t living 150 years ago. Los Angeles is not a densely clustered town of swinging-door saloons and rickety wooden buildings; it is heavily regulated (just try to build something there or put a pool in your own backyard, and you'll find out how heavy-handed a government can be), and sprawling metropolis with millions upon millions of people. There is more money in the greater Los Angeles area than most countries in Africa and South America.

"Modern" is an understatement to describe LA, or at least describe how it was...how it appeared to be.

It turns out that modern Los Angeles was like so much of the entertainment industry upon which it is built: beautiful and new on the surface but rotting at its core.

All the modern architecture and "smart homes" wired for the digital age were wiped out by a lack of water – something the ancient Romans mastered with a mortarless aqueduct system 2000 years ago.

California doesn't lack for water; it lacks the will to move it to where it's needed. Los Angeles is basically a desert. Irrigation greened it and Hollywood grew it. At a certain point, the progressive left decided to destroy it.

OK, they didn't decide to destroy it, the natural result of their policies just do that.

Rather than put in place whatever is necessary to safeguard the lives and property of its citizens, the Democrats in California were busy congratulating themselves for the configuration of the people they hired to administer the city.

No one's skin color, gender or sexuality has ever put out a fire. Yet, you would be hard-pressed to find a story about LA's Fire Chief prior to the current disaster that was about anything else. She seems to have [1]an impressive resume, but given the way no one talked about it when she got the job, it should be asked if it was the most impressive resume or just impressive enough for a gay woman to satisfy the DEI Gods.

Janisse Quiñones, the Chief Executive Officer and Chief Engineer of the Los Angeles Department of Water and Power, has overseen the failure of the water supply and her incompetent leadership may well be the most responsible aspect of this disaster. She is paid three-quarters of a million dollars per year to...check DEI boxes. The ones she doesn't personally check are what she sees as her priority in that job. "It's important to me that everything we do is with an equity lens and social justice and making sure that we right the wrongs that we've done in the past," [2]Quiñones said before her incompetence helped destroy the city.

Mayor Karen Bass was the first black woman to be mayor of Los Angeles. That and $7 will buy you a cup of coffee. But until her inability to do the job cost lives and tens of billions in damages, she was celebrated for existing. That's what Democrats do - they elevate and celebrate people who exist while ignoring what they do or what they can't do.

It's really easy to be "historic" and congratulate yourself for the unimportance when there is nothing actually important needing to be done. But there is always feces flying toward a fan somewhere, and when they meet you damn well better have someone who knows what they're doing at the helm, no matter what their configuration happens to be.

The best person for any job may well be a woman, a minority, someone who is gay or whatever, but if your priority is to look like a Benetton ad from the 90s rather than hire the most qualified person for a job, don't be surprised when things don't work out the way they should. And it's much more than a coincidence that none of these "leaders" is remotely conservative, as any conservative would have refused to participate in press coverage about their irrelevant characteristics. Condi Rice doesn't bill herself as the first black female Secretary of State; liberals do (through clenched teeth, if they acknowledge her at all).

There is no serious argument that Los Angeles has the best, most qualified people in the positions necessary to have prevented this disaster or to have gotten it under control quickly once it started. But they all could serve as grand marshals of various progressive interest group parades. That gets them celebrated, with glowing press coverage...and puts out exactly zero fires.

Crazy Taxi 2

Hitmaker/Sega 2001

Hitmaker made up its second game that exclusive to Dreamcast (Craxi Taxi One went to PS2 remember.) From the first Crazy Taxi to Crazy Taxi 2, the game stayed the same. Thats a good thing because the prequel was the most played arcade ports released in the present in the United States. What made Crazy Taxi 2 so playable is that the cusomer's yelled at you for alease anything you did wrong like they weren't stupid. If you messed up they tell you that. Like "Fool you almost killed me! - Bring me the to Burger King." The second addition to the series takes 4 new cab drivers in New York City. The new game plays songs from the band Offspring and tends to be more "slangish." But over all the game is the same fun picking people up with 2 new maps to drive around in.

The good. - Improved Graphic quality, "the crazy jump", how realistic people in the game talk - hehehe; Some of the sound track (rather it be the non-vocal version of Offspring.

The bad - the adult language - don't need to hear that much while I'm driving.

Sonic Adventure 2

Sonic Team 2001

07/01/2001 v1.0

I played this game for a while and the graphics are really good. Its like a step down from the Playstation 2. Every character has a darker effect to it and the game plays modern music like for Knuckles, its rap in Pumpkin Canyon. The game has game play like the original but is has more pre-rendered cut scenes and huge levels that make but for the adventure style game in Sonic Adventure. Sonic is one of those "want to be cool" characters, he's not quite there. Unlike the original the script is a little more realistic, characters tend to interrupt each other. The game is pretty long. Also you can play separate levels for your pleasure.

One other thing I like is that you get to interact with your chaos like a pet in the game. You can pet it, feed it, enter it in a race, scold it you can do a lot of things with a chaos.

The good: huge levels to race down; Sonic, beautiful textures; the way the game has the feeling that its trying to be cool without over doing it, positively; chaos interacting.

The bad: voice acting; memory card usage

Air Force Delta

Konami 1999

1356

07/01/2001 v 1.0

This game is a fighter pilot game. The game stands but, even though it was made by Konami. The backgrounds are smooth and the game has good frame-rate. The graphics in the game are reasonably good. The lock-on system works like a charm and stalling is realistic. (Always increase your speed when turning, I killed myself that other way. ;) Normal mode is kind of easy expect when you get half way through, then it's a little tricky to master. The game has hard too. Which is extremely hard. In this game I like to beat it once and play the missions independently. Each mission lasts for 10 minutes on average. I would recommended it.

The good: being able to be one; cold war effect

The bad: graphics could be a little better; wrong soundtrack; stalling

Crazy Taxi

Hit maker 2000

07/01/2001 v 1.0

Crazy Taxi came from the Arcade. The game is attractive. Your in a taxi cab and you race around with customers and drive them to there destination as quick as possible. The game recognizable vechals that exists. The best invention of the Dreamcast is the idea of the driving triggers. Right trigger for driving, left to brake, best idea since the joystick, I think. Even though the game has 2 cities to play, the game is perfect for the impatient gamer, which is me.

The good: crashing into cars, having the passenger getting mad and jumping out; originality

The bad: only 2 levels

Resident Evil: Code Veronica

Capcom 2000

07/01/2001 v1.0

Would you ever believe that the Umbrella Corporation (zombie creators) was developed by a 10 yr old genius whose name is Veronica? Never would of guessed it. If you haven't heard, Resident Evil is a respected horror pre-rendered game made by those dudes at Capcom. The game is not for the impatient gamer, it requires thinking and backtracking and shooting zombies. You be mature to play game, ok. There is a lot of blood and guts in this game so don't leave this game in the DC for your 6 year old to find out. But its fun for 17 years olds if your parents don't care. The game is very, very long. I bad, I never got through the first disc and been playing the darn thing for 3 months. Over all the game play is good with the exception when you walk the character through a still screen. Highly recommended.

The good: Shooting stuff; power ups; cut scenes; knowing what to do

The bad: The fact that Capcom hasn't came up with it earlier.

Soul Caliber

Namco 1999

Awesome fighter. The game is based on anime characters, laugh out loud man. The game has many characters to chose from, I think the women are cute. The game hands down, has the 1358 best combat system of any fighting game, ever. The left trigger is always block. The AI can be extremely good. Its not eh you hit me I'm dead, it competes with how well you play the game - and averages out the difference. The game itself is based on the Arcade by Namco. It's so good that Namco is putting it in its own franchise. It was also had the best graphics of 1999. It is also a highly recommend game for Dreamcast.

The good: cute characters, great combat system; awesome music; realistic sound effects; very strong game play

The bad: Wasn't released on a later system also.

Rayman 2: The Great Escape

Uri Soft France 2000

Rayman 2 is a 3D sequel to Rayman. Good game. In the game you play a character with no arms or legs this a head, stomach and feet. The game has cool characters, that you would see in Super Mario or Banjo and Kazooie for the Nintendo 64. The game is kinda hard to beat. It requires a lot of climbing, running and shooting on Raymans part. One thing about this game is that Uri Soft totally redesigned the game for the Dreamcast, at the time the console had the best lighting effects around. The game has solid gameplay and a solid story. I like it. There are times when the game gets way to childish though, but you kinda respect that in a way.

The good: huge levels, good graphics, solid gameplay; clean textures; not too long, but not short by all means.

The bad:sometimes the level gets harder in the middle and if you quit you start all over with that level. If you don't have a memory card I would feel sorry for yeah.

Daytona USA for Dreamcast

Gecki /Hasbro Interactive 2001

07/01/2001

The game is a remake of the arcade released back in 1994. Daytona USA is well designed. The game has three times as more tracks to race then Saturn. The game includes an enhanced music of Daytona and Gonna ride. Hasbro makes the cars longer. The game highly resembles the original that leads up to this day of age. The game is not based on drifts but when to brake and when to accelerate. My favorite track is Ryn Ryn Rank. Also not seen in the Saturn version is a full replay that looks like Electronic Arts Nascar series. Over all I think the game since its all been seen before, would not be the best buy, but a enjoyable remake of an arcade classic.

The good: more levels; good gameplay; Nascar on Dreamcast; good AI

The bad: too futuristic for its own good.

Resident Evil 2

Capcom 1997, 2000

07/01/2001

A game that comes very close to Code Veronica. The game takes place where the last one took off in Raccoon city. In 1997 Sega had a debate whether to bring the sequel to the Saturn, even though I own both consoles, I'm glad they didn't. It's a very good game. The game has noticeable improvements from the Playstation game. Like all the Resident Evil games you backtrack, shoot zombies. But what make it so good was some people thought that the game was kind of past stuff until Sega released it. In the game you try to find a way out of the Raccoon city which was developed by the Umbrella Corp because they were already there. You play James who meets up with Claire who has her own game in Code Veronica. Any way, they split up and meet each other discovering what's left of the Umbrella's attack force that as sent to destroy all the evidence. James who is a STARS member is located in Raccoon City.

1360

And that's what the entire game is basically about. Its fun though. This is also a recommended game

The good:Capcom did an exceptional job of porting RE2. Improvements over Playstation version like camera angles; shooting zombies

The bad: Capcom didn't add to the story; trying to walk on a still screen. Dieing.

Test Drive: Le Mans

Infogrames 2000

07/01/2001

Driving is really realistic. Graphics are comparable to those of PS2. Le Mans has 4 large tracks that take you 5 miles around for each one. The game has a loading time but also has smooth frame rate. The cars include Chrysler, BMW, Duncan International, and some other man made racing cars. The replay timing and angles are real time angles. The controls are that you use A and X for gearing up and down and L and R triggers for acceleration and braking. Overall the game is ultra cool. But is best when there are 2 players one on one. Overall the game his one of the best lighting effects on the Dreamcast that pushes the hardware to the limit.

The good: Le Mans car series, ghost mode, replay, solid controls, long detailed tracks, auto body customization.

The bad: graphics are starting to be outdated, freezing, loading time.

F355 Challenge

Acclaim 2000

07/01/2001

This is also a really good racing game if you like realism. The entire game has Ferrari tracks. The game has good lighting effects, not as good as Le Mans but pretty close. The game has solid game play where you have to either gear down or brake hard and lose your place out of 5. The game has 5 tracks plus 4 secret tracks that aren't that small. With all the handicaps off like power everything, the driving can be extremely hard for the average gamer, me. Sound tracks have rock on them. I don't mind it though, its like Harley Davidson music.

The good: car actually loses its place when you slow down, awesome music and graphics.
Good game-play

The bad: sometime freezes

Aero Wings 2: Air Strike

CRI 2000

07/02/2001

If you take the three flight simulators on the Dreamcast, AW2 would be your best pick. The game has combat and stunt flights. Even though you don't get to chose as many planes as in Air Force Delta, you'll find that this game doesn't need all those speedy planes to past. The game play equals that of Air Force Delta since the prequel wasn't that good. It has a fairly descent 2-player mode that you and your friends to dogfight. You can do barrel rolls and back loops to out smart the enemy. In this game if you make that small error it could cost you the game. There is a training mode on how to plan and maneuver your plane. Over all its what is expected from a flight simulation, I liked it, even though it isn't to be played all the time. Good Control, realistic altitude conditions, and smart enemies.

The good: most realistic fighter on the Dreamcast; maneuver capacities not seen on any other game

The bad: takes time to know what to do; a little difficult

Speed Devils

Uri Soft 1999

07/02/2001

Speed Devils is one of the best racing game of any of the launch titles besides maybe Sega Rally 2. The game is based on hot rod racing. Each car has a different feel to it, some looser then others. The game itself has a unique feel to it as you go through Area 51, Hollywood, Canada, Oklahoma , places like that. There is options that let you make it a timed race. In each race there are about 2 or 3 shortcuts each boo bee trapped. In the game there are also power ups like better acceleration or speed, all terrain tires. Overall the game design is an A but it takes an experienced player to make it through. The game isn't as commanding as F355 Challenge and Le-Mans. The game is fun to play for your spare 10 minutes. But if you play more then that you may get a little tired of it.

The good: the street racing part of it, many options.

The bad: if your behind you'll never take 1st, and if you push it, it usually means bad luck for you.

Skies of Arcadia

Overworks 2000

This is the Final Fantasy of Dreamcast, the Role Playing Game. The game is very long and spreads across 2 discs. The game is based on fantasy tale where a young girl gets stole by the Empress Arcadia and two rouges go after her and there friends that have mean caught hiding on an island by the Royal army. Cool eh. The 2 rouges eventually save there family that was captured and they eventually take over the empire, I think. The combat system is pretty well organized since RPGs' aren't Sega's specialty. The game is in 3rd person. But when this game isn't the only RPG around, it tends to be un welcomed and sat aside. But the backgrounds are well oriented and gameplay is very good, in the future this game would be a gem to have.

The good: good artwork, story, battle system, made for the teenage gamer; the choose system (one decision can change the way people view you)

The Bad: single player; the need to continually save the game, if you don't have the health you might as well start all over because it wont matter.

Street Fighter Alpha 3

Street Fighter Alpha 3 is the better 2D fighting game, at least its very good. What makes it so good is that it has the screens move you in the game and not this put you there like your actually after world conquest. The baron and the rye and jo are back to kick butt. The animations are fluid as any other fighter. The game has over 20 locations and 40 characters most of them are lock into the game. Like all Capcom fighters, there are no blood and lots of anime characters. In my option the game is the longest worked on fighter by Capcom on Dreamcast. The game is very detailed and has moving backgrounds, instantaneously. This game is defiantly one to own.

The good: fluid motions, there is a point to the game; good everything

The bad: graphics outdated

Dead or Alive 2

Tecmo Games 2000

07/02/2001

This is a very unique game since it the characters are pretty life like. Its also the only game that Tecmo produces. The music in the game is based on Japanese rock, I guess. Every time is in Japanese. What makes this game stand out is that the characters have totally different ways of fighting. One might do a body slam wrestling (what Japanese think of us Americans) and another may be doing judo. One of the character's breasts jiggle a bit, I find that interesting. Any way the moves are basic enough, though there are combos when you are near your competer. Like Soul Caliber it has the right stuff to be a 3D Fighter. One plus is that you get to through characters of edges. That's fun. What isn't fun is when you get thrown off. The game has every thing that other 3D fighters have. Survival, VS mode, Arcade, Team Match, and some others I don't know on top of my head. Even though Soul Caliber is the bomb, DOA2 is a welcome addition to my library.

The good: Great Graphics; woman; solid fighting; beating the boss with wings

The bad: spoke in Japanese; ugly defense system for amateurs

Tony Hawk's Pro Skater

Neversoft/Crave 2000

I hear that a lot of people like this game, but I not really interested in it even though I own it. Basicly you have the top skaters in the world jumping the ramps, riding rails, doing 360s and 580s and 'side airs' which made the game really popular. The game is fine, it has solid graphics and control but your on a skate board all the time. And have you even ran away from Officer Dick. He skateboards too you know. The game has goals that are challenging but you can avoid it, that's a good thing. The game is solid in every way, but I this don't like skating. But if you like skating, this is the game to buy.

The good: realistic courses; very solid game play; challenging but avoidable requirements

The bad: in my option I'm not a stake board fan, and I think that the game is over rated a bit.

Hydro Thunder

Midway 1999

07/03/2001

The Dreamcast title Hydro Thunder has everything from the arcade plus 4 bonus tracks and 4 hovercrafts. What made the arcade title so fun was that Midway didn't waste any energy making this really fast. The game has power ups to gain position. Each race lasts 3 to 4 minutes. Each vehicle has tighter or looser steering which is made up with faster speeds. On your first time playing you'll may get 4th or 5thplace because some of the power ups are hidden and need to play a few times to find where they are. Each time you place gold in each stage (beginner, medium, hard) you will receive a new environment and vehicle. Over all this game is fun to play a couple times but you might get tired of it if you play it all the time. It's good for a 10 or 20 minute game.

The good: good pace racer, the arcade sounds, decent AI

The bad: sometime freezes after 3 or 4 races.

F1 World Championship

1366

Videogames 2000

If you want a good all around Indy car game, this one would be it. I played it, it is very good. One reason is that the game uses real Formula One tracks across the world. The game has a good AI, that will leave you in the dust if your not careful. Braking and then accelerating after turns in by far the most important. As you slow up the car becomes easier to handle this like the real thing. That's the best. One drawback that the game has is that the backgrounds could be a little sharper, but the game for what it is has a stable frame rate. The game runs after the 1998 season and comes with over 20 vehicles and 40 drivers. And also every F1 track internationally. The champions mode lets you play the whole season in order, one that I haven't tried before. Over all the F1 World Championship is a very 'slick' racer.

The good: Tight control, many tracks, options for power braking and acceleration, nice intro, fans cheering, decent music, good frame rate.

The bad: saving is questionable

2.1.18 Nintendo 64 reviews off my 2000 Pressenter.com homepage (2025-01-15 22:32)

4 - Fun to play for a little while

3 - needs improvement

2 - rental

1 - don't review these games

Zelda: Ocarina of Time

Legend of Zelda is good. What the best about it is that it has not only has simple controls Z to block and A to attack. I has a simple battle system with a cursor on the enemy. Though after a while I loss some interest, and I could always come back later. The game is huge, maybe not as much as it's sequel but as big as Turok 2 I would imagen. In the game you play Link, an adventurer "half-elf," (half human) who had a dream of the Princess Zelda kidnapped by an evil sorcessor and figure out the next day that you were summoned by the Deca Tree.

Rating - 4/5

Developer Nintendo | Publisher Nintendo esp. 1998

The Pros. Very huge game, slingshot, talking; 3D transition excellence; detailed - not too detailed though.

The Cons. Sometimes I can get overwhelmed by fighting enemies too long.

Banjo and Kazooie

Banjo and Kazooie is good platform that simple and innertaining. The game was also RAREs first game of this type which is petty large about as much as Zelda 64. The backgrounds are blurred out, but looks overall petty nice, almost like Dreamcast almost. In the game you have to search for puzzle pieces that let you in curtain areas. In all there are 10 levels that you search for. Much like Mario 64, each level has quests like when you get 100 gems or reach a current point you will almost always get a reward. Like most other games that are based on finding items you may find yourself bored running around searching for skulls (power-ups 5+). zin ten or years or so you this game could still be a gem on the N64 if you can find it, and even though its aimed at a younger audience, the oppicals vary in a good way.

Rating 4 - 5

Developer - Rare 1998 | Publisher - Nintendo

1368

The Pros - 10 hours + gameplay, not agerveting

The Cons - takes a lot out of your joystick

Mario Kart 64

Mario Kart is one of my favorite games. Its easy to beat and the races don't take that long. And I don't know about you, but racing in the mushroom cartoonish world that Mario usually exist sort of takes me back to the Super Falcom. And people didn't buy a new console with flashy graphics every 2 years.

Rating 5 -5

Developer RAD1 1996 | Publisher: Nintendo

The Pros - solid game play with awesome weapon system

The Cons - characters are not grown up yet.

Golden Eye

This was my very first person shooter before I had Diablo for the PC. :). The game uses the original movie made in the 1960s with the new James Bond. I remember back then how lifelike the soldiers moved and the how realistic the AI is. Although the enemy put up a good fight before even if you cant see them, the way the soldiers move don't really amaze me, I seen Perfect Dark you know. But its funny how you can shoot these guys in the balls and they crouch like sissies and then they fire and you shoot them again and they repeat them selves. My god. At the time, hard core gamers where buying consoles this to play the game mostly because the multi player mode was ahead of its time. I mean N64 had four controller ports and scattered ammo in very large areas. The internet wasn't very good back them and this way you could hunt down your friends by the radar. Gadical.

Rating 5 - 5

Developer: Rare 1997 | Publisher: Nintendo

The Pros - solid gameplay, verses heaven, 20 single player stages.

The Cons - graphically outdated.

Super Mario 64

Even though I never finished the game yet, Mario 64 had merit to it to say the least. Nintendo made the game so compact at the time that they even released larger carts anyways. Its amazing but Nintendo spent 3 years putting the game together. At the time I thought the browser theme was "heavy Music" Much of the game is based on 5 stages in 15 levels. One thing that was a breakthrough in these game was the MIDI music and how it added to the background theme. Its interesting what the sequel will sound like on Gamecube and I'm not talking about Luigi's Mansion. The game-play and graphics were state-of-the art in 1996 but the game it self, people thought strayed away from the original world Mario played in. In the game you try to save Princess Toadstool (Peach) from Bowser. You had to get 75 stars to finish the game. By trying different maneuvers to get from place to place obviously. In my option, SM64 is a must buy for the console.

Rating 4-5

Developer RAD1 1996 | Publisher: Nintendo

The Pros - seeing Mario in 3D, solid gameplay, return of the "marshon men" hehehe

The cons - basic errors that made up a 3D game, unrecognizable at the time

Extreme-G

Extreme-G is pretty fun except for the visablity which isn't that good. The game is a fast paced shoot em up game surrounding high-tech combat cycles of the future. Sadly the first Extreme-G was a quick developed game from Acclaim. The game has potential which the 3rd one already has. But the first can be fun if you get the turns and being able to use the right trigger. Other then that the game has good Artificial Intellegence and plenty of tracks. Even there is a techno theme to move the game along.

Rating 3-5

Developer : Probe | Publisher : Acclaim

The Pros - AI, variety of weapons. nice fast pace shooter/racing game, good controls

The Cons - mediocre graphics (I can't see where I'm going half of the time)

2.1.19 Nintendo Switch 2 tech specs (2025-01-15 22:39)

Power Profiles

- Handheld:

- CPU @ 1100.8 MHz
- GPU @ 561 MHz, 1.72 TFLOPs
- RAM @ 2133 MHz, 68.26 GB/s

- Docked:

- CPU @ 998.4 MHz
- GPU @ 1007.3 MHz, 3.09 TFLOPs

- RAM @ 3200 MHz, 102.40 GB/s

And here's a roundup of other unconfirmed tech specs:

Tech Specs

- CPU: Arm Cortex-A78C
 - 8 cores
 - Unknown L1/L2/L3 cache sizes
- GPU @ Nvidia T239 Ampere (RTX 20 series)
 - 1 Graphics Processing Cluster (GPC)
 - 12 Streaming Multiprocessors (SM)
 - 1534 CUDA cores
 - 6 Texture Processing Clusters (TPC)
 - 48 Gen 3 Tensor cores
 - 2 RTX ray-tracing cores
- RAM: 12 GB LPDDR5, (some/all units will have LPDDR5X chips)
 - Two 6 GB chips

Over on [1]Reddit, one comparison point for TFLOPS – which is one way of measuring power – has been the 2021-released GeForce RTX 3060 GPU. It had 12 TFLOPS, which would put Nintendo Switch 2 at a fourth of that. But looking purely at gaming consoles which probably makes more sense, the Xbox Series S comes in at 4 TFLOPS while the PS4 Pro is 4.2 TFLOPS. However, TFLOPS alone doesn't fully tell us what Nintendo's new device could be capable of, especially as DLSS will apparently be supported as a significant upscaling feature.

There have been so many rumors and leaks surrounding Nintendo Switch 2 over the past few months and weeks, so we may as well throw in TFLOPS to the mix. Things could finally come to a head this week though – at least partially. It's [2]rumored that the new system will be announced in some form on Thursday. Meanwhile, Nintendo previously confirmed an announcement for this fiscal year ending in March, so that deadline will be here sooner rather than later.

2.1.21 CNN's Scott Jennings Was Left Speechless By the Insanity of This Ex-Kamala Staffer (2025-01-20 00:13)

CNN's Scott Jennings was stunned that Joe Biden said that the nation was threatened by misinformation and that lies are being told to enhance power or increase profits. This man is shameless since that's precisely the modus operandi of the Biden crime family. Jennings sparred with former Kamala Harris aide Ashley Etienne, though he didn't have to do much since virtually all her talking points were lies. The whole segment was the seat of irony, given the panel's topic on January 15.

Etienne seemed to make the argument that Donald Trump's remarks induced COVID to kill people, which is insane. Also, using COVID to attack the first Trump presidency is largely ineffective since Anthony Fauci and the entire medical establishment have been exposed for lying about the disease. Etienne tried to make the case that Trump's lies had a top-down effect regarding containment. False—Trump gave us the vaccine, which is another story. But for those who want to manufacture the false narrative that Trump's COVID protocols led to all the deaths, that's simply fantasy. She also repeated the debunked lie about drinking bleach—it left Jennings paralyzed due to how degraded the conversation had become.

CNN's [1]@ScottJenningsKY schools former Kamala aide Ashley Etienne for praising Biden lamenting the decline of trust in the media and then hurling disproven lies about Donald Trump: "Has Joe Biden, Kamala Harris or Karine Jean-Pierre ever lied?...Your speech is about the truth and... [2]pic.twitter.com/pgspP7JK7w— Curtis Houck (@CurtisHouck) [3]January 16, 2025

"This is crazy. I'm sorry, this is insane," he said.

Biden is the wizard of lies, and CNN, Mr. Jennings excluded, is a factory for falsehoods. A couple of days later, the network [4]was found liable for defaming a Navy veteran who they singled out was exploiting Afghans trying to flee the country in 2021 when the Taliban took over the country again. They were ordered to pay millions to Zachary Young. So, lies and misinformation seem to be a liberal media and a liberal America problem writ large.

This is the segment in which CNN defamed a U.S. Navy Veteran and has to pay him $5 million for.

Up top is the segment, bottom is the apology.

"We did not intend to suggest that Mr. Young participated in a black market."

2.1.22 LAFD Whistleblowers Sound Off. No Wonder Why the LA Fires Got Out of Hand. (2025-01-20 00:14)

The fires are still raging in Los Angeles County, but once contained and extinguished, this fiasco will be investigated. These fires are likely to be the costliest natural disaster in American history. The cuts to the Los Angeles Fire Department, the scrubbing of LAFD memos pointing to deficiencies in the department, and the lack of water have all been documented, especially for the Palisades blaze. Independent reporter Michael Shellenberger has tracked the behind-the-scenes fiasco that led to this catastrophe.

For the Palisades blaze, it took LAFD almost an hour to respond. And yes, while the cuts to the LAFD proved damaging, its chief, Kristin Crowley, also geared her department toward training that had little to do with fighting fires. In short, people want firefighters to save their homes—they don't care if a black lesbian does it. The DEI nonsense played a significant role in the LAFD's degraded and shambolic response to these wildfires, [1]which whistleblowers can attest. The cost of these woke initiatives is also immense, and resupply can become a byzantine journey as LA will only work with pro-DEI vendors. A few of them reached out to Shellenberger to vent about the current state of the department [emphasis mine]:

They [LAFD whistleblowers] say the reason they arrived too late to stop the fires from becoming catastrophic was because of severe budget cuts. The Fire Department did not pre-deploy fire engines to strategic locations, and helicopters arrived half an hour too late to put out the Palisades.

"That [Santa Ynez] reservoir being closed did not allow helicopters to drop and suck water up from five minutes away," a new firefighter whistleblower, the third who has come forward, told me. "Instead, they had to fly 10 to 15 minutes away to go get water somewhere else."

The problem is that the LA Fire Department is one of the most severely understaffed of America's 10 largest cities. It has less than a single firefighter per 1,000 residents compared to Chicago, Dallas, and Houston, which have twice as many.

"In 1960, our city population was 2.5 million, and we had 112 fire stations. In 2020, our city population was 3.9 million, and we had 106 stations," a representative of LA's firefighters' union testified last month. "That's 1.4 million more people and six fewer fire stations."

This undermines the Department's ability to respond to emergencies. "In 2020, the average emergency response time was seven minutes and 53 seconds, nearly double the NFPA recommendation."

The third firefighter whistleblower says the firefighters are being put in danger by budget cuts. "Even last week," the person said, "I wanted to work and I was told, 'Sorry dude, we don't have a seat for you to fill because there's not enough apparatuses,'" meaning fire engines or other equipment.

One hundred fire engines and other apparatus are currently out of service because the city cut the Fire Department's budget, and it couldn't afford to hire mechanics to fix equipment.

"We have a crack about halfway down our water tank. Half of our [engines and other] apparatuses are broken. They were sending rookies, new probationary firefighters, out to the field last year with no department-required brush jackets."

The firefighters lack life-saving equipment. "We were running out of electrodes to do EKGs," the person said. "We've been running out of gloves. We've been running out of drugs, you name it. There's been ambulances that have been having to steal stuff or borrow stuff from the hospitals just to stay available."

At the meeting last month, the president of the city's firefighters union warned, "If we cut one position, if we close one station... the residents of Los Angeles are going to pay the ultimate sacrifice, and someone will die."

All this and yet Los Angeles is one of the richest cities in the world. Eighty-four of America's richest 400 people live in California, and LA is home to 26 billionaires who collectively possess a net worth of approximately $185 billion.

[...]

As such, the problem is not poverty, it is severe mismanagement and bad governance. Not only is the city's mismanagement to blame for LA's disastrous response to the fire, but it's also responsible for the city's ongoing homelessness disaster.

Why is that?

Part of the reason is the city's Diversity, Equity, Inclusion (DEI) programs. "The city will only purchase from vendors that support DEI," said the firefighter. "So we'll go with a vendor that we have to pay twice as much, or the shipment may take twice as long, in order for it to be a DEI vendor rather than the vendor who has it at half the price and can get it to us tomorrow."

The whistleblower said that DEI programs put firefighters and the public in danger. "I personally witnessed in my own drill tower them making and passing women just to get their [female quota] numbers even though they didn't have to meet all the criteria the men did."

When asked what those criteria were, the person said, "A certain amount of push-ups. Holding a certain size hose line. Throwing a certain ladder. We no longer require two firefighters to be able to throw a 35-foot ladder because of the amount of women that were failing that. So now, it's just a three-person ladder. We no longer require that as a job requirement. In the field that doesn't work because we don't have enough people to spare when a fire is happening to just throw one ladder."

The DEI programs are also expensive, distract attention away from preventing and fighting fires, and result in the Fire Department hiring unqualified people, whistleblowers said. "Do we really need to sink millions a year into DEI? I don't think so."

Another reason is corruption, which drains money from the city's coffers, including for firefighting.

2.1.23 Switch 2 talk (2025-01-20 00:15)

Nintendo has been very clever with the Switch and it's production pipeline. I don't know if you've noticed the pattern, but the cadence is very sleight of hand to make the release calendar seem more robust than it really is. They'll release one game per year that would be considered an actual bonafide "AAA" game (Tears of the Kingdom, Smash Bros, Pokemon, etc) and then they'll surround it with a lot of "3DS" level bullshit filler games, but still charge you AAA prices for them. Last year there really wasn't even a big AAA game. I guess Echoes of Wisdom was the closest thing, but in they surrounded it with a bunch of filler like Brotherhood, Princess Peach, Mario vs Donkey Kong, etc. This year is a little different since Nintendo is releasing a new console. So I expect a better year of big releases. I still maintain that the best single year for Switch exclusives was the launch year. No other year measured up after that.

Sure, like all companies, Nintendo would be happy with making money anywhere it can be made. That being said, Nintendo is clearly skeptical and isn't dumping a ton of money into this live service play. Mario Kart and Smash have optional online play, which I'm fairly sure only makes up a small % of hours played in those games. Most players have probably not utilized online play even once for those games. I'd be shocked in the online features for the next MK or Smash have much if any additional features from the Switch games. Heck, Nintendo still clearly has no interest in an achievement system akin to Microsoft or Sony, which would probably lure more people to playing online.

If anything, I'd say Nintendo is even LESS prone to following hot market trends and experimentation than they have been in the past. The Switch 2 seems like the safest/least change/least loaded with new gimmicks console Nintendo will put out since the SNES. I suspect much of that is the current management (namely Furukawa) being more risk averse than past leaders at Nintendo, which I generally think is a good thing.

My only minor quibble is that I'd like to see a bit more in the way of bringing back certain older Nintendo IP's or games long dormant, such as F-Zero, 3D Donkey Kong Country, Wave Race, Star Fox, etc. But I do get why most of those don't return. Mario Kart seems to cannibalize all other Nintendo racing games, seemingly every Star Fox game goes through development hell, and their one attempt at a pure 3D DKC continues to give Nintendo PTSD due to its reception (a lot of which is unfair, it was an amazing game) even decades later. Apparently, there was a 3D DKC being farmed out to Blizzard Albany not too long ago, but Nintendo hated it and scrapped it. So I'm not exactly optimistic about anything other than a new 2D/2.5D DKC anytime soon.

While I don't love the wait till April for the software, man am I glad they opted to reveal the games in a Nintendo Direct rather than another live presentation to a clearly very corporate audience, as they did with the Switch. Video game people in general don't do particularly well with live presentations (large share are very introverted and/or autistic, as am I... not trying to criticize), resulting in a LOT of cringe worthy presentations like the Switch software reveal and most E3 presentations. The original Switch software presentation was like that, but also with an audience that had ZERO excitement. Nintendo is better suited all around for taped Directs. Still miss Iwata's presence and wish he were still around to witness the huge Switch success.

Nintendo already does this quite a bit actually, and the problem is you start to lose quality control. As good as the Switch has been, some of their IP's were not done proper justice and were not so loved by critics and fans. Titles like Mario Golf: Super Rush (Developed by Camelot Studios) has a metacritic score of 70 and a user score of 6/10. That's way below what you expect a game like that should be and I still think Everybody's Golf on PS4 is better! Mario Strikers: Battle League (Next Level Games) is another example. It has a 72 metacritic score with a user score of 4.5/10. Again, way below standards you'd expect for a title with Mario attached to it. Yoshi's Crafted World (Good-Feel) is a 79 on metacritic with a user score of 8/10. A LITTLE better but still, kind of pedestrian for a Yoshi licensed game IMO. Princess Peach Showtime (also Good-Feel) 74 on metacritic with a 6.2/10 user score.

All these games that use Nintendo IP are extremely mid and all of them were farmed out by Nintendo for other studios to make. Why couldn't Nintendo make these in house? Nintendo used to have a very strict seal of quality standard for all of their 1st party properties. But if they're going to keep farming out their characters to lesser talented studios, this will continue to be the results.

2.1.24 Illegal Aliens Flee U.S. Voluntarily with Less Than 24 Hours Before Trump's Inauguration (2025-01-20 00:16)

As the United States is just less than 48 hours away from a second Trump administration, illegal immigrants have resorted to "self-deporting" themselves as President-elect Donald Trump returns to the White House. With Trump's promise to crackdown on illegal immigration looms, fears of mass deportations and stricter border enforcement under Trump's second term have many illegal aliens opting to leave the U.S. voluntarily. This comes as illegal immigrants appear to be afraid of Trump's harsh consequences of a renewed immigration policy.

I recently [1]reported that mass deportations in certain sanctuary cities will begin just one day after Trump is sworn into office— starting with Chicago.

NewsNation host Markie Martin, sister of Trump's deputy communications director Margo Martin, was visibly taken aback as she reported the trend of illegal immigrants self-deporting across the U.S. In recent days, undocumented aliens have confided in immigration attorneys that they prefer to leave voluntarily rather than face arrest, detention, and deportation without knowing where the Trump administration might send them. Many have chosen to exit on their own terms to avoid being swept up in the Trump administration's mass deportation effort.

Self-deportations of illegal immigrants have begun ahead of the inauguration.

[2]pic.twitter.com/7PwiQpH68T— The Post Millennial (@TPostMillennial) [3]January 17, 2025

Mexico is reportedly "bracing" for a surge of new arrivals following Trump's inauguration on January 20th, leaving many illegal aliens panicking. Unlike the Biden administration, which has struggled to deliver on its promises, undocumented immigrants told Rolando Vazquez, a Texas-based immigration attorney, that Trump follows through on what he says. In other words, if the president-elect promises to deport all illegal immigrants, they believe he will do just that "This is causing many migrants to leave on their own, knowing that they're either going to be deported to their home country or be deported to Mexico, and obviously, the overwhelming majority of them do not want to be in Mexico," Vazquez said.

Trump focused much of his 2024 campaign on restoring "law and order" by enforcing U.S. immigration laws. While on the campaign trail, he promised that, if re-elected, he would push for aggressive action to remove the millions of undocumented immigrants from the country that the Biden administration allowed in.

2.1.25 Everything You Missed From Trump's Inauguration Day Eve Rally (2025-01-20 00:17)

Tens of thousands of people attended President-elect Donald Trump's fire rally on Sunday at Capitol One Arena.

Trump promised to take back the United States at noon on Inauguration Day as Americans begin the journey to the first day of a brand new country.

Advertisement

"So on the eve of taking back our country, that's what we're going to do," Trump said. "Take back our country tomorrow at noon, the curtain closes on four long years of American decline, and we begin a brand new day of American strength and prosperity, dignity and pride. Bring it all back once and for all."

Trump told the 20,000-person crowd that he had fought for the American people for the last nine years, including those in the most Democratic-run states, such as California and New York.

"For the past nine years, you and I fought side by side against the most sinister and corrupt forces on earth," Trump continued. "And in our magnificent victory on November fifth, you showed them once and for all that this nation does not belong to them. This nation belongs to you. From New York to Los Angeles, from Philadelphia right here in Washington, DC, our country was won and built by generations of patriots who gave everything they had for our rights and for our freedom."

He promised to sign at least 200 executive orders on Monday, saying he would sign as many as possible on day one of his presidency.

□President Trump: “Someone said, ‘Sir, don’t sign so many in one day. Do it over weeks.’ I said, like hell we’re gonna do it over weeks. We’re gonna do it at the beginning. Tomorrow. And we’ll have plenty later on. It’s not going to stop.”

Trump brought high-profile guests to his rally, including Elon Musk, The Village People, Megyn Kelly, and Dana White.

Trump boasted about saving TikTok, which had gone black just hours earlier after the U.S. government banned it. He said he liked the app and suggested its value would be negligible without U.S. approval but could reach massive amounts, even up to $1 trillion, with it.

The president-elect said the U.S. has no choice but to save it because it creates jobs.

He also talked about the Israeli hostages that were released earlier in the day from Hamas terrorists. He said that the hostages would still be in Hamas custody if he hadn’t won the election.

"I'm glad to report that the first hostages have just been released. And who knows what's going to happen? I know that Biden may think that they made the deal," Trump said. "First of all, it would have never happened if I were president. Would have never happened."

He also vowed to declassify documents related to the JFK, Bobby Kennedy, and MLK assassinations.

2.1.26 Trump Makes Stunning Move During Arlington National Cemetery Wreath Laying (2025-01-20 00:19)

President-elect Donald Trump visited Arlington National Cemetery to honor the nation's fallen heroes in one of his final pre-inauguration events. The somber occasion marked a moment of reflection as Trump paid his respects at the hallowed grounds, symbolizing his commitment to the nation's veterans and military families. The visit, attended by a small group of close associates, was a fitting tribute as the country prepares for his second term, underscoring his focus on national security and respect for the armed forces.

In a surprising move that captured global attention, Trump invited a wounded warrior to lay a wreath at Arlington National Cemetery on Sunday. During his visit, he also paid his respects at the graves of three U.S. soldiers who were tragically killed in the botched Afghanistan withdrawal—an incident Trump has consistently blamed on the Biden administration’s mishandling of the situation.

While touring Section 60 at the cemetery, the president-elect paused at the graves of the three fallen soldiers, taking a moment to speak with their grieving families. The soldiers—Darin T. Hoover and Nicole L. Gee of the Marine Corps and Ryan C. Knauss of the Army—were killed during the August 26, 2021, terrorist attack as they worked to evacuate people from Kabul.

2.1.27 Vivek Ramaswamy Is Out at DOGE (2025-01-20 00:20)

Many saw this break-up coming, though I'm not sure they expected it to happen so soon. Elon Musk and Vivek Ramaswamy were supposed to be co-leads to head the Department of Government Efficiency (DOGE). Given their profiles, both men were likely never to work together for long.

Yet, it sounds like Vivek won't be part of the DOGE revolution, reportedly rubbing the rank-and-file the wrong way and unwilling to do the heavy lifting behind the scenes. Hence, why Donald Trump and others have been trying to create new opportunities for him, like pressing Ohio Gov. Mike DeWine to name him to fill JD Vance's empty Senate seat (via [1]CBS News):

Vivek Ramaswamy, President-elect Donald Trump's choice to co-lead the Department of Government Efficiency (DOGE) with entrepreneur Elon Musk, is expected to soon step away from the task force, CBS News has learned. Ramaswamy intends to announce a campaign for Ohio governor as soon as the end of January, multiple sources confirmed to CBS News.

Ramaswamy, 39, had no comment.

People close to Musk have privately undercut Ramaswamy for weeks, frustrated with his lack of participation in the heavy lifting, according to sources familiar with the internal dynamics. There has been friction between the incoming rank and file DOGE staff and Ramaswamy, the sources said, and Ramaswamy has been subtly encouraged to exit.

"Vivek has worn out his welcome," one person close to Trump said.

Ramaswamy recently met with the Ohio's sitting governor, Mike DeWine, about the state's Senate seat left vacant by Vice President-elect JD Vance. But on Friday, DeWine announced he is appointing his lieutenant governor to the post.

Despite its name, the Department of Government Efficiency is not expected to be a full-fledged federal agency. Trump has said it "will provide advice and guidance from outside of Government" and partner with the White House and Office of Management and Budget.

2.1.28 Nancy Pelosi's Daughter Comes Up With a New Nickname for Jill Biden...and It's Perfect (2025-01-20 00:21)

Rep. Nancy Pelosi has been recovering from a nasty fall while on a congressional trip to Luxembourg last December. She broke her hip during the incident. A fixture of Congress and one of the many faces of the Democratic Party, Pelosi has been showered with the usual flowers and well wishes from friends and colleagues. Yet, two people have been conspicuously absent in these overtures of recovery and good health: Joe and Jill Biden.

Pelosi has tried multiple times, I'm told, to have a conversation with Biden. But she and intermediaries who've also attempted a rapprochement have repeatedly been met with the same response from the president's top advisers: The answer is no.

Politico had a brutal piece about the Biden and Pelosi families being at war. It's personal, and it's been this way for months. Joe Biden and Nancy's friendship has disintegrated. It's shocking to those in their respective inner circles since there was a time when Biden referred to Ms. Pelosi as his Catholic sister.

Pelosi has tried to reach out to the president for quite some time, only to be rebuffed. Jill Biden's interview with The Washington Post did delve into this matter, where the First Family places much blame on Pelosi for forcing Biden off the 2024 ticket. Then again, Pelosi's daughter, documentarian Alexandra, coined a new moniker for Jill, and it's pretty appropriate. Whipping out the knives for her mother, Alexandra said, "Lady McBiden" should grow up, put on some big girl pants, and tend to the legacy left behind by her husband. Oh my, and that fall in Europe also exposed the depth of this friendship, which has reportedly fallen. The former House speaker was worried that she might not be able to secure transport back to the States due to Biden's anger over the 2024 race (via [2]Politico) [emphasis mine]:

Fueling that anger is Jill Biden's continued, and now public, nursing of a grudge toward Pelosi for pushing the president to withdraw from last year's campaign.

"If I was Lady McBiden, I'd put on my big girl pants, play the long game and think about my husband's legacy," Alexandra Pelosi, the former speaker's daughter, told me Saturday. "There aren't that many people left in America who have something nice to say about Joe Biden and Nancy Pelosi is one of them." The younger Pelosi made clear she was speaking only for herself.

Pelosi has tried multiple times, I'm told, to have a conversation with Biden. But she and intermediaries who've also attempted a rapprochement have repeatedly been met with the same response from the president's top advisers: The answer is no.

"She's been told they're not over it, don't make more overtures because he's blaming her," said a person who has spoken to Pelosi about the conversations between the former speaker and Biden's aides.

Pelosi told people last week she's struck that the Bidens would leave on such a low note, asking rhetorically why they'd convey such bitterness.

A Biden spokesperson declined to speak on the record but did not deny the silence.

[...]

Biden did briefly chat with Pelosi, her husband, Paul, and daughter Christine at a White House holiday party last month. But that encounter only served to remind them of the rupture.

[...]

It's also common for family members of officeholders to take grudges more personally — and hold them longer. But the political converged with the personal after Pelosi slipped in Luxembourg.

Desperate to get her the best possible care in the initial hours after the accident, the Pelosis grappled with whether she should go to a U.S. military hospital, which she did, or immediately fly back home for care. And part of that trepidation, I'm told, owed to uncertainty about whether Biden would quickly get her a plane "because we have this wall at the White House," as one person familiar with the situation put it. (Another source said any concerns abated when White House staff heard the news and were swiftly responsive.

The chill between the two since has saddened their longtime friends and muted even some of the most forthcoming figures in politics, at least for public consumption, which I was reminded of last wk in a series of terse conversations.

There's another side to the story, which the article highlights, which is that Pelosi did try to usher out Biden with grace, dignity, and, most of all, privacy. The president wouldn't believe the polls, and his intransigence and stubbornness led to Pelosi and others bulldozing the entire White House operation, whose political team was quintessentially 'JV' in nature. Pelosi knew she would win this knife fight, one she didn't want to have, but she likely saved more congressional seats, which everyone, except for Biden cultists, agreed. Her Morning Joe appearance in July sealed Biden's fate. As for repairing the friendship, some think time could fix the relationship that's lasted for 50 years. Time away from the spotlight and press also helps, but some, like Rep. James Clyburn (D-SC), feel these two are likely to never speak to one another again:

"There were no threats," one person familiar with the conversation told me. "She just told him the truth — he was losing in every poll, and people had lost confidence."

This is not to understate Pelosi's role in driving Biden from the race. She was the most critical player in last summer's backstage political drama.

It's entirely possible the president would have weathered the crisis were it not for Pelosi's Morning Joe interview, which took place immediately before her meeting with Biden in the White House residence.

Appearing the week Congress returned from July 4, a moment many Democratic lawmakers were drifting back to Biden and the president was emphatic about staying in , the former speaker repeatedly insisted his decision remained an open question. That pivotal moment effectively ensured it was — and less than two weeks later Biden dropped out.

[...]

Rep. Rosa DeLauro (D-Conn.) — one of Pelosi's most dedicated legislative allies and the person Biden credits for taking his son, Hunter, under her wing in New Haven when he was at Yale law school — was as restrained as Dodd.

"Time has a way of working things out," DeLauro told me, conceding that Pelosi and Biden are both "very strong personalities."

Those who know Biden well, though, wonder if he can ever truly reconcile with Pelosi.

“I don’t think he’ll ever get over that,” said Rep. James Clyburn (D-S.C.).

And he’s acted as such since Pelosi’s fall. Biden isn’t Mr. Empathy. He’s a vile and vindictive old man who needs reminders to wear pants and has an inflated sense of himself in the world capital of politics. He was easily defeated by a Democrat who wasn’t even in the leadership anymore. He was outmaneuvered on the world stage to such a degree that chaos reigns. And, among many other things on the domestic front, he made us poorer. There was a supply chain crisis. He allowed Chinese spy balloons to infiltrate our airspace.

He’s a failed president who was never meant for the job. And showed it masterfully over these four years of incompetence, chaos, and utter disappointment.

And no, Joe, you still would’ve lost all the swing states, Trump still would’ve won the popular vote, and his Electoral College performance would’ve been better since the president-elect was likely going to take Virginia if you’d stayed in—no one told you that your support was collapsing in the all-important Northern Virginia suburbs? When those heathens start to stray, you know you’re cooked.
